The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 1 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Wednesday, September 4, 1996

What they won't teach you in class

Just in time for Election '96, three editorials examine President Clinton's four-year track record on various issues (See Diversity 101, page 8-A).

The beginning of Bruiser's reign

With eight years of tutelage under Coach Cal behind him, James "Bruiser" Flint takes over the Amherst hoops dynasty (See Sports, Section C).

WORLD

French pair married in posthumous ceremony

MARSEILLE, France — Death couldn't cancel Patricia Montenez's wedding plans. On Saturday, she married the man of her dreams, 2 1/2 years after his slaying.

Montenez, 36, became Mrs. Claudie Darcy in a ceremony in this southern Mediterranean city, ending a long legal battle with a little help from the president.

"Every minute I think about Claudie — he never leaves me," she said after the wedding.

Montenez and Darcy, a police officer, were engaged to be married when an assailant shot and killed him in a gritty Marseille neighborhood on Feb. 24, 1994. They had an 8-year-old son. Last September, President Jacques Chirac issued a decree allowing the unusual wedding, and a posthumous ceremony was planned for Feb. 23, the eve of the second anniversary of Darcy's death. City officials gave Montenez a marriage certificate, and all the plans were made, right down to the cake. But a few days before, the parents of the dead groom had second thoughts and launched a fierce legal fight to call the whole thing off.

NATION

Prison prank results in discipline for deputies

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Five sheriff's deputies said it was only a prank when they strapped jail inmates into a chair and told them they were going to be electrocuted.

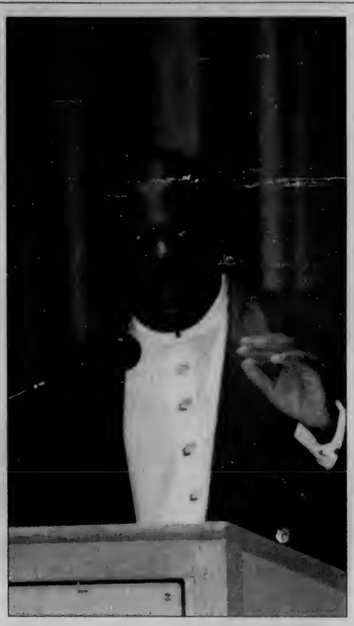
But internal affairs investigators aren't laughing, and say the deputies face penalties ranging from letters of reprimand to suspension without pay.

The three mock executions took place in June using a chair that is used to restrain unruly inmates, said Sacramento County Supervisor Roger Dickinson.

"The occupants of the chair were told it was electrified and they were about to be electrocuted," he told The Sacramento Bee. "All I know is that to the extent that this occurred, the deputies were supposedly joking."

Capt. Bill Roberts said the deputies, who were not identified, have been questioned and "every one of them has been honest and forthright and remorseful." They "told the truth knowing they were going to be disciplined."

The same five deputies are being questioned in another internal investigation in which a black reserve deputy complained that he was subject to racially offensive behavior, Roberts said.



The downtown jail where the mock executions took place is the same one which currently houses Unabomber suspect Theodore Kaczynski. But he is being held in isolation from the rest of the inmates.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 72 LOW: 54	HIGH: 74 LOW: 55	HIGH: 73 LOW: 51

INSIDE

Arts & Living .....page 1-B
Diversity 101 ....page 8-A Sports.....page 1-C
News .....page 12-A
Editorial .....page 6-A
FYI .....page 2-A

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

A challenge!

Maurice Caston, President of Student Government Association, challenged student leaders and administrators to be a part of history making in the 1996-1997 school year.

SGA, Bulger join for election; 'Choose or Lose' bus to visit during voter registration drive

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) and two of its agencies, together with University of Massachusetts President William Bulger's office, have implemented a voter registration campaign designed to register, educate and increase student participation in the upcoming election.

"We [SGA] always emphasize to students to get involved in their civic duty," said Maurice Caston, president of the SGA.

The purpose of the campaign is to spread the influence of students across the state, said Frank Mozell, the voter registration coordinator in the joint effort between SGA, Commuter Services, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) and the UMass President's Office.

According to Jason Vecchio, student coordinator of SCERA, a successful registration drive among the four UMass campuses would result in the largest absentee voting block in Massachusetts.

The registration drive was set to begin on opening weekend, when representatives from SGA were scheduled to attend Convocation and other first night events to enlist first-year students for the drive.

Mozell said the campaign will give the first-year students an opportunity to "get their feet wet" in campus activities.

According to Vecchio, the total budget of the campaign is $20,170. In addition, the campaign has a few paid positions through the University's work study program, and the remaining workers will be volunteers.

On Monday, resident assistants, including residence hall voter registration organizer and Student Trustee Sean Carter, were supposed to distribute voter registration cards to their residents to be filled out and returned to their respective Cluster Offices.

"We will make the pick-up at the cluster offices," said Mozell. "This will speed up the process of the registration."

Then SGA will create a database from the registration cards. This database will be used to identify the students' voting district.

A "Tell me about" postcard will be mailed on behalf of each student to candidates running for office in their district, requesting information about their campaigns.

As the election nears, campaign volunteers will call each student to let them know where and at what time they will vote.

According to election law, registration for an election must end 20 days prior to Election Day. This year, the last day to register is Oct. 16, at which point the SGA campaign will shift to educate students on each of the candidates.

"The main thing we are putting together is a survey concerning UMass related issues," said Vecchio. "Then we will create a report to be mailed to on- and off-campus students, parents, and alumni. This will be the centerpiece of our educational campaign."

On Election Day, the campaign will organize transportation for students to and from polling sites.

Vecchio hopes the registration campaign will make students and public higher education a priority in Massachusetts, and to establish the University as an interest group.

The SGA is trying to secure a debate between Congressman John Olver and State Representative Jane Swift, said Vecchio, to further student interest in the elections.

The SGA-led campaign is currently negotiating with MassPIRG and UMass Hillel to join their respective voting registration efforts.

In addition to the SGA led-campaign and those of MassPIRG and UMass Hillel, the national voter registration drive led by MTV and Rock-the-Vote will send their "Choose-or-Lose" bus to UMass. The campaign has already registered over 25,000 young voters, according to MTV.

According to an MTV press release, the bus will feature interactive displays and a voter registration table, which will be run by local volunteers.

Barbara Pitoniak of the UMass News Office said the bus will arrive on Sept. 10 and park near the Student Union Building from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Rock-the-Vote is a non-profit organization based in California. It produces many public service announcements featuring various music artists instructing young people to vote.

The organization has set up an online voter registration site on the World Wide Web and has entered into a partnership with 1-800-COLLECT to create 1-800- REGISTER, a telephone voter registration system.

Controversial survey discloses academic dishonesty rate at UM

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

A majority of students at the University of Massachusetts have cheated at one time or another in their academic careers, according to a recent report done a campus-based research group.

Nearly three-fifths (59.4 percent) of UMass students have cheated during the past academic year according to an Academic Dishonesty Survey by Project Pulse, a part of Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems (SARIS).

Yet, of the 354 UMass students who were surveyed by Project Pulse, only 11 percent said that they thought cheating was a very serious problem.

"Academic dishonesty is a concern that all students and faculty share," Student Government Association (SGA) President Maurice Caston said. "It should always be clearly understood that academic honesty is essential in all students and, as student leaders, the officers of the SGA strive to be examples of this ideal for the student body."

Project Pulse conducted the telephone survey on May 7 in order to assess students' attitudes concerning academic dishonesty. They also wanted to investigate students' participation in behaviors which are academically dishonest.

The first question which students were asked was, "In your opinion, how serious is the problem of academic dishonesty?" The majority of students surveyed (47.1 percent) said that the problem was "somewhat serious." This number, along with the 11 percent of students who felt that cheating was "very serious," nearly matches the number of students who reported cheating.

Students were then asked if they agreed with statements pertaining to academic dishonesty. The highest percentages of students in agreement came from the two statements, "Cheating on an exam is OK if the quality of teaching is poor (16.7 percent)," and "Cheating on an exam is OK if the professor gives unreasonably difficult exams (15.7 percent)."

These attitudes clearly conflict with official University policy regarding academic dishonesty.

"The students of this University have well-defined guidelines concerning academic honesty available in the Undergraduate Rights and Responsibilities guide, a reference

Turn to CHEATING, page 13-A

New system installed in dorms; ten Southwest halls use cards

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

In keeping with their goal of increasing security in residence halls, University of Massachusetts Housing Services has equipped 10 buildings in Southwest Residential Area with a new card access system.

With the card access system, manufactured by Diebold, Incorporated, students use their UMass identification card instead of a key to open the main door of their building.

The card access system was implemented at the beginning of last semester in John Quincy Adams and Coolidge Residence Halls, and was very successful.

This summer, the card access system was installed in John Adams, Washington, Kennedy, Cance, Pierpont, Moore and Patterson Residence Halls.

Mackimmie Residence Hall is currently equipped with card access, however it will not be operational until system testing is completed.

Sharon Shevlin, assistant director for Computer and Information Systems, said the introduction of the system to Southwest Residential Area is part of a two to three-year project to bring card access to all of the residence halls on campus.

"We're a tad behind schedule now, but we'll be bringing up groups each semester until the project is complete," Shevlin said.

The original plan called for all Southwest dorms to be equipped with card access by this semester, followed by Orchard Hill and Central Residential Areas in the spring of 1997, then Northeast and Sylvan Residential Areas in the fall of 1997.

According to Shevlin, the delay is not due to any problems with fund-

Turn to KEYCARDS, page 3-A

Childcare woes hit students

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Emily West is a typist at the Molecular and Cellular Biology Program located in Morill Science Building. She works full time, as does her husband. She has two children, aged seven and nine.

Being new to the area, one of their first problems was locating reliable and affordable child care.

Unfortunately for the Wests, the University of Massachusetts does not offer childcare to infants under two and children over six.

"The university offers no childcare in the summer months for older children either, which is when many of the after school programs close down as well," West said. Classes continue and all the offices for the departments and administration stay open all summer. Childcare is necessary year round and not just for certain ages.

"It's frustrating for me. It seems as if the University could make child care more available," West said.

She said she had considered placing an ad for a babysitter on the Whitmore Administration Building jobs board for a student who needed to make some extra money, but her resources are limited.

"If I am only making $8 an hour and I have to pay a sitter $5 an hour, what's the point in working," West asked.

Due to the expense of day care, this will be West's last week at her job.

"I intend to stay home with my children for the next month to help get them ready for school. Afterwards, I need to find a job... that ends by 3," she said.

West is not alone with her problem — faculty, staff and students all face a financial crunch when it comes to day care.

The University has recognized the issues, and released a report in February of last year, stating, the "University provides adequate and first rate child care for those members of the campus community that need it."

This information, however, pertained to graduate students only, not undergraduates.

"Because of distribution problems, the results were inconclusive as far as the undergrads are concerned," said David LaFond, a member of the Family Issues Committee which released the report.

The final recommendations from the FIC are as follows:

"The University should expand and restructure the current University Child Care System so that all students and staff have access to affordable quality child care when they need it. The UCCS should also increase its hours of operation and offer more flexible time slots at current facilities."

ELIZABETH BROWN/ COLLEGIAN

Fine tuning...

Part of the UMass marching band practiced last Tuesday outside of the Athletics Field South, near the Mullins Center.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Sept. 6

Dance — The Fourgone Conclusions Contradance will be held tonight and every first Friday at the Greenfield Guiding Star Grange. The evening starts with Scandinavian couples dances followed by contras called by Mary Desrosiers. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. For more information, call 549-1913.

Saturday, Sept. 7

Dance — A Scandinavian Dance Workshop will be held this evening and every first Saturday from 8-10:30 p.m. at the South Amherst Munson Library. Arna Desser and/or Van Kaynor will teach with live fiddles. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. Call 549-1913 for more information.

Dance — An English Country Dance will be held tonight and every first Saturday from 8-10:30 p.m. at the South Amherst Munson Library. Helen Davenport teaches the dances and Van Kaynor leads the band. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. For more information, call 549-1913.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hirjas in India," an all-male religious sect that is considered an alternative, third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, is free and will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, room 301.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church will hold its annual tag sale today from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. and tomorrow from noon – 4 p.m. Hot dogs, coffee, cold soda and fresh popcorn are available in addition to the wide array of sale items, including many collectibles, exceptional furniture, lamps and appliances; new and old merchandise; adult and children's clothing; luggage; dishes; and more. Rain dates are Sept. 21–22.

Notices

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday in September there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East ST, in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle Monday, Sept. 9, through Friday, Sept. 13, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. Information about preventing theft and bike identification will be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. – midnight. Dance to a variety of music in a smoke and alcohol-free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. Call 584-8167 for more information.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Cappella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536-3072 or Karen at 259-1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. at the Campus Center. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call (617) 641-2303.

Volunteer recruitment — The Boltwood Project, a community service project at UMass, is seeking 200-300 student volunteers to work in one of approximately 23 different groups in the Valley. Participating in Boltwood allows University and Five College students the opportunity to earn one or two credits while volunteering. Interested students need to attend one of three recruitment nights in the Campus Center Auditorium on Sept. 9 – 11 from 6:30-8:30 p.m.

High-priced rents, housing scarcity plague several University students

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Due to increasingly high rents and a general lack of space, many students have been unable to find affordable, quality off-campus housing.

Alison Cervini, a Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC) housing counselor said, "Basically the problem is the fact that there is a low supply of off-campus housing and a high demand from students. In general, people just aren't moving out of their apartments."

Senior Renee Langevin is one of many UMass students having difficulty finding a place to live. She has driven two hours to and from her home for four consecutive days, yet has not located any housing.

"I feel like I have been searching forever," Langevin said. "I'm looking for a two bedroom apartment in the range of $650, but the prices are outrageous. I actually had a realtor laugh at me when I told them my price range."

Langevin said that many two bedroom apartments in Amherst cost about $1100, while some reach the price of $1300 per month.

"Because there is no more rent control in Amherst, I believe that many students are being exploited," she said.

Sophomore Lucyna Soja agreed, saying, "The landlords know that students need apartments, which enables them to charge very high rents — this is exploitative."

Cervini said that she realizes that landlords have to earn money for upkeep, but some take full advantage of their tenants.

"It is a sad situation, but the students still do it," she said.

"I have been looking for places for a month," senior Alex Kogan said. "I have checked a lot of places, but they are either too expensive or too far away."

Cervini has been working for CSHRC for three years, and said that she has never witnessed a more hectic housing search.

CSHRC tries to make the search for off campus housing as easy as possible for students and non-students. They supply a free rental listing service, community information service, a home sharing program and advocacy for housing concerns. They have also opened up a web page (http://home.oit. umass.edu/~cshrc) which is updated every Friday.

If people are successful in finding housing, CSHRC offers a counseling center on landlord/tenant rights and responsibilities.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Andrew Novak, a senior Biology major, looks through notebooks of available housing at the Housing Resources Center in the Student Union last Wednesday.

Since 1890....

Founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is now the largest college daily in New England.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Older than dirt

When it comes to copies, no one stacks up to Kinko's.

Let Kinko's add color and impact to your presentations and reports.

There are times when you have to work all night, and still look good in the morning. We can handle from one to one million multi-page black & white and color documents. We offer everything you need to get your project finished on time, such as laserprinting, binding, and color output. To learn more, visit our World Wide Web site at http://www.kinkos.com or call 1-800-2-KINKOS.

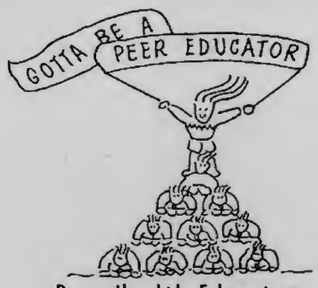
50 FREE self-serve copies

Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and receive up to 50 FREE 81/2" x 11" black and white copies on 20 lb. white bond.

Offer is limited to one coupon per person. Coupon must be presented at time of purchase and is not valid with other offers. Offer valid at Kinko's Northampton and Amherst locations only. Coupon void where prohibited by law. No cash value. Offer expires 10/31/96.

34 Bridge Street, Northampton
585-5000
220 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
253-2543

kinko's
The new way to office:



APP204

OPEN 24 HOURS, 7 DAYS A WEEK

More than 850 locations worldwide. For the location nearest you call 1-800-2-KINKOS.

©1996 Kinko's, Inc. All rights reserved. "Kinko's" is a registered trademark of Kinko's Graphics Corporation and is used by permission.

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!

Peer Health Educators...
...learn about cool stuff
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...enhance their own self-knowledge.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

PEER HEALTH EDUCATION I & II
PUBLIC HEALTH 213/214 or EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 577-5181.
Class will meet on Tuesdays & Thursdays from 9:30am-10:45
*NOTE: The class time in the course schedule book is wrong.

UMass, host towns negotiations see improvement during summer

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

Relations between UMass and its host towns, Amherst and Hadley, have begun to mend. The compromises and agreements reached have left many town and UMass officials feeling good about the progress made, and confident that this tentative truce can endure a trying school year.

Following the July discussions between the town and UMass, Hadley was allotted $39,000 a year from UMass for support police services and road safety. In return, Hadley dropped its pursuit of a $1 tax on Mullins Center tickets, which was to go towards paying for these services.

Plus, UMass no longer faces a $203,000 lawsuit from Hadley for traffic tickets that were mistakenly paid to the University rather than the town.

The University will also be contributing its support and resources for an improvement to the existing payment-in- lieu-of-taxes (PILOT) program, in which the state attempts to reimburse the municipalities for the taxes lost from the exempted state institutions. The current PILOT program is "viewed as inadequate" and "has not been fully funded" according to Dick Conner, director of State Government Relations.

Hadley Selectboard Chair Alan Jacque said, "With this agreement, the foundation is laid for working together in the future on important issues such as legislation for a more equitable PILOT program."

"We're at a very preliminary stage of discussing this issue with the surrounding towns like Hadley and Amherst," said Conner, referring to the progress being made with the PILOT program.

However, Conner said he would like to see a more substantial increase and a superior program, so the financial burdens of both the University and the town can be eased.

"We're pleased to have forged this new agreement with our neighbors in Hadley," Chancellor David K. Scott said. "We have been working hard to achieve a mutually beneficial accord, and we're happy with the long-term relationship that is developing between the University and the surrounding communities."

Both parties have agreed not to demand anything further from each other for the next three years.

In mid-August, representatives from UMass and the town of Amherst agreed to form "impact committees," which would be geared towards "identifying, assessing and, to the extent possible, addressing impacts which each community would have on the other."

Hill Boss, an Amherst Selectboard member, is hoping to minimize conflicts by targeting two areas. The first joint program would target the University's impact on the town in regards to that of the environment and community. The University has been asked to approach the town before it begins major projects that would impact the community of Amherst, and the same respect would be reciprocated by the town.

"We're not asking for a veto power," Boss said. "We just want them to be aware of and attuned to the concerns of the town."

The second point of contention, and increasingly more aggravating and frustrating to the townspeople, which Boss is hoping to resolve is that of the off campus behavior.

"Up until recently no one accepted much responsibility on the student behavior off campus," he said. "We were told it was not the place of the University to take the place of parents."

Boss, who has continually locked horns with officials at UMass regarding this particular issue, hopes it will no longer be an irritating problem for those Amherst residents who must attempt to deal with party-going college students every weekend and occasional weeknights.

"If this September the lives of residents amongst whom the students live is a little better, then I would be happy," Boss said. "When you're dealing with a large entity like a university you don't look for total capitulation, but baby steps."

Associate Vice-Chancellor John Feudo said of the joint program, "We are very happy with the agreement. We wanted to make sure we had a method set up for communicating issues of mutual concern. We feel we have a mechanism in which to do that now."

UMass Chancellor David K. Scott said of these mechanisms, "We are, in essence, two communities living together as one. Therefore, it makes sense to have coordination, cooperation and, above all, communication. We hope that will serve as a model for the future."

With the full swing of the school year, and the vast amount of activities it will bring, not in full bloom, Feudo is confident that the roads the University and the towns of Amherst and Hadley have laid will endure.

"I don't anticipate any major problems at all," he said.

Work for the Collegian
Positions available in all departments
News, Business & Graphics
Visit us at 113 Campus Center or Call 545-1762 • 545-3500 • 545-1864

keycards

continued from page 1-A

ing, but rather because the installation process is long and extensive. Housing Services performs all of the installation.

So far, Shevlin said, the system "has worked out excellent."

Students who used the system last semester adapted to it easily, Shevlin said.

"It's really not a big change," Shevlin said. "We live in a society of cards. If you want to get money out of an ATM machine, you use a card."

Andrew Cotter, a senior architectural studies major and residential assistant (RA) in Washington said of the card access system, "It's not much of a difference."

"I think it's a good idea, it makes the building a little safer," Cotter added.

Tanya Hoos, a senior political science major and RA in Washington, agreed.

"It does make the building safer in the middle of the night, but while security is on duty, it doesn't make much of a difference," Hoos said.

Brian Tirrell, speaker of the Student Government Association (SGA), said, "If the students like it, we're [SGA] for it.

"I really don't think it will add to security," Tirrell said.

Shevlin said the card access system does allow for tighter security in the residence halls.

"The system lets us more effectively manage access to the building," Shevlin said. "For example, vendors will have cards programmed for access only at specific points [in the building] and times. The security aspect [of the system] allows us to configure doors, so that when a door is propped open too long, a signal is sent to the main console and whatever is holding the door open can be removed.

"I think it's a great idea, a great system, and I'm really invested in its success," she said.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

The new card swipe system outside of Southwest dormitories.

Autumn blood drive vital to Red Cross

By Daniel E. Lavenson
Collegian Staff

Throughout the fall semester, University of Massachusetts students will have many opportunities to donate desperately needed blood to the American Red Cross.

Jodi Liquornik, of the American Red Cross, said that while blood is donated from a variety of different organizations over the country, academic institutions constitute 30 percent of that supply line.

Consequently, during the summer months, when the number of students on college campuses drastically decreases, the available supply of blood dwindles to critically low levels.

At one point in July, the Red Cross had less than one half day of blood left, according to Liquornik.

"UMass is our single biggest collection site in Western Massachusetts," Liquornik said, adding that the first blood drive of the fall is thus especially important.

Since 1979, the Red Cross has continuously administered blood donation centers on campus, including 42 alone this past year, Liquornik said. Over 200 institutions in New England benefit from UMass blood drives.

Because of their frequency, Liquornik asks that students donate as much as possible.

"People can safely donate every 56 days," Liquornik said.

Greg Kelley, a recent UMass graduate with a degree in psychology, donated on several occasions and stressed that the process places little burden on those who wish to give.

"You basically lie down for a few minutes. It's pretty easy — they just do everything for you," Kelley said.

Currently, the Red Cross is specifically seeking universal donors, those with type O Negative blood.

In cases of severe crisis, sufficient time often does not exist to determine the blood type of a injured party, making a universal donor immensely important, and even life-saving.

The first blood drive, to be held in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union Building, will occur from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on the following dates: Sept. 5, Sept. 11, Sept. 12 and Sept. 18.

Appointments are available, but walk-ins are also welcome.

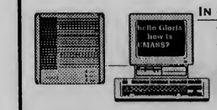
Want to become a Catholic?
Be Confirmed?
Receive Communion?

The Newman Center

The Catholic Student Center on the Campus of the University of Massachusetts invites you to

AN INFORMATION NIGHT

Come and learn about our RCIA process (Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults) and our Confirmation Program



TUESDAY – SEPTEMBER 10, 1996
7:00 PM to 8:00 PM
FRONT LOUNGE, THE NEWMAN CENTER

Classes begin Sunday Evening September 15, 1996

For more information, call or stop by the Newman Center Office
Sister Kathleen Keough, SSJ (413) 549-0300

TAU DISTRIBUTION

SEPTEMBER 5TH & 6TH 9AM-5PM
CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 162
PLEASE BRING YOUR STUDENT ID.

IN ONE STOP YOU CAN
-PICK UP A TERMINAL ADAPTOR UNIT (FREE)
-SET UP AN E-MAIL ACCOUNT (BILLED TO YOUR BURSAR ACCOUNT)
-PURCHASE SOFTWARE (CASH)
-PURCHASE A CABLE (CASH OR CHECK)

*Brought to you by Housing Services Telecommunications, the Office of Information and Technology, PC Support Services, and the University Store.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

HELP WANTED:
For the Fall 1996 semester in the Collegian Graphics Dept. We are currently accepting applications for Computer Graphic Artists for both
Day Graphics (Advertising/Editorial)
Night Graphics (Editorial & Prepress)

Hadley: Campus Plaza, Route 116 and Route 9. Open Monday-Saturday, 9:30AM-9:30PM; Sunday, 10AM-6PM

Amherst deals with chain dilemma; Starbucks, Pizza Hut the latest

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

The face of downtown Amherst has shifted once again this summer, as two more nationwide corporate chains have quietly lodged themselves into the midst of this traditional, quaint New England town.

However it seems the customers are more disturbed than existing businesses and the town itself.

Pizza Hut has tucked itself in next to D'Angelo, and Starbucks Coffee has snuggled in two doors down from Bart's, which also serves a wide variety of coffee.

Eighteen-year-old Chris Carde, a 14-year resident of Amherst, said he is "not real happy."

"A large part of the character of the town is the independent businesses," he said. "It will no longer be the quirky little college town it's always been, but will turn into a generic strip of chains."

Aaron Henry, a part-time UMass student, agreed that "it's probably not a good thing."

Starbucks manager Barbara Elwood believes the business can contribute to the community because of its "high quality of coffee."

"We've already had a lot of college kids come in and say 'Thank God you're here,'" she said.

Nicole Speropolous, a UMass student, does not share this heartfelt gratitude, even though she's applied to Starbucks for employment.

"There are already five coffee shops in the area which are all pretty good," she said.

Karen Dwelley, an employee at Bart's, is not very concerned with the fresh competition. She was a little anxious as to how much business they would lose when Starbucks had their grand opening on Aug. 17, but she said business "doesn't seem to have changed at all."

However, Dwelley added that she understands that during the summer there are mostly locals about who have their certain preferences, and that any major changes will be noted when the school season begins.

Chris Sarage, an employee at Antonio's Pizza, is unfazed by the Pizza Hut, which he cannot help but notice directly across the street.

"We're not threatened by it," he said. "Competition is always healthy for everybody and makes you work harder and improve."

He is also confident that Antonio's pizza will not be harmed because it's "faster, cheaper, and in my opinion more delicious."

In fact, few seem concerned about any threat to Antonio's since it has apparently embedded itself into the Amherst community too solidly to be ousted so easily by a little competition.

The employees at Pizza Hut refused to answer any questions, and their Public Relations firm did not return any phone calls.

According to Erin Hickey, an employee at McDonald's, these chains, and particularly McDonald's, do not detract at all from the small town atmosphere.

"It's McDonald's! Every town should have one," Hickey said. "I shouldn't have to go to Hadley."

Hickey also feels the chains are good because of the employment opportunities that open up when a new business moves in.

An 18-year-old resident of Amherst, Devin Michael Giles, thinks that because these chains are offering jobs to the "drug users, smokers, and the people who drink," they are indirectly encouraging these types of behavior. He also believes "it would be worth it to blow up the entire city just to save it from chains."

The process for approval with the town of Amherst's Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) is the same for all restaurants who want to appeal for a special permit, according to Linda Faye of the ZBA department.

"There is no difference if they're a national chain or a mom-and-pop," she said.

Each business must submit the special permit application and detailed plans as to what they intend to do. These plans include menu, parking, trash removal and hours of operation. They are then subject to public hearings held on Thursdays, and a decision is made during the Public Meeting.

The arrival of these two chains appear to have gone unnoticed like the others that have been slowly but surely creeping into this quaint downtown, Newbury Comics, Subway, D'Angelos, McDonald's, and many more may continue to come unchallenged.

The fate of the atmosphere of downtown Amherst lies in the mass numbers of college students, whose business will eventually determine the look of Amherst. The scales could tip either way or simply continue to be a blend of the old with the new.

The indications given from students who are already back, or who have never left does not bode well for big business chains, however. These consumers still want to cling to that small town local business aura which indicates that the future for corporate chains does not bode well.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Pizza Hut is one of many new businesses to move into the downtown Amherst area this summer.

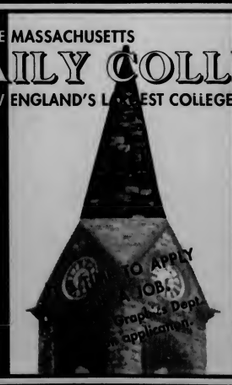
THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN
Starbucks, a national business chain, is competing with locally-owned coffee shops in the Amherst area.

PLANNING TO OBSERVE ROSH HASHANAH AND YOM KIPPUR?

Students planning to be absent from class due to religious observance must notify their instructors at least one week in advance. In the event of a dispute between a student and a faculty member, either party should contact the Department Head or the Ombuds Office at 545-0867.*

*Taken from the Major Days of Religious Observance 1996/97 Calendar

Campus Center Hotel Welcomes the Glass of 2000



Looking for a place that will accomodate your parents this fall? Look no further, look towards the center, the CAMPUS CENTER HOTEL.

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER AMERICAN EXPRESS

The Campus Center Hotel features:
- 116 Modern Hotel Rooms with Free HBO
- Special Discounted Rates for students, parents and alumni
- Special Discounted Parking Rates in the Adjoining Garage
- Several Dining Locations
- Short Walk to Alumni Stadium or to the Mullins Center

Call Early to Reserve Your Room at 549-6000

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY

HELP WANTED:
For the Fall 1996 semester in the Collegian Graphics Dept. We are currently accepting applications for Computer Graphic Artists for both
Day Graphics (Advertising/Editorial)
Night Graphics (Editorial & Prepress)

Welcome Back College Students!

Aubuchon Hardware welcomes you with all your dorm and apartment needs:

- ✓ Outlet Strips & Surge Protectors
- ✓ Desk Lamps
- ✓ Small Appliances & Fans
- ✓ Padlocks
- ✓ Key Copies
- ✓ Picture Hangers
- ✓ Mounting Putty
- ✓ Tapes...from Scotch to Duct
- ✓ Shelving
- ✓ Tools
- ✓ Automotive Supplies
- ✓ Bike Locks
- ✓ Door Mirrors
- ✓ Self Adhesive Hooks

AUBUCHON HARDWARE

Aubuchon Hardware
452 Russell Street
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 256-3000
Next to stop and shop

AUBUCHON HARDWARE

Call for our open early - open late hours

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliot News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Rob McDonald Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quint Webmaster

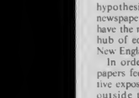
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.



Globe, be not proud

A recent survey revealed that the University of Massachusetts has a significant problem in the form of cheating. So... what else is new? Cheating is a problem that plagues every existing college and university, and has done so over the course of many years.

Why all the concern now?

Why is the media so quick to condemn an institution so looked down upon that of the students polled 90 percent disapprove of it?

The answer in this case seems to be quite simple. My hypothesis goes as follows: most of the newspapers in and around the Boston area have the notion that Boston is the absolute hub of education and sophistication for New England.

In order to retain that position, these papers feel that they must minimize positive exposure for selected institutions from outside that area, which undoubtedly include the University of Massachusetts among them.

My main corollary to that hypothesis is that the Boston media, most notably The Boston Globe, feels itself to be the guardian of truth, justice and the Bostonian way. As the most widely read and respected newspaper in the area, the Globe abuses its position by distorting and overemphasizing certain negative issues involving the University's academic and athletic programs.

Examples are not hard to find. Over the summer the Globe unleashed a barrage of negative stories about the UMass basketball program and the man who built it, John Calipari. Such stories alleged wrong-doings and left little room for objectivity. Less than two years ago, the same paper saw fit to publish the grade point averages of six UMass basketball players without their consent. While not incriminating, these grades cast suspicion and infamy on the program that exists to this day.

And now the Globe publishes the editorial in its Aug. 15 issue headlined, "UMass, be not proud," in response to a study which indicated that 59 percent of UMass students have cheated in some way in the last year.

It is a blatant attack on the University without need or base. The editorial was littered with overblown quotations from the likes of Lord Byron and metaphysical poet George Herbert, used not to enhance the clarity of the piece, but to place the so-called educated voice at a level where they could feel safe in castigating the paper's favorite target.

The Globe is so cunning. Especially when it says that "[they] were under the impression that academic standards at UMass–Amherst were being threatened mostly by overemphasis on athletic recruiting." As if the average member of the University community felt violated every time The Minutemen scored a point en route to the Final Four and the national spotlight that came with it.

They fail to mention that the survey was taken only at the University of Massachusetts and refused to compare the results with similar surveys from around the U.S. In a less biased editorial, the Boston Herald stated that some national surveys have estimated that 75 percent of college students have cheated. According to that number, the University of Massachusetts is 16 percent below the national average when it comes to cheating. UMass, be proud! I wonder what the number is for any of the hallowed beacons of learning situated in and around the Boston area.

If Boston College were to have a survey taken with worse results, I doubt you'd find its name in a bold-lettered headline on the editorial page in the Boston Globe. After all, the story about BC basketball star Schoonie Penn possibly being academically ineligible for the first half of the college basketball season was buried in the depths of the sports pages, while similar stories related to UMass have appeared on page one of the entire paper, color pictures included.

By beating up on UMass simply because it's situated west of Worcester, The Globe is not only making the University look bad, it's making itself look bad. To the editors at the Boston Globe I say "Globe be not proud!"

In a letter to the editor responding to the editorial, the Chairman of the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education, James F. Carlin, wrote to the editors of the Globe. "Give us a hard kick when we deserve it and applause when applause is earned. Higher education in Massachusetts is on the move, the story is getting better every day, and we welcome the Globe's interest, good or bad." Let's hear it for Mr. Carlin, who, while standing firmly against cheating, is also quick to defend the University against the Globe bias.

There's no doubt about it, cheating is a problem. If the Globe had any foresight, it could have made good use of the survey by applying it to the general college-age population, suggesting solutions and pressuring all institutions to pump up their defenses when it comes to academic dishonesty.

Cheating exists. That cannot be denied. The fact that so many UMass students were willing to admit to it can tell you something about the University community. At least they were not lying, for as the Globe is quick to remind us in the words metaphysical poet George Herbert: "Show me a liar and I'll show you a thief."

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Get into it... whatever it is

Jacob W. Michaels

For incoming students at the University of Massachusetts, one of the school's biggest strengths — its size — can also be one of its biggest weaknesses.

With around 17,000 undergraduates enrolled, there are a lot of people to meet. However, with that many it can also be difficult to meet people with the same interests. If you've been at the same school for a number of years, it's sometimes especially difficult to remember how to meet new people.

But that's one of the keys to surviving at UMass. If you don't make friends with anyone, you're going to end up spending all of your free time in your room, watching TV and probably being bored out of your mind.

The best way to meet people at UMass, cliche as it seems, is to make the University smaller.

The University should be lauded for helping incoming students do this. They've set up a new "Universe through the University" program for nearly 200 undeclared freshmen, which lets them take classes and live together as a way to meet each other.

Students not in this program, though, need to take the initiative. There are many ways to make the University smaller, and to find people with similar interests.

The most obvious place to meet people is the dorms, where you should try to be friendly with the people you'll be living with for at least the rest of the semester. The biggest problem there is that housing assignments are pretty much random, so there's no guarantee you'll meet anyone with similar interests.

The next place to meet people is in your major. Chances are good that you'll meet someone you can get along with in a course because you'll have similar interests. The problem here is many freshmen start by taking gen-ed courses, not courses from their major.

Another way to meet people is through the Greek system. Although it has somewhat of a bad reputation, the Greek system remains a good way to meet other people, and to get involved in a lot of activities.

"A lot [of sororities and fraternities] do have more community, that's certainly the way I feel about it," said Millis Mershon, the Greek Affairs office manager. "It's people I could get to know and have as friends and could trust."

The last, but certainly not least, way to meet people is through the Registered Student Organizations, or RSOs. There are over 175 RSOs of all types and sizes on campus, catering to almost everyone's interests from cultural to political to entertainment.

Groups like AHORA, Hillel and the Black Student Union are great ways to meet people from similar cultural backgrounds, and to stay involved in a culture that may not be the main one at UMass.

Then there's student media — UVC, WMUA, the Index and the Collegian — which can let you not only make friends, but also learn more about what's going on on campus and even become a campus personality. There are also several smaller, but less reliable media outlets, such as the conservative Minuteman newspaper, and the more liberal Liberator.

Another choice is student government — from floor rep to Student Government Association senator — though it requires winning an election first. Not only can students make friends through these groups, but they can also work to bring speakers, stage events and simply make UMass a better place to be.

Other groups — like the Republican Club, the Radical Student Union, MassPIRG and the Cannabis Reform Coalition are good ways to get involved with politics without needing to be elected.

Other RSOs are more hobby-related. Groups like the Sky- diving Club, Ski Club and the Science Fiction Society are good ways to meet people who have the same interests.

The one thing to remember is it's not always easy to break into some of these groups. The people already there know each other and are friends. It can be a little odd to join for the first time. But make the attempt. Everyone there was new once, and they're all interested in making new friends.

And making life-long friends is as much a part of UMass as going to classes and getting an education.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian Columnist.

Call me C. Townie Conner

C. Taylor Conner

I offer the mathematical dilemma at hand: Take one student, minus the ability to drive or a girlfriend for most of the summer. Add several hours of MTV and "SportsCenter." Multiply by the number of consecutive hours of insufferable boredom. Tally the equation.

If you guessed seven, I believe there are still openings in Math 001 if you hurry. If your calculations came out to "summer in Amherst," pat yourself on the back.

Let me just state that my intent in this column is not to scare prospective post–May dwellers away from the area, but rather to offer up a slice of life presented in the form of my typical day. Feel free to take notes.

10 a.m. — Wake up. Get out of bed. Drag a comb across my head. Remember I have no hair. Thermometer reads 80 degrees. Turn on SportsCenter and have a bagel. Some mediocre NBA player signed to a deal that has God asking him for a loan. Suddenly wishing I weren't a 5'8" track runner with skills like Hardaway. Tim, that is. When his knee was blown out. While he was under anesthesia in surgery.

11 a.m. — Watch SportsCenter again. Thermometer jumps to 100 degrees. Receive third-degree burns when I peel myself off the leather couch.

Noon — Watch SportsCenter again. Temperature bounds to 150 degrees. The fan starts to sweat.

1 p.m. — Head out for a running workout. Run six 150 meter hills on the steep parking lot behind Mark's Meadow Elementary School. Breathing about as easily as Krakatoa at Moss trapped under Anna Nicole Smith. Thinking about making a collect call to Kevorkian. It's 200 degrees now. Grass is spontaneously igniting. Some genius walks up to me and asks if it's hot enough for me. Would vomit on his shoes, but I think it's the only fluid left in my body. Strip down to my jock strap and jog home. You probably didn't need to know that.

1:30 p.m. — So much to choose from for lunch. Frozen pizza, frozen burgers, frozen chicken pucks, frozen boeuf bourgignon with a side of truffles and beluga caviar. It's all the same. At least I can save some cash by defrosting the midday meal outside, where it's now 300 degrees. However, such oppressive heat was bound to produce tragedy, as I found out when I stepped in something sticky on my front steps upon my return from running. Don't know how I'm going to explain to my neighbor that I got her melted cat all over my Nikes.

3 p.m. — Head out to my new car to drive over to Boyden to lift weights. Cost of vehicle: $1700. Cost of insurance and registration: Close to $1700. Ah, the joys of being a male under 25 in Massachusetts.

Still learning how to operate a manual transmission, which means my combined stalls, jerks and screeches total 400 by the time I coast from my apartment to the opening of Puffton. Incidentally, that number also is the total number of Moss–foot–high speed bumps over said distance. And, in an ironic note, that number also is the temperature which has caused said obstacles to be reduced to ash upon contact.

5 p.m. — Release a sigh of relief as the weather lulls to a meager 125 degrees. Return to the crib for a shower before work. Make a brief call to the girlfriend, who's studying in England. Three weeks later receive a phone bill which resembles the GNP.

5:45 – 9:30 p.m. — Telefund. For the uninformed, Telefund is the UMass version of the Kathie Lee clothing scheme. Actually, it's much better. You'll be surprised how much money you can bilk out of alumni just by telling them their donations will save you from having to return to the family business — beating the spit out of thrifty alumni. Plus, the office is air conditioned.

9:30 p.m. – 11 p.m. — Eat. Wait for SportsCenter.

11 p.m. – Midnight — Any guesses here, folks? When you get caught between UMass and townie purgatory, between civilization and Western Mass, between the moon and New York City... I mean, Amherst, the best that you can do is not to fall asleep during "The Big Show."

And, for God's sake, keep cool.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

What a country!

Jorma Kansanen

For a returning exchange student like myself, it can be easily assumed that differences will evolve between the city and Valley life, Manchester, England and Amherst, Mass. are not just different in an insanely obvious geographic sense, but when you also throw in the factor that one has a population of over two million, and the other just slightly less, the comparison becomes a little more oriented towards extremes.

When it came to the social scene at the University of Manchester, "extreme" would be the right word to use. Just for the sake of hedonistic science, I put my mind, body and wallet on the line to investigate this phenomena. It was not too hard, as in the two mile radius surrounding my residence hall, there were over 30 pubs, clubs and restaurants to be found; from the Indian sector in Rusholme to the outskirts of the city center. In the pursuit of "higher" knowledge, I will try to remember all that I had discovered during that 10-month period of intense study and research.

> "When it came to the social scene at the University of Manchester, "extreme" would be the right word to use. Just for the sake of hedonistic science, I put my mind, body and wallet on the line to investigate this phenomena."

With what Amherst has in its pubs like Rafters and Mike's Westview, Manchester has in The Serpent and O'Shea's, with so many others that it would be quite intoxicating to list them all. With what Northampton has in its premier club in Pearl Street, Manchester has in The Hacienda and The Paradise Factory, with so many other clones and prodigies you would have to go out all night, every night just to see some of them.

I am not extremely putting down the social scene at UMass, but the sheer massiveness of what Manchester possessed in its forms of student distraction just boggled the mind; especially compared to the eternal search for a party in Brandywine on Fridays, or the lines that run up and down the center of Amherst on any given night.

One of the first differences concerning the strategy of mass hedonism there was that the weekend is used to recover from the week itself. The busiest nights were Tuesdays and Thursdays, when most of the clubs had their special deals to lure in the cash-strapped student. For example on a Tuesday at The Paradise Factory, £2.00 (around $3) will get you into one of the maddest, fattest, sweatiest clubs in Manchester, if not the whole of England.

This place has three levels, with the first two arena–style, and the third having its own separate DJ. House and techno are the flavors of the day, and the mad struggle for your own space on the dance floor gets lost in the flow of adrenaline, boosted by the eternal bump and grind of hundreds of bodies. This club was one of the more liberal around, with special nights every week on the third floor for gay, lesbian and bisexuals only. But on every night you will get a mixture of all sexual orientations, and the best thing is is that no one cares too much about it. It is all in the name of fun and sweat.

The Paradise Factory, and its more publicized neighbor, The Hacienda, attract the stars from the area in TV, sport and music. On any given night you can meet the "better half" as Boy George might be spinning the beats or a player from the city's premier football... I mean, soccer club in Manchester United might be enjoying a victory. Liam Gallagher from Oasis might be picking a fight with a United fan (consequently, a Manchester City fan) or members from the cast of "Coronation Street" (one of the more popular soap operas in England since the early 60's) might be tripping the light fantastic.

The pub scene is a different matter, with the amount of sweating a lot less, but not in the way it attracts the crowd. If the standard meat–market was my cup of tea, or in this case, "pint of ale," pubs like the Jabez Clegg or The Flea And Firkin Brewery would suit an Ale–man like myself; but the prices and fashion were way too high for my standards, a case of fashion over finance. But mostly the prices of the bars were manageable, with some possessing the most fantastic of atmospheres. One was O'Shea's, right down the street from our sister campus, UMIST (University of Manchester Institute for Science and Technology). A genuine Irish pub with the freshest Guinness in the Metro area, O'Shea's has live Irish music every night of the week, and without any cover charge, so the beer prices were not a factor.

But my favorite, because it was the closest and the cheapest place, was The Grovel. This bar was set up just for our residence hall, and was not just your local juke–joint, because it held almost six hundred people in total capacity. What a country! Bars in residence hall complexes! With the cheapest beer in town, at around a £1.10 ($1.50 in the U.S.) a pint! Sorry, I lost myself there for a moment...

The social scene here, though, has that way of affecting a person. Extreme is the word also in your respective tastes, whether yours is clubbing all night, or chilling out with your friends over a few pints. At UMass, the hassle to get into Charlie's or Time Out is sometimes not even really worth it. Believe me, Amherst is my town, but if I could take a little bit of Manchester back with me this year, I think you know what I would bring.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

That's what Dionne is for

Mike Burke

Is Jack Kemp a big enough band–aid to heal Citizen Dole's decrepit campaign and to prevent a Clinton landslide? Nope. Dole needs the psychic band–aid: the one and only Dionne Warwick — the new voice of the Grand Ol' Party.

Without her, the party has been struggling to find a voice — but Warwick has that voice, the voice of the silent majority who: a.) stays up late perusing infomercials on how to get rich quick b.) wastes their minimum wage salary on buying guidebooks on how to get rich, and c.) cares more about Robert Downey Jr.'s rehab program than the future of the Nation. This is a silent majority whose dreadful turnout at the election polls has directly been related to the increase in daytime talk shows — the same talk shows that prevent this silent majority from living a real life. Ricki Lake is ruining our nation with the help of Gordon Elliot and Montel Williams. We need Dionne's help now!

So where does Warwick fit in for the rest of us? Take a look at this proposed GOP–plus–Dionne platform designed to increase the standard of living for everyone:

I. Theme Song – "That's What Friends Are For." Who can forget when Ronnie and Ollie sang this song to themselves at those Lockheed Martin and Philip Morris functions, describing their close friendship. But the song means so much more: As of two weeks ago, the GOP began to value its friendship with the poor and disadvantaged — why else would they disassemble Welfare entirely? Also remember, the GOP, according to Colin Powell, is the party of inclusion. They want to be friends with everyone, and that includes you. So brush away Pat Buchanan's attacks on the poor, immigrants, women and "sexual deviants." I am sure he is just kidding, because he is a member of the inclusive Republican party who have shredded their ultra–right wing edge, right?

The GOP will finally become the party of Lincoln and Warwick— a party of inclusivity. Need proof? Listen to "That's What Friends Are For," Warwick's last number one hit. The backing vocalists show diversity at its finest. Stevie Wonder, as a blind African–American, represents the disabled population and the minority race while Elton John, a gay Englishman, stands for all the foreigners and the queer population. What a combination! So keep smilin', keep shinin' because the GOP is there for you, yeah you. That's what friends are for.

II. Education. Every morning public school students will sing "That's What Friends Are For," but American–born students who are the offspring of legal or illegal immigrants must only sing in the chorus section.

III. Health Care. Alternative medicine will no longer be alternative, allowing Warwick to use her psychic ways to prevent illness and diseases.

IV. Military Spending. Warwick will revolutionize the arms race. Foreign nations will slowly sell all their weapons and military intelligence back to the U.S. in order to purchase more Warwick paraphernalia. In Iraq, the Warwick wig becomes a holiday favorite, while in Indonesia the Dionne–style Badminton racket outsells Cabbage Patch Kids. Even in China the Warwick cult spreads fast, first through the Internet. Later, rice makers reshape their product into miniature Warwick heads. The rice soon outsells Kraft's Santa–shaped macaroni and cheese. Scandal — Warwick claims to be more popular than Santa! The world's economy goes haywire while nations sell back their arms to buy into America's latest cult of personality. In the U.S. the National Enquirer goes bankrupt after finding Elvis alive at a Taco Bell drive–thru and no one cares.

V. Balanced Budget/ Tax Overhaul. Warwick's overwhelming newfound international popularity slowly resurrects her singing career. After rereleasing "Do You Know the Way to San Jose" on CD single, cassingle, colored 7" vinyl and CD–ROM, Warwick records "That's What Taxes Are For." The song goes multi–platinum. Generously, she donates all the proceeds from the song to the government, thus cutting the deficit in half.

Then President Dole, who was elected with Warwick's help, announces a sweeping 50% tax cut allowing taxpayers to buy more Warwick records eliminating the deficit altogether. After this monumental occasion, Jack Kemp goes on a wild ego trip celebrating the fact that trickle down economics actually work.

Then... Kemp wakes up, still wearing his Bills uniform, only to realize that trickle economics will never work. Plus Dionne is not by his side. Unfortunately the deficit won't soon be erased and millions of welfare recipients will be struggling to survive. Why? Maybe Dole foolishly called Warwick's Psychic Network, not to ask her to be the keynote speaker but to ask her about his future. The message probably sounded a lot like this:

Mr. Dole, thanks for calling the Psychic Friends Network. The future is not bright. I see the numbers 43 and 57 as your unlucky numbers. Do not waste your time at the Alamo or Epcot. Oh no, Mr. Dole, I see a white elephant dying a slow, painful death. There is also a quarterback being sacked and unable to get on his feet. Sorry to tell you I could have saved the GOP, but it is too late now. Please call the Psychic Hotline again.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

A brave new world

Matt Wurtzel

Before you dismiss those AT&T commercials showing you the brave new world of the future, you'd better take a second look. A revolution is afoot that will affect the way we all live.

Although those commercials have Tom Selleck telling you how AT&T will bring all sorts of cool technology to you, they are not the chosen ones. The future lies in Netscape and Microsoft.

Last summer Microsoft introduced its next generation operating system, Windows '95, with unprecedented publicity. Now that Microsoft has conquered the desktop computer, it has two new related goals: the Internet and television. Meanwhile, young Netscape already has the Internet in its sights, as well as a bold future that omits Microsoft's dominance over the computer industry.

Last month both companies released version three of their web browsers. A web browser is a program that allows a desktop computer to view varying multimedia presentations on the Internet. Both touted their browsers as the best in the business, but all critics agree that Netscape Navigator continues to win the war, despite Microsoft's counter– offensive with the new Internet Explorer.

The war continued to heat up between these titans of the software industry when Netscape accused Microsoft of asking them to collude. Collusion is when two companies agree not to compete, and instead set prices. The Justice Department immediately took interest in the accusation, and contacted Netscape, who then provided the government with a copy of a letter from Microsoft.

I am sure you are asking yourself what this has to do with AT&T's brave new world campaign, but there is an important link.

Most technology firms agree that the Internet is the future of the computer, and everyone is hinging their future growth on the Net – especially the Web. However, they believe Internet dominance will even proceed beyond the future of computers, because it will soon become the leading source of news and entertainment altogether.

The battle between these two companies will have dramatic implications on where the technology will head. Should Netscape win the war, you may expect a slew of new inexpensive alternatives to Personal Computers called Network Computers. If Microsoft wins, expect the status quo. But Windows and the Internet will to some extent mesh.

The NC idea is a throwback to the 1970s and early 1980s, when PCs were simply science fiction that not even "Star Trek" dared to tread upon. In the 1970s offices used terminals instead of PCs to do some of the work we do on desktops today. These terminals are basically the same as the ones used to connect to the Internet on the seventh floor of the University's library. NCs, like terminals, will have no drives of any sort.

However, like a PC it will have a microprocessor, memory, keyboard and a modem or terminal adapter that will connect to phone or TV cable lines. The NC display will be your television screen, unless you want to buy a special monitor kind of like the old Commodore 64 when we were kids. Like a terminal, no software will reside on these computers because users will temporarily download programs from the Net, and will save their files into a personal account.

Smaller technology firms are positioning themselves on different sides of the divide. The majority, which includes Apple, Sega, Magnavox and Sony to name a few, are on Netscape's side. All three are producing crude NCs they will debut late this year or early next year. Because the software networks and accounts are not available yet, these NCs will only be capable of viewing Web pages. However, if they receive a warm welcome from consumers, expect to see companies like America On–line serve up software networks to take advantage of NCs.

Although Microsoft hopes their plan will win, they are already planning to take part in Netscape's brave new world by providing innovative news resources on the Web and television. Over the summer Microsoft kicked off their new on–line magazine, Slate. This is to the Internet what Atlantic Monthly and The New Yorker are to the newsstand.

Shortly after the new magazine kicked off, they opened shop on television with partner NBC. The two began MSNBC, a cable station very similar to CNN except with a greater focus on technology. MSNBC, like CNN, sports a web page with in–depth articles that parallel the quality of the Associated Press.

After these two new news resources began, Microsoft let the cat out of the bag on a new project called Cityscape. This basically is a plan to enter the community newspaper industry, but rather than printing the news, Microsoft plans to publish it on the Net. However, unlike a newspaper, this system will allow people who read about a movie, play or concert review to reserve tickets for the event and find a nearby restaurant, too. Similar resources are already available in cruder forms at sites like Lycos. Microsoft intends to begin the project next summer.

I am sure a few of you who are still reading this are wondering what this has to do with how you will receive news and information in the future. With the meshing of television and computer technologies, and the dramatic speed increases that Internet technology is experiencing, broadcast news and the newspaper will become one. After watching Dan Rather or Tom Brokaw report on a story that caught your attention, you could immediately read an in–depth newspaper article, and then watch Brokaw's report again.

If news is not your thing, then there are possibilities for entertainment too. After watching the latest video by REM, you could request to see more videos, read a review of the album and order it and even watch a documentary about the band. This is a lot like watching television and browsing the Internet — in other words you get the best of both worlds.

It is too early to declare a winner, but if the browser war is any indication of the future of technology, then I will hedge my bets with Netscape. However, this future I am dreaming about might simply be the result of watching too many AT&T commercials during Star Trek: the Next Generation.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial Policy

The editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five–College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial board reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst 01003.

Don't count out the vote

Michael Elliot

As you read this, student organizers on this campus and those around the country are preparing for the November elections with one issue in mind — voter turnout. In a few months, as the last votes are tallied and the returns announced, the same organizers will inevitably look at each other in a fit of disgust and say, "We've got to be able to do better than this."

Traditionally, students and young people in general fail to vote in numbers, which costs us a considerable voice in the political dialogue of the country. Some suggest that cynicism is at the root of the cause. Most can count on one hand the number of politicians they can truly trust.

Perhaps the problem lies within the two party system — we really aren't given much to choose from. Bill Weld and John Kerry are a lot more alike than they would allow voters to believe. No matter which one sits in the Senate for the next six years, they can still swap stories about how they invested millions at their next Ivy League reunions.

Too often our leaders base their decisions on political convenience. The president recently signed a welfare reform bill, one which he must know will do tremendous harm to poor children, simply to defend himself from attacks from Bob Dole that he is a supporter of Big Government.

The voters are buying it, ignoring the fact that federal programs do not exist because of the creative engines of some bureaucrats, but because real economic struggle exists for many Americans. Little to inspire us, no doubt, but certainly not an excuse to hide from the duty that citizenship presents. Don't believe in the vote or the process? Fine. What's your solution? The only message sent on the refusal to cast a ballot is one of complacency.

After the 1994 election, Newt Gingrich misguidedly assumed that the less than 30 percent of eligible voters who bothered to cast a ballot provided a sufficient mandate to roll back spending on social services for the needy and pro– environment legislation, among other things. Clearly, if the entire nation had voted, a very different picture of America would have emerged — one considerably less conservative.

Despite our grievances however, the election deserves our careful attention. Unfortunately, it is not as simple as "choose or lose." Even with the significant time restraints imposed upon students, we must still find the time to access the information and people who highlight the paramount issues and intricacies of contemporary American politics.

Yes, it's a burden. Not only must we go into town (democracy would be better served with a polling station on campus), but we must be prepared to make well educated deliberate decisions.

As much as Leno and Letterman cause us to crack a smile during their review of the day's top political news, better sources exist.

However, don't rely on Newsweek and the Boston Globe, as large media corporations do not necessarily provide the most accurate view of our lives. Read the platform statements in the sample ballot mailings, listen to public radio in the car, go to a relevant evening lecture on campus, read a periodical you would normally not refer to — do whatever it takes to widen your perspective in politics. Often following specific issues as they develop, those which implicate your life at UMass, is immensely helpful. For example, on the California ballot, the so–called Civil Rights Amendment may lead to the dismantling of all affirmative action programs without providing a sustainable alternative.

In recent years, the political winds have been blowing from west to east. If such is the case here, who is to say that a similar proposal will not appear on the Massachusetts ballot in the coming years? At UMass, the still unfulfilled 1992 ALANA agreement, brought about by students who decided that diversity was a essential component of any exceptional education, could be brought into question.

Financial aid, always threatened by budgetary constraints, is of course very important to us all as students. Or perhaps foreign policy should be your concern? Many UMass students finance their college education by enlisting in reserve units of the U.S. military. We should therefore be very concerned as to how willing the next president will be in deploying forces abroad and for what reason.

The reality is that the system is made up of people, and we get to choose who those people are. The trick of course is to make sure they remember who we are.

Michael Elliott is a Collegian columnist.

The reasons why

Tara MK Connelly

For everyone who has ever heard — "I just don't love you anymore," this column will either make everything clear, confuse the hell out of you or give you a reason to fight.

I think it's safe enough to say that explaining to someone why you are no longer in love with them is a pretty tough thing to do. It's a gradual thing really, it's not like you wake up one morning and — poof — the magic is gone, but it does happen. You might not want it to happen, you might not even expect it to happen. There can be warnings and flashing lights, or it can happen during the six o'clock news between the economic editorial and the weather.

To say it is bad. To be on the receiving end is probably worse. It's like a child playing with a pointed stick — sooner or later someone is going to get hurt (this is usually followed by, "and don't come crying to me." But that part wasn't applicable).

Here are a few theories as to why this strange phenomenon might occur.

Theory No. 1

You were never really in love with that person in the first place. In fact it was just a serious case of infatuation brought on by boredom, or because you are rebounding with a capital "R." They filled a void, they got you over the hurdle, you feel better — but you sure as hell don't feel love.

Theory No. 2

You change. Somehow somewhere between the first kiss and the x anniversary things have changed. You get a new job, start a new hobby, make new friends — whatever, but somehow you have moved and they haven't. To quote a line from Dr. Monroe on "The Simpsons:"

"You are no longer the hot love object that he (or she) desires."

Theory No. 3

They have changed. They have gotten a new job, they have met new friends, they have gotten a new hobby — and baby, it sure doesn't include you. Therefore you must bid them adios.

Theory No. 4

It has been four years. You know him or her so well that it's like clockwork. You still love their annoying nuances and you know that you want to spend the rest of your life with that person. However, they don't. They don't realize it, they're not going to realize it and all attempts and hints (subtle or otherwise) have failed. Your goals are not theirs. Your dreams aren't either.

Theory No. 5

You find out that you're at an impasse where something has to change, but you just can't figure out what it is. You've broken up more times than the days of Christmas and every time you both vow things are going to be different, they are — for a short enough span to lull you into a false sense of security— than bam! "Sorry, the number you are trying to reach has been disconnected or is no longer in service. Please hang up and try your call again."

Choice A. Hang up and try again.

Choice B. Switch phone companies.

Choice C. Find a new number.

Theory No. 6

It just wasn't meant to be. These are for people who believe in fate and the concepts of bad timing and star– crossed lovers. And for all those who "just know," sometimes what feels like a gut instinct is really indigestion.

Theory No. 7

Lack of common interest. You like hot, steamy weather and he likes icebergs and penguins. Your idea of a dinner is five courses and corresponding wine — his is a package of hot dogs and a six pack. Yeah, opposites attract, but if the fundamental things like values, hobbies and ideals are as different as night and day with no complementing or balancing to be seen, sorry no dice.

Theory No. 8

Abuse.

Mental, physical, whatever. It's grounds for abandonment, divorce and in some cases justification for murder. There is only so much you can take before you realize that love can't conquer all. Look at Tina and Ike.

Theory No. 9

Stagnant. Like the Campus Pond, this one word describes your present state. It's been, oh about two years or so, and those little nuances that you used to take pleasure in knowing have become nerve wracking symbols of well, stagnation. Your lives are routine. Kisses and embraces have become perfunctory. Roses on your birthday, perfume for Christmas, expected, predictable and (sigh) boring as all hell.

Now that isn't to say that all relationships end up this way, but I can bet that any number of people have been faced with any number of the above combinations and know what a horrible empty feeling it can cause. Sleeplessness, weird eating habits, the ability to live on one cup of coffee and an M&M a day. Even if the question "why?" is never answered there will come a day when you'll eventually find yourself out of love. It happens, because we all can't be Wesley and Buttercup in the Princess Bride and frankly, who'd want to be?

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

The educator strikes back

To the Editor:

Bob Dole's unprecedented attack on teacher unions in his Aug. 15 acceptance speech tried to place the blame for the problems facing our schools on the people who are trying to solve them. Judging from the number of irate calls I've received from my members, it was a grave miscalculation.

This attack came as no surprise. Last spring, countless teachers, assisted by the National Education Association (NEA), called their Congressmen urging them to oppose the $3.3 billion in federal education cuts — the largest in history — being proposed by Newt Gingrich, and supported by Dole. While that measure passed by only three votes (thanks to Peter Torkildsen and Peter Blute, who buckled to Gingrich's pressure), it was turned back in the Senate, thanks to an amendment by our senator, John Kerry. It was the nation's teachers who spoke out against cuts in Head Start, vocational education, safe and drug–free schools and college loans.

Now, Bob Dole is scapegoating teachers and their unions because he has no solutions to the real problems facing our students and schools. When he's ready to talk about these problems, and the solutions to them, we'll be glad to do so.

In the meantime, he ought to keep an eye on his own base. On Aug. 13, at a press conference at the Republican Convention in San Diego, the NEA released the results of a nationwide poll of 1,000 Republican voters on education issues. It was conducted by GOP pollster Linda DiVall, whose clients include Bob Dole, the Republican National Committee, Phil Gramm and Mitt Romney.

That poll showed 80 percent of GOP voters (53 percent of whom described themselves as "conservative") believe that federal funding for public schools should be increased or maintained, while only 15 percent support cuts.

It also showed that 61 percent prefer seeing their tax dollars spent on improving public schools, rather than on vouchers for private and religious schools.

Bob Dole's support of dep cuts in education spending and his convention appeal for vouchers show that the Republican Party is out of touch with its base. Attacking teachers and their unions is a waste of their time. They would be far wiser to listen to their own party members before they marginalize themselves even further.

Meline Kasparian
President
Massachusetts Teachers Association

Interested in becoming a columnist?
Come down to 113 Campus Center and speak to Mark McGrath or call 545-1361

Diversity 101

Amherst restaurant under attack

By Sunanda Ghosh
Collegian Staff

Like most college towns, the town of Amherst and the University of Massachusetts have always had a love/hate relationship.

Students make up a large majority of the consumers who create profit for local merchants. Thus, during college recesses, Amherst merchants suffer economically. And, while students bring money to the town, many local residents seem to feel that some aspects of college life are an annoyance which should be done away with.

In Amherst, Pruddy's, a Latin-American restaurant located on Boltwood Walk, has faced demands by certain town residents calling for its removal for the past two years.

The largest group calling for this are tenants of the Clark House, a subsidized housing complex which houses mainly elderly residents. These residents believe Pruddy's will become like Twisters, the restaurant formerly located there, which was owned and operated by other management. According to the residents, Twisters had a bad reputation.

Twister's had a record of poor management, people being loud, urinating outside the premises, and having constant fights" said Jana Sorge, a resident of Clark House.

When Twisters closed, Prudencio Gomez, Sr. a resident of Amherst, moved in his Latin-American Restaurant, previously located on Route 9. He runs the business with the aid of his son, Prudencio Gomez, Jr.

According to Gomez Jr., they were not expecting the large number of restrictions the town would be imposing based on the reputation of the prior establishment at that location.

Gomez Jr. said some of these restrictions include: closing at 11 p.m., not serving low-cost drinks, not allowing them to use the back entrance and, unlike other restaurants, having to renew their license each year.

Gomez Jr. added, "They basically told us not to cater to the students."

He continued by saying he believes the town just wanted to make it difficult for his business to survive.

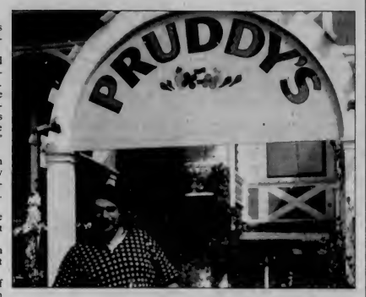
"For two years we have been tested by the town of Amherst to prove ourselves responsible and respectable... they are just waiting for us to fail. We are the only place in town on probation because of a previous business [Twisters] that resided in this same space, to which we have no relation," said Gomez Sr.

Housing Authority Chairperson Joan Logan said, "You have to give the new kids on the block a chance. Some people can't stop remembering Twisters. Well, Pruddy's is not Twisters."

Logan also said that ever since the first town meeting, Amherst was not willing to give Gomez a chance.

"I have found it [Pruddy's] is a peaceable kingdom," said Logan about the restaurant.

Pruddy's is located in a busy area of Amherst nearby other restaurants such as The Black Sheep Cafe, Amber Waves and Amherst Chinese.



"We live in commercial zone and not in a residential zone. The town made a mistake by placing The Clark House and Ann Whalen House in this area," Gomez Sr. said. "When the town had started converting the buildings into housing for elders, many Amherst residents complained and spoke out on what a bad decision Amherst would be making. The town did not put a buffer zone and now we are paying for it.

"We have no problems with the police, health inspectors, building inspectors, and we even have some support from the Clark House."

The manager of the Clark House, Liz Massey, had no comment concerning involvement with Pruddy's.

Sorge said that Pruddy's is not as bad as Twisters, but she added that she did not want Pruddy's to become a similar operation.

She said that the patrons of Twisters were seen urinating outside. According to one of the patrons, Twisters would

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Prudencio Gomez Jr. welcoming customers into Pruddy's lock the doors to their bathrooms, and customers therefore relived themselves outdoors.

According to Gomez, the restrooms at Pruddy's are easily available.

Vernard Fennell, a UMass student who has been to Pruddy's a number of times said, "I've never had to wait in line for the bathroom. They are always very clean so I would have no reason to urinate outside."

Clark House residents have also complained about the music, claiming that it is too loud. However, other businesses residing close to Pruddy's say they have never heard the music outside.

Nick Seamon, manager of The Black Sheep, said, "I wouldn't even know they were there... We've never had a problem with Pruddy's."

Owners of Amber Waves and Amherst Chinese both agreed with Seamon saying that there is no noise problem at all.

The only business which has filed a complaint about the noise at Pruddy's is Pinocchio Restaurant. According to Gomez Jr., Pinocchio is now expressing an interest in buying the space from Pruddy's landlord, which he believes may be the cause of the complaints.

Representatives from Pinocchio had no comment.

According to Logan, the music at Pruddy's is not a problem. She said she walked around the premises in the evening and could not hear the music at all.

Gomez Jr. said that one of the changes the town has forced the restaurant to do is to change the storefront sign from Pruddy's Tropical Bar and Grill to Pruddy's. According to Gomez, the zoning board ordered this on the grounds that there is no such thing as a "bar and grill."

Gomez's lawyer has recently told him that restrictions placed on Pruddy's are infringements on their business, and that the town may be violating their rights with their ordinances.

Last spring, Margot Parrot and ex-select board member Harry Brooks, both residents of Amherst, went to investigate Pruddy's themselves.

According to Gomez, Brooks was harassing one of the bouncers and was politely asked to leave.

According to a statement filed by Brooks to the Amherst police, he tried to enter Pruddy's on a different night and was refused admittance by the bouncer on the grounds that they were holding a private party for the Latin American Cultural Center.

In an official complaint to the police, Brooks said after being turned away, "We then left briefly... We observed from Sweetzer Park as this young man walked into the bar... What's more is that he was visibly Asian."

Brooks then filed a complaint with the town of Amherst claiming Pruddy's had committed age discrimination.

Gomez Jr. said, "Whoever causes trouble is asked politely to leave. If it is a student causing trouble, we ask them to leave, and that's okay to the town of Amherst. But when the trouble maker is older, it suddenly becomes unlawful."

Captain Charles Scherpa of the Amherst Police Department said Pruddy's has a clean record and that he has never known of any problems with Pruddy's establishment.

Logan also said, "It has been my observation that they [Pruddy's] are very scrupulous about carding people."

Gomez Sr. urged students to get involved with Amherst politics.

"The Zoning board do not think students are important. Not because these students are trouble makers but because they are alive, dynamic, and enjoy having fun," Gomez Sr. said.

UMass student Richa Kaul said, "I've been in Amherst for three years, and as diverse as the town might claim to be, Pruddy's is the only place that is accepting to all students, especially students of color. I have gone to other places in town... where I have been treated unprofessionally by the management. These bars cater to certain types of people, if you don't fit the category, they make it difficult for you.

"I have found Pruddy's atmosphere to be very comfortable and friendly. Rules are enforced, problems never get out of hand and Pruddy takes every students' needs and safety into consideration, unlike other places in Amherst."

Savia Barron, a senior at UMass, said, "Pruddy's has a completely different crowd than Twisters. I didn't enjoy Twisters, it did not have good management. Pruddy's is welcoming and safe to all. They [Pruddy's] makes me feel like a part of their family unlike other places which are very impersonal."

Gomez Jr. added, "We have a clean slate. I don't know why we are being harassed by certain members who have such an influence in this town. We welcome everybody, our bouncers don't have an attitude, and we treat students like people."

Welcome back to the University of Massachusetts. Welcome back to higher education, PVTA buses, oversubscribed classes and liberal buzzwords such as diversity and multiculturalism.

Multiculturalism and its manifestations have become icons, trends, something to prove just how "down" you are or how "down" you think you are.

Multiculturalism is so much more than just wearing a Malcolm X cap, preforming at Asian Night or having a diverse circle of friends.

Multiculturalism is studying, analyzing and fully comprehending why and how the different facets of our society deal with issues of race and ethnicity.

Multiculturalism is thinking critically about power, race, gender and sexuality. It is learning about the crucial issues which continue to shape our society.

On behalf of the diversity pages of the Collegian, we urge both new and returning students to take part in the struggle for social justice here at UMass, not just by joining our many diverse Registered Student Organizations, but by reading, writing and listening to what people have to say. We urge you to act, to do something to better the condition of peoples of color here and throughout the world.

At the Collegian, our job as diversity editors is to address these critical issues in an intelligent and thoughtful manner. Our contribution to the struggles of oppressed people is in what we write. We encourage everyone to join us in our struggle.

In this, our first diversity page of the year, and the first joint venture by all three diversity pages, we hope to give you an introduction, a taste of what life is like for people of color both here at the university and across the world. You won't be taught this in any classroom.

The staff here at the Black Affairs desk, the Developing Nations Desk and the Multicultural Affairs desk would like to invite anyone interested in writing to come to the Collegian or call us at 545-1851.

Humphrey brown III • Black Affairs
Gregory Castimir • Black Affairs
Lisa Chiu • Multicultural Affairs
Sunanda Ghosh • Developing Nations

BMCP continues 20 year mission

By Allana Todman
Collegian Staff

For many first year and transfer Asian American, Latin American, African American and Native American (ALANA) students coming to the Amherst will be a new and very different experience.

"When I first heard about Massachusetts I thought, 'What's a Massachusetts?'" said Chipp Mitchell, a former University of Massachusetts football player.

"When I decided I would go and check it out, I took my car and drove from my hometown in New Jersey to UMass. Then I looked to the right of me, and I saw woods," Mitchell said. "I looked to the left of me, and I saw woods. Then I turned on the radio... and boy that's what got me. I turned it on, and put it on one station and I got folk. Then I turned the knob some more and got Country and Western.

"Now I'm not knocking anyone who likes this music, but you got to understand where I come from."

Mitchell, like many students at UMass, comes from the inner city. He would bop his head to the phat sounds of R&B, soul, sap and other types of music that many from the inner city prefer. Amherst seemed to be a different experience for Mitchell.

Many ALANA students agree with Mitchell's initial reaction to UMass. Many believe that just because they are in a new and different environment, doesn't mean they have to lose their culture. With music being an important part in the lives of many students of color, groups like The Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) were created to provide comfort and familiarity to the UMass environment.

Here at UMass, BMCP, is hoping to create something of "their own." BMCP first came into existence in the spring of 1969, with intentions to provide a group that would cater to the ALANA community and their cultural needs.

Craig Buchanan, the newly elected music director, and Yusef Lateef, the general manager, are eager to correct any misconceptions that many students on campus might have about BMCP.

"BMCP's main goal is to bring the music industry to the campus, and the students to the music industry," Buchanan said.

Many students are satisfied and have positive things to say about BMCP, but some feel there are too many requirements to join, or that BMCP only produces parties and does not provide help and experience valuable to someone in the communications field.

However, according to Lateef, students have clearly missed the focus of BMCP if they have these miscomceptions. Lateef said that although BMCP throws large events like "Jeans and T-shirt" and the "Funk o' Thon," which sold approximately 1,000 tickets, there are other events that BMCP does to familiarize their members with all different aspects of the communications field.

"There are a lot of people who want be on the air, but not do work," Lateef said. "They take BMCP for granted."

Buchanan continued, "That is why it is important to have office hours as a requirement, because it will enable students to get to know board members, and to see what goes on behind the scenes. These are the people who really work hard to see BMCP's purpose reached."

As for their accomplishments, Buchanan did not hesitate to speak on the success of last semester's Funk o' Thon, especially since many were discouraged after a fight broke out at last fall's Jeans n' T-Shirt event. He added that BMCP had top of the line security that night.

"We definitely were on top of things," Buchanan said.

Buchanan talked about the BMCP spring conference, which many students did not attend. He said that students had a problem with the $10 fee, but added that the price really wasn't as expensive as it seemed.

According to Buchanan, this was the first time they charged an admission fee for the conference, and that it included the dinner, DJ/Rap artist Pete Rock's appearance and admittance to both parties, including the semi-formal and the unsigned talent show.

"Now a lot of people set up the $10 boundary," Buchanan said. "Don't get me wrong, I understand we are all college students, and we enjoy music, but people would pay ten dollars to go to a club for one night, so ten dollars shouldn't be anything. This fee included both Friday and Saturday."

BMCP has been working hard to allow those in their community to feel welcome at UMass, by providing events that will cater to people of African descent.

Lateef and Buchanan both agreed that some things people have said about BMCP are valid, and are trying to change the outlook for the upcoming year.

New ideas on their agenda include at least two events for each month, and inviting outside professionals to give lectures in the field of communications.

BMCP is calling upon every person in the ALANA community to join and take part. They are working to form a collaboration with WMUA and UVC, and hope to have more representation from their members in all areas within the field of communications by providing trainings in radio, television and journalism. They will be holding a barbecue informational event this Saturday all are invited to attend.

According to Buchanan, "Anyone of African descent, who is a communications major needs to be a part of BMCP. It is an outlet to any lines of communication. Communication can be verbal, music and so many other things. Communication is what you make of it.

"For anyone who is a communications major and is of African descent, you're stumping out on yourself by not joining BMCP."

What Whitmore hopes we'll forget

Lisa Chiu

One of the most valuable lessons all students should learn about the University of Massachusetts is not to be fooled by its liberal propaganda — trust me, it's all talk and very little action.

While white students may have discussions about racism, students of color experience it daily. We are continually assaulted and singled out by the UMass police, by ignorant teachers and classmates, in the workplace, by townspeople, and by the administration.

According to an associate director at the Office of Admissions, total enrollment last year for students of color was approximately 12 percent and white students make up approximately 88 percent of the student population. How can we begin to correct the wrongs of our racist American history when we don't even have the numbers to put up a fight?

And despite the low number of ALANA (Asian American, Latin American, African American and Native American) students at UMass, we as students of color have and are continuing to fight, because it is all that we can do.

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst has had a long history of organized student protest. In April 1989, students from both People for a Socially Responsible University and the Central American Student Association took over a laboratory in the basement of Marcus Hall to protest military-funded research, as well as US funding of the conflict in El Salvador. Six were arrested and two were treated at University Health Services for soreness after being dragged from the building.

Five days later, at a rally in support of these students, 100 students came together and marched to Memorial Hall, where they occupied the building for two days, 61 protesters were arrested, 3 graduate students were suspended. A week later 75 students took over the Graduate Research Center in support of the demands of the two prior takeovers. These students refused to negotiate with the administration or leave the building. Thirty-five were arrested, and 19 students were suspended. As a result of these suspensions, the UMass students staged a hunger strike.

In May of 1992, 350 students occupied Whitmore, demanding 10 new minority faculty members over the next three years. They also attempted to shut down the Collegian by removing copies from distribution boxes on the grounds that the paper was racist.

In October 1992 students again took over Memorial Hall in protest of the Columbus Day celebration, and demanded 40 full scholarships for low-income women of color. A day later, 70 black students stormed Washington Residence Hall, occupying it for two hours in protest of a racial attack against a black resident assistant.

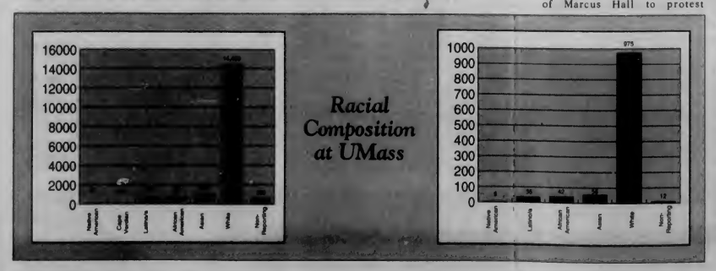
Due to massive student unrest, the administration, students and the Department of Justice took part in a lengthy negotiations process resulting in a document titled "The 1992 ALANA Agreements." This document addressed areas on campus from police to Columbus day, the now non- existent upward bound program and the Admissions office. To this day much of this document remain unfulfilled.

Just last May, 200 ALANA students took over the Campus Activities Office in protest of disproportionate funding by the Student Government Association to ALANA Registered Student Organizations.

The Higher Education Coordinating Council has just recently set new admissions standards, raising the minimum GPA for entrance to UMass. Students of color are directly excluded from acceptance to the university. These guidelines are designed to prevent "less qualified" students and students of color from attending UMass, leaving community colleges as the only opportunity for higher education.

And just last May, high ranking administrators like Grant Ingle said, "The definition of multiculturalism risks alienating many white students because it does not include 85 percent of the student body."

The racism that pervades this country and this university has never left. The same attitudes which lead up to the 1989 takeover of Marcus Hall and the 1992 takeover of Memorial Hall are with us today. Do not let them for once think that we have forgotten.



Do not allow Whitmore or HECC to feel at all comfortable about the climate of student unrest here at Amherst. For if you do forget, or if you do decide to give in to the hypocrisy, don't be surprised when an Asian student is beaten up; if a dining common worker calls you a nigger; if your ALANA RSO does not get as much money as the non-ALANA RSOs; or if the only ALANA voice in the Student Government Association, the ALANA caucus, is taken away.

And don't be surprised when the U.S. decides to declare war on Iran or supports sanctions which only harm the people, like those women and children in Cuba, Iraq and Myanmar.

As students and as students of color here at this university, you have the right to demand changes to what you believe is unjust and wrong about our campus society. In 1992, students just like you saw the need to change what they believed was unjust treatment of peoples of color throughout our campus community.

Remember the past. Remember that the fight is the same no matter what year it is, don't sell out, and continue to challenge, and challenge, and challenge until you are heard.

Lisa Chiu is a Collegian staff member.

Intro to Diversity

(What they won't teach you in the classroom)

If you don't like the effect, don't produce the cause

Hussein Ibish

"If you don't like the effect, don't produce the cause," warned the great George Clinton in Funkadelic's seminal 1972 album, America Eats its Young.

George Clinton's political advice to Americans has never been more apt in the quarter century since it was issued than now, as his lesser namesake, Bill Clinton, seeks reelection to the presidency of the United States.

The liberal denizens of our very own "Happy Valley" warm to the prospect of being able to help Bill Clinton become the first Democrat elected twice to the presidency since Franklin D. Roosevelt himself.

After all, this is Clinton country.

The Valley not only has been a bastion of support but has also provided key players to the Clinton regime, most notably the architect of its foreign policy, National Security Advisor and Mount Holyoke Professor Anthony Lake.

This support, both tacit and overt, comes from many in the Valley and Five-College community who would see themselves as critics of "traditional American foreign policy," as enlightened citizens of the world, as having moved beyond the "ignorance and prejudices" of most fellow citizens, as opponents of oppression and imperialism.

Yet Clinton's international behavior has scarcely varied from those of his predecessors: murderous, brutal, racist, aggressive, chauvinistic and absolutely morally indefensible.

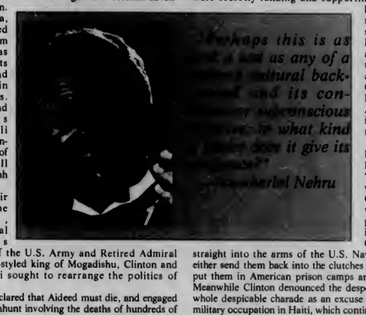
So, what sort of international behavior exactly will you be endorsing when you vote for Clinton in November? The record is crystal clear.

Clinton's international posture was defined as early as his inauguration, with the "21 Missile Salute" he received as his tomahawk cruise missiles slammed into civilian areas of Baghdad at the moment of his swearing in. As Maya Angelou droned on about multiculturalism at the inaugural ceremony, with a serene Clinton smiling in approval, the politically correct phrases of her poem were punctuated by the terrible explosions a world away.

Amidst the smoldering wreckage, one of Iraq's greatest artists, Layla al-Attar, lay dead in the rubble of her home along with her husband and housekeeper, human sacrifices at the alter of imperialism in honor of Clinton's ascendancy.

Throughout his tenure, Clinton has insisted that the sanctions on Iraq, which have caused the otherwise preventable and needless deaths of over 500,000 Iraqi children in the past five years, remain in place. His UN Ambassador, Madeleine Albright, has sought to block every effort at lifting or easing the sanctions, no matter how many children die for lack of medicine and basic nutrition.

In fact, under the guidance of the Five-College darling Lake, Clinton has instituted a policy of "Dual Containment" in the Persian Gulf region, targeting both Iraq and Iran. Iran has been continuously provoked, subjected to a total trade embargo like the one against Cuba, third party sanctions to attack other states that would trade with it, and blamed without any evidence at all for all the numerous uprisings in U.S. dominated Arab countries.



Clinton continues to attempt to turn Iran into an international pariah, and lay the groundwork necessary to "justify" the eventual United States attack on that country that so many American warmongers desire.

Clinton has also acted as the godfather of the project to legitimize the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, known here as the "Mideast Peace Process." Granting Palestinians none of their basic national or human rights, the Oslo accords simply replace Israeli occupation troops in major Palestinian towns with Arafat's mercenaries. Israel's unreconstructed colonialism and apartheid have thus been obscured. Many people apparently even believe there has been some sort of "Israeli withdrawal" from the West Bank or Gaza. Nothing of the sort has taken place.

Clinton repeatedly used the diplomatic muscle of the United States to shelter Israel from criticism for its crimes, most recently when the Israelis bombed a U.N. base where hundreds of unarmed Lebanese civilians had sought shelter from the Israeli bombardment of their towns. Well over a hundred were killed. Clinton blocked every international effort to criticize Israel for this grave act of terrorism, instead blaming the Lebanese themselves.

Clinton has also given diplomatic and material support to the vicious Russian assaults on Chechnya, again repeatedly blaming the Chechens, like the Lebanese, for daring to defend themselves against colonialism.

Not that Clinton hasn't had significant colonial adventures of his own.

In Somalia, Clinton inherited a project from Bush that was unclear in its objectives and entirely shady in its motivations. Clinton and Boutros-Ghali gave it a grim single-mindedness of purpose: kill Muhammad Farah Aideed.

Through their men on the ground, Major-General Thomas Montgomery of the U.S. Army and Retired Admiral Howe, the self-styled king of Mogadishu, Clinton and Boutros- Ghali sought to rearrange the politics of Somalia.

These men declared that Aideed must die, and engaged in an insane manhunt involving the deaths of hundreds of Somalis. Aideed's home and offices were rocketed by U.S. helicopter gunships, with dozens of innocents murdered. U.S. troops assassinated a number of older Somali men, only to defend to their disappointment that these were not, as they had hoped, Aideed.

American helicopters and Pakistani infantry opened fire on crowds of unarmed Somali demonstrators on several occasions, leaving corpses littering the streets of Mogadishu. Finally, Somali fighters, armed with nothing more than rocket-propelled grenades, were astonishingly able to bring down one of the American helicopter gunships which rained death on the streets from on high.

In the ensuing battle, at least 18 crack U.S. Army rangers were to be killed at the hands of the Somali fighters. White America reacted in horror at the sight of the battered bodies of its pilots being dragged through the streets by crowds of enraged Somalis. Clinton's Somali adventure soon came to an ignominious end.

While no less insidious, Clinton's other great colonial project, Haiti, produced less dramatic incidents.

Recall that Clinton railed against President Bush's blatantly racist refusal to grant political asylum to Haitians fleeing General Raoul Cedras' brutal military dictatorship. He would behave very differently, he vowed. But, true to form, Clinton not only continued to refuse to grant asylum and instead herd refugees into inhuman concentration camps as prisoners, he instituted a policy of piracy on the high seas to capture Haitian vessels and return their dissident cargos to the tender mercies of the Haitian military, lest some black people enter the United States.

Ironically, strong circumstantial evidence suggests that the United States was a key force behind the coup which overthrew President Aristide and installed the military junta in the first place, thereby driving the Haitians to flee.

There is absolute certainty, however, that Clinton played an amazingly cynical double game in Haiti. It has emerged that Clinton's intelligence boys over at the CIA were secretly funding and supporting the notorious FRAPH militia/death squad which violently suppressed all dissent against the junta, while at the same time Clinton was publicly embracing Aristide and calling for the junta to step down.

The notorious FRAPH leader Emmanuel "Toto" Constant was on Clinton's CIA payroll, driving the Haitian people to flee into the Caribbean, straight into the arms of the U.S. Navy, which would either send them back into the clutches of the despots or put them in American prison camps around the region. Meanwhile Clinton denounced the despots, and used the whole despicable charade as an excuse to reimpose U.S. military occupation in Haiti, which continues to this day.

Of course, Haiti is not tie only Caribbean island to feel the wrath of Clinton. Cuba, that perennial target of brutal American presidents, continues to be the subject of ever greater levels of economic warfare. Under Clinton, not only have the trade embargo and illegal third party sanctions continued unabated, but bizarre new laws such as the "Helms-Burton Act" allow non–U.S. companies doing business in Cuba to be sued by Americans in U.S. courts.

Indeed, under Clinton, Americans grasping for imperial "extraterritorial rights" extending its jurisdiction beyond national borders has greatly increased with similar laws attacking foreign companies doing business not only with Cuba, but with Libya and, of course, Iran as well.

In Bosnia, Clinton was guilty of extending unrealistic false hopes to the Muslim government, all the while behaving in a manner that only served to extend the war as long as possible. Having fomented the break–up of Yugoslavia into ethnic enclaves, the United States, through Clinton, foisted the hideous Dayton Accords on the south Slavs, forcing the Muslims into an uncomfortable and unequal alliance with their former Croat enemies and setting up Clinton's Swedish crony Carl Bilt as constitutional overlord of Bosnia.

Of course, this was not before Clinton's main proxy in the region, Croatia, committed the largest single atrocity of the whole Yugoslav war —— the ethnic cleansing of Krajina. Hundreds of thousands of Krajina Serbs were driven from their homes in a few days by the Clinton–funded and armed Croatian Army, which was advised by a group of retired U.S. military officers led by the former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency. Once again, Clinton was quick to offer his war criminal allies full diplomatic protection, arms and money.

This has not been a comprehensive review of Clinton's international crimes, but it does serve to accurately characterize the behavior of the United States under his leadership.

There can be no doubt, then, why President Clinton is regarded around the globe as a figure inspiring loathing and revulsion. He should be standing trial, not standing for office. Furthermore, there can be no doubt as to what kind of policies a vote for Clinton will endorse and perpetuate.

This is not to say, of course, that one ought to endorse his floundering and pathetic rival, Bob Dole, who is certain to be just as bad. Quite clearly you are likely to get about the same policies from both men. Virtually no one in the Valley is going to vote for Dole anyway.

But, one needs to honestly recognize that, in any event, a vote for Clinton will serve and be seen as an endorsement of his policies and actions. That is how he, the media, and the world will see it.

In a nutshell then, this presidential election is the greatest moral test the Valley has faced since the days of the vicious and barbaric Gulf War in 1990–91.

People need to vote their conscience. If you like Clinton, and support these actions and policies, then by all means vote for the fellow. If not, withhold your endorsement.

Vote for a third party candidate, or anyone with whom you agree, or sit this one out and start organizing for next time, or focus on the local level. Be creative. It is absurd to think, as Americans are apparently taught, that a choice every four years between Coke and Pepsi is the sine qua non of political participation.

The arguments of fashion hold that Clinton's opponents are somehow so much worse that one has no choice but to support him no matter what his actions have been. People need to ask themselves, however, where the moral limits lie. Is there not a point when a person goes beyond the moral limits and it is no longer possible to support them? Is there a limit at all? Or, in the name of an illusory and barren "pragmatism," will those who ought to know better be herded like sheep into voting for, endorsing, and causing the return of a proven villain?

This election is a moral issue. Clinton's record is clear. You know by now exactly what you are going to get if you vote for him.

Forget the lies spoken by Bill Clinton. Remember the truth sung by George Clinton. "If you don't like the effect, don't produce the cause."

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian Columnist.

Clinton & race: history of betrayal

Sunanda Ghosh

Flanked by former welfare recipients at a gala ceremony at the White House, a smiling President Clinton pursued his quest for re-election by formally abandoning this country's 50-year-old commitment to its poor children.

As he gleefully signed the so-called "welfare reform act," which ended the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program (AFDC), Clinton spoke in glowing terms about "empowering people" and "providing opportunity."

Children of unemployed single parents will no longer receive guaranteed federal support. It is estimated that 12.8 million people, including eight million children will be cut off from aid and health care by this morally reprehensible act.

While strict time limits are now placed on any aid to poor families, Clinton's reform contains no provision for job creation, cuts millions of people off from health care coverage, and doesn't address the question of day care for children of the single mothers who are now supposed to spend their days at work.

Thus, while pretending to "empower people," Clinton's new law contains none of the tools to enable families currently relying on welfare to become independent.

The cruel nature of Clinton's "reform" is underscored by the drastic cuts made to supplemental aid for low-income children with disabilities. This will cut 315,000 of these children from their measly $470 a month benefit and, more importantly, their health care.

This law amounts to little more than a cynical vote-grubbing gimmick at the expense of those in society least able to defend their interests, especially children in need.

At its center, Clinton's Welfare Abolition Law has a clear racist effect since it will disproportionately harm people of color. It also has an obvious racist motivation.

The debate on "welfare reform" over the years has been riven with racial and ethnic stereotypes such as the demonization of single mothers, attacks on "cultures of poverty" among people of color, and theories such as those expounded in The Bell Curve.

Therefore, in signing this law Clinton plays on deep-rooted racist sentiments among the majority in the United States, thereby improving his popularity among the white voters.

Those who would defend President Clinton insist that his overall record on racial issues is good, and that, in an election year aberration, he has been forced to sign this "Republican bill" in order to ensure victory at the polls.

One could seriously challenge the idea that he "needed to do this" given the disarray in the Republican Party and a weak challenger, the lackluster Bob Dole. In any case, it remains a clear betrayal of principle on Clinton's part. Those who continue to defend him in the face of his unconscionable actions partake in this same betrayal of principle and abandoning of millions of poor children.

Shayamala Ivatury

The fact that Clinton has a dismal track record on racial issues serves as a much better explanation for his enthusiastic embrace of this racist "welfare reform" than the theory of election-eve damascene conversions.

Just as Clinton is currently abandoning these millions of poor children for political expediency, he abandoned a number of black appointees when the white boys in Congress started to howl. During his tenure as president, Clinton has clearly demonstrated a double standard of disregard and disrespect when it comes to his female African-American appointees.

For example, Lani Guinier's nomination for Assistant Attorney General in charge of Civil Rights was withdrawn when her law review articles on empowering African-American electorates came under attack. Rather than discuss the merits of Guinier's proposals, the media caricatured her as a "Quota Queen," while the conservatives in Congress were publicly declaring their intentions of attacking her the way liberals had attacked Judge Bork. Rather than stand behind his nominee, the spineless Clinton withdrew the nomination of Guinier.

"I was nominated — and then the rules were changed," said Guinier, a respected law professor and Clinton's colleague from Yale Law School. She was not even given the minimal respect of representing herself and her ideas before Congress.

This same basic courtesy has been granted by other presidents to their controversial nominees, such as Robert Bork and John Tower, and given by Clinton to Zoe Baird and Kimba Wood, all of whom needless to say are white.

Similarly, President Clinton gave virtually no support to Dr. Jocelyn Elders, the Surgeon General, who was driven from office in controversy after she spoke honestly about serious health issues. Even during the nomination process, Clinton failed to adequately defend her as the same undue barrage of vicious attacks from Congressmen and the media.

Four years ago, Candidate Clinton sought to curry favor with white voters by attacking another black woman, the rapper Sister Souljah. These attacks were all the more provocative in that they were calculatedly made at a meeting of the Rainbow Coalition in order to prove to all that Bill Clinton was willing to insult people of color to their faces.

In 1992, Clinton/Gore campaign commercials promised to "send a strong signal to criminals by supporting the death penalty." Using code words, Clinton's carefully crafted rhetoric has played on stereotypes that demonize black people as criminals.

One of the few campaign promises Clinton has delivered has been the diversion of vast resources into the "law and order" machinery. Millions spent, not on job creation or education in the inner cities, or improved health care for the poor, but on a huge prison system.

In the past, Clinton has even executed black men for political gain. In a decision bearing all the hallmarks of extreme cruelty, Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton refused to grant clemency for, and thereby condemned to death, Rickey Ray Rector, a black man suffering from severe brain damage. After committing murder, Rector was lobotomized by a self-inflicted bullet wound and was unfit to stand trial, let alone be executed. Governor Clinton, ignoring widespread calls for clemency, sought to prove his toughness by executing this mentally destroyed black man.

In the face of his unequivocal track record, Clinton is revealed as just another good ol' boy, the modern Southern Dixiecrat. The President's signing of the Welfare Abolition Law was nothing more than typical Clinton. So, don't believe the hype. And in November, vote your conscience.

Sunanda Ghosh and Shyamala Ivatury are Collegian staff members.

Labor dances with the Devil

Shayamala Ivatury

The attitudes and actions of organized labor with regard to President Clinton continue to defy logic.

In 1992, union contributed a whopping $3.7 million and hundreds of hours of voluntary service to the Democrats for Bill Clinton's campaign. In response to Clinton's victory, then AFL–CIO President Lane Kirkland said, "It has been a long dry spell. We have, I think, reached an oasis."

The newly elected so–called "pro–labor" and "pro–working people" President went into public–relations overdrive. In a post–election publicity stunt aimed at making people feel good, Clinton organized an "Economic Summit" that included union leaders, corporate CEOs, and academics, all posing as one big happy family. But this "summit" produced little more than glossy new photos and double–talk.

Subsequently, Clinton appointed economist Robert Reich as Secretary of Labor. Reich was noted for advancing a post–modern version of noblesse oblige that sought to contain social tensions by persuading the technocratic elite to be more generous with increasingly displaced workers. His appointment and early actions were greeted with enthusiasm by union officials as "pro–labor."

But, as has been typical of the Clinton administration's relationship with labor, it soon became clear that Reich's calls for "new partnerships" between labor and management and "win–win solutions" were in fact business strategies for improving American corporate competitiveness, cooked–up in collusion with pro–business Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and Economic Advisor Laura D'Tyson. Thus, Clinton's real attitude towards labor began to emerge.

Having constructed a false image of caring for workers, Clinton continued to advance the interests of big business. He proceeded to systematically sell–out key labor issues such as health care, NAFTA and striker replacement legislation.

One of the most important promises Clinton made to the working people had been a health care reform package that included universal coverage. Either through incompetence or by design, Clinton's mishandling of health care reform served only to kill the issue for years to come.

Clinton sought to avoid the inevitable all–out battle with insurance companies and other health care profiteers. Rather than propose a simple "single–payer" universal insurance system as any committed reformer would, Clinton tried to appease these commercial interests. Instead of insuring the public's health care, he confused them with a convoluted and incomprehensible "managed care" proposal based on for– profit health management organizations (HMOs).

The confusion, it was almost too easy for insurance companies, the American Medical Association, and others who profit from sickness to frighten Americans away from the very idea of health care reform; all at the expense of 38 million poor Americans without health care.

Organized labor had originally proposed universal health care, specifically a "single–payer" program. But they continued to support Clinton in spite of his abandonment of this principled stance. For example, the Presidents of the United Auto Workers and American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees declared that they would not support demonstrations or other lobbying efforts for the "single–payer" system, claiming that they would work on the "inside" to influence Clinton's health care package.

On the heels of the health care reform debacle, adding insult to injury, came Clinton's signing of the North American Free Trade Treaty (NAFTA) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). These treaties are widely regarded as being against the interests of American workers, as they enable big business to easily transfer manufacturing units to areas where the cost of labor is cheap, such as Mexico. Clinton sold them as a panacea for the economic problems faced by the average American. But of course, the only American beneficiaries is big business.

The duplicitous Clinton later sought to pass the blame for the effects of his own legislation onto poor migrant families. In the 1995 State of the Union Address, he linked job loss with illegal immigrants, stating, "the jobs they hold might otherwise be held by citizens or legal immigrants."

Candidate Clinton had promised to support the "strikers replacement bill," which would not allow companies to hire scabs as permanent replacements for striking workers. Clinton has shown little enthusiasm for this act.

Even conservative commentator Kevin Phillips described Clinton as "the most anti–labor president of the twentieth century." Wouldn't one then expect organized labor to express doubts about Bill Clinton? On the contrary.

In August 1996, the first female and Latina vice–president of the AFL–CIO, Linda Chavez–Thompson, said she was thrilled with the Democratic Party Platform and enthusiastically endorsed Clinton, as did the AFL–CIO.

In June, over 1,400 union members and delegates formally inaugurated a "Labor Party" in Cleveland. Because of their insistence on supporting Clinton, they adopted a nonsensical "non–electoral strategy." As explained by its organizers, "... we call on the Labor Party to mobilize working people in a bold experiment to develop effective — non–candidate/non– electoral — political actions that turn our organizing approach to politics into reality." Obviously, the Labor Party platform includes no running of candidates in elections and bars its chapters from running any independent candidates.

As Alexander Cockburn of the Nation notes, "Unions active In promoting the Labor Party will do nothing impertinent or subversive, such as actually annoy Democrats. The Labor Party is achieving the miracle of a third party that is the wholly owned subsidiary of the party it is challenging."

Upset by even this non–challenge to Clinton, the new "progressive, visionary" AFL–CIO President John Sweeney claimed that the chief priority of the AFL–CIO is the re– election of Bill Clinton, stating, "Well, shame on us for if we start splitting off or distracting our activists. We should save the creation of the Labor Party for a non–Presidential year."

Whatever Sweeney and other labor leaders think, it's clear that Clinton cannot be described as pro–labor. Despite his rhetoric, he is scarcely more pro–labor than Bob Dole. Organized labor and voters concerned with these issues need to finally come to terms with the real nature of Bill Clinton and, in November, vote their conscience.

Shyamala Ivatury is a Collegian Columnist.

Everywoman's Center confronts issue of violence against women

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Staff members and volunteers of the University of Massachusetts Everywoman's Center spent their summer strengthening their "Against Violence Against Women" programs, as well as planning new events for the fall semester.

The center offers two programs dealing with different issues of violence against women — the Educator/Advocate program and the Counselor/Advocate program. Both share common goals: raising awareness of domestic violence and ending the isolation of victims and survivors.

Programs for prevention

Educator/Advocates use preventive education as a tool for decreasing the high incidence of violence against women.

Largely comprised of trained student volunteers, this group designs and facilitates workshops for various campus organizations, high schools and community groups.

Though workshops can be tailored to a group's specific needs, topics generally include rape and date rape awareness, battering or abuse in relationships, media images of women, pornography, sexual harassment, and defining abuse and respect.

Community members interested in having a workshop conducted should call or visit the Everywoman's Center, located in Wilder Hall. Facilitators recommend that interested groups request workshops at least two weeks in advance, so they may address specific issues.

The Counselor/Advocate program serves as a support system for all survivors of rape, battering, incest, sexual harassment and related violence. The program offers free and confidential services to women in the UMass, five college and Hampshire County communities.

Counselor/Advocates staff a 24–hour hotline for individuals who have been sexually assaulted or battered and provide support, information and crisis intervention. Walk-in counseling is also available weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Nelson House. Additionally, Counselor/Advocates provide short–term counselling on a weekly basis.

Information regarding law enforcement, legal, medical and social services and University systems can also be obtained through the program. Therapy, resource and support group referrals are available through the hotline or Nelson House.

The Counselor/Advocate program also offers 10–week support groups for rape and incest survivors.

A variety of educational and advocacy services are also provided by the Women of Color (WOC) program, located in Wilder Hall. The WOC program works independently and in collaboration with campus and community groups and organizations to provided workshops, film series, guest speakers and social and cultural events for women of color.

The WOC program also performs outreach work for women of color and their families, and makes referrals to campus and community agencies that serve diverse cultural and linguistic populations.

Center offers opportunities

According to Everywoman's Center Director Carol S. Wallace, volunteer opportunities for women of all colors, whether members of the campus or community, are always available.

An open house will be held from noon to 4 p.m. on Sept. 11 in Wilder Hall for women interested in paid student positions, internships, volunteer opportunities and Everywoman's Center programs and services. A reception and refreshments will follow from 4 to 7 p.m. "A Women of Color" reception is scheduled on Oct. 3 from 6 to 9 p.m. in the VIP lounge of the Mullins Center.

To become either an Educator/Advocate or a Counselor/Advocate, through training and interviewing by the Program Coordinator is required. Both positions involve 60 hours of training, weekly staff meetings and other individual requirements. Because a 12–month minimum commitment is required to become a staff member, students are encouraged to volunteer before their senior year.

UMass students are also eligible for three pass/fail academic credits through the women's studies program. In addition, in their third semester with the program Counselor/Advocates and Educator/Advocates can also exercise a graded option.

Rachel Thorburn, Assistant Coordinator of the Counselor/Advocate program, said volunteering is an opportunity for meeting other women concerned and excited about women issues and violence against women.

"The 60–hour training is an intense experience, but it's very rewarding," Thorburn said.

The most valuable experience in volunteering, Thorburn said, "is having a sense that they [volunteers] are making a positive difference in a victim/survivor's life."

Thorburn said the number of applications the program receives usually exceed the amount of openings available. This semester, they will seek approximately 25 Counselor/Advocates and 10 Educator/Advocates. Thorburn recommended applying early. The deadline for application is Sept. 11, and training begins on Sept. 15.

Patricia Mota Guedes, Program Coordinator of the Educator/Advocate program stressed that there are many different ways for women to get involved.

"If you don't want to go through the training, there are other ways to get involved," Guedes said. "You could do work with your dorm, sorority or RSO [Registered Student Organization]."

"Come and talk to us, and we will work together," Guedes said.

Fall activities abound

The Everywoman's Center has scheduled support groups for the fall, such as the "Acculturation Group for Latina Women" and a "Coming Out Group for Lesbians." The "Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups," which involve the Counselor/Advocate program, are also scheduled for the fall.

The Amherst Women's Safety Series begins Sept. 25 with a forum titled, "Enjoying the Beauty of Amherst: A Personal Safety Program for Women of All Ages." The forum, which takes place from 7 to 9 p.m. at Amherst Junior High School, will discuss the safety of girls and women when they are enjoying the outdoors.

"One of our goals is to bring people who live in Amherst, Hampshire and Amherst College students and UMass students together," Guedes said.

In addition to the Everywoman's Center, the safety series is sponsored by the UMass and Amherst Police Departments. Amherst Health Department, professionals from the office of State Representative Ellen Story, Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth D. Scheibel, Select Board of Amherst, Amherst Conservation Department, Amherst and Hampshire College Public Safety, Valley Women's Martial Arts, ACTV and the League of Women Voters.

Guedes also said the center is in the process of planning events for October, which is Domestic Violence Awareness month.

The Everywoman's Center is also organizing a collaboration with ALANA students and the New World Theater to discuss issues of race, sex and media stereotypes through two plays: Lisa Jones' Combination Skin and Diana Son's R.A.W. ('Cause I'm a Woman).

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Sheri Vanetzian, an Amherst resident, works at the Everywoman's Center Hotline, located in the Nelson House.

"Soul–TV" to be solid gold on UVC; new dance show debuts this semester

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

For all the fans of programs like "Soul Train" and "Solid Gold," a new show entitled "Soul–TV," scheduled to air on Sept. 27, may become the UMass version of these dance favorites.

The show will be taped from the Student Union Ballroom, and is open to the public. However, it will not be seen live on UVC since the dance–party will last 3 hours, and the film must be edited to one hour. A new episode will be filmed once a month.

The performers for the first show will be an off–campus "system" called Sound.

Sound is combined of three core members — two lyricists/producers, a producer/DJ — and a constantly changing group of dancers and singers.

One member of the group, known as "Person," explained the dynamics of the group.

"We call ourselves a free style system, not a free style group," he said. "The reason we use system and not group is because we are not limited to a certain number of people or a certain type of music. We specialize in hip–hop, soul, R&B, techno."

Last year at the Black Mass Communication Project conference, Sound, along with long–running UVC show, "Room 307," headlined a popular talent show.

The three officers of the Registered Student Organization, junior Jenn Corbett, and seniors Song Yi and Felix Plaisar, are eager to get University of Massachusetts students involved.

"There's so much talent on this campus, I see it everyday. We want students to be able to promote their talents, especially in front of their peers," Corbett said.

Soul–TV officers will be holding auditions in Southwest on Sept. 14 for dancers and hosts.

"We are looking for performers with a hip–hop theme," Corbett said. "The show is opened to the public to dance, but we need performers to entertain the audience and to get them more involved."

There will be platforms for the dancers and the crowd to dance on. Monitors will also be setup around the room, airing Soul Train episodes.

Yi will serve as choreographer for the Soul–TV dancers.

"The purpose of the dancers is to get the crowd hyped up. We are looking for 10 or more dancers. They need to be energetic, enthusiastic and not camera shy," she said.

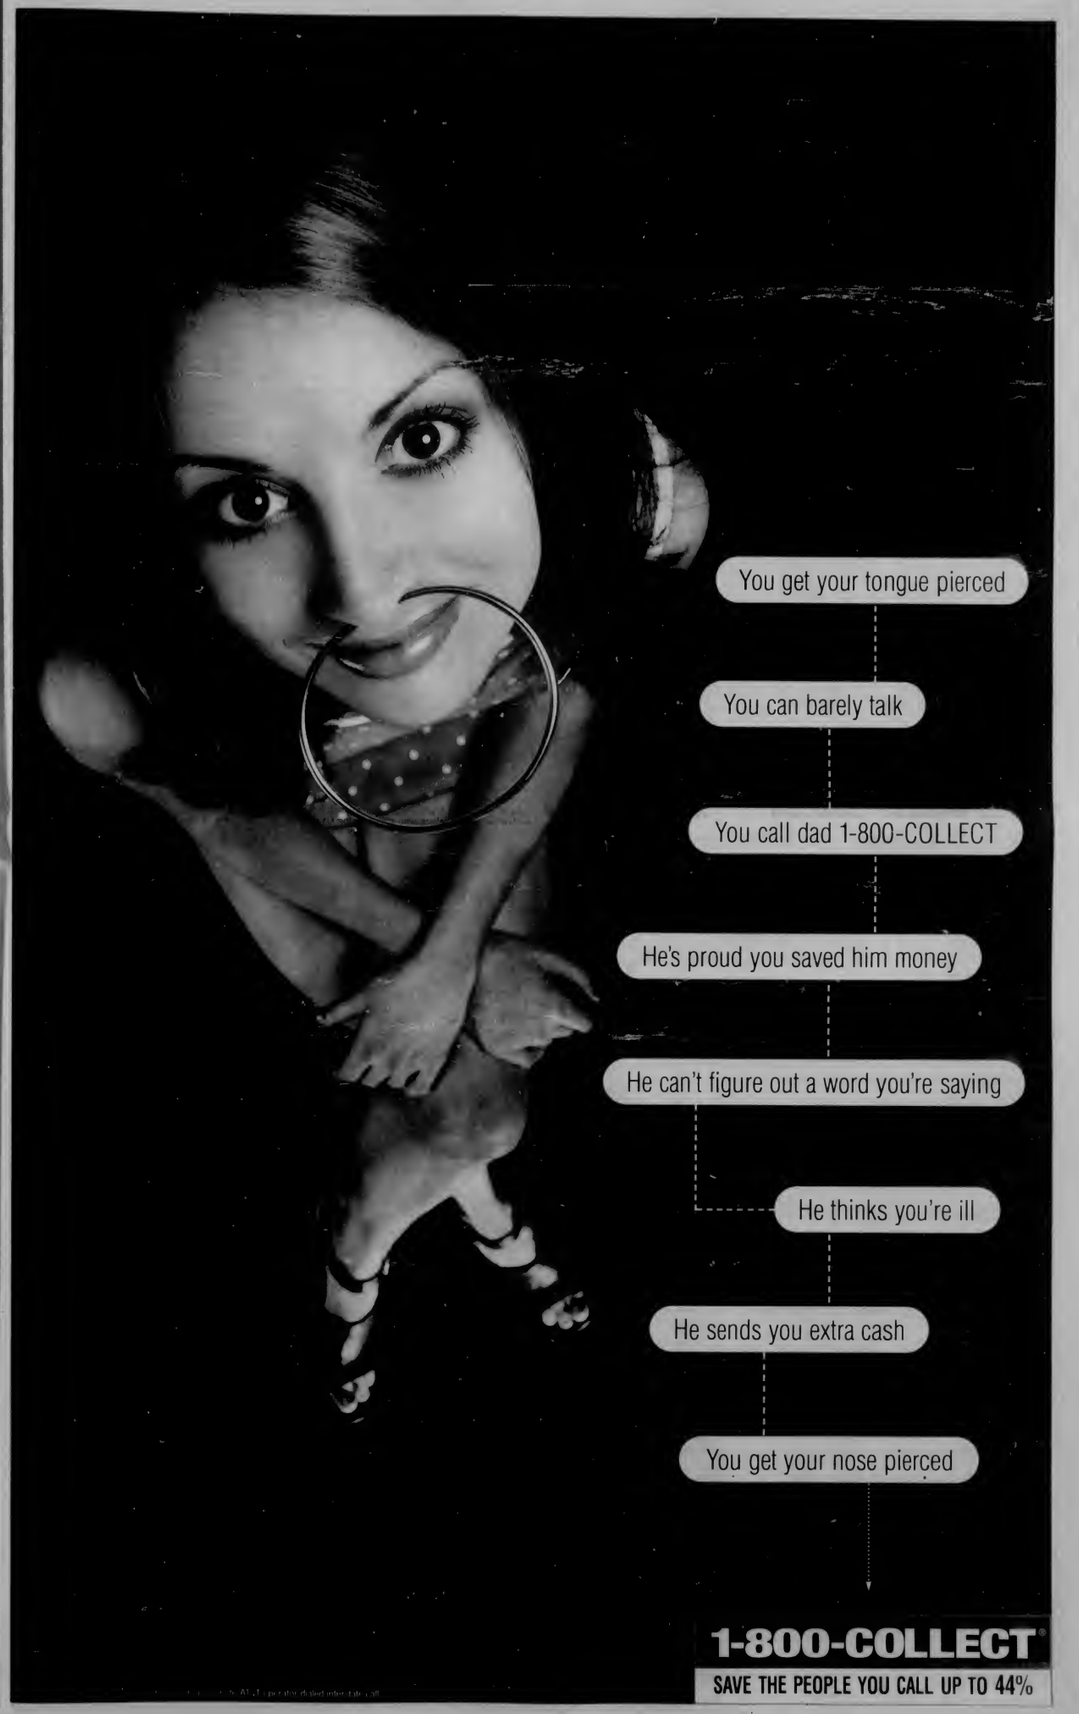
Yi said she is not really worried about females showing up for auditions, but did express concern over a possible shortage of male dancers.

"I hope that we get a lot of guys. They seem to be more camera shy," she said.

Corbett said that she is a little concerned about their budget.

"We have to have proper lighting in the ballroom and that cost thousands of dollars. We only have $750 for the semester," she said. "We are going to try to work out a deal with the Arts Council or another group."

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
KLEIN*S ALL★SPORTS
Welcomes You With Back To School Savings!
Golf • Ski • Hockey • Basketball • Swimming • Lacrosse • Football • Hiking • Running • Walking • Snowboarding • Tennis • Racquetball • Weight Lifting • Baseball • Soccer • Field Hockey • Bowling • Volleyball • In-line Skating • Watersports
Klein's Coupon
15% OFF
Any Non-Sale Item
With Coupon Only • Expires September 15, 1996
CONVERSE Reebok FILA adidas AIRWALK
For Your Sporting Good Needs . . . KLEIN*S ALL★SPORTS Has It All!
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY



THE BLACK SHEEP
DELI ~ BAKERY ~ CATERING
SCHOOL YEAR
OCMP LOCATION
BLACK SHEEP CAFE
Open Monday through Saturday at 8 pm and 10 pm. $1 off for Students
79 Main Street ~ Amherst ~ 253.3442
Mon. - Wed. 7 am - 11 pm Thurs. - Sat. 7 am - 1 am Sun. 7:30 am - 9 pm

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m.
	Increasing Self-Esteem, Building Self-confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self-esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self-confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m.		Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.
	Letting Go and Moving On— This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group. Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops —
affordable, fun, practical, including
Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program,
Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training,
Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog –
(413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

SGA searches for new prospects

"It [Senate Elections] is a call to all students. UMass is what you make it. If you don't get involved to change or create the environment you want you are going to be miserable."
— Maurice Caston, SGA President.

What is the Senate?

The Undergraduate Senate consists of a group of eighty students elected from residential areas, each representing 250 students.

Thirteen percent of the Senate is designated as the ALANA [Asian, Latino, African– American and Native American] Caucus. Twenty-five of the 80 seats are designated for commuters and three seats for the Greek area.

Senate duties include:

- Representing the entire undergraduate population.
- Creating policies that govern all Registered Student Organizations (RSOs).
- Allocating $1.5 million from the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) to student groups.
- Improving student life through the University Administration.

Any student interested in being elected to the Senate must follow a nomination procedure. To be nominated, a student must obtain 25 student signatures from their residence hall. That student is then placed on the Senate election ballot of their residential area.

Polling stations are established at the Dining Commons nearest a residential area. Commuters vote at the Hatch, while ALANA Caucus votes are cast at the Office of ALANA Affairs.

Nominations open on Sept. 4 and close on Sept. 18. The elections are to be held on Sept. 25.
— Raghuram Vadarevu

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

Coming off a year in which massive student mobilization resulted in additional money for student activities, the Student Government Association (SGA) has planned to take on the University of Massachusetts primary governing bodies.

The SGA plans to enlist a state legislator to introduce a bill in the Massachusetts State House of Representatives, designed to increase the number of student seats on the Higher Education Coordinating Council (HECC) and to give the student trustees from all five UMass campuses voting power on the University's Board of Trustees.

The legislation will stipulate that the number of student seats on HECC would increase from one to three, with each representing the universities, state and community colleges, respectively.

Presently, the council has one seat for students, which is rotated among the three divisions of higher education.

"It [the bill] will make a great difference for the students of the Commonwealth," said Maurice Caston, president of the SGA.

HECC sets parameters for the University's Board of Trustees. Last year, the council recommended a 5 percent roll back of tuition, which was later was passed by the Board.

According to Jason Vecchio, student coordinator of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), the two new seats on the council would accurately represent the different economic conditions of the students at the state's higher educational institutions.

In addition, the SGA plans to introduce legislation to give each UMass campus voting power on the University's Board of Trustees. The current voting privilege is rotated among the five campuses alphabetically. Presently, only UMass Dartmouth and Lowell have voting power, which Caston sees as a disservice to students because it silences three of the five student trustees.

The Board is made up of 28 seats of which five are designated for student trustees. Upon receiving recommendations from the HECC, the Board decides on issues such as tuition and student fee hikes.

According to Brian Tirrell, speaker of the SGA Senate, the increased voting power of the student trustees would not shift the balance of power on the Board.

"The main problem we have is that the Board cannot change itself. It is hard to get a bill passed sometimes. We haven't had a representative that will follow the bill through," Tirrell said.

Past legislative efforts have never made it out of committee, said Tirrell.

Vecchio said SGA and SCERA are looking to enlist friends of students or UMass alumni to follow the bill through the House.

In addition to expanding student power within the Board of Trustees, the SGA has proposed renovations of the Student Union Building and an addition onto the Metewampe Lawn located on the pond–side of the Campus Center.

The proposal was made after Chancellor David K. Scott asked the campus community to suggest ideas for three new buildings on campus.

Funding for the three new buildings will be raised through a "capital campaign," to be launched on homecoming weekend. The campaign is designed to raise money through alumni.

The SGA proposal is up against plans for a new alumni convention center and hotel proposed to be built near Warren Mcguirk Alumni Stadium, Tirrell said.

"I think [the convention center] would be nice," Caston said. "I am going to become an alum next year, I would feel uncomfortable with the condition of the Student Union.

"When you look at the conditions of the Student Union, offices are overcrowded, there is no sprinkler system, the paint's peeling off the walls. The student body has outgrown the Student Union."

In other matters, SGA will increase pressure on the University over its failure to adhere to the 1992 ALANA agreements, which called for a greater and more accurate representation of minorities among the students and faculty.

Hillel, Chabad offer activities

New and returning Jewish students given several options

By Anna Feder
Collegian Staff

The first day of classes is here and as students try to cope with the transition from rest and relaxation to the rigor of higher education, the Jewish community has attempted make the change a little easier.

On campus, Hillel and Chabad House have planned a number of activities during the first week of classes for both new and veteran students alike. Off campus, the Jewish Community of Amherst, located at 742 Main St. and Congregation B'nai Israel, located at 253 Prospect St. in Northampton, are gearing up for the high holidays.

Hillel House, located at 388 North Pleasant St, is starting off with "Taste of Israel" at 5:30 p.m. tonight at Hampden D.C. in Southwest. Traditional Israeli cuisine will be served. On Saturday, Hillel's Social Committee is sponsoring a dance at 10 p.m. in Hillel House. Food and beverage will be provided. The event is free with a Hillel activity card, and $2 to all others.

This Sunday, Hillel is hosting their second "Kick–Off Barbecue" from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. It is a rain or shine event which will include sports, music and food. The cost is free with an activity card and $2 to all others. Later in the afternoon there is a trip to Northampton planned just for first–year students. The group will meet at the Fine Arts Center/Haigis Mall bus stop at 5:30 p.m. and return at 10:15 p.m. The highlight of the expedition is a stop at the Fire and Water Cafe to enjoy some of the live music they offer every night. Look For the "Noho Trip" sign, and be sure to bring money for food and drink.

On Sept. 11 at 6:15 p.m. Zionists For Action and the Student Alliance for Israel are sponsoring an ice cream party at Hillel House. This event is free and open to the public.

Also at Hillel on Sept. 12 at 7:45 p.m. students can gather to watch Friends, Seinfeld and E.R. Apples and honey will be provided to help prepare for the spirit of the New Year.

Activity cards may be purchased in the Hillel office or at the Hillel table on the Campus Center concourse. The cost is $15.

This Friday night at 7 p.m. Chabad is hosting a special "Back to Campus" Shabbat service in their newly renovated synagogue located at 30 North Hadley Road. As always, services are free and open to the public.

On Sunday, Chabad will offer a Shofar–making workshop entitled the "Model Shofar Factory." A Shofar is a ram's horn which is crafted into an instrument used on Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year. Its purpose is to awaken a person to repent and motivate them to make positive resolutions for the coming year. It also creates the mood for the 10 Days of Repentance that follow.

During the program, visitors learn about the art of Shofar making as well as participate in a "hands–on" experience in the creation of a shofar from a raw horn. The "factory" also includes various holiday displays, workshops and special art projects.

The event starts at 2 p.m., it is free and open to the public. For $7 participants can take home the Shofar they have made. For more information contact Yonah Blum at the Chabad House.

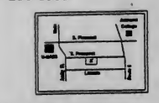
COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...

SHAB

Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care

Sponsor Health Promotion Events

Come join the Student Health Advisory Board



Informational meeting:
Wed. September 18, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304

For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY

53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).

EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY "LIKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK." WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).

Public radio thrives in its third decade

By Kristin Bolow
Collegian Correspondent

Nestled inside the University of Massachusetts Hampshire House is something you may not quite expect... a radio station.

WFCR, broadcast at 88.5 FM, is the local affiliate of National Public Radio (NPR), and has over 126,000 listeners located in northern and western Connecticut, southern Vermont, parts of Rhode Island and the Hampshire, Hampden and Franklin counties.

WFCR, which has been located at UMass for 25 years, was originally formed to "serve the public in an educational way," said Karin Obermeier, the station's outreach coordinator.

The station began in 1966 with a small group of supporters, playing news, classical music and a few special lectures from guest speakers at the local colleges.

The station has grown with time, and has added jazz and other types of music, attracting additional listeners.

The best of NPR is featured for talk, as well as the new "Monitor Radio Early Edition," "Marketplace Morning Report," "the Best of Fresh Air" (news highlights for that week) and many others.

For music lovers, tune in to the sounds of "Valley Folk," "Afro–Pop Worldwide" or the old stand–bys, jazz or classical.

Martin Miller, WFCR's general manager, further explained the station's new additions by saying, "the station is similar to a museum, in that we try to attract people with our newer features but keep them coming back for the programs that have been around for a longer time."

Of course, funding is a source of concerns. Ten percent of support comes from local businesses and corporations, 4 percent comes from state funds (UMass), 3 percent comes from other local colleges, and other portions from federal funds.

"The majority of support, however, comes directly from our listeners," Miller stated.

Sixty percent of support stems from the phone–a–thons (the next one is Sept. 25– 29), contributions by mail, and WFCR's annual used record sale (Oct. 19 & 20), during which 50,000 to 70,000 records of all musical genres are sold on the common.

To really get involved, however, listeners support the station further by becoming members of WFCR, and enjoy the benefits of a bi–monthly calendar and updated newsletter from the station. Student memberships are only $15.

Students can also get involved with WFCR in other ways. The station offers work study jobs to students who are eligible for them and internships dealing with news at the station.

WFCR is always looking for volunteers for fundraising drives.

"We're especially looking for volunteers to help sort records for the upcoming used record sale," Obermeier said. "Volunteers get first dibs on what records we have."

UMass officers saddle up in Hadley

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Last week, the Hadley Farm corral was strewn with debris, set on fire, decorated with balloons and crowded with school buses, tractors and police cars all in an effort to make the University of Massachusetts campus a safer place.

Eighteen mounted police officers participated in a week of training, organized jointly by the UMass Mounted Police Unit and the New England Mounted Police Association (NEMPA).

This year, mounted police from the Boston Park Ranger Department, Worcester County Sheriff Department, Saratoga, N.Y. Park Police, and Hartford and Providence, R.I., Police Departments joined the UMass officers in training.

Jim Turati, coordinator of the UMass Mounted Police Unit, said the initial focus of the training is on the officers.

"First, we work on the equitation end of it," Turati said. "We have to make sure we have capable, competent riders before we attempt at training."

Turati, a horse owner since childhood, organized the original UMass Mounted Police Unit, which only lasted for two years due to budget constraints, in 1974. The program was on hiatus for 15 years, until it was revived in 1989.

The mounted police unit currently consists of five full–time officers and five in training. The unit owns 18 horses, all of which they obtain from private donations. The department's operating budget only provides for the cost of veterinarian care and stabling at Hadley Farm.

"Right now, we have six of the best horses we have had in the eight years of the program," Turati said.

Over the course of the week, the horses went through various types of training to assure that they were capable and safe to take into the community.

The obstacle course last Tuesday involved a sensory and nuisance type of training, which provided the horses with visual examples of what they may encounter in the community. The UMass Fire Department assisted in setting contained fires, then extinguishing them with carbon dioxide cartridges in front of the horses.

"The horses need to learn to be relatively calm around fire engines, smoke, hoses and the carbon dioxide cartridges," Turati said. "They want to please us as much as they can, but sometimes they are too frightened."

The task of the mounted police officer, Turati said, is to remain calm so the horses do not become agitated, and to reassure the horses by petting, stroking and talking to them.

The obstacle course created mostly an urban atmosphere for the horses, with running buses and cars, sirens, and road flares. Balloons were also exposed to the horses in training. Survival riding and an exercise in search–and–rescue took place Thursday at Mt. Toby. On Friday, they worked on campus and practiced roadway work, motor vehicle stops and ticketing.

"People often see mounted police officers on the street and say, 'Gee, that looks nice, there's not much to that,' but there is a long training process involved," Turati said. "It's really an awful lot of work."

That work can also prove to be dangerous, as one of the riders was thrown from her horse at the obstacle training on Tuesday. The officer, from Worcester County, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital by ambulance as a precaution.

Susan Murphy, a Boston Park Ranger and UMass graduate, has worked with the NEMPA program for 10 years.

"The experience so far has been pretty good," Murphy said. "I work with the training for park rangers, and it's a good review for them, as well as educational."

Turati said the mounted police are just one part of a whole police force that shares a goal of making the campus as safe as possible.

"When you put all of the units together — the mounted, bike, car and foot patrols — you have a law enforcement agency proactive in serving and protecting the community," Turati said.

There are distinct advantages to having mounted police officers, Turati said. For work in crowds or parking lots, officers on horseback have an obvious height advantage.

"Mounted police have been great public relations tools throughout history," Turati said. "Being out in the open lets people know that police officers are regular types of folks. The worst thing that happened was 40 or 50 years ago when a lot of police officers were taken off the street and put in cars.

"It took the human element out of law enforcement. Officers need to be out on the street," he said.

TRANG VO/ COLLEGIAN
The UMass Mounted Police Unit and members of New England Mounted Police Association (NEMPA) participated in a training session last week at the Hadley Farm.

■ cheating

continued from page 1-A

that the SGA is never remiss in advising the students review thoroughly," Caston said."

In a letter published in the Boston Globe, Chancellor David K. Scott agreed with Caston.

"Every student arriving on campus receives a booklet on undergraduate rights and responsibilities that clearly specifies that academic honesty includes cheating, lying, facilitating dishonesty, plagiarism, etc," Scott said.

Scott wrote a letter to the editor of the Boston Globe in response to an editorial which said that academic honesty is sadly being ignored by a majority of undergraduates at UMass.

"The SARIS survey on academic dishonesty is not that big of a deal," SGA speaker Brian Tirrell said. "People seem to forget that we are below the national average for cheating."

Tirrell also said that he disagreed with some of the behaviors which were considered cheating by Project Pulse.

"One of the questions was 'Have you ever obtained questions or answers that would be on an exam from someone who had already taken it?'" he said. "Who hasn't done that? It is just research on a subject. If a professor does not change their exams from semester to semester, the student deserves a better grade."

Elizabeth Williams, assistant director of Project Pulse, said, "Some people definitely have a bone to pick about survey methods. We asked about all types of behavior that not everybody would consider cheating. The important thing is that the Project Pulse survey is accurate."

Students were also asked about 13 specific types of cheating and whether they had engaged in each during the past academic year. The highest percentage of students (34.9 percent) said that they had "copied a few sentences of material from a source without footnoting it in a paper."

"Sloppiness in citing sources, by far the main type of academic dishonesty reported in the recent campus survey that led to the editorial, stems in part from a failure of the education system at all levels to teach values and integrity," Scott said in his letter.

He added, "This failure is complicated by a new technology, the Web, in which a vast amount of information isn't sourced or owned."

Other types of cheating with high percentages were referencing materials that the student did not actually read (23.1 percent), allowing someone else to copy answers during an exam (19.5 percent) and selling or giving another student a term paper so they could turn it in for credit (11 percent).

At the end of the survey, students were asked if they had friends who had cheated. A little over seventy–two percent said "yes," while 80.1 percent of students said that they would not do anything if they saw another student cheating.

In the midst of being given negative attention for cheating, Scott said, "UMass Amherst is to be commended for its honest reporting and attempting to deal with the larger issues of ~hics and integrity, an attempt that we in higher education too often abandon."

Chabad House Programs • Fall 1996

CLASSES: MONDAYS– 7:00 PM AT CHABAD HOUSE– FEMINISM & MYSTICISM
TUESDAYS– 8:00 PM AT CHABAD HOUSE– TALMUD CLASS- TRACTATE BERACHOT
WEDNESDAYS: 8:00 PM AT CHABAD HOUSE– TANYA-JEWISH MYSTICISM
THURSDAYS: 12:00 PM LOCATION TBA– LUNCH & LEARN MESSIANISM AND REDEMPTION IN JEWISH THOUGHT

SHABBAT SERVICES: EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT AT 7:00 PM (6:00 PM AFTER DST) SHABBAT SERVICES FOLLOWED BY TRADITIONAL HOME COOKED SHABBAT MEAL– FREE

HIGH HOLIDAY SERVICES: SERVICES AND TRADITIONAL HOLIDAY MEALS THROUGH OUT ALL THE HOLIDAYS. CALL 549-4094 FOR SCHEDULING INFO.

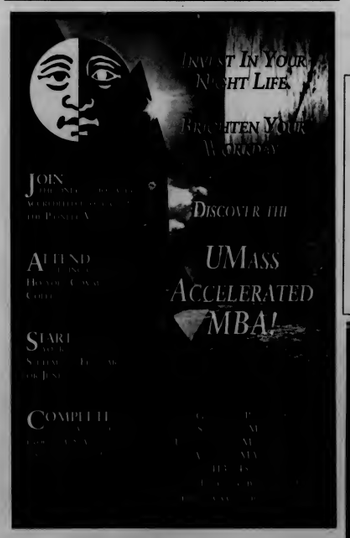
INFORMAL CLASS ON THE MEANINGS BEHIND THE HIGH HOLIDAYS "MONARCHY OR ANARCHY – ROSH HASHANA & YOM KIPPUR" THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 8:30 PM AT CHABAD HOUSE CALL FOR INFORMATION.

"SHOFAR FACTORY" COME AND LEARN HOW, AND MAKE YOUR OWN SHOFAR AT CHABAD HOUSE SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8 AT 2:00 PM

DANCING IN THE STREETS CHASSIDIC STYLE – SIMCHAT TORAH AT CHABAD HOUSE, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 5 AT 7:00 PM

CHABAD STUDENT COALITION: GET INVOLVED IN OUR RSO, BECOME A MEMBER!

STUDENT SEMINAR IN NEW YORK: SIGN UP FOR THE "SECOND ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL JEWISH LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE OF UNIVERSITY STUDENTS" WEEKEND OF OCTOBER 25-27. CALL FOR INFORMATION.



GOURMET JEWISH COOKING: CHALLAH BAKING WORKSHOP WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23 AT 7:00 PM.

CHANUKAH: CHANUKAH PROGRAMS AND PARTIES THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE EIGHT DAYS. CALL FOR INFORMATION ON SCHEDULING AND GETTING SUPPLIES, (E.G., MENORAHS AND CANDLES).

COUNSELING: CHABAD HOUSE OFFERS COUNSELING TO STUDENTS. CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT.

KOSHER PIZZA: CHABAD HOUSE BRINGS THE FINEST KOSHER PIZZA SHOP TO THE AREA. CALL FOR INFORMATION.

Choices Not Chances
Free Contraception Education
Every Mon & Thurs 3 - 4:30 pm and Tues & Wed 7 - 8:30 pm in rm. 302 UHS
Men and Women Welcome
For more information call the Health Education Office 577-5181

Amherst Sunshine Car Wash
Automatic Wash/Wax
Open Daily
Self-Service Bays
Open 24 Hours
Soap/Rinse/Wash
Bubble Brush
Engine De-Greaser
VACUUM CLEANERS
BILL CHANGERS
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East) Amherst

Used Books
1000's of Academic Paperbacks in many subjects at 50-75% off list
Valley Books
199 N. Pleasant St.
Downtown Amherst
256-1368

Emergency Medical Training
by
Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time / Evening
Classes start September 16, 1996
Call UMass Continuing education at 545-0474

Freedom is a three-letter word

Free the press

A message to students new and old from the Daily Collegian news desk.
Why this newspaper matters, and why we need you.

A quality college newspaper accomplishes significantly more than the simple transfer of information to its readers, such as the time of a lecture or the score of last night's game.

Our job is to report on the issues, conflicts and events which shape and consume us, thereby fostering an informed dialogue between students, faculty, staff and administration.

It is by no means an easy task and the tired faces of our readers who casually turn these pages each day indicates that we could be doing a better job.

Publishing daily is a small miracle — from 8 a.m. to as late as 5 a.m., our staff is isolated in the basement of the Campus Center to get this publication exactly where it is right now — in front of your eyes.

Unfortunately, the hard work which is required during any typical day limits our ability to cover the campus as thoroughly as we would like.

A problem, no doubt; the well-being of everyone is at stake. We must know why tuition and fees our so high, why racism exists on this campus, why there is not enough financial aid available, why advising services are totally inadequate and why the upcoming elections are vitally important — and that's only the beginning.

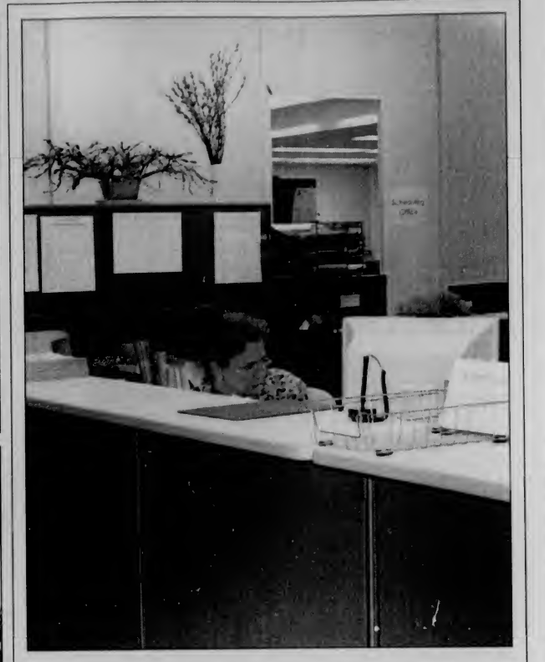
The Collegian, therefore, depends on new writers whose interest extends beyond career goals to a genuine concern for the people of our community. Without them, we will never access the information which may alter the way we see this University and perhaps empower us to make needed changes.

This is your paper — if the coverage is not adequate, if an important issue is being ignored, come tell us.

Even better, come write for us. A background in journalism is not a requirement, nor is a long term commitment. You can write what you want, when you want — come down and see us in 113 Campus Center.

A community requires involved and educated citizens. This is a good place to start.

Thank you.



Michael Elliott
News Editor

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

What's new....

Herter Hall's large auditorium was selected for renovation over the summer, and is ready for class.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

The calm before the storm!

The Undergraduate Registrar office rests peacefully last week before the storm of people come through wanting to make changes.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
The Massachusetts
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

FOR SALE

Space Available in Large Campus Community
28,000 S.F. (That's Students & Faculty)
Beautiful View

- New England's Largest College Daily
- Distributed Free throughout UMass-Amherst, Amherst College, Hampshire College, Smith College and Mount Holyoke College.
- Competitive CPM
- 90% Penetration of student market
- Home of the UMass Minutemen 1996 NCAA Final Four - 5 time A-10 Champs.

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax: (413) 545-1592

COMPUTER FAIR MULLINS CENTER SEPT 14 10AM-3:30PM

Tri-State Fairs: Original Area Shows since 1987

Buy at wholesale prices directly at the show from nearly 50 independent competing companies under one roof. From full systems to shareware, it's all here

Located on the campus of UMass. Rte 9 onto Rte 116N at Staples taking first exit, turn right

This is a discount ticket. General admission is $7.00 each. Clip or photocopy this ad and save $2.00 ea

Our dealers feature the IBM/PC marketplace. Join us four times a year. Kids under 10 free with parent

Don't over sleep, one day show only!

ONE MONTH FREE INTERNET AT THIS SHOW FROM TIAC

great scores...

LSAT

last chance to prepare for the October test

Last class begins on: September 5th!

Call 1-800-KAP-TEST

KAPLAN

*LSAT is a registered trademark of Law Services.

Students connect at Leadership Conference

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Singer Natasha Springer gave a moving performance at the dinner of the leadership conference last Wednesday at the Campus Center Auditorium.

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Approximately 100 students trekked back to campus early this year to participate in the week-long Student Leadership Conference, which came to a close this past Thursday.

Coordinated through the Campus Activities Office, the five-day conference was aimed at bringing student representatives of on-campus business, agencies and Registered Student Organizations (RSOs), together to discuss issues ranging from conflict resolution to social identity.

Participants were housed in the Crabtree Residence Hall for the duration of the conference.

"It's really a networking thing," said Brian Tirrell, speaker of the Student Government Association (SGA) Senate.

Tirrell spoke on the particular advantages the conference offered to the SGA.

"We need to know all the people in all the RSOs so we can get our job done for them," he said. "The whole campus community is here."

Margaret Arsenault, the assistant director of campus activities advising center and organizer of the conference, said the event was about "community building."

"Students are meeting students here that they wouldn't normally meet," Arsenault said.

Christina Cowell, vice-president of the Cambodian Students Association, said the conference was beneficial to every group involved, no matter was their particular focus was.

"This means we can get connections and do things with other clubs," Cowell said.

The conference, in addition to lectures regarding skills such as time management and public speaking, also consisted of several, small group-oriented workshops, emphasizing cooperative skills.

Christina Walsh, who played a large role in conference organizing, said that many of the participants, used to being the most vocal amongst their peers, learn the importance of collective decision making.

"We definitely emphasize respect for other people," Walsh said.

"This is just a microcosm for the rest of the world," she added. "You're not only learning skills to be a leader on campus."

Student Bonnie Barklay of Amnesty International and the Green-O Snack Bar agreed.

"This proves to me that even the most headstrong leaders can work together," Barklay said. "We aren't always the know it alls."

Jeff Coker, SGA Secretary of Finance and conference organizer, said he was pleased with the enthusiastic reception the conference received during its opening days, citing the fact that students made the commitment to end their summer early to attend.

"There is a lot of ability in this room," said Coker, during a lunch time meeting in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Walsh said that much of her job was made easier because many of the participants were very eager to re-think their leadership abilities.

"These are students who want to succeed," Walsh said. "People are showing a real willingness to learn."

As an added benefit, Walsh was able to secure community support for the conference, from local merchants such as Rao's, Bruegger's Bagels and Bueno Y Sano; all providing free food and drink during the conference.

"Everyone really supports this idea; the sponsors have been great," Walsh said.

That included Chancellor David K. Scott and other administrators, who hosted a formal dinner the final night of the conference.

The event allowed students to not only connect with each other, but with key University officials.

Sign-ups for next year's Leadership Conference begin during the spring semester in the Campus Activities Office, second floor, Student Union Building.

Du Bois Library expands online services for students

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

As part of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library's extensive computer based system, students will now be able to renew borrowed books and monitor their own circulation record on-line.

This information may be accessed through the Five- College Online Library Catalogue.

According to Betty Brace, of the library's circulation department, this newly implemented feature of the system will save considerable time and money for everyone involved.

Library administrators, she said, have little interest in fining students for over-due books, and hopes that the new system will be beneficial to everyone involved.

The on-line system will eliminate much of the cost imposed upon the library for printing late-fee notices, a cost which Brace said was considerable.

When students check their circulation records, they will be able to access a variety of important information, including what books they currently have out, and when they are due back.

Any late fees or overdue books are also noted on the circulation record, where students may also renew books.

"It saves everybody a lot of time," Brace said. "It's like being able to check your own records."

Books may be "self-renewed" up to five times. After that, the borrower has to bring the book to the library staff. Manually checked out items, which include government documents and musical scores, cannot be self-renewed on the computer system.

Books already overdue can not be renewed using the computer system. In branch libraries, such as in the Morrill Science Building, students must also renew books at the circulation desk.

Brace called the self-renewal option, "a very small part of what the system does," citing other features that allow UMass students to access information from the entire Five-College catalogue.

Brace said that she hopes the new system will make the libraries' considerable resources even more accessible.

Program seeks dropouts

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

In hopes of making the University of Massachusetts a more manageable place for freshman without declared majors, the office of the Provost and the School of Education have instituted a new program to offer additional information and guidance.

Entitled, "Universe through the University," the program will help freshman in selecting their new course of study, as well as providing them with a support apparatus within the residence halls.

With nationwide drop-out rates on the rise, the University feels such a program will help curb this trend, according to Steve Beeber of the University Press Relations office.

Beeber said that it is easy for students to become overwhelmed and disoriented at a university this large and complex.

"I would stress the fact that this is a way for incoming students not to get lost in the shuffle," Beeber said.

The more than 200 participants will spend the year in Patterson Residence Hall.

Each student will take two classes together as part of the program: "Twenty First Century Challenges" and "College Writing."

Each class will have no more than 20 students, allowing for a more personable atmosphere conducive to learning, Beeber said.

The program will also provide academic counseling and tutoring, as well as a variety of workshops on such topics as time management, choosing a major and study skills.

The Learning Resource Center will supply the program with volunteer mentors, composed of upper-class students, graduate students, faculty, staff and alumni.

Kristin Gowdy, a sophomore psychology major, said such a program would have been useful during her introductory semester at the university.

Bonducci's Cafe
Gourmet coffees & pasteries, veggie burgers, $3.00 lunch specials... Relax with a friend at Amherst's original coffeehouse

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE*
Coffees, espresso drinks, & frozen yogurt
*higher price prevails
63 South Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
on the Amherst Common

MUSIC MALL
A division of Falcetti MUSIC MALL
1755 Boston Rd., Springfield, MA
(Next to Eastfield Mall)
413-543-1002
SUMMER SIZZLER SALE
FLOOR MODELS • DISCONTINUED ITEMS
Used One Of A Kind
Here's A Sample of the Many Specials:

		REG	SALE
PEARLS	Pc. Session w/ Hdwr.	2499	1400
ROLAND	SPD 8 Electronic Pad	725	500
PEARL	Used Quarter Toms	299	199
YAMAHA	WS 76 Key Synthesizer	2495	1865
ENSONIQ	SQ 2 Key Synthesizer	1395	1045
YAMAHA	SY 35 Synthesizer	899	699
ENSONIQ	ASR 88 LOADED	4495	3199
JACKSON	Soloist Pro	1045	799
GIBSON	"95" Les Paul Std Wine Rad	2200	1195
GIBSON	"95" Les Paul Std Black	2100	1139
PEAVY	All Acoustics	30%	OFF
GIBSON	Hummingbird	2060	1257
CHARVEL	All Acoustics	30%	OFF
TRACE ELLIOT	All Bass Gear	30%	OFF
PEAVY	Classic 100 Head	780	600
HARTKE	2155 Bass Combo 200W	1250	995
GIBSON	Used Les Paul Bass w / case	1650	600
ESP	Strat	599	400
YAMAHA	MU 5 Tone Generator	300	199
YAMAHA	QY 20 Sequencer	650	399
OBERHEIM	Drummer	300	150
OBERHEIM	Strummer	300	150
DBX	242 Equalizer	300	219
DBX	274 Expander Gate	450	329
FURMAN	Q151 Equalizer	399	289
LEXICON	Alex	399	289
BOOK & SHEETS	Lg. Selction	SAVE UP TO 50%

HOT MAMA'S Super Natural Foods
Welcome Back Students
from the Valley's Favorite Salsa & Dips
•Available at UMASS' People's Market
• Also available at Stop & Shop and Bread & Circus

Welcome Back Graduate Students
Best Wishes for the Coming Year from Dean Charlena Seymour and staff at the Graduate School

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus
Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step
Bowercise • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST SO. AMHERST 256-0080

The Facts about Young Women and Breast Health:

- The earlier you start monthly BSE, the better you know what your normal breast feels like, and the more likely you are to notice changes before they become a threat.
- 1 in 8 Women will develop breast cancer at some point in her life.
- If found in its earliest stages, breast cancer is nearly 100% curable.
- Breast self-examination is a very effective way for women to detect any changes that may be breast cancer.
- 90% of breast lumps are found by women themselves, not their health care providers.
- 8 out of 10 lumps are not cancerous.

If you would like more information or instruction on how to perform BSE, give the Women's Health Project a call at 5[illegible]6181

When you learn that your child has a neuromuscular disease, you have a million questions. MDA answers them all through special videos and brochures for parents, and just by being there. It's education for life. If you need MDA, call 1-800-572-1717.

MDA Educates For Life

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ELIZABETH BROWN/ COLLEGIAN

Can you name all the Presidents??

Emily Courville, a junior Theater major, admires the exhibit on the 25th floor of the library which gives a history of the UMass presidents.

UM improves waste plan

By Daniel E. Lavenson
Collegian Staff

A new composting program at the University of Massachusetts is set for implementation for the fall semester, and is expected to better address the problem of waste disposal in an environmentally sustainable manner.

The program, administered by the Office of Waste Management, is one of the first of its kind in the nation, and has already raised eyebrows as far away as San Francisco.

"There's a lot of benefits to having a composting program on campus," said Cherly Chaves, a recent UMass graduate who worked on the project as a intern.

Significant reductions in what the University sends to landfill is anticipated, she said.

Additionally, a possible increase of 10 to 15 percent in the recycling rate is expected, said Chaves, who also noted that the sewer systems will get a break, since the solid waste load will be reduced.

The compost generated will be used for groundwork and landscaping around the UMass campus, according to Chaves.

According to the Office of Waste Management, UMass generates in excess of 6100 tons of trash per year, of which a sizable amount is organic material.

The composting devise can handle 1500 lbs. of food waste per day on a 28 day cycle. On a 14 day cycle, the system is even more efficient, producing 3000 lbs. per day, said Chaves.

"We estimate that the dinning halls will probably produce about 20 tons a week [of compost] during the regular semester," Chaves said.

The composted waste will come from four large dining halls [Worcester, Berkshire, Hampshire and Franklin], as well as other smaller dining locations on campus.

Animal bedding from the University's Hadley farm, as well as leaf and yard work waste from campus, will be included for composting.

The device used in this program is unique in that all the composting occurs within a contained space, Chaves said.

"It takes up a lot less space, and it's all enclosed so there's no pest or odor problem," she added, explaining the advantages of the system.

The Wright In-Vessel Composting Unit was purchased with a $90,000 grant from the Department of Environmental Protection Clean Environment Fund.

The composting vessel is manufactured by a Canadian company, Wright Environmental Management, Inc.

"UMass will be the first pilot site in New England," Chaves said.

She added that the program will provide opportunities for students interested in environmental technology.

"We're probably going to need more student interns once we get going," Chaves said.

The UMass system will serve as a model run for other interested institutions, she added.

Freedom is a three-letter word

As a teacher of children with learning disabilities, as well as a teacher of their teachers, I can really appreciate all the new laws protecting our rights. But I always remember that if it weren't for MDA research and patient services, people with neuromuscular diseases wouldn't be free to enjoy these rights. That's why, to me, freedom is a three-letter word — MDA.

Shelley Obrand
Professional educator

MDA® Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.

For decades, MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. We believe talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION
MDA 1-800-572-1717

WORKSTUDY & NONWORKSTUDY JOBS

- After School Child Care Worker
- Arts Management/Theater
- Building Supervisors
- Clerical Assistants (workstudy only)
- Volleyball Officials/Supervisor
- Water Safety Instructors
- Youth Basketball Officials/Supervisors
- Adult Basketball Supervisor & Scorekeepers
- Pee-Wee Tennis Instructor

Application Deadline: September 15, 1995

Apply at:
Human Resources Dept.
Town of Amherst
70 Boltwood Walk
Bangs Community Center
Amherst, MA 01002

TOWN OF AMHERST
USSE Leisure Services and Supplemental Education

- Haircutting
- Tanning
- We Take Your Hair Seriously.

REGENCY HAIRSTYLES
253-9526 · 189 N. Pleasant St.

Abercrombie & Fitch

They're fun, outgoing and have real people skills. They believe that work and play can go together. And they have the natural, American style that defines Abercrombie & Fitch. Fit this description? Then we need you at Abercrombie & Fitch.

We're one of the fastest-growing men's and women's clothing retailers in the country because our stores and clothes embrace a free, independent style that's distinctly American. And a lot like you.

Brand Representative

Work at Abercrombie & Fitch as a Brand Representative and enjoy fun people, cool music, and great discounts on the comfortable, casual clothing that are uniquely ours. Hours are flexible to fit your schedule.

Pick up an application at a store near you or check out our Home Page on the Internet for more information and store locations. EOE

www.abercrombie.com

Shaw Motor Car Rentals
• Over 21
• 7-passenger van available
"Lowest Rates In Town"

312 College Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-5040
(413) 533-8884

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services Amherst, MA 01003
577-5000

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services

An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of the UHS Eye Care Services Spring 1996.

My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the University Health Service Eye Care Program and the high quality of eye care delivered to more than 80,000 individuals over the last 20 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry and recently co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. In addition, I am credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Eye care services include:
- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Services over the years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS."

uhs EYE CARE SERVICES
Convenient Hours & Campus Location
Call 577-5244

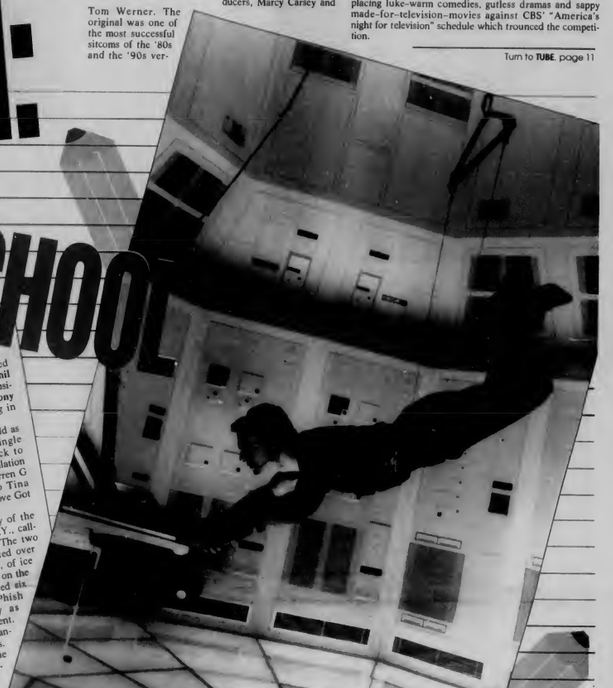
Organize Your Study Space!

With KV Corner Clips you aren't limited to standard shelving designs. You can make your unit fit any area of your room. Assemble shelves quickly and take them apart for easy storage.

With COWLS pine shelving and KV Corner Clips it's EASY!

COWLS PINE SHELVING
- Standard grade in widths of 4, 6, 8, 10, & 12 inches
- Premium grade in widths of 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 10,12, 14, 16, 18 & 20 inches
- Both grades in 6, 8, 10, 12, 14 & 16 foot lengths

"Come See What We Saw!"



For All Your Building and Remodeling Needs

COWLS BUILDING SUPPLY
125 Sunderland Road, North Amherst
(413) 549-0001 = 7-5 weekdays = 8-3 Sat.
FREE local delivery
ACE Hardware · Moore & Paints

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Wednesday, September 4, 1996
Back to School • Volume CVI Issue 1

MISSION: BACK TO SCHOOL

KISS rocks Detroit & more . . .

Mike Burke

While the Fugees ruled the airwaves and the Macarena owned the dance floor, the rest of the music world went on its daily business cashing in on the alternative rock scene and the resurrection of '70s rock. Retro was back in full swing, headlined by KISS and Sex Pistols reunion shows. KISS sold out Madison Square Garden four times over while the Sex Pistols sold out their punk ethos singing about Anarchy in the U.K. Here are some other interesting tidbit of music news from the summer.

• Former Secretary of Education William Bennett led a letter writing campaign to record companies demanding they stop distributing controversial acts such as Cypress Hill, Too Short, Tha Dogg Pound and Cannibal Corpse.

• Cypress Hill kept busy in the high lane this summer as they headlined the Smokin' Grooves Tour which also featured the Fugees, Tribe Called Quest, Busta Rhymes and Ziggy Marley. Why can't Lollapolloza be this good?

• Besides highlighting the Smokin' Grooves tour, the Fugees performed a free show in Harlem with K.R.S. ONE and the Wu Tang Clan. Unfortunately, the show was disrupted by gun shots. A brief melee followed where 20 people were injured.

• The Fugees also were one of 20 top musical acts to perform at the Tibetan Freedom Concert this past June. Listen to this hall-of-fame line-up: Beastie Boys, Smashing Pumpkins, Sonic Youth, Foo Fighters, Beck, Bjork, De La Soul, Rage Against the Machine, Pavement, Red Hot Chili Peppers and Yoko Ono. Over $800,000 was raised for the Milarepa Fund, making the two day performance the biggest benefit concert since 1985's Live Aid.

• Need more Foo Fighters? Well, buy Dr. Martens and get free stuff. If it works for Pepsi, why not for England's hip shoe maker? Purchase a pair of Dr. Martens and get a free CD with the coolness Twins, Duran Duran, Radiohead and yes, the Foo Fighters.

• Mark Oct. 8 on your calendar as DGC will release a live Nirvana album entitled From the Muddy Banks of the Wishkah culled from live shows from 1989 to 1994. Set list includes: "(Smells Like) Teen Spirit," "Breed," "Drain You," "Polly," Aneurysm," "Been a Son," "Lithium," "Negative Creep," "Blew," "Spank Thru," "Sliver," "Scentless Apprentice," "Heart Shaped Box" and "Milk It."

• Classic rockers Genesis have downsized their operation as lead singer/personality Phil Collins left to pursue his solo work as a musician and an actor. Remaining members Tony Banks and Mike Rutherford plan to hang in there, for now.

• The new wave meets the industrial world as Devo covers the Nine Inch Nails hit single "Head Like A Hole" for the soundtrack to Supercop. Devo also appears on the compilation and Adina Howard redo Tina Turner's classic "What's Love Got To Do With It?"

• Phish held the party of the summer in Plattsburg, N.Y., calling it the Clifford Ball. The two day extravaganza attracted over 130,000 total including Ben & Jerry, of ice cream fame, who sang back-up vocals on the Phish tune "Brother." The band played six sets of music totaling 54 songs. Phish Heads came from as far away as California to see this monumental event.

• R.E.M. and longtime friend/manager Jefferson Holt have parted ways.

• Sammy Hagar looks stuck in the break down lane after being dismissed by Van Halen for original lead singer David Lee Roth. Look for a winter tour.

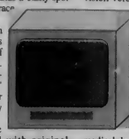
• What about Van Halen headlining next year's Lollapolloza? Why not? They would fit in perfectly with this year's line-up: loud, aggressive, commercial white male rock 'n' roll. Isn't this exactly what Perry Farell didn't want Lollapolloza to be? Maybe they should rename it the Monsters of Rock Tours.



• The Country Music Association has announced its nominees and Vince Gill has the most with seven. These include Best Male Vocalist, Best Album, Best Song and Performer of the Year. Shania Twain, Alan Jackson, Reba McEntire and Garth Brooks have also been nominated for a bunch of awards. This year's surprise — 14-year-old Leann Rimes was nominated for the Horizon award, making her the youngest nominee ever in the CMA's history. Check out Rimes' contributions to the forthcoming Wavelength Infinity: A Sun Ra Tribute which includes contributions by the Residents, Cocktails, Elliot Sharp and NRBQ.

Turn to MUSIC, page 11

Cosby returns to prime time

What do Molly Ringwald, Brooke Shields, Bill Cosby and Ted Danson all have in common?

They're all debuting a comedy series this fall. Cosby and Danson have found new homes on CBS, while Shields settles into NBC's killer Thursday night line-up and Ringwald lands a cushy spot sandwiched between ABC's "Ellen" and "Grace Under Fire."

The new fall season starts this month with brand new episodes of older series and new shows trying to figure out if they've got what it takes to stay on the air. Of course the new shows face stiff competition from hit shows like "ER," "Roseanne" and "Murphy Brown." Over 30 new series will debut this fall, but only a handful will stick around after January.

CBS's Monday's line-up begins with the new "Cosby" show. Cosby is reunited with original "Cosby" co-star. Phylicia Rashad and original show producers, Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner. The original was one of the most successful sitcoms of the '80s and the '90s ver-sion expects to be just as successful.

Follow that up with newlyweds Danson and Mary Steenburgen in "Ink." The show is about a divorced couple who work at a newspaper. Danson, of course, is a television veteran, but Steenburgen is making her first foray into the genre. The couple has impressive credentials — Danson has nearly a dozen Emmy nominations and awards from "Cheers" and Steenburgen owns an Academy Award. The show will have little trouble staying afloat, even if the writing is a little shaky, primarily because of its great position in the schedule.

"Murphy Brown" snags the 9 p.m. time slot after "Ink" while Cybill Sheperd's hit comedy series returns to its original Monday night time slot to provide the lead-in for the medical drama "Chicago Hope."

Last year both ABC and NBC had the miserable habit of placing luke-warm comedies, gutless dramas and sappy made-for-television-movies against CBS' "America's night for television" schedule which trounced the competition.

Turn to TUBE, page 11

. . . As summer movies Cruise by

Justin Daniel Smith

As everyone returns to school cavorting with their mates about how screwed up Trainspotting was and how exceptionally mediocre Independence Day turned out to be, I am forced to cringe at how utterly abysmal this summer was for cinema.

Special effect wizardry was the main draw this summer. No longer are audiences satiated with mere explosions. These days you need to blow up the Empire State Building or the White House or have Tom Cruise propelled from a exploding helicopter to safety on a speeding passenger train.

So many of the year's crop of summer flicks were basically devoid of any plot. A story about rekindling the flame of a lost love amidst natural disasters sounds ridiculous. Put about 20 million dollars into special effects and you've got yourself a box office giant.

Even the films that didn't have computer graphics as the stars were ridden with paper-thin plots. A simpleton gets hit with a beam of light and all of a sudden has all sorts of intelligence and special powers. Sound like a good idea? Pepper it up with man-of-the-hour John Travolta and start counting the cash.

Above all, the summer was loaded with utterly unfunny movies that were labeled as comedies. There's nothing less funny than Michael Keaton, unless, of course, you have a bunch of Michael Keatons. Demi Moore as a stripper in a comedy? Sorry, Demi, but your special effects couldn't hang with the big guns.

So as Hollywood continues to reap the profits for the few summer flicks that remain and prepare to do it all over again this fall, I give to you the five worst films of the summer:

1. Chain Reaction:

Though I have never heard them nor do I ever intend to, I bet Keanu Reeves' band Dogstar is even better than this. Directed by The Fugitive director Andrew Davis, this was basically the same thing minus the good acting and gripping suspense.

Instead it was filled with Keanu, which was not a good thing for the movie. Morgan Freeman, consistently good even in bad films, didn't have anything to work with. Throughout the whole movie Freeman teeters in this "Now I'm a Bad Guy/Now I'm Not" mode. Even this basic conflict is unresolved at the end of the film.

Bad plot, no twists and rehashed special effects can lead to only one conclusion: don't see it.

2. Kazaam:

There are so many things wrong with this movie, I don't even know where to begin. With a kung-fu video game and two rap albums under his belt, Shaq decided to attempt to act. Yeah, he was in the movie Blue Chips, but he played a basketball player in that film. This time he plays a genie who is resurrected, not from the traditional lamp, but from a boombox.

His master is a 10-year-old kid with a bad haircut played by the uncharismatic Francis Capra. He wishes for a couple of things, but Kazaam can't give him what he really wants — his estranged father's love. Making a strong attempt for the single worst scene in celluloid history is the rapping duel the kid and Kazaam duel engage in. Kazaam is a tough watch from start to finish.

3. The Phantom:

Billy Zane is a comic superhero, fashionably clad in a purple spandex suit, who fights crime in an African jungle. Infamously known as the "Ghost Who Walks," the unlikable hero gets in a predicament that ends him up in an international conflict that involves the atrractive, but always in bad movies, Kristy Swanson.

The beautiful landscapes of Africa are quickly eaten up by the inane dialogue and vastly outdated Treat Williams villain. The

Turn to MOVIES, page 11

Design & Graphics by Marc Parent & Mark Bullard

~ Calendar of Events~

Melissa Etheridge

COURTESY DENNIS KEELEY

Wednesday, September 4

Iron Horse Music Hall, Northampton — They Might Be Giants at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. All Ages. Two sets of quirky pop by Bay State favorites. (584-0610)

Smith College, Theater 14 — King Lear performed by the Company of Women at 8 p.m. The all female play opens on Sept. 3 and continues until Sept. 6. (585-2314)

Thursday, September 5

Herter Art Gallery, UMass — Opening reception for "Once Upon a Time: France 1996" at 4 p.m. The exhibition features works by over 40 UMass undergraduates during their study at the Chateau de La Napoule in France.

Iron Horse Music Hall — NRBQ at 7 p.m. All Ages. One of America's most revered classic bands celebrate the first anniversary of the re-opening of the Iron Horse.

Friday, September 6

Iron Horse Music Hall — Wild Colonials with Ryan Downe at 10 p.m. All Ages. Recent DGC signees bring their "eclectic" sound to the Valley.

University Gallery — Opening reception for fall exhibitions at 5 p.m. Showcased work includes art by Daisy Youngblood, Dawoud Bey and Nina Payne. (545-3670)

Saturday, September 7

Jones Library, Amherst — "An Inward Look: A Robert Frost Odyssey" at 1 p.m. A multimedia program presented by Roger A. Barnett on longtime Amherst resident, Robert Frost. (256-4090)

Mullins Center, UMass — Melissa Etheridge at 8 p.m. All Ages. Arguably the most powerful woman in the music world today takes the stage at Mullins. (545-3001)

Pearl Street — Versus with the God Rays and Low at 9 p.m. 18+. New York's finest live band returns to the Valley for a night of intense fun in support of their new album, The Secret Swingers.

Pearl Street — J.J. Cale at 7 p.m. 21+. Legendary bluesman and writer of "After Midnight," one of Eric Clapton's signature tunes.

Sunday, September 8

Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass — Will Crutchfield, piano, & Sharon Hayes, soprano, at 4 p.m. The benefit performance, which will include pieces by Mendelssohn, Schubert, Brahms and Wolf, will raise money for a grand piano for the Hall. (545-0018)

Iron Horse Musical Hall — John Hammond at 7 p.m. All Ages. Another blues legend hits the Northampton club scene.

Pearl Street — Man... or Astroman? with the Henchmen at 8 p.m. 18+. Space rock meets surf rock at its finest. An introduction to the "Next Phase."

R. Michelson Galleries, Amherst — reception for Lewis Bryden exhibit at 5 p.m. The Hadley artist, who appears in the forthcoming book Paintings of New England, is known for his Pioneer Valley landscapes and portraits. (253-2500)

Wild Colonials

COURTESY DANA TYNAN

Lewis Bryden's "Quiet Evening"

COURTESY LEWIS BRYDEN

Daisy Youngblood's "Shy Horse"

COURTESY DAISY YOUNGBLOOD

• MOVIE STILLS • MOVIE POSTERS • FINE ART • ROCK BANDS • HUMOR •

ROCKWELL • SCENIC • ANIMALS • ROMANCE •

BACK TO SCHOOL POSTER SALE

Most Images Only $6, $7 and $8

Sponsor:
WMUA 91.1 FM

Date:
Mon. Sept. 2nd thru
Fri. Sept. 6th

Time:
9 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.

Place:
Student Union Ballroom

Biggest & Best Selection

• X FILES • ESCHER • 60's • BEATLES • ALIENS • PHOTOGRAPHY • STAR WARS • PERSONALITIES •

• MODELS • PAM ANDERSON • EINSTEIN • BRUCE LEE •

After summer films fizzled, Hollywood prepares for sizzling fall

By Chris Connor
Collegian Staff

The summer of 1996 will undoubtedly be remembered as one of the most exhilarating in recent film memory, with literally hundreds of choices available to the celluloid buff. And, unlike many a balmy season past, these were quality picks too.

Who can forget the period-inspired magic of The Phantom? or the breathtaking action of Fled? The epic drama of Moll Flanders? and what about the childlike wonder of Kazaam?

As Homer (Simpson, that is) once said, "In case you hadn't noticed, I was being sarcastic."

This fall's big screen scramble seems to be an indication that Hollywood obviously did not take the cue to cut back its bombastic schedule of releases. One would think that failures posted by their most profitable male and female stars (Jim Carrey's The Cable Guy and Demi Moore's Striptease) would frighten most studio execs into submission, but the flicks keep a-rolling.

Of the new crop, some scream box office glory, others scream straight-to-video and still others scream enigma. Here are some of the most intriguing prospects soon to fall off the Tinseltown trees:

SEPTEMBER

The First Wives Club: Goldie Hawn, Diane Keaton and Bette Midler team up to strike back at their ex-husbands. Good news: During their careers, this trio has managed some triumphs (Private Benjamin, Baby Boom and Down and Out in Beverly Hills, respectively). Bad news: The supporting cast includes the head Showgirl herself, Elizabeth Berkley, and "Melrose" mannequin, Heather Locklear. No Oscar nominations here.

Surviving Picasso: Anthony Hopkins is about to get intense again. Real intense. He's tackling the role of the infamously misogynistic artist in this Merchant-Ivory piece, which may help their intellectual fan base decide to overlook Jefferson in Paris. Good news: Hopkins was, as always, brilliant in Nixon... Bad news: But who was he supposed to be playing again?

Bulletproof: Adam Sandler and Damon Wayans team up for — surprise — a buddy pic. Wants to be Lethal Weapon, hopes not to be Fled and will probably wind up somewhere in the middle. Good news: Sandler's riding high off two hits (Billy Madison, Happy Gilmore). Bad news: Wayans is not (Blankman, The Great White Hype).

Maximum Risk: Jean-Claude Van Damme as twins. Again. Good news: N/A. Bad news: See above.

Last Man Standing: Action auteur Walter Hill (48 Hours) enticed Bruce Willis into playing the Eastwoodian "Man With No Name" for this period piece set in the '30s. With only the aforementioned Gibson/Glover-lite and "The Muscles from Brussels" to contend with in the early autumn action market, this one might gun down its competition. Good news: Willis seems to improve with almost every effort. Bad news: Hill has been on a bit of a slide as of late (Trespass, Wild Bill).

OCTOBER

That Thing You Do: "Mr. Perfect," Tom Hanks, goes for the triple threat: Writing, directing and acting. In this tale of a '60s rock band's rise to fame, moviegoers will hear less from Hanks than they did in Toy Story, but will see just slightly more, as he opts for a supporting role. Starring honors go to up-and-comers Johnathon Schaech and Liv Tyler. Good news: Can anyone remember the last time Hanks disappointed? Bad news: A cast of relative unknowns may prove deadly, but most likely not.

Sleepers: The movie starring everyone and their mothers. Old school (Robert De Niro and Dustin Hoffman) and new school thespians (Jason Patric, Brad Pitt and Kevin Bacon) assemble under the direction of Barry Levinson to craft the tale of four friends who violently right a childhood wrong. Good news: With a cast like this, how can you go wrong? Bad news: See the Mulholland Falls file for the answer.

The Long Kiss Goodnight: Proof that no matter how much loot you lose in Hollywood, unwarranted second chances abound. For the couple guilty of making Cutthroat Island (actress Geena Davis and director Renny Harlin) to reteam for this amnesiac thriller takes all the nuts in the Planters factory. Good news: Kevin Costner survived Waterworld. Bad news: Davis' last homerun was 1992's A League of Their Own.

Romeo and Juliet: William Shakespeare continues his reign as the world's worst paid screenwriter with this chronologically updated version of the big love story, which will retain its original text despite the modern edge. Talented Leonardo Di Caprio and Claire Danes share iambic pentameter duties. Good news: Excellent casting should overcome a risky juxtaposition... Bad news: Or not.

The Glimmer Man: Anthony Hopkins stars as Liberace — just kidding. Actually, stop me if you've heard this one. Steven Seagal. Keenan Ivory Wayans. Buddy pic. You know the drill. Good news: Seagal wasn't bad in Executive Decision. Bad news: Then again, he was only around for ten minutes.

The Chamber: Stephen King, be warned — John Grisham now publishes a novel every three days, bettering your record of every five. Hot off the heels of A Time to Kill comes another race-fueled legal tale starring Chris O'Donnell and Gene Hackman as a green lawyer and his death-row inmate grandfather, respectively. Good news: Chamber director James Foley helmed the superb Glengarry Glen Ross. Bad news: He also directed Fear.

The Ghost and the Darkness: Val Kilmer assumes a British accent and Michael Douglas reassumes his Romancing the Stone hair for this true-story actioner set in turn-of-the-century Africa. Lions are wreaking havoc on the construction of the East African Railroad, and it's up to our heroes to put an end to the terror. Good news: Douglas escapes from mid-life crisis roles for once. Bad news: A release date pushed back from late summer could spell trouble.

NOVEMBER

The Crucible: The words of Arthur Miller leap to the silver screen in this rendering of his impassioned play, the tale of an affair gone awry in witchcraft-obsessed 17th century Salem. Perennial Oscar nominees Daniel Day-Lewis and Winona Ryder star as Miller's doomed lovers, with fellow Academy Award faves Joan Allen and Paul Scofield supporting. Good news: No Demi Moore. Bad news: If nothing else, it may share box office numbers with The Scarlet Letter.

Ransom: He's kittless, Danny Glover is nowhere to be found and his son's been kidnapped. Mel Gibson may be giving up his director's chair to Ron Howard for this project, but the result should be a guaranteed smash anyway given Howard's track record. Rene Russo, Gary Sinise and Delroy Lindo round out the stellar cast. Good news: The trailer, in which Mel is very not happy, is a breathtaker. Bad news: Only a truly abominable script could fell this giant.

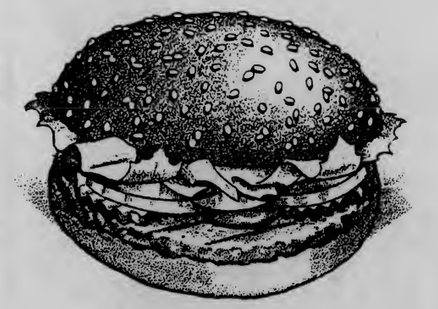
Jingle All the Way: The last time Arnold Schwarzenegger starred in a comedy whose title began with the letter "J"... well, never mind. America's favorite Austrian will try to erase memories of Junior with this Christmas romp about a dad desperate to find a toy scarce in supply. At a reported cost of $75 million, this is a big risk to say the least. Good news: Twins effectively showed Arnold's lighter side. Bad news: Take your pick. — Brian (The Flintstones) Levant directing or Phil Hartman, Sinbad, Rita Wilson and James Belushi comprising the supporting cast.

The Mirror Has Two Faces: Galapagos turtles have been born, lived full lives and expired in the time it's taken to complete this Barbara Streisand mega-project. The story revolves around the desire of Streisand's ugly duckling professor to be beautiful. Good news: We know she can act and direct... Bad news: But this much negative advance press surely must have disrupted the production.

Star Trek: First Contact: Capt. Picard and the rest of the "Next Generation" crew make their first Shatner-free appearance on movie screen in this eighth Trek opus. This time around, it's the Starfleeters versus those pesky Klingon- as-arch-nemesis replacements, the Borg. Good news: The last bad Trek flick was Star Trek V, directed by Shatner. Bad news: This one's directed by Jonathan Frakes, another cast member, but Leonard Nimoy did a fine job on the two that preceded Shatner's folly. Even odds.

101 Dalmatians: Disney remakes its own classic, but adds a twist — live action. As characterized in the original, Cruella De Vil was a memorably demented villain, a tough act for needs-a-hit Glenn Close to follow in the flesh. But, regardless, everybody loves puppies, right? Good news: When Close is on her game, she's on. Bad news: When screenwriter John Hughes is off his game (Career Opportunities, Dennis the Menace), he's off.

Space Jam: Will Michael Jordan's big screen debut be the de facto sequel to Kazaam? That's the big question at Warner Brothers as basketball's undisputed heavyweight teams with Bugs Bunny and the gang to fight off alien foes and Shaq's ticket sales. Good news: Untapped potential star power coupled with no Disney cartoons in sight. Bad news: A budget reportedly bigger than five one-year Jordan contracts.



The People Vs. Larry Flynt: This true story of the "Hustler" magazine publisher seems to fit in the logical progression for director Milos Forman. Jack Nicholson as a boisterous mental patient in One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Many Oscars. F. Murray Abraham as a deliriously jealous composer in Amadeus. Same result. And now, Woody Harrelson as a crippled porno magnate. Um, yeah. Good news: Forman must know what he's doing. Bad news: However, that still doesn't excuse Valmont.

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Both Tom Hanks and Geena Davis (pictured here in A League of Their Own) have a busy fall season ahead.

It doesn't get any better than this.

99¢
WHOPPER®

YOUR WAY RIGHT AWAY

Rt. 9
Hadley

Rt. 5
Northampton

Rt. 10
Easthampton

BURGER KING®

NOW HIRING ALL SHIFTS

FAMOUS FOR WOW!

2 BURGS 2 BUCKS

All American Food
Great Burgers Hot Dogs
Shakes Clams Chicken
Philly Cheese Steaks
Soft Serve Sundaes

BEST STAND Valley Advocate Readers' Poll

Valley's BEST Original Since Classic

585-0241
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA

PETE'S DRIVE-IN

http://www.javanet.com/~mrburger/

It's Back To School Time!

10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.

Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • Offer expires 10/12/96

FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS

MIDAS

Exhaust • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

AMERICAN EXPRESS DISCOVER VISA

90 Days - Same as Cash!

Def Leppard goes alternative, Watts shines from Stones' shadow

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Trax On Trax Off

DEF LEPPARD
Slang
Mercury

What has happened to Britain's bad boys who used to sing about making love like a man and having sugar poured all over one's self? Has their testosterone teenage dream of living life in the fast lane come to halt or is Def Leppard trying to market themselves as an "alternative" act? Probably a little of both. Unfortunately the anthem filled days of multi-platinum are gone, long gone. The band strays from its patented sound, experimenting with various forms of eastern music and samples to little success. Still the band sounds freshest on "All I Want is Everything," a hip-hop flavored rocker akin to "Pour Some Sugar On Me." C-

THE JERKY BOYS
The Jerky Boys III
Ratchet/ Mercury

If you thought these guys were dumb in high school wait til you hear them now. The same pranks are all here but the shock value isn't. Frank Rizzo calls up a 1-800-How's My Driving? after claiming to be run over by a truck. Later the Boys call up looking for an ass massage. If this sounds funny to you, why don't you just call up the numbers yourself and save your money. F

COURTESY CYNTHIA LEVINE
A new look and sound for Def Leppard?

THE REVEREND HORTON HEAT
It's Martini Time
Interscope

It's martini time indeed as the Reverend serves up an extra dry, straight up blast of fun rockabilly mixed with a twist of noise. From the psych-out instrumental "Slingshot" to the ballad "Crooked Cigarette," the Texan trio flies through this album with a punked out, energized craze that leaves the listener overwhelmed but blissfully intrigued. The Reverend Horton Heat are one of the few acts that can completely borrow a sound and make it all their own. Even their cover of the classic "Rock the Joint" is fresh and packed with fun. Will this start a Martini craze among Generation X-ers? If so, please leave the olives on the side. B+

MEAT BEAT MANIFESTO
Subliminal Sandwich
Nothing/ Interscope

Clocking in at over two hours, this double disc recording may be the most intense and innovative albums of the summer. Meat Beat Manifesto, a groundbreaking industrial dance group that has greatly influenced such artists as Nine Inch Nails and the Chemical Brothers, retakes its place at the forefront of the progressive dance scene. The first CD finds the band following similar roads as past releases. They utilize mass amounts of noise collages set to hypnotic drum beats, creating a haunting but welcoming sound. But it is the second CD that leaves the greatest impression, although it is far less accessible. Missing are the dance tracks, instead replaced by just levels of noise and samples. If you find dance music (à la "The Macarena") too limiting, you owe it to yourself to check out Meat Beat Manifesto. Be careful, though, this is not the easiest music to listen to. B

SADAT X
Wild Cowboys
Loud/ RCA

Six years ago Sadat X made a loud debut on Brand Nubian's groundbreaking debut, All For One. Since then he had kept busy with Tribe Called Quest, Busta Rhymes and Notorious B.I.G. Now he has taken the solo route and kept the grooves and raps fresh even though the album is filled with images and sounds of the wild west. The lead single, "Hang 'Em High" features Clint Eastwood's famous whistle from The Good, The Bad & The Ugly. The true highlight "Game's Sober" reunites Sadat X with Grand Puba of Brand Nubian. An impressive solo debut. B

TEARS FOR FEARS
Saturnine Martial & Lunatic
Fontana/Mercury

The mighty have certainly fallen. Twelve years ago Tears For Fears topped my hit list with tunes like "Shout" and "Everybody Wants To Rule the World." Then they disappeared for awhile, reappeared as a reincarnated Beatles and then disappeared. Now they are making their last stand — a 78 minute collection of rarities and b-sides; think of it as their last chance to cash in on their former success. Thank the music gods that John Tesh isn't hosting a six hour special on Tears For Fears. D-

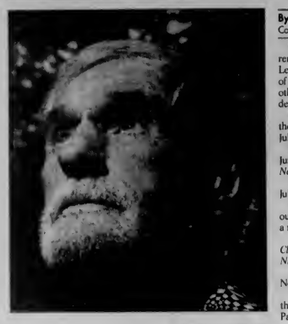
COURTESY AMERICAN RECORDINGS
Ex-street musician, Wesley Willis rocks Saddam Hussein's Ass on his major label debut

TULLY CRAFT
Old Traditions, New Standards
Harriet

Tully Craft is indie pop at its poppiest and cutest, and they sure know it. What other band would name a song "Pop Songs Your New Boyfriend's Too Stupid To Know About"? Overall Old Traditions, New Standards picks right up where their three singles left off — with plenty of sing-a-long melodies making this one of the best pure pop albums of the summer. A-

CHARLIE WATTS
Long Ago & Far Away
Pointblank / Virgin

Forever stuck behind the shadows of Mick Jagger and Keith Richards, Charlie Watts has remained the quiet Rolling Stone — the dignified drummer who could pass as Jagger's father or boyhood schoolteacher. While his mates have fallen face forward recycling their outdated rock 'n' roll riffs, Watts defiantly took a different path forming the Charlies Watts quartet. With the assistance of the London Metropolitan Orchestra, Watts leads his group through 14 timeless classics including Cole Porter's "In the Still of the Night" and Duke Ellington's "In a Sentimental Mood." As with the Stones, Watts stays in the background, always providing perfect accompaniment while avoiding the limelight. Long Ago & Far Away beautifully relives the days before the birth of rock 'n' roll by one of rock's premier drummers. B-



WESLEY WILLIS
Fabian Road Warrior
American Recordings

Sympathy goes out to all those Berkeley trained musicians who hear Wesley Willis and kill themselves simply because Willis has a major label recording contract while they are working in the budget cassette section of Tower Records. Just a few years Willis was a struggling street musician in Chicago, but he soon became a cult artist and now he is prepared to take on the world. Fabian Road Warrior, his major label debut, features 24 originals with titles like "Alanis Morissette" and "Rock Saddam Hussein's Ass." Also, all 24 tracks begin with the exact same bass hook, original isn't it. Every song follows the same pattern: cheap casio keyboard plus Willis' screaming. According to legend, Willis has released 20 more albums of similar material. At 71 minutes the CD is hard to get through but taken in small doses, Willis is both humorous and refreshing. B

~ Obituaries ~

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Dr. Timothy Leary 1920–1996

By Mike Burke & Lisa Oliveri
Collegian Staff

While the world wept at the loss of such international renown figures such as Ella Fitgerald and Dr. Timothy Leary, the pop culture bid good–bye to this summer. Many of the following changed the world we know, but tragically others never had a full chance. Here is a partial list of recent deaths.

Pando S. Berman, 91, producer of classic movies such as the Hunchback of Notre Dame and National Velvet died on July 13.

James Bond producer, Albert R. Broccoli, 87, died in late June. Overall Broccoli produced 17 007 flicks including Dr. No and Goldeneye.

Famous news broadcaster, John Chancellor, 68, died on July 12.

Chas Chandler, 57, bassist for the legendary English rock outfit The Animals died in late July. Chandler also worked as a record producer for Jimi Hendrix.

Oscar Award winner Claudette Colbert, 88, the star of Cleopatra, The Palm Beach Story and It Happened One Night died on July 30.

Ray Combs, 40, host of the popular game show "The New Family Feud" died on June 2.

Singer Marguerite Ganser Dorste, 48, former member of the all–girl group the Shangri–Las who sang "Leader of the Pack" and "Walking In the Sand" died on July 28.

"The First Lady of Song" Ella Fitzgerald, 78, died on June 15. Her death marked the end of an era as she was often viewed as the last great jazz singer.

Co–producer of the hit sitcom "Seinfeld," Majorie Gross, 40, died on June 7.

German silent film star Brigitte Helm, 88, died on June 11.

Ernest Hemingway's daughter, Margaux Hemingway, 41, died on July 1. She was best known for her modeling and acting careers.

Former child actress Dana Hill, 32, best known for her role on Nanonal Lampoon's European Vacation died on July 15.

Country–western songwriter, Walter Hyatt, 46, died on May 11 in the Valu–Jet crash in Florida.

The most controversial psychologist of the past 30 years, Timothy Leary, 76, died on May 31. At Harvard during the 1960s, Leary advocated the use of LSD and other hallucinogens for expanding mind consciousness.

Burger King founder James McLamore, 70, died on Aug. 8. The fast food chain, opened in 1954, was originally named Insta Burger King.

Jonathan Melvoin, 34, was the most recent casualty in the alternative rock world. The Smashing Pumpkins touring keyboardist died on July 12.

British author Jessica Mitford, 78, known for her classic 1963 book, The American Way of Death, died on July 23.

Bradley Novell, 28, lead singer of the punk band Sublime died on May 31.

Styx' drummer, John Panozzo, 47, died on July 16.

Drummer, Mel Taylor, 62, of the instrumental surf band the Ventures died of Aug. 11.

Buying the right computer: advice to save time & money

Another school year has arrived which means only one thing: more homework. Yes, it's that dreaded H word again. But with the help of a new or used computer, your workload could be lessened, thus increasing your play time.

For readers who do not currently own a computer and for those interested in upgrading, here are some ideas to consider before investing over $1,000 in a new or used computer.

First, assess your needs. If the computer is going to primarily be used to write essays and papers, then a power house of a computer that could easily calculate the nation's debt is unnecessary. For those who want to log onto the Internet, play video games and write programs, a cutting edge computer might be in order.

Of course a computer is capable of more than simple word processing and gaming. My computer balances my check book and keeps tracks of expenses like books and food.

Configuration

Now the hard question — what computer is best for your needs? Readers who want a low cost machine for basic work like writing should probably consider a 486 or Pentium. People interested in a more powerful computer should concentrate on the latter. When looking at these popular models, there are a few features that buyers should look for on both systems. Be sure to check for a CD–ROM, a sound card and a modem.

Often these are standard components, but wide differences exist in terms of quality.

A used 486 is likely to have a double speed CD–ROM while new machines, such as the Pentium, should have a six speed drive. The hard drive will also be smaller on the older 486s. A new computer, should contain at least a gigabyte of hard drive space. The older machines will have only eight megabytes of memory, half of most new computers. Both systems should have a 28.8 kbps modem, but this is unnecessary for students living on campus.

All machines should have a local bus video card. Used 486 computers will probably have Vesa local bus, but one with PCI is nearly essential. All new computers will also have PCI video cards, and should be MPEG compatible allowing the computer to display full screen videos like a television. All gamers will probably want a monitor at least 15 inches across or greater.

There are other features that people might want to consider, including faster and bigger drives, tape backups, faster modems, 3D video and more memory.

Anyone who buys a 486 with only eight megabytes of memory, will want the older version Windows. Pentiums probably already have Windows '95 installed.

One final note, the prices will dramatically differ depending upon what you choose. Expect the average used 486 to cost about $600, while a new Pentium will range from $1000 to $3000.

Choosing the Correct Store

Once the computer type is chosen, it is time to head out to the stores.

Before running out to Lechmere to purchase a 486, beware. Most brand name manufacturers have eliminated 486 computers from their line–up, so these computers can only be found at used and small neighborhood computer stores. For those who choose to buy a computer in such a store, make sure the store includes a warranty at no extra cost.

Most used computer stores do not have a wide selection of Pentiums, and the few that they will carry are probably not much better than a 486. People who want state–of–the–art Pentiums need to visit computer superstores or smaller computer stores that specializes in new computers. Both have their advantages and disadvantages.

Computer superstores have a wider selection and a helpful staff. Their prices are competitive too, plus they usually sell Macintoshs. However, since the sales associates often work on commission, they might try to sell unnecessary accessories. I recommend CompUSA largely because their sales associates do not sell on commission. Unfortunately there are no locations in Western Massachusetts.

The alternative to the superstore is the small neighborhood computer store. These businesses are often privately owned and usually have a helpful staff. Often the selection of out– of–the–box brand name computers is slim, but they can custom design a computer for a customer's needs — unlike the superstores.

The third alternative is mail order through catalogs or the Internet. This method combines the best of both worlds: selection and personal service. Many mail order retailers design custom made computers, while others offer name brand out of the box computers such as IBM.

Do you have questions concerning computers? If so write to us at: Daily Collegian, attn: computer advice, 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

FAC prepares for diverse fall season

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts offers a diverse array of events when it comes to the fine arts. There is something for everyone at affordable prices.

The 1996–1997 season at the Fine Arts Center will feature everything from dance, theater, music and art. This season will showcase programs sponsored by the Center Series, New WORLD Theater, the Asian Dance and Music Series and the Off–Center Series.

The Center series begins when Grammy nominated vocalist Cleo Laine, the "Queen of Jazz," appears on Oct. 19. Laine has received nominations in the Female Classical, Jazz and popular categories.

Music from a variety of other cultures will come to the FAC in a special presentation called "Call and Response" on Oct. 24. The concert will feature West African talking drums, Brazilian dance and martial arts, Cuban music and dance, African American jazz tap, jazz trio and a gospel octet.

The same weekend, the FAC hosts the unique percussion, movement and performance art group, STOMP, who have appeared on "Oprah" and the "Oscars." the instrumental group strays from conventional percussion instruments by utilizing match boxes, wooden poles, hub caps and brooms in ways you would have never thought.

The internationally renowned Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, featuring solo violinist Alyssa Park, presents a concert on Nov. 20.

The Festival of Tibet, which will be presented by the Asian Dance and Music Program, will take place from Oct. 1–6. The Drepung Monastery Lamas are on a world tour, promoting world healing and the awareness of Tibetan culture. The "Tibetans in Exile Fund" will receive 10 percent of ticket sales.

Turn to FAC, page 12-B

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER
The Festival of Tibet, a five day event in October, highlights a stellar Fine Arts Center season this semester.

Rekindle those lazy days; vacationing on the web

By Matt Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Need to take advantage of these last few weeks of summer? The following web sites can help you choose a place to go to recapture those lost days.

The Worcester Telegram & Gazette On–line — New England Beaches at http://www.telegram.com/ sunirav.htm

On this site The Worcester Telegram and Gazette maintains, amidst their back issues, a comprehensive article listing all of the New England salt water beaches.

Although the list includes important information such as times of opening and closing and availability of lifeguards, it uses a cryptic code that is difficult to understand.

In addition to beaches, the list includes camp sites and recommended hot spots throughout New England with a special focus on Central and Western Massachusetts. A list of various tourist bureaus and organizations in New England is provided where you can obtain more information. The only major drawback is the lack of a searchable index. A–

The Massachusetts Office of Travel and Tourism at http://www.mass–vacation.com

Although you are probably not planning an entire vacation, these state employees can help you plan a day trip.

Virtually all you need to know about the hot tourist sites across our home state is mentioned here. Read a tutorial on how to eat lobster correctly — now there is something useful. It also includes a fair and festival list that is quite helpful when planning a day trip.

Unfortunately this site is extremely Netscape enhanced with frames, Java applets and animated banners that show the leaves changing colors. I usually dislike the unnecessary use of frames. They did not simply use the frame as a helpful navigation tool, but as a method of formatting the screen — which they could have used other methods to accomplish. Out of state students may find this site more interesting then residents who are familiar with the state. C–

Summer at http://www.boston–magazine.com/JuneHtmlDocs/summer.html

This page is a conglomeration of articles by Boston Magazine about summer things you can do in New England. Topics cover as much ground as the locations do.

Bike riders should enjoy the comprehensive list of great trails to ride including a route in the Berkshires. Check out the info on day trips for sight seeing historic locations that are not too far from Amherst including Old Sturbridge Village. There is even advice on where to shop for all of you shopaholics.

This page's only major drawback was the fact that you can not easily jump from topic to topic. All the articles are on one page, so you have to scroll through pages of text that you might find irrelevant. B

Massachusetts Bikeways at http://tdc– www.harvard.edu/bicycle/mass.bikeways.html

If biking is your favorite past time, then you'll want to bookmark this site.

This is a comprehensive list of all the bike trails across the state from Boston to the New York border. The page is a must for cyclers and mountain bikers who are looking for new trails to conquer or links to other biking sites. B

Aces for Archer's book The Forth Estate

JEFFREY ARCHER
The Fourth Estate
Harper Collins

With this summer's publication of The Fourth Estate, Britain's Jeffrey Archer once again proves that he is one of the world's greatest story weavers. Each time Archer writes a novel, readers can be assured that they're getting literature of premium quality, with well developed characters and plot lines unmatched in contemporary literature.

The Fourth Estate deals intimately with the press and the media empires which evolve around it. More specifically, it deals with two characters — both of extreme wealth, both of unquestioned power, both on the edge of bankruptcy. These facts are known from the first 25 pages of the book but the fun comes in seeing how their respective stories evolve.

In the blue corner is Richard Armstrong, a Jew of humble peasant beginnings. After escaping the Nazis, Armstrong finds his way into the British military, where he rises through the ranks of officer in charge of the press in a sector of occupied Germany. Through shrewd business maneuvers, he is able to take over a faltering newspaper and turns into the cornerstone of a giant media corporation, Armstrong Communications.

In the red corner, hailing from Australia is Keith Townsend, son of a newspaper owner, who is educated at elite private schools. It is no secret that Townsend is being groomed to take over his father's business.

Both men sit poised to take over the world's media, but each step along the way brings a new challenge and counterattack by the other. The results resembles a battle to the death rather than a battle for the trophy of the world's dominant media empire.

Taking place in a time period that spans from the World War II to present day, The Fourth Estate takes its time, developing in a way that allows every little detail to fall into line. Disguised as stories, the opening chapters give great insight into what keeps the characters' competitive fires burning.

Is it just plain greed? No, it's more. It's overcoming obstacles in whatever form they present themselves. The Fourth Estate is a novel about power and the games people play in order to obtain and retain that power. In the end, only one man can win, because wealth is of no consequence in this game. To be the last one standing is the only acceptable result. A (Mark McGrath)

COURTESY HARPER COLLINS
World–renown author Jeffrey Archer shines again with The Forth Estate.

TOM HOLLAND
Lord of the Dead
Pocket Books

A discontent vampire struggling to come to terms with who he has become. The elder creature who was once his creator, now the object of his hatred. A dark, handsome, "older" vampire who longs to be his lover. A willing listener to whom he tells his story.

Anne Rice fans beware! While Lord of the Dead presents itself as a chilling, dark thriller about gothic creatures of the night, it is merely a cheap rip–off of her masterpiece, Interview with the Vampire.

In Tom Holland's debut novel, he attempts to explore the life of romantic poet and writer Lord Byron, but with an interesting twist. Byron is not only an opium–taking, tortured soul and unrequited lover, but a nomadic vampire touring the world to uncover the truth about himself and to meet others like himself.

Holland's idea is great, but unfortunately he is not able to pull it off. While Rice has the capability of making her characters energetic and charismatic, Holland's vampires are as lifeless as the paper upon which they are written.

The story begins by introducing Rebecca, a zealous lass searching for a lost and secret manuscript of Lord Byron. She finds herself in a crypt where she discovers not only the treasure for which she was looking, but also Byron, complete with pale skin and fangs, standing over the casket containing the body of a decomposed woman.

Instead of killing Rebecca, drinking her blood and making Lord of the Dead a short story, Byron begins a narrative of his life as a vampire and recounts his journeys to remote and exotic places of the world, leaving the inevitable demise of Rebecca for a tiresome 300–some pages later.

Although the novel is dry and unentertaining, it is obvious that Holland is quite knowledgeable on Byron's life and those involved with him. Factual events and people such as the jealous John Polidori and the infamous companion Percy Shelley are intertwined with fiction, giving the reader a very dark and sometimes very erotic look into Holland's interpretation of Byron's inner psyche.

Holland makes a valid attempt to capture the intrigue of Byron's fictitious life as a vampire, but his attempts fall short. The similarities between Rice's novel and this one are undeniable, leaving the reader with a feeling of deja vu, and the desire to read more about Lestat, leaving Byron's "biography" to the scholars. C– (Lisa M. Oliveri)

AMY TAN
The Hundred Secret Senses
G.P. Putnam's Sons

Amy Tan hit big with her generational novel about mothers and daughters in The Joy Luck Club. She followed that novel with the lacklustre The Kitchen God's Wife. In The Hundred Secret Senses, Tan regains the colorful style that made Joy Luck such a success.

When it comes to her relationship with her half–sister, Kwan, Olivia is the first to admit that she's treated her badly. Not only does Olivia find it difficult to bridge the 12 year age difference, she also finds it hard to understand Kwan's Chinese ideas.

When Kwan first comes to the United States, she confesses a secret to Olivia. Frightened by Kwan's disclosure, Olivia reveals Kwan's secret to her mother. Kwan is institutionalized and when she is finally released, Olivia is repentant and forces herself to listen to Kwan's stories about other lives in other times.

Many years later, Olivia's marriage to Simon is faltering and she wants a divorce. Kwan's ghosts say otherwise and she convinces Olivia and Simon to make a trip with her to China.

It's only in China that Olivia finally begins to understand what Kwan has been telling her about the hundred secret senses. Most of all, Olivia understands the relationship between herself and Simon and the special relationship she has with Kwan.

The combination of Tan's deadpan humor and description of village life in China lends a charming film quality to the book. In addition, Tan adds a dimension of surrealism to the novel, making it just a bit fantastic.

Tan's writing flows smoothly throughout the book, never faltering. Every word is carefully chosen and placed for maximum impact. With The Hundred Secret Senses, Tan manages to recapture the magic of The Joy Luck Club.

The Hundred Secret Senses is a wonderful novel about the ties of sisterhood. More importantly, Tan introduces ideas that have been part of Asian culture and religion for thousands of years and successfully bridges the gap between Eastern and Western philosophies. A (Seema Gangatirkar)

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.
MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. Talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.
1-800-572-1717
MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

HOUSE Welcomes You Back to School
Large Selection of Sanrio, Smurfs, Original 70's & 80's Iron-On T-Shirts, and all the stuff that's cool for a new dorm room.
Super Savings! Clip this ad for 10% off
"SNAP" house
POP-CULTURE ARTIFACTS
Thorne's Marketplace, 2nd Floor • Northampton, MA • 586-5491

PANDA EAST
Best Chinese Restaurant In the Valley since 1987 & Fine Japanese Cuisine
Lunch Specials Everyday! Starting at $3.95!
Banquet Room Available
Delivery Express Available
549-0077
"We bring China Town to You"
103 N. Pleasant Street. Amherst. MA 01002 (413) 256-8923 • 256-8924

We moved.
But you can still get the best deal around on all your t-shirt and other screen printing needs right here in Hadley. We're directly across the street from Bread & Circus at 322 Russell Street (Route 9).
Our phone number's the same...call us!
Apparel Unlimited
586-6933

WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM
140 Main Street Northampton MA 01060 413-586-8545
Members receive: Membership Card, Words About Pictures Newsletter, 10% off store merchandise, invitation to Annual Membership Party, and free admission to the Museum for one full year!
NEW STUDENT MEMBERSHIP LEVEL! $15 Cadet 1 year full benefits
3rd Annual Membership Party!
This year's membership party is chock full of excitement and stars! September 20-22 offers a weekend of signings, panel discussions, and a reception to knock your socks off!
Women in Comics
August 29th-October 13th
Featuring:
Donna Barr
Julie Doucet
Diane DiMassa
Mary Fleener
Roberta Gregory
Lurene Haines
Sonia Hillios
Linda Medley
Wendy Pini
Trina Robbins
and
Marie Severin
Open
Tues.-Thurs. and Sunday 12-5pm
Friday 12-8pm
Saturday 10-8pm
CLOSED MONDAY
Fri. Sept. 20th
"The Great Women Superheroes" slide show presentation by Trina Robbins 7:00pm
Sat. Sept. 21st
artist signings 1-4pm
Mike Allred (Madman)
Dave Dorman (Alien: Tribes)
Lurene Haines (Words About Pictures)
Trina Robbins (A Century of Women Cartoonists)
Sonia Hillios (Star Trek: Next Generations)
Mary Fleener (Fleener)
Mario Severin (Marvel Artist)
Sat. Sept. 21
3rd Annual Membership Party 6-9pm awards presentation, food, prizes and a Yo-Yo contest judged by Mike Allred!
Sun. Sept. 22
Sunday brunch with the stars focusing discussion on the comic industry's audience
So become a member and join us for a weekend you won't soon forget!

378 North Pleasant St. Amherst MA
BUY/SELL/TRADE CDs! RECORDS! CASSETTES! VIDEOS! 8-TRACKS! COOL JOBS!
MYSTERY TRAIN
253-4774

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 9 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0060

EVERYWOMAN'S CENTER OPEN HOUSE
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1996, NOON - 7PM
Noon - 4pm: Staff will be available to provide information about paid student positions, internships and volunteer opportunities
4 - 7pm: Reception and refreshments
All campus members welcome
For more information call 545-0883

Young's reunion with Crazy Horse fails to gain speed

NEIL YOUNG AND CRAZY HORSE
Broken Arrow
Repnse

Ever since staging a dramatic artistic comeback in the late '80s with Freedom, Neil Young has been on a roll. First he brought Crazy Horse back from the dead, then he polished off the International Harvesters — he even made a few runs with Booker T & the MG's and Pearl Jam. His latest album, Broken Arrow, finds Young and the Horse treading familiar territory — no less passionate or energetic, but perhaps a bit short on new ideas.

Not nearly as cohesive as Ragged Glory or Mirror Ball, Broken Arrow acts more like a Crazy Horse stylistic sampler than a unified artistic vision. The longer, jam-oriented songs are clumped together awkwardly at the beginning, leaving the shorter songs to feel more like tossed off afterthoughts than significant songs. The scattering of mood and style makes Broken Arrow an uncomfortable ride, and makes a good case for programmable CD players.

Luckily, the haphazard running order doesn't do too much damage to some of the best songs Young's ever written. The opener "Big Time" wraps the thick fog of Crazy Horse guitar around a moody and heartbreakingly beautiful melody — as gloriously tragic and dark as anything off of Tonight's The Night. "Loose Change" follows, but aside from the amazing feat of a successful harmonica solo on top of the Crazy Horse distortion mountain, it fails to catch fire, and clocks in way too long.

After the epic first half, the shorter songs seem even less interesting and badly thought out. Both "Scattered" and "This Town" bounce along nicely, but to no obvious end. Even worse is "Changing Highways," a song that is almost identical to a number of earlier Neil Young songs, but far less memorable.

The faltering step steadies some, however, on "Slip Away" and "Music Arcade." "Slip Away" is a marathon in the classic Crazy Horse style — extending soloing, dramatic dynamic shifts. It represents what Crazy Horse does best by seeking out the depth and pulse in the song — at once haunting and immediate. The guitars are thick and heavy, roaring like mighty rivers, but given the focus by the solid rhythmic foundation — glowing with the warmth and electricity of Neil's best work.

Jumping suddenly from the oversized and extensive to the immediate and subtle, "Music Arcade" is the sole acoustic track on Broken Arrow. It's whispered intimacy is like a breath of fresh air after the almost suffocating thickness of the electric songs, and it's a beautiful snapshot of what Young can do with a few select chords and the power of his impressionistic, startlingly simple, lyrics. "Have you ever been lost, have you ever been found out, have you ever felt all alone, at the end of the day," he asks, allowing his distinctive voice and the hushed intimacy to fill in the unspoken pains of isolation and suspicion. Again, Young recalls the darkness and questioning of Tonight's the Night, but with the grace the years have granted, and the unusual context of an otherwise loud collective of anthems.

In keeping with Broken Arrow's frustrating missteps, "Music Arcade" is followed by a completely useless nine minute cover of, "Baby, What You Want To Do," notable for nothing other than its bad sound quality and tired interpretation.

Broken Arrow succeeds ultimately on the strength of a few highlights, but seems inconsequential next to the passionate explosion of Ragged Glory, the tattered beauty of Harvest Moon, and even the spooky explorations of Sleeps With Angels. Neil Young never fails, and even his missteps are better than most anyone else's bests, but Broken Arrow slips quietly into the catalog — let's hope a little more time is spent on the next album, and some new territory explored. B (Bradley Skaught)

GEORGE MICHAEL Older
DreamWorks

Back in the 1980's, George Michael was "the man," with his image lining the wall of every teenage girl. Even in the early 90's he was still somewhat of a pop icon. But now, in 1996, Michael's stardom has lessened. Now he appears to be jumping on the bandwagon of other 80's bands who are trying in vain to make a comeback. But sadly for Michael, Older, the inaugural release by Dreamworks, will not be the album to restore his icon status.

You would have hard pressed to miss classic Michael tunes like, "Faith" or "I Want Your Sex" on the radio during his heyday. And while it enjoyed comfortable airplay on VH-1, "Fast Love," the second single from Older is now resting comfortably in the 99 cent bin at Blockbuster Video. Yet this is the catchiest and most melodic cut off of the entire album. This is the George Michael that his fans want to hear, and if "Fast Love" was at all representative of Older, Michael could again ride the wave of success.

Instead Older drags on and on, becoming boring and stale only a mere half-way through. Though it shows a more mature and insightful Michael, the songs are all basically the same. The first track, "Jesus to a Child" is a nice opening to the CD, but the same structure and tempo becomes boring when the rest of the songs mimic it.

However, Michael is a very talented artist and it would be unfair to just point out Older's flaws. During an extended absence from the recording industry, Michael experimented with new genres of music. His mediocre attempt to blend different styles shows that he is trying to expand as an artist, but it doesn't always work.

Michael needs to abandon techniques that worked a few years ago and develop a different approach. On "It Really Doesn't Matter at All," Michael utilizes a boring, synthesized, casio-keyboard sounding drum beat that is so overwhelming and repetitive, it overshadows the song making it nearly impossible to enjoy his sultry voice.

And though most of the songs are dense with similarity, a tracks have potential. The problem, however, is that these songs seems less remarkable because they are enshrouded by long and strenuous tunes. "The Strangest Thing," a beautifully haunting standout track becomes stale simply because all the other songs mimic it.

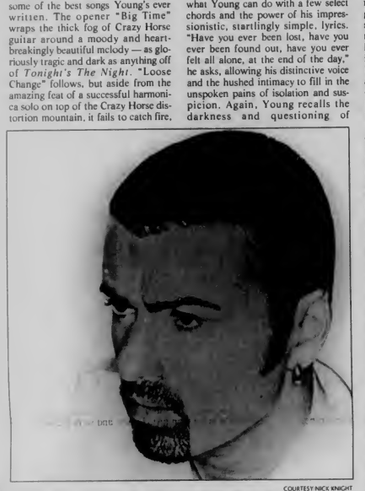
Older become blasé when listened back to back with Michael's past successes, such as "Father Figure." He may be older but definitely not wiser. C (Lisa M. Oliveri)

BECK
Odelay
DGC

Alternative rock's resident loser is back to prove to the unfaithful he was no one hit wonder, just perhaps a genius MTV stumbled upon by accident. Since the "Alternative Nation" last heard from him, Beck released the superb low-fi album, One Foot In the Grave on K Records and this summer's equally impressive, Odelay.

Odelay, produced by the Dust Brothers, who produced the Beastie Boys masterpiece Paul's Boutique, finds Beck maturing and experimenting with more will and ease.

Although raised on American folk music and Delta Blues, Beck found his true calling in the late '80s anti-folk scene. Since then he has taken his anti-folk sound and mixed it with hip-hop, funk, blues and just about anything else he can unearth. Listening to Beck reinvent the music of yesterday with a '90s vision is startling. His original influences of Woody Guthrie and Fred McDowell are still apparent, but often well concealed.



From the countryish "Lord Only Knows" to the beautiful folksy "Jack-Ass" to the rockin' opening track "Devil's Haircut," Beck proves he is still the most versatile musician in the alternative rock world. Indeed no style or sample is safe from Beck's exploitation, even Kurt Cobain is in danger — "Minus" eerily sounds like a lost Nirvana tune.

While Beck may dabble in more straight-ahead alternative rock, his forte lies in the fields of funk and hip-hop. "High 5 (Rock the Catskills)," complete with samples from Rasputin's Stash's "Mr. Cool," blows away any recent Beastie Boys song. Beck funks up the house on "Hotwax," while Odelay's closing track, Ramshackle, is a mellow ballad that would have fit well on his previous album, One Foot In the Grave.

Interestingly Charlie Haden, Ornette Coleman's longtime bassist, appears on the closing track. The same Haden who assisted Coleman invent free jazz on albums such as The Shape of Jazz to Come, in the late '50s by destroying the methods and ideals of the jazz world.

Today Beck is doing just the opposite as he borrows heavily from the past only to piece together the future. A (Mike Burke)

Turn to YOUNG, page 10

COURTESY NICK KNIGHT

George Michael is out of hibernation but barely stays alive on Older.

COURTESY ALISON DYER

Beck steals a bit of history on his latest voyage into the unknown, Odelay.

STUDENT WELCOME & WELCOME BACK EVENTS

THE NEWMAN CENTER
THE CATHOLIC STUDENT CENTER
on the CAMPUS of the UNIVERSITY of MASSACHUSETTS

Monday, September 2, 11:00 A.M.- 3:00 P.M.
"Class of 2000 - Day one" - Campus Center

When you're browsing among all the campus groups and activities, be sure to stop by the table for the Newman Student Association (NSA). We look forward to meeting you.

Sunday, September 8, 7:00 P.M.
Welcome Mass for the Opening of Academic Year - Newman Center

Join us in asking God's blessing on the new year. Refreshments will follow. Meet some new friends.

Monday, September 8, 6:00 P.M.
Freshmen and New Student Welcome - Newman Center, Front Lounge

* Pizza/Soda
* Friends
* Tour
* Info on NSA (Newman Student Association) The Graduate Student Group The International Student Group

THE NEWMAN CENTER
472 NORTH PLEASANT STREET
AMHERST, MA 01002
(413) 549-0300

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?

Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.

Come down today!

See campus computer store for details.

Buy an IBM PC 340 or 350 desktop computer and an IBM Multimedia Kit. And you'll get a CD software package that includes Windows 95, Lotus SmartSuite, Netscape Navigator, World Book Multimedia Encyclopedia and the Infopedia collection of essential reference software.

Buy a ThinkPad and you'll get Windows 95 and Lotus SmartSuite. You can also take advantage of special student, faculty and staff financing. Just call 1-800-4IBM-LOAN for information. Hurry, visit your campus computer store today. After all, no one looks good in a checkered apron.

IBM.

IBM and ThinkPad are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. Windows is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation. Other company, product or service names may be trademarks or service marks of others. ©1996 IBM Corp. All rights reserved.

Hollywood leads summer gossip

Antonio marries Melanie; Rodman tells all about Madonna

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

Though the summer did not live up to expectations weather-wise, there was no shortage of heat in Hollywood. With marriages, proposals and romance, blockbuster movies, drug overdoses and skyrocketing salaries, the celebrities we love so much gave us plenty to talk about.

Nothing overshadowed Hollywood as much as the giant screen hit, Independence Day, which broke all box-office records. University of Massachusetts alum, Bill Pullman, who saved the planet as President of the United States, recently secured a starring role in another adventure film, Volcano.

John Grisham's name was as hot as the Macarena this summer as The Runaway Jury topped the best-seller list while his debut novel, A Time to Kill became a huge box- office hit. He also has another novel to film, The Chamber, on the horizon. Look for Chris O'Donnell as the lead man in a story about the death penalty and old age.

Well, movies mean money and some of the biggest salaries ever were dished out this summer including Jim Carrey's unprecedented $20 million deal for The Cable Guy and $12 million for Demi Moore in her flop Striptease. But that's pocket change in comparison to what Arnold Schwarzenegger will receive for a mere six-week stint in the upcoming Batman movie — a reported $25 million, plus a percentage for marketing his likeness on figures, posters, etc.

And speaking of Carrey, he recently proposed to long-time girlfriend Lauren Holly only weeks after she told him to move out. No confirmation as of yet, but it looks like marriage is in the future for beauties Brad Pitt and Gwynneth Paltrow, who by the way, is already thought to be an Oscar contender for her starring role in Emma.

Brits Liam Gallagher, the lead singer of Oasis, and actress Patsy Kensit have also decided to tie the knot, though no date has been set because she is still bound to her second husband Jim Kerr of Simple Minds.

Hearts broke in women world-wide when Antonio Banderas announced his wedlock to Hollywood bimbo Melanie Griffith earlier this summer. Why, Antonio, why?

And speaking of bimbos, MTV's Jennie McCarthy bordered on overexposure this summer not only co-starring in the overplayed "Singled Out," but also by promoting a CD and playing vejay. And now MTV is discussing a deal that will give her more airtime, thus confirming the notion that the station really is only for teenyboppers.

After a much rumored strike by the cast of "Friends" demanding $100,000 an episode, they have agreed upon $75,000, almost double their previous salary. Not bad since none of them have been able to successfully make a move to the big screen yet.

Did anybody know that Helen Hunt, of Twister and "Mad About You" fame, used to play the little girl in "The Swiss Family Robinson," now showing in re-runs on the cable station, FX?

COURTESY MICHAEL P. WEINSTEIN

UMass alum Bill Pullman had a summer to remember starring in the blockbuster, Independence Day.

By now anybody who hasn't heard about Robert Downey, Jr. may as well be passed out themselves. After being arrested for possession of drugs and an unloaded handgun in early July, he was found unconscious in the bed of an unbeknownst stranger. He was discovered by the woman's daughter and is currently in a 24-hour rehabilitation program.

Apparently Chicago Bulls player Dennis Rodman feels he didn't get enough exposure being trashed by Madonna. Not only did he release an autobiography, "Bad As I Wanna Be," but he also staged quite the marketing scheme. Dressed as a bride, he fooled the press into thinking he was getting married, but alas, it was just a cheap promotional ploy.

The much hyped musical-movie Evita, Andrew Lloyd Webber's story about politics in Argentina, was not without controversy. After losing original director Oliver Stone, Aregentinian leaders protested star Madonna's presence in their country. She also made headlines in Budapest where a high Catholic official attempted to ban her from a church. But then again, is anything that happens to Madonna particularly surprising?

Keanu Reeves reportedly pulled out of the sequel to his blockbuster Speed, not for lack of salary, but in order to tour with his band Dogstar, who, incidentally is quite the smash in Europe and Asia. Former co-star Sandra Bullock has said that she will stay on, but only if she approves the male lead. Rumor has it that she is vying for A Time To Kill co- star, Matthew McConaughey to fill the empty space.

And the summer also saw the start of a trend that America can certainly live without. Metal mohawks, implanting metal spikes in one's scalp, and pre-dad onto the scene. Just something to think about.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian columnist.

Deja vu smothers fall fashion runways

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

A few months ago when beach-goers were laid out amidst the sun's rays and ocean breezes, this year's fall fashion was already halfway down the runways of Paris, London and New York. The insider's word on this season's smashing lineup is the same word that has been around for the past few years — retro.

Retro is defined by the American Heritage College Dictionary as, "involving, relating to or reminiscent of things past." But the fashion world was never one to go or even adhere to common definition. To designers, retro is a concept and an idea to be weaved and constructed not only by the fibers of material, but also by those of the individual's imagination.

Because the past, loosely speaking, can span anywhere from a few years to a few decades, designers had a wealth of time periods to work with. They have a basic idea that everyone has closets full of clothes which just don't seem to go with anything else. Working on the idea that a woman may have wool slacks, silk shirts and cotton jackets, designers have paired different textures and varying degrees of similar colors to create outfits of surprising depth, richness and style.

A simple black dress can be dressed up or down with a cardigan, pearls or belt. DKNY has jackets that can be paired with anything from skirts to jeans. Other hot items include camel-colored car and pea coats that are either adorned with horn buttons or belted for an international flair, reminiscent of the trench coat which has also been resurrected in vinyl.

If the word in style is retro, then the word in material is knit. From sensual evening wear to bulky sweaters, knits, especially in the form of dresses, can be seen in almost every collection from Jil Stuart to Ellen Tracey.

Knee length, calf length and anywhere in between is where these simple and multipurposed creations hit. V-necked, collarcd and halter shaped tops take the wearer wherever they want to be, much like the Visa card you'll need to purchase these haute fashions — at $200 a pop and up, they aren't the stuff Grandma makes for Christmas.

And what do we wear with these masters of creation? Anything and everything from sweaters (cashmere and silk) around the waist to thigh length suede jackets. Dress up or down with scarves, belts or chains. Pair with alligator pumps with their oh-so-chic stacked heel or go vamp in patent leather go-go boots.

Suits, jackets, shirts and anything else you can think of are all basically mixed and matched in a variety of colors, the most basic, of course, being black. And designers are also pairing together more offbeat colors like brown and navy, creating a surprisingly interesting duo. But with any article of clothing, the color and material are nothing compared to the care designers are taking on the drape and cut of the clothes.

Anyone can tell a well made article of clothing by the way the fabric clings or doesn't cling, drapes or doesn't drape. Take Jil Sanderis, a master of making beautiful basics from high-waisted wool pants to simple wool turtlenecks. The clothes don't bunch or hinder movement, and they are definitely things that people can add to an already existing wardrobe.

So what has come out that shouldn't have? Faux fur and the big boring controversy between supermodels who are featured in PETA ads buck naked refuting fur, and then seen a year later walking down a runway smothered in the stuff. Publicists for such belles as Naomi Campbell and Nadja Auberman all claim that a) the models were told the fur was fake, or b) it was a last minute mistake. Uh, okay. That's like a vegetarian consuming a sirloin steak because they thought it was really just tofu with catsup. Oops! My bad!

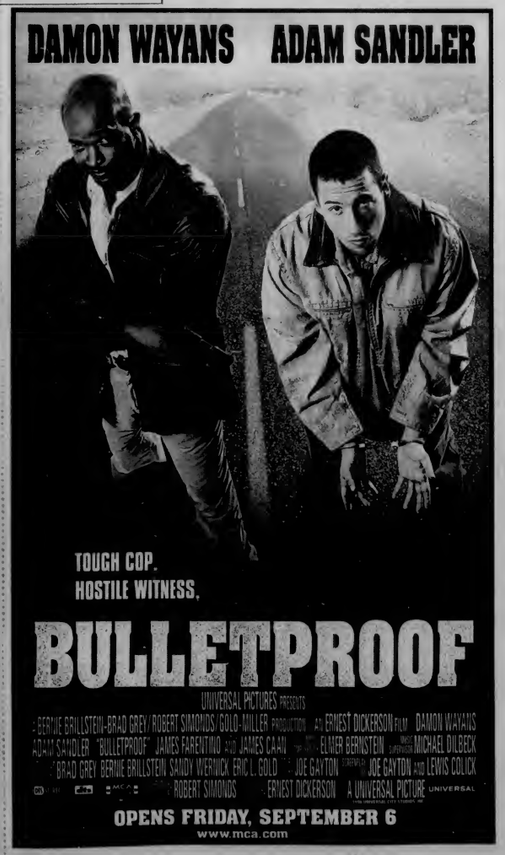
There has also been a rise in '70s wear. What kind of '70s wear? Try leisure suits. Yes, the pants, the shirts, the collars! The sheer and utter horror of humanity. If someone won't wear their mom's chartreuse "wonder," what makes a designer think someone will shell out $300 for a '90s model? Simple — people will buy anything.

Also nix the animal prints. The zebra, the leopard, the snake — it is sad to think that people would still put hard earned cash into trying to look like a "National Geographic" special stand-in. Maybe they think the Tarzan look will eventually catch on and the designers can claim they were the trend setter. Yes, and maybe drinking milk through your nose will become "all the rage."

Colors. Now here is something interesting. After places like the Gap and J. Crew bombarded us by overstocking their catalogues and stores with pastel colors, a recent fashion report stated that the evil mass marketing ploy was to make everyone look like an extra for "Easter Parade."

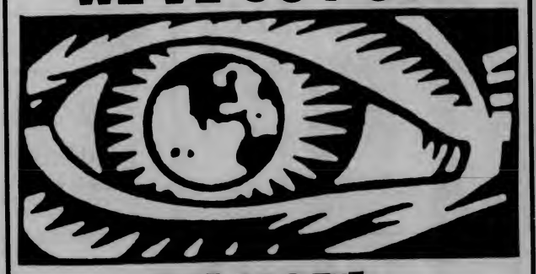
"Marie Claire" recently featured a list with five key items that women should have. They include: a three-quarter or ankle length coat, an ankle-grazing maxi skirt, a navy, red, or black turtle neck sweater, a pantsuit with a jacket and stovepipe pants and a classic white shirt or blue oxford with french cuffs.

And finally, the new stuff on the market. For perfume we have the spicy, heady "Dolce Vita" by Christian Dior, taking the lead that Poison started with its deep grape scents, but making it much more oriental.



Then there is the "cK be" by Calvin Klein, another androgenous perfume that is highly unremarkable, but will be sure to saturate the magazine ads with scary undernourished models in hip Gen-X clothing. Think that's "CK One" — think again. The can isn't the only thing recyclable.

Speaking of recyclable, two new unisex scents join the market. There is Paco Rabanne's scent "paco" and Gap's "Om." Also hitting over-made perfume-selling cosmetic ladies' hands are "Curve" by Liz Claiborne and "Ocean Dream" by Giorgio Beverly Hills.



Label-wise, Ralph Lauren is coming out with a chic and sensibly priced line for women called "Lauren." This line promises the designer's style with Banana Republic-like prices. Also trying to capture a new age group and sex is Tommy Hilfiger's line for women called "Tommy."

Lots of plaid, lots of red, white and blue and lots of "gee, doesn't this look a lot like the stuff at Abercrombie?" Calvin Klein is putting out a black label line of men's clothing in Italian black wool. Klein is a superb designer and his suits will definitely give Brooks Brothers a run for their money.

So read what you want, buy or not, but remember fashion is more than just clothes, and so is the fall.

CD$C is HIRING and WE'VE GOT OUR

ON YOU!

Campus Design & Copy (CD&C) IS HIRING AND WE'VE GOT OUR EYE ON YOU!

If you want to gain valuable business and communication skills, we've got a great opportunity for you. CD&C is a student-run business and we're currently looking to hire six sharp students to join our team. If you want a challenge and more than just a regular job, come in and pick up an application - WE DARE YA! CD&C is located in 403 Student Union; that's on the second floor, above the Credit Union. The application deadline is September 18.

Young

continued from page 8-B

THE CURE
Wild Mood Swings
Elektra

For a while, The Cure was getting a little bit too happy. No, not quite "perky" happy, but nevertheless they were not the same somber, melancholy folks from yesteryear. They were pioneers of alternative music back when it was, indeed, alternative. And though their latest release is by no means their best, it is a valiant effort that comes up just shy of excellence.

Wild Mood Swings is, as the title suggests — a collection of songs that evoke a full range of emotions, from despair to ecstasy. Robert Smith and Co. experiment with many different types of music here, producing some of the Cure's most compelling songs, both lyrically and rhythmically.

The band hauntingly mixes an accompanying orchestra with dark lyrics to give Wild Moods Swings a classic gothic feel. The third track, "It's a Lie," questions both destiny and heartache with lines such as, "I've never understood/ One special friend/ One true love/ Why each of us must lose everyone else in the world." Cure frontman, Smith, bellows out this poem, invading his listeners with chilling excitement and beckoning them into his mind.

It was precisely work like "It's a Lie" which makes the CD great, for the first three songs. Then "Just Like Heaven," the band's breakthrough 1987 hit, came on — twice. Well, not exactly, but very close. Instead of recreating new songs on Wild Mood Swings , the band capitalizes on ones that weren't that great to begin with. The Cure has a great gothic sound, and if the album wasn't cluttered with catchy pop tunes and lines about the sun rising, it would compare with their earlier, darker material such as Disintegration.

Bypass the few songs that are just not top-notch and Cure fans will find a pleasant listening experience. Unfortunately Smith doesn't create enough shivers utilizing his dark, sexual voice enough, but when he does, it is well worth the wait. B (L.O.)

SEBADOH
Harmacy
Sub Pop

Since leaving Dinosaur, Jr. almost 10 years ago, Lou Barlow has travelled a long path from bedroom obscurity to alterative rock hero. Last year, as a member of the Folk Implosion, Barlow became an MTV/ household name due to the enormously successful Kids Soundtrack. Now, Barlow is out to prove Sebadoh's worth and also to prove that Sebadoh is not just his band.

Democratically, Jason Lowenstein and Barlow share songwriting credits on this 19 track album. Together they make for one of the sloppiest but fascinating songwriter tandems. Mix Barlow's Joni Mitchell influences with Lowenstein's angry punk side and you have the winning combination to the schizophrenic sounds of Sebadoh.

On "Worst Thing" and "Love to Fight," Lowenstein recaptures the band's harsh noise side — an ingredient missing since Eric Gaffney, the band's resident noisemonger, left after the release of 1993's Bubble & Scrape.

With Lowenstein's new found punker side, Harmacy flows in a dishelveled manner akin to their classic album III which flawlessly displayed the band's multi-faceted sound. As on III, Barlow's deep personal songs sound even more intimate and dramatic when meshed around Lowenstein's collages of noise and anger.

Barlow remains among the most intimate and sensitive songwriters of today. With good reason he has become the posterboy of the sensitive male. His confessional lyrics are deeply personal and revealing. "And it feels like I'm on fire/ these words are not the truth/ but don't hold it against me/ I know you're lying too," he sings in "On Fire." "Don't let me fall without someone to hold on to."

COURTESY CHARLES PETERSON

Westfield's own Sebadoh offers up more twisted love songs on Harmacy.

With the possible exception of the Wedding Present's David Gedge, no current songwriter has found power to pen such beautiful and real songs of lost romance. "Willing To Wait" and "Too Pure" are the emotional highlights of the album and stand as some of Barlow's finest moments, both musically and lyrically.

While Barlow sings his heart out, Lowenstein keeps the band's intensity on high as his songs explode with power in the wake of Barlow's quiet love songs. The mix of fire & water is a combination that Sebadoh has perfected. Their classic album III was beautifully chaotic. While Harmacy finds itself with more focus, the band still feels to be on the verge of complete collapse.

Harmacy meaningfully ends with Bob Fay taking lead vocals on Sebadoh's punk assault cover of the Bag's "I Smell A Rat." Fay, Gaffney's replacement and longtime Sebadoh fill-in, is often lost in the Sebadoh shuffle but is still an essential member of the band.

Sebadoh shines the brightest when the band is unfocussed and rough. Harmacy finds the trio on the edge of a breakdown that leaves the listener intrigued and at the edge of their seat. A- (Mike Burke)

JIMMIE DALE GILMORE
Braver Newer World
Elektra

There is nothing so gratifying as an artist finally creating the work which perfectly captures his or her abilities — Jimmie Dale Gilmore is one of few musicians, and one of the very few country musicians, to achieve that. Braver Newer World is an album that encapsulates the broad vision of Gilmore's work, and gives it a coherence that makes listening to the album akin to watching a movie — ideas and emotions vary, but they are wrapped around a central experience — a defining vision.

Like Emmylou Harris' Wrecking Ball, Braver Newer World is produced by a non-country musician (T-Bone Burnett) who, through his understanding of other styles, is able to capture the spirit of country and surrounds Gilmore with a sound that is both sympathetic and challenging.

Braver Newer World starts off with the title track, a gorgeous, dream-like song that rides atop a wave-like swell of steel guitar and horns, broken only by a startling, distorted sitar-sounding guitar. The album is full of such seemingly disparate musical ideas, but the unity of the songs remain seamless, and by the time the fourth song, "Headed for a Fall," starts, it is clear that the normal boundaries of music have been broken, giving Gilmore free reign to explore the wide expanses of the musical palette — taking country music to places it has rarely ever gone.

Much of the exploration on Braver Newer World is the work of drummer/percussionist Jim Keltner. Keltner builds a rhythmic web around the songs, eschewing the standard drum set sounds for a collection of shakers, wooden tom thuds and a spooky, trip-hop style percussion. Keltner's playing gives the atmospheric album a pulse — a swirling, hypnotic feel.

All of the music exploration and ingenuity would be wasted, however, if there weren't substantial songs underneath. Luckily, Gilmore has been as flawless in choosing songs as choosing musicians. A handful of originals, all among his best, are mixed in with songs from fellow West Texans Al Strehli and Joe Ely (the beautiful "Because the Wind,"), an old blues standard ("Long Snake Moan,"), and even a Sam Phillips song. The Phillips' song, "Where is Love Now," is one of the most powerful on the album — written especially for Gilmore. The soaring melodic line and searching lyrics find Gilmore in familiar thematic territory, proving that it is Gilmore's singing that lies at the heart of his music — the high, lonesome country wail that wraps layers of meaning and emotion around every word.

Braver Newer World place Gilmore in the company of the few country musicians who are pushing their way past the stagnant Top-40 Nashville cloning, and, in exploring the vast musical vocabulary available, have found the true voice of country music — a voice that is confined only by the imagination. Braver Newer World is a masterpiece and, hopefully, the flagship of many such exciting and vital works — an album of incredible value and discovery. A (B.S.)

Back in the Valley again

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Nearly 20 years ago University of Massachusetts' student John Linnell decided to take the year following his freshman year off — with the intent of returning. Well, like Charlie on the MTA, Linnell never returned. Instead he formed They Might Be Giants, a highly successful, quirky pop act.

In a recent phone interview from his home in New York, Linnell remembered his days at UMass.

"I had an interesting time meeting lots of musicians but it wasn't exactly what I wanted to do," Linnell said.

After leaving school, Linnell moved to Boston, soon hooking up with the Providence-based band the Mundanes. Local commercial success came their way, so collectively the group moved to the Big Apple with high expectations of gigs and record deals. Coincidentally, he moved in next door to John Flansburgh, a former grammar school classmate from Massachusetts, and the .wo hit it off.

"We started writing songs together and had fun so I left the Mundanes in 1981," Linnell recalled.

The duo soon picked the moniker of They Might Be Giants, after a film of the same name simply because "it was not a snazzy new wave name."

As They Might Be Giants, the duo played often around the East Village scene in New York City garnering enough attention to grab the eye of an upstart local label, Bar None. Around this time the band played the first of many Northampton gigs.

"We played Northampton at a party at a friend's house off Main St., before getting a record deal or a booking agent. We met a bunch of friends at the show and we got a gig at the Iron Horse largely because of these friends," Linnell remembered. "That show at the Iron Horse was great — a ruckus scene. So we came back a bunch of times and each time was more hysterical."

The band also regularly played Pearl Street including one show with the Pogues and Mojo Nixon.

Since those early shows in Northampton the duo has evolved greatly. After two successful albums on Bar None, They Might Be Giants made the jump to Elektra, a major label. To the band's surprise, the band had "become big shots on the loser circuit as a very popular independent band." Their debut album remark-

Turn to 11 page BACK

COURTESY MICHAEL LAVINE

School must be back in session because They Might Be Giants squash Northampton again.

music

continued from page 1-B

• If tribute albums are to your liking but Sun Ra is a bit out there, invest in Sweet Relief II — Gravity of the Situation: The Song of Vic Chesnutt. R.E.M., Smashing Pumpkins and Hootie and the Blowfish headline here with an interesting duet between Madonna and her step-brother Joe Henry.

• Capitol bought 49 percent of Matador Records, the hip New York home of Pavement, Liz Phair, Jon Spencer Blues Explosion and more. The deal was estimated at $20 million, not bad for a label that has never even had a platinum record. Credibility sure is expensive these days.

• One of America's premier punk/pop bands of the decade, Jawbreaker, called it quits this summer.

• Yo La Tengo took a minor acting role this summer as the trio portrayed their idols, the Velvet Underground, in the summer cult hit I Shot Andy Warhol.

• Thurston Moore, noise addict and guitarist of Sonic Youth, has been vacationing in the Valley where he co-produced several avant-garde jazz shows. Through the Pinecone Lighining Day Series, Moore has brought the No Neck Blues, Test, Gregg Bendian's Interzone and Loren Mazzacone Connors to the Unitarian Meeting House in Amherst. Moore also worked on an all day event, Fire in the Valley, which was held on campus.

• Northampton got an earful of punk rock this summer as the Warped Tour flew into the Northampton Airport. It may not have been Lollapolooza but nearby residents sure knew it wasn't a big band festival either. Bands on the bill included The Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Pennywise, Face To Face, Rocket From the Crypt and CIV.

• And now for the best and worst five music-related picks of the summer. The bad news first:

Top Five Worst of the Summer

1.) Heroin. The drug has been plaguing the entertainment industry for decades, but this summer its popularity skyrocketed. The rock world lost two more young musicians, Jonathan Melvoin (Smashing Pumpkins) and Bradley Novell (Sublime) this summer while several others are recovering in rehab. Friends close to Aerosmith have expressed concern that Steven Tyler may have relapsed after 10 years of sobriety — possibly explaining the recent departure of long time manager and anti-drug advocate Tom Collins.

2.) The Sex Pistols. Who needs 'em? Supposedly they sounded great this summer, but this is the Sex Pistols not Steve Vai. In 1976, they were punks because they didn't sound good.

3.) Oasis. Better than the Beatles? Well maybe if John, Paul, George and Ringo all left and Pete Best returned to cover Paul Anka's "She's Having My Baby." Otherwise I will stick to my scratchy Beatles record over that "Wondersuck" song any day.

4.) Lollapollooza. Maybe Iron Maiden and Andrew Dice Clay will co-headline in 1997!

5.) The Hokey-Pokey, oops I mean the Macarena.

Five Summer Shout-outs

1.) The Fugees. Overplayed. Yes. But this talented trio deserved every bit of praise and attention they received. Don't forget, though, they have other songs besides "Killing Me Softly" and "No Woman No Cry."

2.) Patti Smith. Back in the musical world after an extended absence.

3.) KISS

4.) The Macarena Craze. Is this the Twist of the '90s?

5.) Phish's Clifford Ball. I am hardly a Phish Head but this two day event sounded great. Why doesn't Pavement do this?

COURTESY STEPHEN VAUGHAN

Michael Keaton and Michael Keaton in the flop, Multiplicity.

movies

continued from page 1-B

story is weak, and hinges far too much on coincidence to ever be taken seriously.

4.) Joe's Apartment:

Bad ideas were floating around MTV when a script about a guy who befriends the roaches who infest his apartment got OK'd for a feature length film.

The film is chock-full of adolescent humor involving feces, but the worst idea of all was to make it a musical. The roaches sing in the same uncool manner of Alvin and the Chipmunks. This movie probably made about $2 million, so plenty of people lost their jobs because of this one, and rightly so.

5.) The Cable Guy:

"He ain't gettin' any funnier," said the surly old man sitting in front of me.

Good ideas get wasted in what could have potentially been a funny film. The sardonic humor gets lost in useless Oliver Stone-circa-Natural Born Killers-type banter. With this role Jim Carrey began to back away at his $20 million asking price.

With all that aside I will say that there were a few decent films out this summer. The Rock, with its testosterone- pumping, unrelenting action was easily the best of the big blockbusters. I found myself laughing frequently in Kingpin, especially at Bill Murray in his great supporting role as the rival bowler. Disney once again proved impressive with its retelling of The Hunchback of Notre Dame. But the best movies that came out this summer were not conglomerate Hollywood hype, but rather independent or foreign made films. Here are the five best movies of the summer:

1. Lone Star:

John Sayles' brilliant, dark western is about a border town Texas sheriff who tries to find out the truth about a 20 year- old murder. More importantly, the sheriff is interested in whether the truth implicates his father or not. There are about six subplots that interweave intelligently, but each is so compelling that a whole movie could easily devote itself to each.

Chris Cooper is Sheriff Sam Deeds, the only person in the town who doesn't regard his father as a legend. He's out to prove that it was his father, Buddy Deeds, who killed the former corrupt sheriff (played intensely in flashback by Kris Kristofferson.)

The story is thoroughly engaging, and each of the many characters brings a new intrigue to the legend of Buddy Deeds. Great supporting performances by Elizabeth Pena, Joe Morton and Matthew McConaughey add flavor. This further shows Sayles to be one of the most consistent and intelligent filmmakers alive.

2. Supercop:

Jackie Chan's 1993 Hong Kong action flick Police Story III was released and retitled in the U.S. this summer after the surprise success of Rumble in the Bronx. All the special effects that Hollywood can muster up will never equal Chan's pure showmanship.

Rumble had great action and stunts, but was dragged down by a sometimes laughable script that was full of holes. With Supercop, Rumble director Stanley Tang combined great stunts and fighting scenes with a cohesive, intelligent plot.

Along for the ride this time is martial arts expert Michelle Yeoh (or Michelle Khan as she is known over here) as Chan's commander. Her stuntwork and fighting almost equal Chan's. But in the film's finale, Chan engages in a real Mission: Impossible as he dangles from a helicopter, smashing through billboards and jumping onto a moving train. A great ride.

3. Basquiat:

Painter-turned-director Julian Schnabel takes the audience into the interesting and troubled life of his former peer, the late Jean-Michel Basquiat. Schnabel shows Basquiat not as a hero or a troubled genius, but as a person.

Amherst grad Jeffrey Wright is great as the graffiti artist who became a pop icon. Schnabel uses unique direction and interesting music to highlight the artist without becoming too prcientious. The cast is a virtual who's-who in the movie industry. David Bowie shines as Basquiat collaborator and friend Andy Warhol. The likes of venerated greats such as Willem Dafoe, Dennis Hopper, Gary Oldman and fine newcomers such as Benicio Del Toro and Claire Forlani are magnificent in their supporting roles. Basquiat is a wonderful film about the interesting life of an American artist.

4. Trainspotting:

You have probably heard enough about this film about heroin-addicted hooligans stealing and carousing about in Scotland. You might have also heard that it is a great movie.

From the Irvine Welsh story, director Danny Boyle and star Ewan MacGregor reunite after the first feature, the underrated 1994 Shallow Grave. MacGregor is amazing as Renton, the young man that wants to rid himself of his past, overcome his addiction and live his life. It's sick, it's funny, it's abusive. Simply put: it's great.

5. Welcome to the Dollhouse:

As the Sundance Film Festival winner, Dollhouse was sure to make its mark on the art house circuit. Director Todd Solondz shows the story of an unpopular geek in the eighth grade without getting sappy with sympathy.

Heather Matarazzo is great as Dawn Wiener, unaffectionately known by her peers as "Wiener Dog." Dawn is beaten up and harassed by her classmates. Solondz characterizes her in such a way that, however twisted it sounds, she deserves it. The film is full of dark humor that almost creates an air of unease. Solondz finds your buttons and pushes them in a fine directorial debut.

back

continued from page 10-B

ably sold over 100,000 copies, nearly unheard of for a new label.

After recording two well received albums on Elektra the band hired a backing band for their successful album, John Henry.

Early next month, Elektra will release their latest effort, Factory Showroom. Linnell mentioned that the band heavily uses horn and string arrangements on the album. But the band has also thrown in plenty of quirky numbers that their fans have grown to love.

Interestingly, their tune "I Can Hear You" was recorded last year using a non-electrical antique method of recording at the Edison Museum in New Jersey. The band performed into giant cones which funnelled the music directly to a needle that cut the groove onto a wax cylinder. Not surprisingly the sound is great. Call the club at 584-0610 for more information. Quality is terrible.

Tonight the band returns to the Iron Horse and Linnell expects the show to feature several tracks off the new album, including the album's first track, "SEXXY" as well as lots of older material. Sounds like another ruckus night in the Valley with They Might Be Giants.

They Might Be Giants perform at the Iron Horse Musical Hall tonight at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. The show is all ages.

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St.
Northampton, MA
Tel .584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigarrettes
Pipes: Peterson, Merrschaum, Stanwell, Charatan
Bulk Pipe Tobacco
Cigar Humidors
Prop: Vin Dimuri
Open 7 Days

FINE YARNS & NEEDLEWORK SUPPLIES
The Creative Needle
COME IN AND BROWSE
Welcome Class of 2000
• wool, blends, acrylic yarns
• over 300 knitting/crochet pattern books
• over 350 needlework pattern books
• needlework kits & supplies
The Carriage Shop
233 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA 01002
413-549-6106

CAMPAIGN JOBS for the ENVIRONMENT
$60-$80/DAY
Part-time/Full-time
Work with MASSPIRG to stop pollution.
Flexible schedule for students.
Fun, casual atmosphere.
Call Terri at 256-6434.

Throughout your college years, make A.J. Hastings your headquarters for SCHOOL SUPPLIES!
Count on us for everything from your first freshman notebook to your final thesis paper... plus all those years of pens, pencils, paper clips, typewriter ribbons, etc., in-between!
SPECIAL
Bring us your used Hewlett-Packard Ink Jet cartridge #51626A, 51629A, or 51633A and we will give you $1.50 off the price of a new one.
A.J. Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant St. • 253-2840
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 5 p.m.
VISA MasterCard

L.B.G.A.
(Lesbian, Bi-Sexual, Gay, Alliance)
Weekly info socials every Tues. 7pm
Campus Center Rm. 803
for more info call 545-0154 or stop by our Student Union office
Sponsored by:
The Grotto
Look in the weeks ahead for the L.B.G.A.'s first dance at the Grotto.
Mon. Sept. 23rd or Mon. Oct. 27th

great scores...
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
Kaplan helps you focus your test prep study where you need it most. We'll show you the proven skills and test-taking techniques that help you get a higher score.
great skills...
Kaplan has the most complete arsenal of test prep tools available. From videos to software to virtual reality practice tests with computerized analysis to great teachers who really care, nobody offers you more ways to practice.
1-800-KAP-TEST
get a higher score
KAPLAN

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL & PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION
PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION UMA
FREE TRIAL CLASSES
MUSIC • ACTING • DANCE
SEPTEMBER 9-13
CALL: PAD (413) 545-0519 • 73 BARTLETT HALL • UMASS

Life . . . Liberty . . . Happiness.
Marfan Syndrome Association 1-800-862-7327

Always in Bloom
Flowers for all the times that are important to you.
Fresh • Silk • Dried
220 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
(413) 253-5545
World Wide Delivery
major credit cards accepted

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES: Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles • Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus • Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS: Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step • Boxercise • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST SO. AMHERST 256-0080

COUPON COUPON COUPON COUPON
CAPTAIN VIDEO
549-6016
19 MONTAGUE ROAD NORTH AMHERST
BETWEEN PUFFER'S POND & QUIGLEY FARMS
OPEN MON-THURS 10AM-9PM
FRI, SAT 10AM-11PM, SUN 12-9PM
ONE COUPON PER CUSTOMER PER DAY
2 MOVIES for 3$
CANNOT BE COMBINED WITH OTHER OFFERS • ONLY 1 NEW RELEASE

Film! Music! Theater! Dance! Visual Art!
September 20th can be the day your dreams come true!
Call the UMass Arts Council to find out more at 545-0202.

it
computers
students can use
OIT (the Office of Information Technologies) supports computing for students and faculty on the UMass campus.
• to use OIT's host computers (running UNIX or OpenVMS), you need a traditional OIT host computer account
• to use graphical web browsers from your own computer, you need a UMAccess account
• to use PCs or Macs in OIT's computer classrooms, and/or to use OIT's printers, you need an OIT sticker on your UMass ID
You can use any or all of these services for a fee of $20 per semester.
How do I get an account or sticker?
That depends on whether you've used OIT services before or not...
• If you have never had an OIT or UMAccess account, nor had an OIT sticker on your ID, take your UMass ID to the Campus Center room 165-169
  • on September 5, 6, 9, 10, or 11 – between 9 am and 5 pm
  • on September 12 – between 9 am and noon
After noon on September 12th, take your ID to Lederle GRC room A109 any Monday – Friday, 9-5 – but beware, the line may be long!
• If you used an OIT or UMAccess account in spring 96, you don't need to stand in line anywhere! Simply log on using the same username and password and start using it. Logging on activates the account and you will be billed $20 later in the semester. You will need to go to Lederle GRC A109 to get a sticker on your ID if you want to use the OIT classrooms.
• If you had an OIT or UMAccess account but need to change something (get a new password, add a service, etc.), go to Lederle GRC room A107 Monday - Friday, 9-5.
• If you only need a sticker for your ID, go to Lederle GRC A109 to get a sticker on your ID if you want to use the OIT classrooms.
Questions?
call the HelpDesk at 545-9400
And, of course, the HelpDesk is open in Lederle lowrise room A109 to answer questions about using your account, computing, using the Web, etc.

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?
Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.
Come down today!

Where Music Is Magic!
Largest Selection
Records, Tapes, CD's & Videos
New, Used, Collectible & Rare
Buy, Sell & Trade
Open 7 Days
DISCOVERIES
1 Bound House Plaza Northampton
582-9908

AESTHETICS
HEALTHY SKIN
Deep pore cleansing, facials, lash and brow tinting, brow shaping, leg waxing.
34 Main St. Amherst, 253-9879

Forget the summer reruns; cable TV marathons sizzle

Tube Notes with Daniel Sullivan

Everything has a connection to the 1980s.

Cable television was perfected in the '80s. It is now as American as tag sales, barbecue cook-outs and lemonade stands. Living through the tube is the most risk-free, stress reducing activity as it brings the world into your house.

This summer, schedulers grabbed viewers with TV marathons.

An ACE (cable TV's award of excellence) should go to the person who thought up the "Facts of Life" marathon.

One of the best episodes of "Facts Of Life" was a desperate attempt to continue Natalie's (Mindy Cohen) career with a spin-off. The writers moved Natalie to New York City to advance her writing by soaking up city life. She roomed with two no-name women and two future leading men. Richard Grieco ("21 Jump Street") and David Spade ("Saturday Night Live") played a wannabe actor and pre-med student respectively. Its format was similar to "Friends," but was never picked up by any network.

For MTV buffs, "The Real World III" marathon and reunion show was nostalgic. Night after night, Judd was shot down by potential love interests. The best rejection line had to be "I'm getting married next week."

Alicia Silverstone cleaned up at MTV's movie awards. Silverstone won nearly every award that night, including most desirable, best hair and best guest appearance on "The Wonder Years," to name a few. Not bad for a high school drop-out.

"Singled Out" just doesn't work as a marathon. If Jenny McCarthy is annoying after five minutes, just imagine her after 15 episodes. Chris Hardwick's one liners are great. He actually listens to the stupid answers contestants give and no one has escaped his sarcasm.

Flipping the channel, VH1's summer marathon coverage of Jewel was precious. Her video came out a year ago, but she is finally getting the over-play that bands in the '80s craved. VH1 is cashing in on their close relationship with her. They found her before MTV and kissed her butt for interviews prior to her new-found market appeal. Every third video had Jewel singing in a public bathroom.

The "History of Music Videos A–Z" was fun. VH1 alphabetized the videos, threw out the really bad ones and aired the rest for the Independence Day weekend. The marathon featured over an hour and half of Madonna and ended with Santa Claus wannabes ZZ Top.

If you missed it, the best snippet of the four–day anthology started with a cheer "Mickey" by Tony Basil and her five pounds of make–up. Others included were The Beach Boys pretending to be cool with "Kokomo" and the Belle Stars with "Iko, Iko," both tunes from Cocktail.

Comedy Central saluted Andrew McCarthy with the McCarthy Era. I didn't have the channel, so I missed his hits, such as Pretty in Pink, as well as the bad ones — which includes anything after Weekend at Bernie's. His best acting performance was as a 17 year–old advice writer caring for fellow orphans on a made–for–TV movie.

The Family Channel brought us Patrick Swayze's only decent movie without a 1960s setting or hit song — North and South, based on the trilogy by John Jakes. The Civil War era miniseries featured an all–star cast, including Elizabeth Taylor and Kirstie Alley. It was a superb alternative to those looking to avoid the sappy Olympics coverage on NBC.

OK, I'll admit it, the Road Rules Marathon hooked me.

Daniel Sullivan is a Collegian staff member.

Sex–crazed "Brady Bunch" hits the theaters

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

A VERY BRADY SEQUEL
Directed by Arlene Sanford with Shelley Long, Gary Cole, Christine Taylor
Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

Judging by the success of the first Brady revival film, The Brady Bunch Movie, we knew that it was much more than a hunch that this group would one day have a second outing — hence, A Very Brady Sequel.

Still stuck in their own little psychedelic world where the '70s never ended, the Bradys bring a whole new meaning to the word "retro." On top of all the anachronistic humor that polyester pantsuits and lovebeads provide, the Brady Sequel is generously laden with sexual innuendo and hilarious moments that never would have made it past the censors on the television series.

In fact, the new twist on "The Brady Bunch" makes you wonder if the show was actually that raunchy, but you were just too young or naive to catch it on those timeless re–runs.

Despite the fact that the first movie incorporated almost every famous "Brady Bunch" plot, the sequel manages to dust off a few more — including the family trip to Hawaii with the cursed tiki doll and the tarantula. Whatever is lacking from the original material though, the screenwriters certainly are not afraid to enhance, or downright make up.

The saintly matriarch Carol (once again played by Shelley Long) is caught in a moral dilemma when her first husband, (Tim Matheson) with whom she spawned the three girls with hair of gold, comes back from the dead. We know, however, that he's only using her to get his hands on an artifact that's worth $20 million.

The film gets the most comic mileage off the sexually charged relationship between Greg (Christopher Daniel Barnes) and Marsha (Christine Taylor). Sibling rivalry turns incestual when Greg and Marsha argue over who gets to turn the attic into his or her own "groovy pad," and they wind up sharing it.

COURTESY CLAUDETTE BARIUS

A Very Brady Sequel spins some new tales on America's most lovable family.

The middle child syndrome is also a strong subplot, as the whiny Jan (Jennifer Elise Cox) tries to get out of Marsha's shadow by creating a boyfriend named "George Glass."

A Very Brady Sequel is not recommended for people who are not familiar with the show, however. Much of the cross– generational satire would be lost on someone who knows nothing about Marsha's "Oh, my nose" episode, or Greg's alter ego, "Johnny Bravo." One thing's for sure, though — for a film about sex, drugs and alternative lifestyles, don't look towards the depressing melodramas of the '90s. Tune in to the Brady Bunch. B+

■ FAC

continued from page 6

The annual Festival of Lights, featuring extravagantly dressed dancers, hypnotic music and twinkling lights will take place on Nov. 2. Included in the performance will be the "Court of Heavenly Beings," featuring the deities of Indian culture.

New WORLD Theater presents a variety of multicultural performances throughout the year, including workshops and artists in residences.

The Theater kicks off its season on Sept. 20 with Milk Of Amnesia, a one woman play about a young Cuban girl's assimilation into American culture.

The Off–Center series begins on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 with a double bill that will feature Pioneer Valley natives Jim Colemen and Theresa Freedman. Body of Work, a new multimedia presentation by the popular Everett Dance Theater will be presented on Nov. 7 and 8.

The best part about checking out shows at the FAC is that they are inexpensive.

If you're looking for something more than the traditional keg party or the movies, try the FAC. There truly is something for everyone.

Work for the COLLEGIAN
Positions in every department are available!
Call 545-3500 or visit us at 113 Campus Center

HOWARD JOHNSON.
THE PERFECT PLACE TO STAY WHEN VISITING THE PIONEER VALLEY

- 1996 Howard Johnson "Gold Medal" Winner
- AAA, Corporate & Family Rates
- Swimming Pool & Free HBO
- 100% Satisfaction Guarantee

401 Russell St. • Route 9
Amherst - Hadley
(Centrally Located 2 Miles From UMass, 4 Miles East of I-91)
(413) 586-0114

CENTRALLY LOCATED TO ALL 5 COLLEGES

In Room Coffee • Color Cable TV
Large Renovated Rooms With Double Beds
Non-Smoking Rooms Available
Family Rate Avalible
(413) 256-8111
345 North Pleasant Street, Route 116, Amherst
Near The University, Amherst College, Hampshire College, Mt. Holyoke and Smith College
Only 1 block from downtown Amherst, Massachusetts
University Lodge
Charm • Comfort • Convenience

WELCOME BACK UMASS STUDENTS!
WE'RE RIGHT AROUND THE CORNER!
Big Y SUPERMARKET
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE
BayBank Xpress 24
NYCE
YANKEE 24
PHONE: 256-1191
Store Hours: 7am–10pm Mon.–Sat. 8am–9pm Sun.

CollegianSports

Back to School Fall 1996

Inside this issue:

UMASS' OLYMPIC STARS (See page 1-C)
TENNIS (See pg. 6-C)
WOMEN'S SOCCER (See pg 2-C)
VOLLEYBALL (See pg. 7-C)
MEN'S SOCCER (See pg. 3-C)
MEN'S WATER POLO (See pg. 8-C)
FIELD HOCKEY (See pg. 4-C)
MEN'S BASKETBALL (See pg. 9-C)
FOOTBALL (See pg. 5-C)
CROSS COUNTRY (See pg. 10-C)

Camby subject of investigation, Flint takes helm

■ Bruiser talks of transition period for Minutemen

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

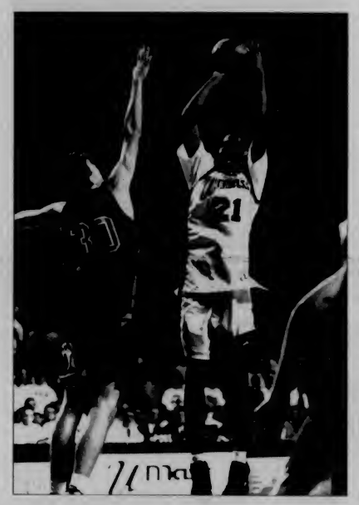
When you left the University of Massachusetts in the spring, the men's basketball team was still riding a wave of success following a 35–2 season highlighted with a Final Four appearance. The only question to be asked was, "What NBA team will consensus National Player of the Year Marcus Camby be strutting his stuff for?"

But by early June, additional questions arose when The Hartford Courant broke a story stating that West Hartford agent Wesley Spears reportedly gave Camby a diamond–studded necklace bearing his jersey number (21) and agent John Lounsbury of Signature Sports doled out, "a couple of thousand [dollars]," to the former UMass center before his junior year.

In the subsequent months, an investigative committee was formed by the University to determine whether or not the school was responsible for Camby's actions. If the committee were to find evidence that UMass was negligent in any way or had knowledge of Camby's actions, an NCAA investigation would be launched and punitive action would be taken.

"The University will conduct its own investigation," said UMass Assistant Athletic Director for Compliance, Jeff O' Malley. "It will be forwarded to the chancellor who will review it, and then the chancellor will forward it to the NCAA. At that time, the NCAA will make the determination whether or not we [UMass] find ourselves at fault or not. They will make the determination whether or not they want to do any follow up work on the case."

O'Malley stated that if the NCAA is comfortable with the UMass investigation, they may do very little. If the NCAA were to continue the investigation, it is too early to determine what, if any, penalties the school would be faced with. O'Malley could not comment further on the investigation until the committee concludes its investigation sometime in the beginning of the month.



"It really depends on what shakes out," O'Malley said. "If it's found out that we did use an ineligible player, it could be something like forfeiture of the NCAA tournament games and the returning of some of the money (earned in post season play). Beyond that, it goes into whether or not we were at fault or not."

The NCAA has specific regulations for collegiate athletes dealing with agents which are as clear as the black and white in which they appear in the organization's official rule book. The NCAA's general rule of agents as it appears in section 12.3.1 states, "An individual shall be ineligible for participation in an intercollegiate sport if he or she ever has agreed (orally or in writing) to be represented by an agent for the purpose of marketing his or her athletics ability or reputation in that sport."

As O'Malley clarifies, "A student athlete cannot make an oral or written agreement with an agent to represent them even after their eligibility is done. Whether you sign on the dotted line or make an oral agreement, it's still a violation."

In section 12.3.1.2 titled "Benefits from Prospective Agents" the NCAA

Turn to CAMBY, page 9-C

COLLEGIAN FILE

Marcus Camby passed up his senior year to enter the NBA draft this past June. He was picked second overall by the Toronto Raptors.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

James "Bruiser" Flint

How do you follow in the footsteps of a coach like John Calipari?

"It's a tough job, but somebody's got to do it and they chose me," said new Massachusetts men's basketball coach James "Bruiser" Flint.

In the wake of all that has taken place with the UMass basketball team this summer, Flint has quietly taken the helm of a program formerly coached by one of the most charismatic coaches in NCAA history. However, Flint does not feel pressured to coach any differently than he has in the past.

"I'm just going to go out there and do what I learned throughout the years as an assistant. Prepare myself to go out there and do the best job that I can," Flint said. "That's all I can do. I can't go out there and try to be John Calipari or anybody like that. I've got to go out there and prepare the team the best I can, work as hard as I can, and give it all I got to continue the success of this program."

At 31 years of age, Flint is the youngest active head coach in Div. I basketball, and has had a successful coaching history behind him. In his seven years as an assistant coach, the Minutemen have never suffered a losing season, advancing to the NCAA Tournament the past five seasons in a row, and the NIT the two years before that. In his seven year tenure, UMass has recorded the fourth most victories in the nation.

Flint graduated from St. Joseph's University in 1987 where he was a four year letter winner for the Hawks' basketball team. In his senior season, Flint earned second team all–conference honors while leading his team to the Atlantic 10 championship and an NCAA Tournament appearance.

Upon graduating from St. Joseph's, Flint spent two seasons as an assistant coach and assistant athletic director at Coppin State College in Baltimore, Md. In 1989, he joined the UMass program and become a driving force in bringing the Minutemen into the national spotlight.

"My goal wasn't to be an assistant for the rest of my life," Flint said. "My goal was, at some point in time, to become the coach of my own program. I felt as though my time was coming, but I never thought I'd be at UMass."

Players and fans alike were relieved to find out that

Turn to FLINT, page 9-C

UMass represented at Olympic Games

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

As athletes from around the world gathered in Atlanta this summer to compete in the Centennial Olympic Games, several sports had strong ties to the University of Massachusetts sports community.

Four field hockey players, a women's soccer player, two basketball players, and a gymnastics coach made up the Minuteman delegation in Georgia.

Brianna Scurry allowed only three goals in her women's soccer team's five games, en route to the gold medal. The former Minutewomen goalie holds the UMass career record for saves (368) and the single season record for shutouts (15).

Scurry was quoted in the Olympic preview issue of Sports Illustrated as saying that if her team won the gold medal she would streak through the site of the soccer venues, Athens, Ga. She made good on her promise, making a 30 yard sprint wearing nothing but her medal.

Gymnastics coach Steve Nunno also got a taste of gold, as his protegee Shannon Miller captured the top place in the individual balance beam to complement her team gold.

Nunno was a four–year letter winner on the UMass men's gymnastic's team. Although he holds no school records, Nunno has gone on to a successful coaching career, including teaching Miller, the most decorated U.S. gymnast of all time.

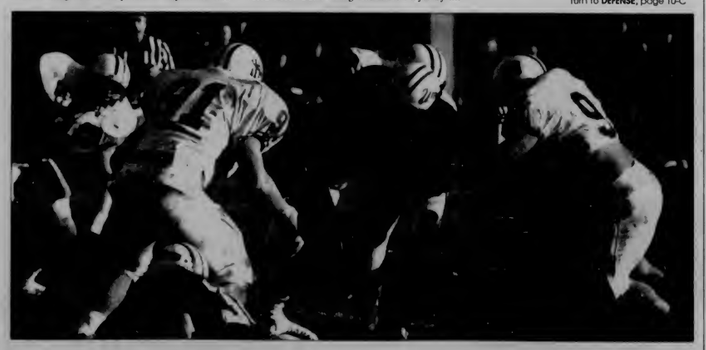
There were no medals for field hockey coach Pam Hixon and former

Turn to OLYMPICS, page 4-C

Reimer, Samuel key to UMass defense

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

There's a saying in sports that we've all heard a million times: offense wins games, defense wins championships. Sometimes cliches can seem antiquated, but for the 1996 Massachusetts football team, this old cliche holds the key to success.



Despite concerns at quarterback, the Minutemen are expected to hold their own on the offensive side of things. But if they want to improve on last year's 6–5 mark and take home a Yankee Conference championship, they need to answer questions on the other side of the ball.

Any discussion of the Minutemen defense begins with the linebacking corps, particularly senior All–American candidate, Justin Riemer. Last year the New Jersey native led the Yankee Conference in both total tackles (150) and solo tackles (95), and was selected first team All–Conference and first team All–New England. In addition, Reimer was voted Most Outstanding Defensive Player by his teammates.

"It's a nice place to start when you return the leading tackler in the conference," Massachusetts football coach Mike Hodges said. "He has trained very hard in the off season, and with the experience factor from last year, we expect big things from him in the fall."

Another star in the making is sophomore outside linebacker Khari Samuel, who ranked second on

Turn to DEFENSE, page 10-C

COLLEGIAN FILE

Quarterback Anthony Catterton will be called on to run the Minuteman offense this year for the UMass football team.

UMass' deep squad: Lynch, Myers lead

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

The tradition continues...

From NCAA Final Four appearances to being perennially at the top of eastern collegiate soccer, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team is used to being considered a front–runner. This fall they will be looking to top last year's performance (14–4–2) as A–10 champions and move once again on to the hallowed ground of the Sweet Sixteen. Head coach Jim Rudy's preferred on field strategy is a possession game, but unfortunately there are some things that you can not hold on to forever. With the loss of last season's leading scorer Rachel LeDuc to graduation, her position as head of the offense is the one spot that inherently needs to be filled. The good news is that the rest of Rudy's side is in fine shape, as at every other position the Minutewomen are deep in returning talent.

Goalkeeper: At the opposite end of the pitch, the last line of defense is a strong spot once again for the Minutewomen. They return one of the premier keepers in the East, if not the country, in junior Danielle Dion (41 GP–41 GS, 0.72 GAA, 17 shutouts). With an improved vertical jump and quickness, Dion has not sat on her laurels, and is in a solid position to continue her past dominance in A–10 competition (0.26 GAA).

One of the possible reasons that the two–time first team All–Atlantic 10 selection has improved in her preseason training sessions is the addition of freshman keeper Angie Napoli from Longmeadow.

"It is quite a relief, because during last year we basically camouflaged the fact that we had only one keeper by dressing other people for games, warmups and what not," Rudy said. "We got through it with Danielle basically playing the whole season except for ten minutes.

"I think Danielle is very happy to have her around as well, because they push each other, and it is nice to have that," Rudy added.

Defense: As the old saying goes, defense wins championships, and the returning triumvirate of senior All– American Erin Lynch, junior All–Atlantic 10 selection Erica Iverson and sophomore Amanda Thompson were one of the main reasons for last season's success. Rudy is encouraged by all three players' preseason fitness levels, but by her own play Lynch (55 GP–52 GS, 33 points) stands out as the marquee player of this team's defense, which in combination with Dion, allowed just 15 goals last season.

Turn to SOCCER, page 2-C

Women's Soccer

Fierce non–conference foes, wimpy A–10 awaits

COLLEGIAN FILE

Senior Erin Lynch will lead the women's soccer team as she vies for her third straight Atlantic 10 Player of the Year award.

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

A potpourri schedule will guide the Massachusetts women's soccer team through the colorful New England fall, and into tournament time this season.

The slate is laden with the usual stumbling blocks — national powers ranging from Connecticut to Texas A&M. Coach Jim Rudy's schedules generally contain many potential land mines.

While 1996 will see the Minutewomen face tough squads, it will, against Rudy's wishes, also have to feature matches against enough cream puffs to put Hostess out of business.

This season, the Atlantic 10 has opted to expand conference play from just within its East and West divisions, to include cross–over matches. Unfortunately, with the exception of a few good teams at the top, the Atlantic 10, full of young, underfunded programs, is the CBA of women's collegiate soccer. The added games serve little purpose to the Minutewomen except to pad stats, and weaken their strength of schedule rating at NCAA selection time.

With this in mind, the annual UMass/Reebok Classic has been loaded to include No. 3 Connecticut, 1995 Final Four participant SMU and a strong young Georgia squad, led by coach Bill Barker, that will turn heads.

"There's four great teams," Rudy said of the field. "It's got the makings to be one of the best early tournaments."

After home matches with UC–Santa Barbara and St. Bonaventure, the Hartford Hawks return to Richard F. Garber Field for the first time since last year's NCAA opening round match, where they fell following a Rachel LeDuc goal with 1.4 seconds remaining in double overtime.

Hartford will have a new look this year, losing Danish International midfielder Irene Stelling and forward Jessica Reifer among others. Perhaps the Hawks' biggest loss is well–respected coach Austin Daniels who took the University of Colorado job over the summer.

"We'll be happy to see them again," Rudy said. "We like playing Hartford. That's one game that I know that we're always up for."

While Hartford will look to avenge its NCAA loss on Sept. 21, on Oct. 19 the Minutewomen will look to avenge theirs when they travel to UConn, site of a 3–0 NCAA Sweet 16 drubbing.

Unlike their New England rivals, the Huskies suffered minimal graduation losses, and might have gotten even stronger with a solid recruiting crop by 15th year coach Len Tsantiris.

"UConn really is the same team," Rudy said. "They're big, strong and aggressive. They probably did the best job on us defensively, [better] than anyone's ever done. They minimalized us getting it anywhere near the goal. I was very impressed. It's a challenge to beat UConn."

The other non–conference highlight will be a November homecoming trip for Erin Lynch, Julie Magid and Amanda Thompson, as the Minutewomen travel deep into the heart of Texas for a tournament at Texas A&M. UMass will face a strong George Mason squad, and then either the host Aggies or UNC–Greensboro in a good pre–Atlantic 10 and NCAA tournaments tune–up.

The Aggies made their first NCAA appearance last year, but were downed by the Minutewomen 2–1 at Garber Field in last year's UMass Classic in one of the season's most tightly contested matches.

As for the A–10 slate, the most anticipated match will be in Amherst when the Minutewomen face the Temple Owls on Oct. 26: On a fluke goal in the 90th minute, Temple beat UMass 1–0 in Philadelphia last year, becoming the first school to ever beat the Minutewomen in a conference match, regular or postseason.

Temple coach Seamus McWilliams employed a bunker defensive formation in the contest, which worked perfectly. Cramming as many as 10 players inside the penalty area, the Minutewomen had no open lanes to penetrate the Owl walls for a clean shot on goal. Rudy is prepared to counter the "Temple of Doom" this year.

"Seamus said already that he's going to play the same bunker defense and lock up the shop, close the doors," Rudy said. "Rumor has it that this year he's bringing shovels, pitch forks, barbed wire and machine gun placements. We'll be prepared for the bunker though."

Another A–10 match that always bears watching will be played on Oct. 6, when UMass travels to Washington, D.C. to face the Colonial Women of George Washington, the preseason pick to win the A–10's Western Division.

While UMass is hosting a handfull of exciting games this season, they will not be hosting an event they have in the past. After spending the past two years in the Pioneer Valley, the A–10 Tournament will be played at Rhode Island.

Women's Soccer

Aug. 31 FAIRFIELD (at Agawam, Ma)	7:00 p.m.
Sept. 6–8 UMASS/REEBOK CLASSIC
Sept. 6 GEORGIA	4:30 p.m.
Sept. 8 S.M.U.	2:15 p.m.
Sept. 14 UC SANTA BARB.	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 15 ST. BONAVENTURE*	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 21 HARTFORD	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 24 at Rhode Island*	4:00 p.m.
Sept. 28 ST. JOSEPH'S*	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 4 at LaSalle*	4:30 p.m.
Oct. 6 at Geo. Wash.*	2:00 p.m.
Oct. 12 at Wright State	12:00 p.m.
Oct. 15 DARTMOUTH	3:30 p.m.
Oct. 19 at Connecticut	3:30 p.m.
Oct. 21 at Fordham*	2:00 p.m.
Oct. 26 TEMPLE*	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 27 DUQUESNE*	2:00 p.m.
Nov. 1–3 Texas A&M Tourney (at College Station, TX)
Nov. 1 George Mason	1:30 p.m.
Nov. 3 Texas A&M or UNC Greens.	11a.m./1:30 p.m.
Nov. 9–10 Atlantic 10 Championship (at Kingston, R.I.)
Nov. 15–17 NCAA First Round
Nov. 22–24 NCAA Second Round
Nov. 29–30 NCAA Quarterfinals
Dec. 6–8 NCAA Semi's and Finals (at Santa Clara, Ca)

*Atlantic 10
Home games played at Garber Field
Head Coach: Jim Rudy

■ soccer

continued from page 1

"Lynch is a big–time player, and one of the best in the country," Rudy said. "You do not recognize that until someone says 'stop looking at the game, and look at Erin Lynch and how she plays the game.'"

There are some questions remaining, though, as the team has to fill the left back position vacated by the graduation of Nikki Ahrenholz in their four defender scheme. Sophomore defender Meghan Brennan will not play this season due to recurring illness, and will be red shirted.

Midfield: The strongest spot of the UMass lineup is the midfield, as the Minutewomen return four starters.

The depth of this midfield is like the Mississippi, and starts with senior All–Atlantic 10 selection Rebecca Myers (54 GP–52 GS, 78 points). Riding the peak of her appearance in this summer's Olympics, Rudy has already noticed the effect it has had on her overall training regimen.

"Rebecca is training harder than ever before, with a lot of extra intensity during the training sessions," Rudy said. "She and Smith, Iverson, Lynch and [Tara] Tokarchik have really raised the intensity level of our training, which is one of our goals. When we train harder, we play harder, and they have certainly done that."

After Myers, there is no drop–off in talent as seniors Julie Magid, Amy Powell, Tina Lightning and Sandy Shimogaki return for their final seasons. Along with junior Liz Rutherford, and sophomore Sara Hill, who has bounced back from an ACL injury suffered last season, the list of midfielders is deep.

"We have returning depth," Rudy said. "And we have added two midfield type players (freshmen Tara Tokarchik and Robin Smith) to our roster in anticipation that five of them are seniors."

Forwards: To wrap up the Minutewomen lineup for this season, you have to start from the beginning. Losing LeDuc's inimitable scoring touch has its effect, but Rudy has faced this problem in the recent past with success.

"When we faced the 1995 season, we had to deal with the loss of our leading scorer in Nicole Roberts," Rudy said. "So, the question was 'who is going to score the goals?'

"What happened was Rachel LeDuc stepped up, with a good supporting cast, but she was the one that scored 18 goals. So, that is the question again this year."

Basically, until two of his prospects emerge as standouts, for Rudy this position will be a "forward–by–committee." The return of sophomore Karin Johnson gives a look of experience, while junior transfer Samantha Frank, and incoming freshmen Emma Kurowski and Kate Webb, will all be looked at for front–runner status.

The Collegian is NOW HIRING
Positions Open:
- Librarian
- Staff Artist
- Systems Manager
- Asst. to Managing Editor

Attention Students
NEW At THE CLUB
Tennis and Fitness Complex
659 Amherst Rd. (Rt. 116)
549-3638
3 miles from campus on the bus line.

PLAN FOR SPRING BREAK
V.I.P. Student Memberships!
Buy a year membership for $319 and you'll get round trip airfare for two!
Choose from FLORIDA, HAWAII, BAHAMAS, OR CANCUN

CAMSTAR CIRCUIT AND NAUTILUS
Newly redesigned fitness area!
12 Machine circuit program
20+ Nautilus machines & Abs station

INTRODUCING THE SLIDE
Just one of the great additions to our NEW aerobics programs.

CARDIOVASCULAR
Brand New Equipment
7 Treadmills • 4 Stairmasters
4 Exercycles • 1 Rower

FREE WEIGHTS
Brand New
Cross over Cable Machine
A large variety of dumbells barweights • benches
Squat rack

Some Restrictions Apply.
There's a lot of NEW going on at THE CLUB!
Campus Get Away !!!

JOIN TODAY!
V.I.P. Membership.....$319 (with tickets)
One semester$145.....(tickets not included)
Two semesters$245...(tickets not included)

Welcome Back to Mike's
A Unique Bar With Great Prices Food & Fun
Mike's Westview
Mike's Westview Welcomes Back Our Students with our great fall Beer Bargains 16 oz.
Natural Lite $1.00
Bud Lite $1.50
Bud $1.50
Also, our Cocktail of the Week $1.50
Monday Night
Free Buffet During Football
Wednesday Nite
Our Famous Raffel Nite with Mike's Tee Shirts Mad Money & other special prizes
Thursday Nite
9:00 to 10:00
Party Nite
Free Hourdoves
Saturday Nite
5:00 - 8:00
Mike's Roast Beef Schmorg
Come pile up your plate for $2.00

Men's Soccer

No. 20 UMass looks to avenge championship loss

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

"You're never satisfied when you lose in the finals," said Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch of last year's 5–2 loss to Rhode Island in the Atlantic 10 Championship.

After finishing the 1995 campaign with a record of 15–5–2 and a second place showing in the A–10 Tournament, Koch and his crew hope to claim the No. 1 spot in the conference as they did in 1994.

"If anything it's a good motivation factor for this year, to make sure we're back there [in the finals]. Our goal is to win it this year," Koch said.

With last year's two leading scorers, senior All–American candidate Dave Siljanovski and junior Mike Butler returning to lead the offense, firepower will be the strongest aspect of the Minutemen's game.

Siljanovski is one of the all–time great assist men in school history. With the single–season (17) and career (22) records for assists, it was no wonder that he was a national leader in points and assists last season, and just the guy you want setting up an offensive force like Butler. One of the A–10's premier finishers, Butler ended the season with 11 goals and 30 points.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Mike Butler will lead the offense of a men's soccer team that looks to capture an A-10 title.

"Those two guys [Siljanovski and Butler] are our two best finishers," Koch said. "They are outstanding, and I expect them to do what they did last year if not more this year."

The Minutemen will miss the dedicated play of last year's senior co–captain Brad Miller, who was not only an offensive force, but a team leader on the field as well. Hoping to fill the void left by Miller and add some more depth to the University of Massachusetts' front line is UNC– Charlotte transfer Rob Cairo. With excellent ball control and a knack for setting up plays, Cairo could prove to be the squad's third offensive threat. Sophomore Paul Corcoran, who boasts the strongest shot on the team, may see time as either a forward or midfielder.

If there's one word that best describes the Minutemen's midfield, it's depth and as Koch puts it simply, "Midfield is our strength."

Sophomores Scott Regina and Jake Brodsky will use their strong ball handling skills to control play and set up the offense. Senior midfielder and Amherst native, Tashi Tshering, rounds out the attacking midfielders. Tshering will likely push the pace for UMass, utilizing his speed to penetrate opponents' defense.

The defensive aspect of the midfield will be controlled by sophomore Brad Kurowski. Along with Kurowski, senior Joe Jacobson will see some time at defensive midfield, as well as marking back. Jacobson, the team's most tenacious defender, will most likely be matched up with the opponent's leading offensive threat.

In addition to Jacobson, the backs will be lead by senior Dan Chagnon along with sophomore Jon Hanna, junior Fabio Maniatty and perhaps junior Tobias Bremke.

"Defensively, we need to be a little more compact and a little better organized in making sure everybody understands their role," Koch said.The final piece of the puzzle has yet to be determined. Who will mind the net behind Jacobson and company? With the graduation of keeper Eric Gruber last year, the Minutemen do not have a time tested man between the posts. Sophomore Jeff Jablonski and redshirt freshman Tim Pearson will likely compete for the starting spot. Sophomore Todd Fowler may make a bid for the keeper spot as well.

"Tim and Jeff are going to be fighting for that number one spot," Koch said. "But I think Todd has really come on. He's closed the gap considerably in the spring."

This year's talented squad was ranked No. 20 in the nation in the Soccer News preseason poll. UMass' first ever national ranking. In addition, the team finished second in the A–10 behind GW in a preseason coaches poll. However, preseason accolades will have to stand the test of time.

According to Koch, this is one of the toughest schedules he has comprised in his five years at the helm for the Minutemen, facing six top 20 teams.

Massachusetts' three game exhibition series consisted of three potential NCAA Tournament teams (No. 17 Boston College, No. 7 Brown and No. 2 Duke, who took to the field in last year's National Championship). UMass kicks off the regular season with local powerhouse Boston University on Sept. 7. Later in the season, they face No. 3 out any of the other A–10 teams. Koch cites Virginia Tech, George Washington and Xavier as potential A–10 Tourney teams. However, with schools like LaSalle, Duquesne and Dayton — which has hired its first full time coaching staff — the A–10 is clearly an up and coming conference.

MEN'S SOCCER

Aug. 31 DUKE (exhibition) (at Chicopee, Ma)	7:00 p.m.
Sept. 7 at Boston University	7:00 p.m.
Sept. 10 at Holy Cross	3:00 p.m.
Sept. 14 at Maine	11:00 am
Sept. 18 NEW HAMPSHIRE	3:30 p.m.
Sept. 22 at South Carolina	2:00 p.m.
Sept. 24 HARTFORD	3:30 p.m.
Sept. 27 ST. JOSEPH'S*	3:30 p.m.
Sept. 29 at Temple*
Oct. 4 at Virginia Tech*	3:30 p.m.
Oct. 6 at Geo. Wash.*	2:00 p.m.
Oct. 11 DAYTON*	3:30 p.m.
Oct. 13 XAVIER*	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 18 at Fordham*	3:00 p.m.
Oct. 20 at LaSalle*	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 25 ST. BONAVENTURE*	3:00 p.m.
Oct. 27 DUQUESNE*	1:00 p.m.
Nov. 2 at Rhode Island*	1:00 p.m.
Nov. 8–10 A–10 Championship (at Dayton, OH)
Nov. 24 NCAA First Round
Dec. 1 NCAA Second Round
Dec. 8 NCAA Quarterfinals
Dec. 13–15 NCAA Semi's, Finals (at Richmond, Va.)

*Atlantic 10
Home games played at Garber Field
Head Coach: Sam Koch

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

last chance to prepare for the October test
GRE
Last class begins on: September 9th!!
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
*GRE is a registered trademark of the Educational Testing Service.

Andy's Pizza Savings!!!
Clip this coupon for
2 Dinners for $10.50
plus tax
256-8147 256-8148

PHOTOGRAPHERS NEEDED!
take pictures
Mass Daily Collegian several paid positions available.
contact Liz Brow
@ the Coll

Welcome Back
chili's GRILL & BAR
Rt. 9 Hadley
Happy Hour
Mon-Fri
4pm-7pm
Good Food, Drink and Fun!

Over 25 Aerobic Classes with Certified Instructors
Nordic Track • Stairclimbers • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Trotter Circuit Weight Training • Free-Weights
THE NEWEST FACILITIES...
THE BEST VALUE...
TOTALLY CONVENIENT
Kinetics ADULT FITNESS
2 MONTHS $75!
Located At IRSPORTS FAMILY FUN & FITNESS
4 MONTHS $129!
317 Russell St. (Rt. 9) Hadley, MA
586-0633
Basketball & Volleyball Court • Open Court Time

Field Hockey

Experience the key as Hixon, Rose return to team

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

After two years away from the program to serve as the United States National team coach, Massachusetts field hockey coach Pam Hixon is back on her home field.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Senior Kyle Rothenberger and the UMass field hockey have a tough road ahead as they attempt to make the NCAA tournament once again.

Inexperience played a key role in the Minutewomen's uncharacteristic 7–13 record, but the return of Hixon and goaltender Hilary Rose, combined with a year under the belts of many players, should provide for a stronger UMass team.

Sophomores Kate Putnam and Erica Johnston will key the UMass attack as forwards. Putnam, last year's Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year, and Johnston both saw time in all 20 of the Minutewomen's games last year, each starting all but one game.

Also vying for a spot at forward is Saskia Fuchs. Though she is only a freshman, Fuchs has the credentials, having played on the Dutch national under–18 team.

Freshmen Christine Millbauer, who has played in the National Futures Tournament, and Nicole Bardell will join sophomore Kim Lamson and junior Courtney MacLean as others who will see time at forward. Lamson may also be used as a back, and MacLean will likely see most of her action in the midfield.

One thing is certain about the Minutewoman midfield: Kyle Rothenberger will be there. The senior All–American is UMass' top returning scorer and will anchor the team both offensively and defensively. Rothenberger stands as one of the Minutewomen's most potent offensive threats, combining passing skills with the ability to score.

MacLean will most likely join Rothenberger at midfield, and junior Amy Ott could split time between the midfield and sweeper. Sophomore Katherine McClellan will most likely see time as a midfielder, and Kerry Lyons, who walked onto the team as a freshman last year, may also be a candidate for time there.

Despite having graduated Andrea Cabral, the UMass backfield is a strong unit, returning several experienced players. Senior co–captain Melanie Gore, the most experienced of the backs, will likely be called upon to stop the opponent's top scoring threat.

Sharon Hughes and Laura Phelan are probable candidates to team with Gore. Others who will compete for time in the backfield are sophomores Jana Benscoter, Lamson, and McClellan.

Jen Gutzman and Amy Ott are the two who will see time at sweeper. Ott started in the spot for most of last season, but may also see time in the midfield. This summer Ott primarily played defense at the U.S. 'B' Camp. Gutzman made the switch from midfield to backfield last season, and should see most of her time there.

Hilary Rose returns to the UMass goal after taking last year off to play with the British national team. In her 40 career starts as a Minutewoman, Rose has recorded 26.5 shutouts. She led the nation in save percentage in her first two years, and in goals–against average as a freshman. Freshman Michelle Crooks will serve as Rose's back–up.

In addition to Hixon, whose U.S. team took fifth place at the Olympic Games in Atlanta, many members of the UMass squad padded their field hockey resumes over the summer. Rose joined Hixon in Atlanta, guiding Great Britain to a fourth place finish. Rothenberger, Putnam, Johnston and Ott all received invitations to the U.S. 'A' Camp after playing at the 'B' camp this summer. Hughes played at the 'B' camp as well.

Aug. 31 WAKE FOREST		(at Westfield State)	2:00 p.m.
(at Westfield State)	1:00 p.m.	Oct. 9 BOSTON UNIV.	3:30 p.m.
Sept. 7 at New Hampshire	2:00 p.m	Oct. 12 SYRACUSE	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 11 at Boston College	7:30 p.m.	Oct. 17 at Providence	3:30 p.m.
Sept. 14 James Madison		Oct. 19 at LaSalle*	1:00 p.m.
(at Iowa City, Iowa)	1:30 p.m.	Oct. 26 at Connecticut	12:00 p.m.
Sept. 15 Iowa or St. Louis	11:00 a.m.	Oct. 30 at Dartmouth	3:30 p.m.
(at Iowa City, Iowa)		Nov. 2 ST. JOSEPH'S	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 18 YALE	3:30 p.m.	Nov. 9–10 Atlantic 10 Championships
Sept. 22 Penn State		(at Philadelphia, Pa)
(at Storrs, Conn.)	12:00 p.m.	Nov. 14 NCAA First Round
Sept. 25 at Rhode Island*	3:30 p.m.	Nov. 17 NCAA Quarterfinals
Sept. 28 at Temple*	12:00 p.m.	Nov. 23–24 NCAA Semi's and Finals
Oct. 2 NORTHEASTERN	3:30 p.m.	(at Chestnut Hill, Mass.)
Oct. 5 NORTH CAROLINA		*Atlantic 10 Conference Games
(at Westfield State)	1:00 p.m.	Home games played at Totman Field
Oct. 6 WEST CHESTER		Head Coach: Pam Hixon

■ olympics

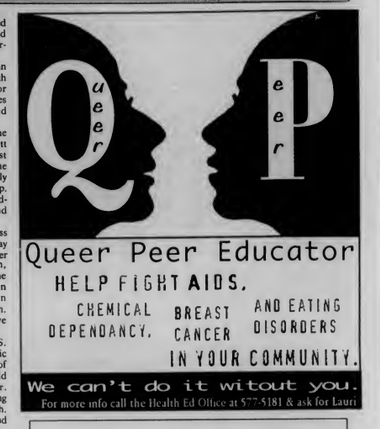
continued from page 1-C

UMass players Patty Shea and Pam Bustin. Hixon, who took a two–year leave of absence to coach the national team, and her squad had to settle for a disappointing fifth place finish.

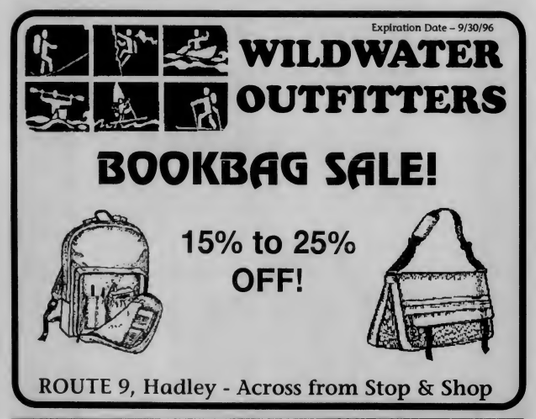
The road in Atlanta was a bumpy one for the field hockey team. After a tie in the opening game, the team defeated eventual silver medalist Korea. But against Great Britain in the next game, the U.S. team had a goal disallowed and lost 1–0.

The squad lost 2–1 to Argentina after a controversy over an injury cost them valuable time. The team played to a 1–1 draw against Germany, but then hit the wall against Australia, the team that went on to win the gold, losing 5–1.

The U.S. team came back to take a 2–0 win at the hands of Spain in a consolation game.



Returning UMass field hockey player Hilary Rose saw plenty of action in Atlanta as the starting goalie for the British national team. Rose and her squad failed to capture a medal as well, taking home fourth place.



The Puerto Rican national basketball team had the services of the Massachusetts backcourt tandem of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso. The two paired to form one of the strongest guard tandems in college basketball last season, helping the Minutemen to the Final Four.

They returned to the court at the Georgia Dome, the site of the basketball venue, having played against Arkansas and Georgetown there during last year's NCAA Tournament.

Although the pair saw limited playing time, Travieso finished his Olympic run averaging eight points per game, while Padilla contributed with four ppg and three assists per game.

The duo did not get the chance to face the vaunted members of the U.S. Dream Team, as Puerto Rico failed to make the medal round, finishing in 10th place.

Football

Alessio, Catterton crucial to Minuteman offense

■ Massachusetts returns Yankee Conference's leading rush attack

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts football team, the questions for this upcoming 1996 season were supposed to be about defense.

Though they return nine starters to the offensive side of the ball (including the entire offensive line and the Yankee Conference's leading rusher, Frank Alessio), offensive concerns remain. The Minutemen led the entire Division 1– AA in rushing at 303 yards per game in 1995, and they feature maybe the best one–two backfield combo (Rene Ingoglia and Alessio) in the conference. So the University of Massachusetts should be set to light up the scoreboard, right?

Well, not so fast. There are still many questions the Minutemen have to answer if they want to take their first Yankee Conference title since 1990.

The most glaring question is poised toward the center where junior Anthony Catterton enters the season as the starting quarterback. Catterton has experience having started the last seven games of last season after Vito Campanile went down with a shoulder injury. Known as a good option quarterback, Catterton was plagued last year by his inability to establish a consistent pessing game.

Completing only 23 of 72 passes last fall, Catterton threw for 235 yards with one touchdown and four interceptions. But the coaching staff expects good things from Catterton this fall and though the pressure to succeed might seem great, the junior quarterback seems to be taking it all in stride.

"I don't think there's much pressure," Catterton said. "I think as a whole, as a team there's pressure on us, and that's the way it should be. I think there should be pressure on me to get the passing game going, and hopefully I will."

The quarterback position for the Minutemen will also be helped by the addition of quarterback coach Bob Colbert, who comes to Amherst with 26 years of coaching experience in the National Football League, Division 1–AA and Division III. Colbert should take some pressure off of offensive coordinator Doug Berry, who has handled the quarterbacks in the past.

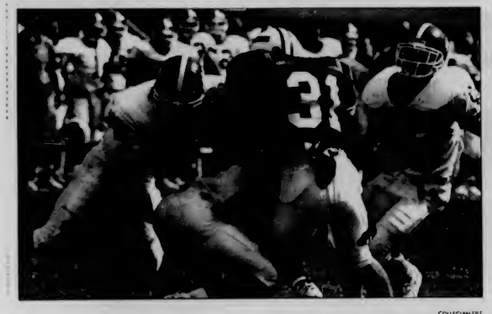
"He [Colbert] brings a lot of experience here," Catterton said, "and he's already helped me out tremendously with things I've needed to work on this summer".

Despite the loss of possibly the best running back in the 50–year history of the Yankee Conference, Rene Ingoglia, the Minutemen should have one of the more potent ground games in all of Division 1–AA.

Last year tailback Frank Alessio, an All–American candidate, posted the fifth–best single season yardage total in UMass history with 1,276 yards in 1995, including a school and conference record 337 yard effort at Boston University last November. Expected to be the man on offense, senior Alessio is excited for the 1996 season.

"Everyone is very motivated and ready to get this season started," Alessio said. "Everyone's minds are clear, and we're ready to start a fresh slate and see what we can do this year."

Behind him at tailback is the more than capable Matt Jordan. Last season as a redshirt freshman Jordan gained 564 yards, averaging a downright nasty 7.4 yards a carry, in addition to solid special teams play.



At fullback, the Minutemen will be helped by the return of senior Ron Brockington, who played only three games last year as a result of a nagging hernia injury. The former Gathered New York State Player of the Year, Brockington is at the head of an impressive group of fullbacks. Sophomore Jim Piano saw time enough to gain 153 yards on 31 carries last season, and the coaching staff is really high on redshirt freshman Jamie Houston. The 6–2 238 pound North Middlesex product had an impressive spring, rushing for 33 yards in the Maroon–White game.

"We're really looking forward to getting Jamie on the field after he redshirted last season." head coach Mike Hodges said. "Holston is a legitimate big fullback, the first big back we've had at UMass in some time."

As far as the offensive line goes, the situation couldn't be better for the Minutemen. They return not only the top five starters from a squad that boasted the nation's finest rushing attack and allowed only 12 sacks all year, but they actually bring back their top eight linemen from 1995. They're an imposing group, and as Hodges explains, "They have the potential to be as good as any group of linemen we've had in a long time." He adds, "The possibilities are very good that we should have a dominant offensive line."

Senior left tackle Dan Markowski and junior center Matt Alegi were both second–team Yankee Conference selections in 1995, and right tackle Mark Shalala returns for his senior year as team co–captain and leader down in the trenches.

The nation's best ground game shows no signs of slowing down, with the return of Alessio and Jordan in the backfield, and an offensive line that ranks with any in Division 1–AA. But can they mount enough of a passing game to take pressure off the rushing attack? Will Anthony Catterton be the man UMass needs to expand the passing game? The Minutemen will need to answer these questions early if they expect to compete for supremacy in the Yankee Conference.

COLLEGIAN FILE

With a new QB and new additions to the coaching staff, UMass will look to romp through the Yankee Conference.

Reimer, Samuel key to UMass defense

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

There's a saying in sports that we've all heard a million times: offense wins games, defense wins championships. Sometimes clichés can seem antiquated, but for the 1996 Massachusetts football team, this old cliche holds the key to success.

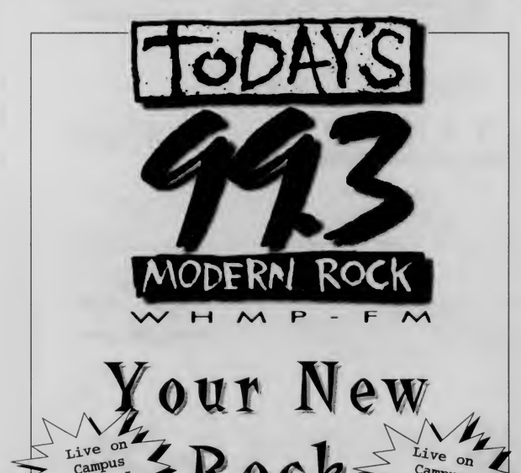
Despite concerns at quarterback, the Minutemen are expected to hold their own on the offensive side of things. But if they want to improve on last year's 6–5 mark and take home a Yankee Conference championship, they need to answer questions on the other side of the ball.

Any discussion of the Minutemen defense begins with the linebacking corps, particularly senior All–American candidate, Justin Riemer. Last year the New Jersey native led the Yankee Conference in both total tackles (150) and solo tackles (95), and was selected first team All–Conference and first team All–New England. In addition, Reimer was voted Most Outstanding Defensive Player by his teammates.

"It's a nice place to start when you return the leading tackler in the conference," Massachusetts football coach Mike Hodges said. "He has trained very hard in the off season, and with the experience factor from last year, we expect big things from him in the fall."

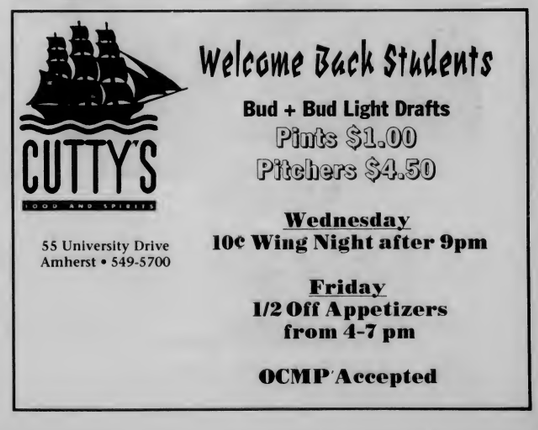
Another star in the making is sophomore outside linebacker Khari Samuel, who ranked second on the Minutemen last season with 94 tackles. Samuel showed the ability to make the big play, with seven sacks, five forced fumbles and ten tackles for losses. He's an athletic specimen, but if you listen to Hodges, that's not what separates him from the rest.

"The thing that makes [Samuel] a good player is his competitiveness," Hodges said. "He expects so much of himself, and that's why he looks the way he does. He's bigger, stronger and faster than he was a year ago. His future is very, very bright."



The Minutemen also have senior Mike Dawson and sophomore Elvis Abellard in the middle. Abellard, an emotional player with great athleticism comes into the 1996 campaign healthy after tearing his posterior cruciate ligament last fall. Dawson, who will play his natural position of middle linebacker this season, round out a linebacking unit that should rank among the best in the nation.

In the secondary, the Minutemen are thin. They've lost three of their four starters from last year's squad, including honorable mention All–American Breton Parker and defensive signal caller Jason Turdyn. The assignment of the opponents toughest wideout will go to senior co–captain Kory Blackwell. The only returning starter, Blackwell is an outstanding athlete who will also handle kickoff duties for the University of Massachusetts. The coaching staff is hoping that Blackwell can pick up where Parker left off and solidify a questionable secondary.



"He [Blackwell] is going to be our new Breon Parker." Hodges said. "We need Kory to be our steady guy that we feel comfortable putting on our opponent's best receiver."

Senior Brian Mooney will lead the unit at the free safety spot, while senior Leggie Beckford and redshirt freshman Jerard White will occupy the other starting spots.

The defensive line is also a source of concern for the coaching staff. They have the talent at tackle, with junior Mike Batelli, senior John Sawyer and junior Shaun Williams all returning to the middle. But when you switch to the ends, there isn't much experience. Junior Jeron Alston is the only returning end who played on Saturday. The Minutemen have taken sophomore Mim Hill from the offensive line and placed him at defensive end where they hope his raw talent will compensate for lack of experience. Junior Chris Cronin is also expected to see time at end.

Tennis

Tennis seeks national spotlight, Navarro, Gerasimova to shine

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

For Massachusetts men's and women's head tennis coach Judy Dixon, the 1996 season is shaping up to be huge. Four years removed from extinction, Dixon is hoping that by the end of the fall UMass will have put itself in the national spotlight.

"This is a big year for the program," Dixon said of the women's team. "And I expect big things of the men as well."

Building on the successes of the spring 1996 campaign is crucial to UMass this year, but they'll have to do it without their No. 1 players of a year ago.

The women's tennis squad starts the season with big shoes to fill from last year's New England championship team.

"This team has to find an identity now that Liesl Sitton is gone," Dixon said.

Sitton, the former two-time New England champion and four year starter at No. 1 singles, graduated in May, and her absence leaves a void at the top that Dixon hopes will be filled by Greenfield High product Olga Gerasimova. A former product of the Soviet tennis system, the Latvian native is expected to learn on the job.

"It'll be a rough first year at No. 1 for her," Dixon said. "But she hits the ball a ton, she's got a good ground game, and she's aggressive on the baseline. I expect that by her junior year she'll be an outstanding player for us."

As far as the rest of the squad, Dixon is hoping for big things.

"We hope 1996 is the year we vault into the national spotlight," Dixon said. "We play seven nationally ranked teams, and if we can work on our intensity and concentration, this could be a watershed year for the program."

If the Minutewomen can boast of a strength, it's the depth they possess in the second through seventh spots. Junior co- captains Lana Gorodetskaya and Caroline Steele, along with lone senior Liz Durant, are proven winners who will be looked to provide leadership.

The men also have a new face at the top of the depth chart. Freshman Bo Navarro is Dixon's new No. 1, and his talent has the coaching staff excited.

"[Navarro] is very quick, he's a well-coached serve and volley player and he's got a good touch," Dixon said.

Again, as with Gerasimova, Dixon is looking two years down the line.

"Normally, I don't like putting freshman at No. 1 because of the pressure, but Bo should hold his own. We're expecting Bo to be a force in a couple years." Dixon said.

The rest of the men's team looks good early, with the return of co-captains Alex Aller and Ryan McGinley, and a strong recruiting class. Dixon is pleased because the "heart and soul" of the team is returning, and they've had a year to mature.

"Last year the men's team matured a lot faster than we could have dreamed of, and having that extra year can only make us stronger." Dixon said.

It will not be an easy task for the Minutemen to repeat past successes, however. Dixon has strengthened the schedule considerably, adding the likes of Rutgers, St. John's and Boston University, in addition to committing to a tougher in-conference schedule.

The Minutemen are anxious to get the year started, hoping their young talent will guide them to its highest ever conference finish, topping last year's UMass record-setting fifth place at the Atlantic-10's.

Women's Tennis

Sept. 12 HARTFORD 3:00 p.m.

Sept. 18 at Amherst College 3:30 p.m.

Sept. 20–22 Eastern Championships (at Princeton, N.J.)

Sept. 25 at Vermont 3:00 p.m.

Sept. 28 at Columbia 3:00 p.m.

Oct. 2 at Connecticut 2:30 p.m.

Oct. 9 at St. John's 3:00 p.m.

Oct. 11 at Dartmouth 2:00 p.m.

Oct. 18–20 at New England Championships

Oct. 25–27 Army Tournament

Nov. 7–10 Rolex Championships (at Williamsburg, Va.)

Home matches played at Upper Boyden Courts
Head Coach: Judy Dixon

Men's Tennis

Sept. 13 WESLEYAN 3:00 p.m.

Sept. 18 at Fairfield 3:00 p.m.

Sept. 19 at Boston University 1:00 p.m.
Sept. 22 RHODE ISLAND 10:00 a.m.

Sept. 25 at Connecticut 3:00 p.m.

Sept. 27–29 Army Tournament (at West Point, N.Y.)

Oct. 1 MIT 3:30 p.m.

Oct. 7 at St. John's 3:00 p.m.

Oct. 11 VERMONT 3:00 p.m.

Oct. 17 at Boston College 3:00 p.m.

Nov. 2–6 Rolex Championships (at Princeton, N.J.)

Home matches played at Upper Boyden Courts
Head Coach: judy Dixon

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES: Stairmasters • Treadmills • Ulecycles • Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus • Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS: Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step • Boxercise • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST. SO. AMHERST 256-0080

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, THIS GUY IS IN CLASS.

Excitement and adventure is the course description, and Army ROTC is the name. It's the one college elective that builds your self-confidence, develops your leadership potential and helps you take on the challenge of command.

There's no obligation until your junior year, so there's no reason not to try it out right now.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

For details, visit the Army ROTC Building or call 545-2321/2322

OCMP
THE OFF CAMPUS MEAL PLAN
CURRENTLY FEATURING THESE FINE RESTAURANTS:
Amherst DELIVERS 'Deli
Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SUBWAY
Newman Center Cafeteria
Amber Waves
EL CACUÑA TEX-MEX CANTINA
d'angelo sandwich shops
CUTTY'S
Bueno Y Sano
PRUDDY'S
DP DOUGH
ANTONIO'S É SEMPRE BUONA
DELANO'S 57 North Pleasant Street 253-5141 Proper Identification A Must
THE BLACK SHEEP Deli & Bakery 79 MAIN STREET • AMHERST, MA 01002 • 253-3423
Just because you're a college student doesn't mean you have to eat like one!
FOR MORE INFO:
1-888-211-6267

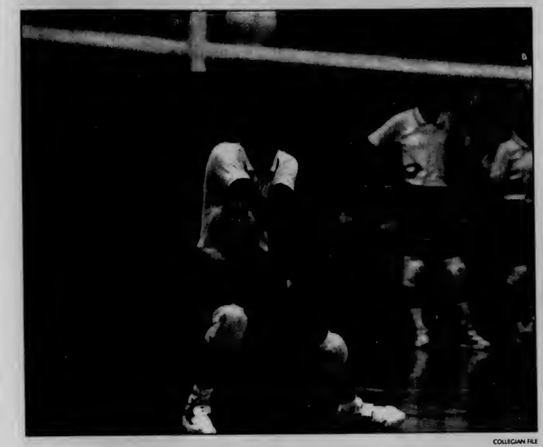
Volleyball

UM volleyball, talent makes up for thin numbers

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

What's the saying? It's the quality that counts, not the quantity?

Well, the Massachusetts volleyball team is certainly hoping that holds true, because although they're lacking in the latter, they think by the end of the 1996 season they'll have enough of the former.



Bonnie Kenny's Minutewomen have revamped their roster by ending ties with players who "weren't willing to make the [proper] commitment." To help compensate, the coach has brought in a stellar freshman class to compliment veterans Dionne Nash, Lesley Nolan, Katie Pearce, Susan Maga and Michelle Paciorek.

Last year, UMass finished 24–15, was an A-10 semi-finalist and went to the NIVC tournament. Led by Kenny, the team has a 51–23 record over the past two seasons, and it would like nothing better than for that trend to continue.

But again, the problem — however big or small — lies in numbers. One of the freshmen, Amanda Fleming, will most likely be out the entire season with a knee injury (ACL), leaving the current total at eight. The team will hold walk- on tryouts, but as of now there will be just two players on the bench.

And you can bet those two will not be Nash or Nolan. With last year's go-to-gal Giza Rivera not returning, the two senior outside hitters will serve as the nucleus of the offensive attack. Last season, Nash averaged 2.85 kills per game, a career low, but also averaged 2.73 digs per game, a career high. Nolan registered 3.5 kills per game and an impressive 3.56 digs per game. How others will fit in remains to be seen, perhaps for a while.

"We've got four new faces coming in," Kenny said. "Two of which will probably start right away. The goal is to find the six people who are most comfortable with each other on the court, and it may take some time to accomplish that."

COLLEGIAN FILE
Veteran Dionne Nash will look to lead a young team in the upcoming season.

The four rookies include the injured Fleming, a 5–10 middle blocker/outside hitter from Bakersfield, Calif.; Jill Meyers, a middle blocker from Huntington Beach, Calif.; Kari Hogancamp (listed as a top 50 recruit by Volleyball Weekly), a setter, also from Huntington Beach; and Sarah Watters, an outside hitter/middle blocker from Las Vegas.

"I'm very happy with Jill Meyers especially," said Kenny of the niece of Basketball Hall of Famer Ann Meyers– Drysdale. "She's in great shape, and has a strong work ethic. She really pushes people in practice, and so far has done very well.

"We knew we had a very good recruiting year, but it's going to be so important to be patient with them. It's going to take some time for them to learn and understand the system. Plus they still need to realize that the level of play is very different at the Division One collegiate level than what they're used to.

"And we're obviously confident with our veterans, Dionne and Lesley, with Maga coming off the bench. They form our strongest position, the outside hitter."

In the middle they'll have a very good blocking unit in Paciorek, the lone Massachusetts native, and Meyers, while Pearce and Hogancamp may split the setting duties — perhaps even simultaneously.

Kenny, who denies her squad is once again in a rebuilding stage, sees team weaknesses as inexperience and depth, or lack of it.

Ideally, at least, the team will improve throughout the course of the season. The keys in the eyes of the coach will be to improve with every match amidst a tough schedule and stay healthy. And if everything goes according to plan, the Minutewomen will achieve their main objective.

"We have a legitimate goal — to qualify for the [Atlantic 10] conference tournament," Kenny said. "Only four teams make it. We've been fortunate enough to do it in the past and hopefully we'll be able to do it this year. But we're on a time schedule. At the end of the season, hopefully we'll be peaking and playing our best ball."

Within the A–10, Kenny sees Rhode Island, George Washington and Virginia Tech as top opponents. All three were major players last season, as well.

Thus far, the Minutewomen have opened up against Tulane, Southwest Texas State, Providence and Middle Tennessee State. The matches were yet to be played at press time. This Friday, they get back in action against St. Bonaventure, and then Connecticut and Penn State on Saturday, all in the Penn State Invitational.

If all does go well, and at the end of the year UMass is in striking range of making the A–10's, they may have to face Virginia Tech and George Washington — on the road — to do it.

But by then, if the former is going strong, the new saying will be "Too many chefs..."

Volleyball

Aug. 30–31 UMASS INVITATIONAL
Aug. 30 TULANE 11:30 a.m.
Aug. 30 SW TEXAS ST. 7:00 p.m.
Aug. 31 PROVIDENCE 2:00 p.m.
Aug. 31 MIDD. TENNESSEE ST. 7:00 p.m.
Sept. 6–7 Penn State Invitational (at University Park, Pa.)
Sept. 6 St. Bonaventure 6:00 p.m.
Sept. 7 Connecticut 1:00 p.m.
Sept. 7 Penn State 7:30 p.m.
Sept. 13–14 UMASS CLASSIC
Sept. 13 CENTRAL CONN. 2:00 p.m.
Sept. 13 VILLANOVA 7:00 p.m.
Sept. 14 DELAWARE 11:30 a.m.
Sept. 14 SETON HALL 4:30 p.m.
Sept. 20–21 Rhode Island Tournament (at Kingston, R.I.)
Sept. 20 at Rhode Island 4:00 p.m.
Sept. 21 Long Beach State 12:00 p.m.
Sept. 21 Brown 4:00 p.m.
Sept. 27 ST. BONAVENTURE* 7:00 p.m.
Sept. 28 DUQUESNE* 7:00 p.m.
Oct. 4 at LaSalle* TBA
Oct. 4 at Temple* 7:00 p.m.
Oct. 5 at Fordham* 5:00 p.m.
Oct. 11 at Xavier* 7:00 p.m.
Oct. 12 at Dayton*
Oct. 18 GEO. WASH* 7:00 p.m.
Oct. 19 VIRGINIA TECH* 7:00 p.m.
Oct. 25 RHODE ISLAND* 7:00 p.m.
Oct. 30 at Connecticut 8:00 p.m.
Nov. 1 at St. Bonaventure* 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 2 at Duquesne* 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 5 at Harvard 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 8 FORDHAM* 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 9 LA SALLE* 2:00 p.m.
Nov. 9 TEMPLE* 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 13 BOSTON COLLEGE 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 15 DAYTON* 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 16 XAVIER* 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 22 at Virginia Tech*7:30 p.m.
Nov. 23 at George Washington* 6:00 p.m.
Nov. 29–Dec. 1 Atlantic 10 Championship (at Kingston, R.I.)
Dec. 4 NCAA First Round
Dec. 7–8 NCAA Second Round
Dec. 12–15 NCAA Regionals
Dec. 19–21 NCAA Semi's and Finals (at Cleveland, Ohio)
* Atlantic 10 matches
Home matches played at the Curry Hicks Cage
Head Coach: Bonnie Kenny

Menu Eight great flavors from which to choose. This is them:
- The M&M® Cookie
- Oatmeal Raisin
- White Chocolate Macadamia
- Oatmeal Chocolate Chunk Walnut
- Chocolatey Chocolate Chip
- Chocolate Chip
- Peanut Butter
- Sugar Cookie

Sugar Jones Sweet Sixteen — 16 Big Cookies in any combination, delivered hot to your door $15
Sugar Jones Big Eight — 8 Big Cookies of your choice baked to order and delivered hot $10
Ice Cold Milk — Quarts of 2% lowfat and skim $2
Sugar Jones Giant Cookie — A Two Pound Cookie! (14 inches in diameter) decorated with your personalized message written in buttercream icing. A perfect gift for any occasion. It's bigger than your head! Delivered with a personellized card $19.50
Sugar Jones Little Giant — A One Pound Cookie! (10 inches in diameter). Same as the GIANT COOKIE but smaller. Perhaps the same size as your head (?) $14
Ben & Jerry's Ice cream and Frozen Yogurt — Twelve amazing flavors to amuse you (pints) $4

We deliver 'em hot
Yummy cookies baked to order and delivered hot to your door
SUGAR JONES COOKIES™
549-5663
Free Delivery
7pm-2am Everynight!
Minimum order $10. Visa & Mastercard accepted.
Discounts on large orders.
If you want to send a gift of these same delicious cookies anywhere in the USA call Sugar Jones' brother, Dan, at 1 (800) SO YUMMY or http://www.king.net/danz

FREE COOKIE with purchase of Sugar Jones Big Eight
This coupon must be mentioned when placing your order. Expires 12/15/96. Not valid with any other discounts
FREE MILK (one quart) with any cookie order
This coupon must be mentioned when placing your order. Expires 12/15/96. Not valid with any other discounts
FREE ICE CREAM (one pint) with purchase of a Sugar Jones Giant Cookie
This coupon must be mentioned when placing your order. Expires 12/15/96. Not valid with any other discounts

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

FUN FITNESS TRANSPORTATION
BACK TO SCHOOL CELEBRATION
BACK TO SCHOOL
• LOCKS from $13.95 to $54.95 A Huge Selection "Free Bagels with Locks"
• DAY PACKS Just $19.95 Values to $65
• HELMETS
• LIGHTS
• ACCESSORIES
END OF SEASON BIKE MARKDOWNS
GIANT MCM-1 Was $2499 Now $1999
SCHWINN MOAB Was $549 Now $459
MARIN MONOCOQUE Was $1239 Now $899
NISHIKI PINNACLE Was $899 Now $749
Sales • Service • Rentals Accessories • Shipping • Storage
Only 7/10 mile from the Rail Trail
Always a FREE Helmet with any new bike purchase
VALLEY BICYCLES Since 1981
319 Main St., Amherst • 256-0880 or 800-831-5437
VOTED BEST BIKE SHOP 1996

Water Polo

Water polo looks to repeat Final Four appearance

By Fred Hurbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Final Four, Schminal Four. Final Fours come and go. Now, National Championships. They come once, maybe twice in a lifetime.

So, the Mallrats rip-off is a slight exaggeration, but last year's other University of Massachusetts Final Four squad, the men's water polo team, is back in full force and looking to take the proverbial next step.

"This team considers the Eastern Championship their right," said Massachusetts Head Coach Russ Yarworth referring to the title his club has won the past three seasons. "I'm not satisfied with that any more. We have the ability to be pretty good. We'll see what [the players] want to do."

Judging by the excitement and enthusiasm at practice the players want nothing less than to vie for the national title, but in order for a team to go that extra mile they need leadership.

Leadership is seemingly the only area where the Minutemen are lacking in the early going. Yarworth graduated four seniors last season, including both captains (Luis Limardo and John Luviano), and his club suffered the tragic loss of emotional leader Greg Menton.

The team will have to find it's leaders from a small group of seniors and juniors.

Ron Gonen and Paul Engin are the only seniors on this year's squad and Yarworth has just two juniors (Marc Staudenbauer and J.C. Limardo) on the roster.

What the squad does have is a strong returning corps of seasoned and talented sophomores supplemented by the addition of Puerto Rican native Adrian Roman and Loyola Marymount transfer Jake Howard.

Brian Stahl and Gabriel Marrero are coming off superb freshman campaigns and will be looked to as major scoring threats in the starting lineup.

Carlos Mendez and Geoff Gear also saw considerable time in the water during their first year at UMass in 1995 and can be dangerous snipers off the bench. Scott Stevens and Chad Filiault are another pair of sophs that made strong strides last season at both ends of the pool.

Having Stahl (last year's second leading scorer) setting up at Two-meters with Roman, Marrero and Limardo, Yarworth expects the Minuteman offense to be potent.

"Brian's going to score goals," Yarworth said. "But, we want him to work on his whole game and take advantage of the team. We'll be a tough team to match up with."

The offense will be strong, but the key to a championship team is defense.

"We have to play defense. Defense wins championships," Yarworth said.

Staudenbauer and Gonen are two players that have shined brightly despite perpetually being over-shadowed by stars like Luis Limardo and Javier Gonzalez in their tenures at UMass. They will have to emerge from those shadows and take the reins of the Minuteman defense.

The defense, like the whole team, will be young and less mature than last year's Final Four squad, but talented non- the-less.

With Staudenbauer and Gonen starting, Yarworth has Gear, Howard and Mendez coming off the bench to defend the goal that senior Paul Engin finally gets to keep.

After being red-shirted his first season, Engin got to be Alex Mujica's back-up for the past three seasons. Now it's Mujica who is on the sidelines, as one of Yarworth's assistants, and it's Engin's turn to wear No. 1 symbolizing the Minutemen's last line of defense.

Engin's top back-up this season will probably be freshman net-minder Richard Huntley. A native of San Juan, Puerto Rico, Huntley is just one a slew of freshmen on Yarworth's pre-season roster to impress the coaching staff.

Cory Koenemann, a field player from St. Louis has been "a pleasant surprise" so far. Annapolis native Rich Slingluff and Efthymios (Tim) Troupis who hails from Athens, Greece have both shone signs of promise as well.

This young team will need to gel quickly as they stare down a very tough schedule.

The highlight of the schedule comes in mid-October when UMass faces off against fellow Final Four team University of California-San Diego on the 18th, and then National Champions UCLA on the 20th.

COLLEGIAN FILE

After suffering a graduation crunch, the UMass men's water polo team has its work cut out for it as it tries to again reach the Final Four.

Men's Water Polo

Sept. 7–8 Navy Invitational (at Annapolis, Md.)
Sept. 11 BOSTON COLLEGE 7:30 p.m.
Sept. 14 EWPA League Tourney (at Brooklyn, N.Y.)
Sept. 14 Lehman 10:30 a.m.
Sept. 14 Merchant Marine Acad. 1:30 p.m.
Sept. 14 at St. Francis 4:30 p.m.
Sept. 21 at Brown TBA
Sept. 28 EWPA LEAGUE TOURNEY (at Amherst, Ma.)
Sept. 28 HARVARD 10:00 a.m.
Sept. 28 MIT 2:30 p.m.
Sept. 28 BROWN 9:00 p.m.
Oct. 5–6 Brown Invitational (at Providence, R.I.)
Oct. 12 EWPA League Tournament (at Bronx, N.Y.)
Oct. 12 Iona 6:00 p.m.
Oct. 13 Fordham 9:30 a.m.
Oct. 13 Queens 5:00 p.m.
Oct. 18–19 Claremont Convergence (at Claremont, Calif.)
Oct. 20 at UCLA 3:00 p.m.
Oct. 26–27 EWPA League Playoffs (at Providence, R.I.)
Nov. 8–10 Easter Championships (at Cambridge, Mass.)
Dec. 6–8 NCAA Championships (at LaJolla, Calif.)
Home games played at Amherst College
Head Coach: Russ Yarworth

ULTIMATE AEROBIC TRAINING
Stairmaster 4400 PT

CLIMB
PLUS
KEISER
NAUTILUS
FREE-WEIGHTS
STAIRMASTERS
LIFE CYCLES
LIFE ROWER
BIOCYCLES
CYBEX UBE
NORDIC TRACK
TREADMILLS
AEROBICS
4 Months $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 West St. South Amherst 256-0080

VIVA LA REVOLUCION!
WRITE FOR BLACK AFFAIRS, DEVELOPING NATIONS OR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS!
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN OR CALL US AT 545-1851

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
the Sub

33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST
Voted UMass Best
Pizza's, Subs, Calzones, and more...
Hours: 11am - 2am • 549-5160

WITH SPECIAL GUESTS
DEFTONES & THE URGE
LIVE IN CONCERT
TODAY'S 93 WBCN
FRIDAY, SEPT. 13 • 7:30 PM
TICKETS $17.50 (+.50¢ BUILDING CHARGE)
Limited General Admission Floor Seats Available
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE AND TICKETMASTER OUTLETS: NRM MUSIC • FILENE'S • RECORD TOWN
CALL FOR TIX: (413) 733-2500 • (203) 525-4500
MULLINS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS • AMHERST, MA
Presented by MassConcerts.

Basketball

Summer Shootout showcases

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Amid the confusion of an abrupt coaching change, and despite an escalating controversy, four members of the five- man Massachusetts men's basketball recruiting class gave Bay State fans a sneak preview of what's ahead for the Minutemen at this summer's Boston Shootout.

The Shootout, which is in its 24th year, annually attracts the best schoolboy basketball talent in the country. This year's event boasted such marquee names as Lester Earl, Shaheen Holloway, Chris Burgess, and Schea Cotton.

Mike Babul, a 6-foot-9 swingman from North Attleboro, and Monty Mack, a 6-foot-2 guard out of South Boston, were key members of the host Boston team. Jersey City, N.J., product Ajmal Basit, a 6-foot-10 center, and Winston Smith, a 6-foot-5 guard from Elizabeth, N.J., highlighted the New Jersey team. All four arrive in Amherst in the fall.

Despite the sweeping changes made to the basketball program in the weeks previous to the Shootout, the incoming freshmen were upbeat and happy to have the chance to play with and against their future teammates.

"I was sitting down talking to [the other recruits], we had a nice time when we all went for our official visit at the same time. We're going to have a good time up there," Mack said.

"We talked about next year. I was cheering them on like they were cheering me on. We want to get a chemistry on the team next year," Smith said.

The most pressing issue at hand was the players' reactions to new head coach James "Bruiser" Flint. While they all admitted to initial concern over former coach John Calipari's departure, they were pleased with the choice of Flint as head coach.

"He recruited me, so I have a good relationship with him," Babul said.

"I feel that it's a good situation for me, because he recruited me too. And if he wasn't going to be there I don't think I would have attended UMass," Smith said.

Mack agreed with Smith, stating that Calipari's departure was no concern for him.

"[Calipari leaving] doesn't matter. Everyone has goals, and his goal was to become an NBA coach. I have the goal to become a good college player," Mack said. "I got kind of close to [Flint]. He recruited me to go up there, so I'm going to go up there and work hard."

Mack will have to wait a year to do so, having failed to reach the required score on the SAT. Mack just missed the cut of 820, scoring an 810.

Only Basit expressed serious reservations over the new situation. Basit was reportedly looking to get out of his signed national letter of intent to UMass after Calipari took the coaching reigns with the New Jersey Nets.

"[Calipari] was a major influence on my decision to attend the University of Massachusetts, to get Coach Calipari's instruction throughout my four years of college," Basit said.

Basit was quick to comment that his concern was not over Flint's new position.

"Coach Flint recruited me. I have no problem with Coach Flint," Basit said. "I spoke with Coach Flint extensively the day after Coach Calipari left. He called to reassure me about my position at the University."

At the NBA Draft on June 26, Calipari went on record as saying that Basit had decided to honor his commitment to Massachusetts. Later that night, calls to Basit's home confirmed Calipari's statement.

■ Flint

Continued from page 1-C

Coach Cal's right hand man would be his successor. As Flint described, it was important to the new recruits coming in this year, since he had recruited them with Calipari. In addition, recruits were aware that Calipari might not be around for their full tenure as Minutemen, but that Flint would be.

The biggest switch for Flint is the fact that, "Now I'm in charge of the whole ship, not just part of it," as he describes.

"I have to deal with whether the guys are eligible or not, if they have housing, how they're doing with their summer jobs. I have to know what's going on with the whole program, where before I used to say stuff like, 'Don't worry, John, it'll be O.K.' You don't say that anymore," Flint said with an easy going smile and chuckle.

Not only will Flint's relationship with the players change, but the roster itself is different as well. With consensus National Player of the Year Marcus Camby in the NBA and the powerful front court combo of Dana Dingle and Dante Bright lost to graduation, Flint will rely on his six rookies to step up.

"Our message has always been, the pressure is not on you to perform, the pressure is on you to prepare to perform," Flint said. "It's going to be tough. We got a lot of young guys and it takes time for those guys to get their confidence up and get used to playing at this level. You never know about freshmen. You can read about them all you want to in the paper, but you have to get them to do it on the court."

With all the things that have changed in the program, there are some things Flint hopes will not change.

"I hope the Mullins and the fans are enthusiastic and wearing basketballs on their head, going wild. We'll be competitive on the court," Flint said.

■ Camby

Continued from page 1-C

deals with cases similar to the allegations brought against Camby. The rule reads, "An individual shall be ineligible per 12.3.1 if he or she (or his or her relatives or friends) accepts transportation or other benefits from any person who wishes to represent the individual in the marketing of his or her athletic ability."

To make sure these NCAA regulations are met at UMass, the University employs an official registration process through which prospective agents can meet with interested student athletes. After a prospective agent files the 13 page application to register with the school, "We will do background checks to make sure that they are registered with the NBA or the NFL or Major League Baseball," O'Malley said. "We'll check their references to make sure that they are legit."

Prospective agents are made aware of their responsibilities in the six pages on dealing with agents found in the UMass Athletic Department Policy Manual: 503 Student Athlete Responsibilities. In this document, the athletic department explicitly states their stance in dealing with agents. The manual states, "The Athletic Department strongly encourages its student athletes to interact with registered, approved agents only. The Department realizes that it is impossible to prohibit unregistered agents from contacting student athletes by telephone or in off-campus ares, however, access to practices, games and campus facilities may be denied."

If the student athlete is interested in meeting with the agent, the agent will conduct a one hour presentation for the student athlete, coaches, and athletic directors at UMass.

It is clear that there is a regulatory process for student athletes dealing with agents, at UMass and nationally. The question remains, is this system effective?

Men's Basketball

Nov. 6 MARATHON OIL (exhibition) 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 15 CONVERSE ALL-STARS 7:00 p.m.
Nov. 25–27 Maui Invitational (at Maui, Hawaii)
Nov. 25 UMass at Chaminade 2:00 p.m.
So. Carolina vs. Virginia
Kansas vs. LSU
Iowa vs. California
Nov. 26 Second Round
Nov. 27 Final Round
Dec. 4 Great Eight (at United Center, Chicago, Ill.)
UMass vs. Georgetown 7:30 p.m.
Kansas vs. Cincinnati 10 p.m.
Dec. 7 TBA
Dec. 10 FRESNO STATE 7:30 p.m.
Dec. 12 DREXEL TBA
Dec. 14 at Wake Forest 8:30 p.m.
Dec. 20 Jimmy V. Classic (at Meadowlands, N.J.)
UMass vs. North Carolina 9:00 p.m.
Dec. 22 at No. Carolina–Wilmington 3:30 p.m.
Dec. 27 "The U Game" (at Hartford Civic Center)
UMass vs. UConn 7:00 p.m.
Jan. 2 Davidson (site TBA) TBA
Jan. 5 ST. JOSEPH'S TBA
Jan. 8 at LaSalle TBA
Jan. 12 VIRGINIA TECH TBA
Jan. 14 at St. Bonaventure 9:00 p.m.
Jan. 18 Commonwealth Classic
UMass vs. Boston College (at the FleetCenter, Boston, Mass.) 2:00 p.m.
Jan. 21 RHODE ISLAND TBA
Jan. 25 at Temple
Jan. 30 at George Washington 7:30 p.m.
Feb. 1 XAVIER 2:00 p.m.
Feb. 3 at Fordham TBA
Feb. 6 DUQUESNE TBA
Feb. 8 at Rhode Island 12Feb. 11 ST. BONAVENTURE TBA
Feb. 15 Maryland at Worcester Centrum 1:30p.m.
Feb. 20 FORDHAM TBA
Feb. 23 at Dayton TBA
Feb. 25 at St. Joseph's 9:30 p.m.
Mar. 1 TEMPLE 2:00 p.m.

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA (Next to Newbury Comics)
Guys & Gals
Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts
Razor Cuts
Flat Tops
Kid Cuts
Fades
Appointment Not Neccessary
Jim
Terri
Hours: Mon – Wed, 8 – 5:15pm
Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-2:45pm
Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini

Come Join the #1 Ranked
"Best Place to Workout" at UMass!!!
The Body Shops will be open for registration and limited workouts on September 4th; full workouts on September 16th
Your membership includes:
@ TOTMAN GYM 6/BOYDEN GYM 17, WASHINGTON TOWER 19, WEBSTER & GORMAN DROMS
Landice Treadmills • Lifefitness Stair Climbers • Upright & Recumbent Bikes
Concept II Rowers • Nordictrack X-Country Skiers
PowerlineWeight-Training Machines • Complete Sets of Free Weights
USE ALL FACILITIES WITH JUST ONE MEMBERSHIP!
ALL ARE SUPERVISED BY QUALIFIED STAFF
YOUR COST
$60/Semester $100/Year
Full Refund Policy in Effect for 14 Days With Original Receipt & Membership Sticker Only
For those who have already joined during the summer come to the Totman Body Shop Only Starting September 4 to pick up your membership sticker and receipt
For more information call the Body Shops at 545-6075

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE
• Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
• Full Selection of genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
• Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
• Fine selection of new and used cars & trucks.
• Ask about our FREE 18 point maintenance check.

PAIGE'S CHEVROLET Amherst Geo
DICKINSON ST. • BETWEEN RT. 9 & MAIN ST. • 253-3-44 • PARTS LINE 253-5928

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

FOOTWEAR DEN
~ Sizes ~
Men's: 6-18
Women's:5-12
Brand Name Athletic and Casual Footwear Specializing in Running Shoes
CLOSEOUT PRICES
321 Main Street, Amherst • Down the street from Amherst Police Department

It's Back To School Time!
10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.
Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • Offer expires 10/12/96
FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS
MIDAS
Exhaust • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

Cross Country

Cross country teams defend A–10 championships

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The women are used to being on top of the Atlantic 10, the men are new at it, and both groups are in good shape to defend last year's first–ever University of Massachusetts dual conference championships in men's and women's cross country.

"We have reason to believe that we're as good as last year, if not better," men's coach Ken O'Brien said. "You never know how the year's going to play out, but hopefully we can defend our title."

Women's coach Julie LeFreniere basically echoed the sentiment of O'Brien but was a little more reserved in doing so.

"I think that we are probably stronger than last year, but I never like to assume anything," she said. "To me the A–10 is wide open. Anyone could win it."

If the Minutewomen are going to win the conference title for the fourth time in six years, they will in all likelihood be led by junior standout Rebecca Donaghue who was far and away LaFreniere's top talent last season becoming the school's first ever NCAA cross country qualifier.

The women's captain is Molly Dunlap, a distance specialist who excels on hilly and rough terrain. Dunlap is a good leader who can be counted on to put the Minutewomen over the top in close races against less balanced opponents.

"I can see her really stepping up this year," said LaFreniere of Dunlap, who won the New England 10K Championship last year.

Also key to Massachusetts' success this fall will be the continuing brilliance of 1995 All–Conference performer Katie Greenia. Greenia finished 10th at A–10s last season after missing the entire 1994 campaign due to an ankle injury.

"She looks to be in fantastic shape," LaFreniere said of Greenia. "I'm really excited about her; she'll be another force for us [this season].

> "It would be wonderful to have Melissa back, but it's one thing to come back physically and another to come back emotionally."
> Women's XC Coach –Julie LeFreniere

"The key to success is keeping everyone healthy, which is sometimes hard in this sport," LaFreniere said.

If Melissa Langevin, a Tantasqua Regional graduate, can come back like Greenia has, then the Minutewomen are in tremendous shape to defend their championship.

Langevin has been out of action since a tragic fall in the ECAC Championships in 1994. Earlier that same season, she became the first, and only, Minutewoman ever to win the A– 10 individual title.

"It would be wonderful to have Melissa back, but it's one thing to come back physically and another to come back emotionally," LaFreniere said cautiously. "Even if she does get a few races in this season, I can't expect her to just jump into the top seven."

For reference, if Langevin were to return to her full strength, her times of 1994 are comparable to those posted by Donaghue last season.

Rounding out the formidable UMass lineup are veterans Christy Martin and Kristen Donaldson, and impressive newcomers Sharon Tillotson and Lisa Budd.

On the other side of the gender coin, the men return four of their top five runners from their first–ever title season in 1995.

Last fall, Matt Behl and Mike Maceiko literally ran away from the pack finishing one–two in every race the Minutemen ran. Also returning to O'Brien's top five after successful cross country and track seasons last year are Jon Way and Paul Blodorn.

After graduating four seniors from last year's championship team, O'Brien is left with a large gap that he hopes to be able to fill immediately.

The Minuteman core of Maceiko, Behl, Way and Blodorn will be bolstered by other veterans such as Walter Stock and Ryan Carrara, both of whom are coming off very strong track seasons.

Also in the maroon and white pack this season will be Mike Ferrari, Tim Boilard and Janda Ricci–Munn, all of whom ran with little pressure on them last season, but will be looked upon to crack the top seven in the autumn of '96.

"I think in this group we have some kids who gained experience last season and can step into the mix," O'Brien said.

After a typical championship season for the women, and a first–ever men's title, both teams toe the line as the defending A–10 Champions looking to record another autumn of firsts.

Men's Cross Country

Sept. 14 Northeastern, Iowa (at Boston, Mass.) 10:00 a.m.
Sept. 21 VERMONT, B.U., MAINE, CENT. CONN. ST. 12:30 p.m.
Sept. 28 Meet of Champions (Bronx, N.Y.) 11:30 a.m.
Oct. 12 Paul Short Invitational (at Bethlehem, Pa.)
Oct. 18 New England Championships (at Boston, Mass.) 1:00 p.m.
Nov. 2 Atlantic 10 Championships (at Bronx, N.Y.) 10:00 a.m.
Nov. 16 IC4A Championships (at Boston, Mass) 11:00 a.m.
Nov. 25 NCAA Championship (at Tuscon, Ariz.) 12:00 p.m.

Home meets start at Totman Field
Head Coach: Ken O'Brien

Women's Cross Country

Sept. 7 at Villanova*	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 14 at Holy Cross	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 21 at Richmond*	1:00 p.m.
Sept. 28 NORTHEASTERN*	12:00 p.m.
Oct. 5 at Rhode Island*	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 12 BOSTON UNIVERSITY*	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 19 BUFFALO (Homecoming)	1:00 p.m.
Oct. 26 at New Hampshire*	12:30 p.m.
Nov. 2 MAINE*	12:30 p.m.
Nov. 9 at William & Mary*	1:00 p.m.
Nov. 16 CONNECTICUT*	12:30 p.m.
Nov. 30 NCAA First Round
Dec. 7 NCAA Quarterfinals
Dec. 14 NCAA Semifinals
Dec. 21 NCAA Championship

*Yankee Conference games
Home games played at McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Head Coach: Mike Hodge

■ defense

continued from page 1-C

the Minutemen last season with 94 tackles. Samuel showed the ability to make the big play, with seven sacks, five forced fumbles and ten tackles for losses. He's an athletic specimen, but if you listen to Hodges, that's not what separates him from the rest.

"The thing that makes [Samuel] a good player is his competitiveness," Hodges said. "He expects so much of himself, and that's why he looks the way he does. He's bigger, stronger and faster than he was a year ago. His future is very, very bright."

The Minutemen also have senior Mike Dawson and sophomore Elvis Abellard in the middle. Abellard, an emotional player with great athleticism comes into the 1996 campaign healthy after tearing his posterior cruciate ligament last fall. Dawson, who will play his natural position of middle linebacker this season, round out a linebacking unit that should rank among the best in the nation.

In the secondary, the Minutemen are thin. They've lost three of their four starters from last year's squad, including honorable mention All–American Breton Parker and defensive signal caller Jason Turdyn. The assignment of the opponents toughest wideout will go to senior co–captain Kory Blackwell. The only returning starter, Blackwell is an outstanding athlete who will also handle kickoff duties for the University of Massachusetts. The coaching staff is hoping that Blackwell can pick up where Parker left off and solidify a questionable secondary.

"He [Blackwell] is going to be our new Breon Parker," Hodges said. "We need Kory to be our steady guy that we feel comfortable putting on our opponent's best receiver."

Senior Brian Mooney will lead the unit at the free safety spot, while senior Leggie Beckford and redshirt freshman Jerard White will occupy the other starting spots.

The defensive line is also a source of concern for the coaching staff. They have the talent at tackle, with junior Mike Batelli, senior John Sawyer and junior Shaun Williams all returning to the middle. But when you switch to the ends, there isn't much experience. Junior Jeron Alston is the only returning end who's played on Saturday. The Minutemen have taken sophomore Mim Hill from the offensive line and placed him at defensive end where they hope his raw talent will compensate for lack of experience. Junior Chris Cronin is also expected to see time at end.

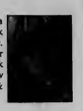
For a team many feel can compete for the Yankee Conference title, a meshing of veterans and youngsters is needed for UMass to take home a conference title.

Andy's Pizza Savings!!!
Clip this coupon for:
Small Plain Pizza FREE
with purchase of any large pizza at regular price
256-8147 256-8148

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road "Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"
• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green • • pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics • • stairs • nautilus • racquetball • • free weights • jacuzzi • sauna • • massage • bikes • tennis • • rowers • treadmills •
Join now for the 5-week Summer special ($159) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st amherst 256-0733
145 main st northampton 586-0155

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Sweet Potato Fries... 99¢ 2.50
Shrimp Cocktail... 5.75 2.88
Potato Skins... 5.99 3.00
Watch the World Go By From Our Greenhouse!
J Judies DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies



Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE
You have to see it to believe it
Over 500 Beers
Over 50 Single Malt Scotches
Many Small Batch Bourbons
80 Belgian Ales
Glassware, Homebrew Supplies
State of the Art Humidor from Vilgilant with Large Selection of Cigars
More than 500 Fine Wines from Around the World
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Weekly Specials
Discover, Visa, Mastercard Accepted
Open 9am - 11pm
Rt. 9/ 338 College Street (413) 253-5384
Take 191 to exit 19/Rt. 9 East
Spirit Haus is 1 mile East of Amherst, Mass.

"Best Barbecue Joint in New England" from USA Today to Yankee Magazine
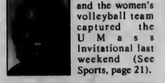
Enjoy BUB's famous Ribs • Chicken • Pork Catfish • Salmon Red Snapper T-Bone Steak & More!
PIGGIN' IN STYLE BUB'S BBQ
Open Daily
LUNCH AND DINNER
Eat In or Under the Tent
RTE. 116 • OLD AMHERST RD • SUNDERLAND
413/548-9630

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA
17 Montague Rd., Amherst • Free Delivery 7 days
549-0626 11:30am - 2am
Wednesday Special
Calzones $3.25
Superior Offers Hot/Cold Grinders, Steak Grinders, Salads, Dinners, and much more.
Call: 549-0626
FREE SODA w/ any large grinder or dinner
4 Free Cans of Coke w/ Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any 1 Item Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any 1 Item Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.25 OFF Any 2 Item Pizza
one coupon per order • coupon cannot be combined with other offers



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 2 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, September 5, 1996

Melissa returns to Mullins

Melissa Etheridge is back at the William D. Mullins Center Saturday. Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass cruises to Invitational title

Lesley Nolan and the women's volleyball team captured the UMass Invitational last weekend (See Sports, page 21).

WORLD

Farrakhan meets Castro during tour

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan praised Fidel Castro yesterday, saying his talks with the Cuban leader were wide-ranging and "wonderful."

The black leader met briefly with Castro after arriving Tuesday in Havana, the last stop on a trip that has taken Farrakhan to Libya, Iran and Iraq.

"It was a wonderful conversation, we touched on many subjects, but the fundamental one was social relations," the Cuban government news agency Prensa Latina quoted him as saying. The Cuban press initially said Farrakhan was to return to the United States today, but the latest reports indicate he left yesterday.

At a news conference yesterday, Farrakhan criticized the Helms-Burton law and the Clinton administration's recent tightening of its decades-old economic embargo on the communist island, Prensa Latina reported.

The black leader also railed against U.S. missile attacks on Iraq this week, and economic sanctions against several Arab nations, according to the Prensa Latina dispatch from Havana, monitored in Mexico City.

NATION

Clinton has surgery; benign cyst removed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton had a benign cyst removed from his neck yesterday in a 12-minute procedure at the White House, spokesman Mike McCurry said.

The growth, known as an inclusion cyst, was located near Clinton's left ear at the jawline. It was removed by dermatologist David Corbett in the doctor's office on the White House grounds, McCurry said.

"It had grown a little larger in size and certainly a little more bothersome to the president," he said.

The cyst — basically an ingrown pimple — was diagnosed during the president's physical examination in May. His physician, Dr. Connie Mariano, noticed during the Democratic National Convention that it had grown bigger and suggested that Clinton have it removed as soon as possible.

Yesterday was the first day they could fit the procedure into Clinton's schedule, Mariano said.

"He was alert, awake and talking about golf," she said. Corbett applied a local anesthesia, sliced the cyst across its top, drained it, closed the skin with two stitches and bandaged it.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 85 LOW: 70	HIGH: 85 LOW: 70	HIGH: 80 LOW: 65

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 21
Comics.....page 23
Editorial.....page 4
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 21

Bombing leaves Iraq 'worse off' according to President Clinton

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. military strikes against Iraq left Saddam Hussein "strategically worse off," President Clinton said yesterday, but Iraqi forces still challenged American air patrols in the newly-expanded "no-fly" zone over southern Iraq.

Clinton, speaking with reporters in the Oval Office, declared a success the twin U.S. cruise missile strikes against Iraqi air defense sites this week. They had been sparked by Saddam's attacks on the Kurds in the north.

"I'm satisfied this mission has achieved the objectives we set out for it," Clinton said in his first assessment of the U.S. moves, which included enlarging the so-called "no fly" zone in southern Iraq.

Saddam now "knows there is a price to be paid for stepping over the line," the president said. "He is strategically worse off."

Even so, Iraqi forces confronted U.S. flyers twice as they began their patrols yesterday over the expanded "no-fly" zone that Washington unilaterally declared Tuesday.

An Iraqi air defense radar site illuminated an Air Force F-16 with its signal, a potential precursor to firing a surface-to-air missile. The "Fighting Falcon" responded by unleashing an anti-radar missile, and the site went silent, Defense Secretary William Perry told reporters.

Two Iraqi MiGs also apparently tried to "lock on" to U.S. jets conducting a routine patrol, but turned away as they neared the 33rd parallel, the northern border of the expanded "no-fly" zone, defense officials said.

Clinton vowed to stand tough against such Iraqi threats, saying, "We will do whatever we have to do in the future to protect our pilots."

To reinforce the buffer zone between Iraq and its neighbors, Clinton announced Tuesday that the "no-fly" zone would be expanded about 60 miles further north, to the 33rd parallel. That would take it to the suburbs of Baghdad, where a defiant Saddam ordered his armed forces to shoot down any foreign aircraft. Clinton described the U.S. mission this way: "Our objectives... are limited, but our interests are clear: To demonstrate once again that reckless acts have consequences. To reduce Saddam's ability to strike out again at his neighbors. To increase America's ability to prevent future acts of violence and aggression."

Yesterday's confrontations over the "no-fly" zone followed two separate strikes by a total of 44 cruise missiles against 15 Iraqi air-defense sites.

Reaction to the latest confrontation was mixed.

Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole supported Clinton's handling of the crisis, saying yesterday, "He's doing what he should do."

Asked if the president waited too long before taking action, he said, "We'll talk about that later. Not today."

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.) and others said congressional leaders were trying to craft a bipartisan resolution supporting U.S. troops.

"The administration would like to have an endorsement of all their policies throughout history," Lott said. "We'd like to say we support our troops, we support aggressive actions against Saddam Hussein at this time."

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) said Clinton ought to be cautious about escalating the confrontation, saying, "Before we ask one American to give up their life... we ought to have a pretty good reason to do so."

Both Republican and Democratic congressional leaders indicated the Clinton administration did not tell them of the initial missile attack until after it occurred. The lack of advance notice riled Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) a frequent and sharp critic of Perry. He said he supported Clinton's moves but wondered if he had a plan for concluding the conflict.

Perry told reporters there were signs that Saddam was reacting to the U.S. assaults.

U.S. officials have observed "a general pullback of Iraqi forces in the north," although more than 40,000 Iraqi troops remained there, Perry said at a joint appearance with British Defense Minister Michael Portillo.

In addition, he said, half the Iraqi MiG jets stationed at airbases in the area now included in the "no-fly" zone in the south have moved north. A senior U.S. Defense official gave numbers, saying the Iraqis appeared to have moved about 25 of the 46 MiG aircraft in that zone.

U.S. allies have had mixed reactions to the U.S. strikes. While Britain, Germany and Japan have been supportive, France, Spain and Russia objected. Saudi Arabia asked the United States not to use planes based on its land for the strikes.

Despite the friction with some allies, Clinton said of the multinational coalition allied in 1991 against Saddam: "I don't think it's dead."

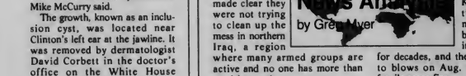
Secretary of State Warren Christopher left Washington for Europe for consultations with some allies, telling reporters on his plane that his main target is France.

"The cooperation of the French is highly desirable," he said. "We hope they will be willing cooperate fully."

Both British and French planes remain active in enforcing the "no-fly" zone over southern Iraq, but neither is policing the newly expanded section of that zone.

Portillo said the U.S. strikes against Iraq were part of a shared Western aim of putting "some impediments in the way" of Saddam's repression of his own people.

The Spanish defense minister, Eduardo Serra, told a news conference that his country in principle would not oppose the use of Spanish military facility for possible further attacks against Iraq.



THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

From one class to the next...

Kristina Tolentino, Class of 1999, gave a warm welcome to the class of 2000 at Sunday's convocation.

Politics determine bombing sites

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saddam Hussein's army attacked the Kurds in northern Iraq. So why did the United States respond with missiles and an expanded no-fly zone hundreds of miles away in the south?

The Americans made clear they were not trying to clean up the mess in northern Iraq, a region where many armed groups are active and no one has more than partial control.

In choosing a target, the Americans opted for Iraqi air defense systems in the south for at least three apparent reasons:

• Reason No. 1: Quite simply, the Americans consider southern Iraq more important than the north. Iraq's southern neighbors, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, are major oil producers with staunchly pro-American governments that favor tough action against Saddam. The Americans blasted Iraqi air defense systems in the south and pushed a southern no-fly zone from the 32nd parallel to the 33rd parallel, a line that runs only 30 miles south of Baghdad. As a result, it will be more difficult for Saddam to mobilize his army and send it south to threaten Kuwait or Saudi Arabia, two countries that can't match Iraq's military might.

• Reason No. 2: Northern Iraq is a complete mess, and a U.S. strike there would have been filled with risk.

The two main Iraqi Kurdish factions in the north have been quarreling on and off for decades, and they again came to blows on Aug. 17, ending a fragile cease-fire.

Iraq intervened on behalf of one faction, the Kurdish Democratic Party, alleging that archrival Iran was supporting the other Kurdish group, the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan. That intervention sparked the U.S. attack.

Northern Iraq is even more volatile thanks to periodic attacks by Turkey, which pursues its own rebellious Kurds when they retreat into the rugged mountains across the border.

Yet no one group has dominance, making the region extremely unstable. When Iraq saw Iran meddling recently, Saddam apparently decided he could not let that pass without responding. But that in turn provoked the Americans.

• Reason No. 3: U.S. relations with Turkey, a key NATO ally that borders northern Iraq, are sensitive at the moment. The new Turkish prime minister, Necmettin Erbakan, is an Islamic conservative, and the United States doesn't want to risk pushing him away from the West.

A U.S. attack in northern Iraq could easily ignite a much larger conflagration, thereby sending Kurdish refugees pouring into Turkey, as happened in 1991 after the Gulf War.

Turkey is already a bit touchy about having the U.S.-led forces patrolling the no-fly zone over northern Iraq from bases in southeastern Turkey.

In the U.S. calculations, hitting the north wasn't worth the risk, even it that's where Saddam's army was active.

The Americans declared the mission a success. But the latest U.S. confrontation with Saddam, like previous showdowns, has produced inconclusive results.

When the dust clears from the latest fight, Saddam may have a bit less room to maneuver. But the Kurds will still feel vulnerable, and Saddam will remain in full control of Iraq. It seems almost inevitable that the cycle will begin again.

'Fair Share' bill released; will help lower student costs

By Jonathon Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Fair Share bill, a five–year legislative plan which caps the percentage of educational costs paid by students and strengthens the accountability of state institutions of public higher education institutions, was released over the summer by the Massachusetts legislature.

"Fair Share is an investment in the power of knowledge," said Sen. Stan Rosenberg (D–Hampshire and Franklin counties), chair of the Ways and Means Committee. "It is a clear and manageable proposal to move toward a world class public higher education system for UMass."

The Senate Ways and Means committee formed the Fair Share bill in response to a 112 percent increase in student costs from 1988–1992.

The bill states that by fiscal year 2002, as state funding increases, a resident student's cost (tuition and mandatory fees) shall not exceed one fourth of the per–student cost of education at a community college and one–third of the per– student cost at the university and state colleges.

"We [SGA] applaud the efforts of the Ways and Means Committee and the Fair Share Bill," said Student Government Association (SGA) President Maurice Caston. "However, all mandatory fees should be included in the formula; as it is, the bill does not represent true fair share.

"Yet, I think the Fair Share bill will be good for the University," said Caston. "It will allow the state to kick in more money to the under–funded public education system."

Also, within the Fair Share bill is an increase in state support which will help close the $145 million dollar gap in higher education funding.

"The Fair Share bill will keep education affordable," added Caston.

Rosenberg said, "Fair Share also provides the best opportunity for a college degree to thousands of low and moderate income students who otherwise would be priced out of higher education."

The SGA and the Student Center for Education and Research Advocacy (SCERA) have been working with Rosenberg in the creation of the Fair Share Bill since 1994.

SCERA held a phone bank last semester in order to make parents of UMass students aware of the Fair Share bill. SGA leaders have met with Rosenberg to ensure that students were included in the process.

"We have supported the effort to make Fair Share a reality from the very beginning," Caston said.

"Stabilizing the Commonwealth's Investment: Toward a Five–Year Financing Plan for Higher Education" is the special task force report which the bill stemmed from. Rosenberg sponsored the original legislation for the Fair Share bill with State Representative Ellen Story (D–Amherst).

Fair Share will also establish a program under which the commonwealth would contribute $1 to each institution for every $2 raised privately by the institution (up to $25 million for UMass).

"The Fair Share bill sets up a good incentive for the University to raise private funds," said SGA Secretary of Finance Jeff Coker. "This will help

Turn to FAIR SHARE, page 3

Senate to try to bar job discrimination in Defense of Marriage act

By Cassandra Burrell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Key Senate Democrats say they're optimistic they'll get enough votes to add language outlawing job discrimination against gays into a broader bill banning federal recognition of same-sex marriages.

Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) Sen. James Jeffords (R-Vt.) and Sen. Joseph Lieberman (D-Conn.) said they hope the Senate will pass the measure as part of the bill defining marriage as a legal union between one man and one woman.

Gay-rights activists still are lobbying against the overall bill — called the Defense of Marriage Act — even though they expect the Republican-dominated Congress to pass it by a wide margin.

But they hope that if it does pass, it will include the anti-discrimination measure.

"When the proposed Defense of Marriage Act reaches the Senate floor ... People for the American Way Action Fund urges senators to take lemons and make lemonade: attach the Employment Non-Discrimination Act to the bill as an amendment," the group said in a written statement yesterday.

"We want to shift the debate away from anti-gay diatribes toward a discussion about ending discrimination against gays and lesbians," added the statement.

During a news conference, Kennedy said the anti-job discrimination amendment had 31 cosponsors yesterday, and he knew of at least eight additional Democrats who have said they would vote for it.

Support is growing, although "I think we all know... we are fighting uphill," Lieberman said.

Lieberman said he will vote for the overall bill to support the institution of marriage.

However, Kennedy said he will vote against it because he believes it is unconstitutional and unnecessary. He also has attacked the bill as "thinly disguised bigotry."

Jeffords said he hadn't yet made up his mind.

The Defense of Marriage Act, introduced by Sen. Don Nickles (R-Okla.) would give states the authority to refuse to recognize same-sex marriages performed in other states.

Conservatives have said the bill is needed because a gay-rights lawsuit could lead Hawaii to become the first to legalize gay marriages. If that happens, other states may have to recognize same-sex marriages performed in Hawaii, they have said.

President Clinton has said he would sign the bill in its current form. Nickles remains opposed to the anti-job discrimination amendment.

The House passed the Defense of Marriage Act 342-67 in July. In the Senate, Republican and Democratic leaders were deadlocked over what other amendments would be allowed during debate on the bill.

They included a Democratic proposal to include violence against gays in the list of crimes that could be declared "hate crimes" under federal law, increasing their penalties. Another Democratic plan would require health insurers to cover hospital stays of at least 48 hours for new mothers and her newborns if their doctors think it is necessary.

A third would make it illegal for anyone convicted of domestic violence to own or buy a handgun.

Republicans hoped to introduce amendments that would reimburse the legal expenses of the White House travel office employees fired in May 1993, cancel the District of Columbia's exemption from some welfare rules and require unions to get written consent of members before spending their individual union dues on political activities.

For Your Information

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Sept. 5

Music — The Five College Early Music Program will be holding "painless" auditions for the Early Music Collegium, Euridice Ensemble, Voices Feminine and other ensembles. Auditions will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. in Room 12 of Pratt Hall at Mount Holyoke College today, and from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Classroom at Music Building at Hampshire College and 4 to 5:30 p.m. at Sage Hall at Smith College on Friday. For information, call 539-2079.

Friday, Sept. 6

Dance — The Fourgone Conclusions Contradance will be held tonight and every first Friday at the Greenfield Guiding Star Grange. The evening starts with Scandinavian couples dances followed by contras called by Mary Desrosiers. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. For more information, call 549-1913.

Comedy — "First Week Comedy Show" will be held at 8 p.m. at the Bluewall Cafe. The event is free.

Film — Eraser will be shown at 8 and 10 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event is free.

Party — CASA Dominicana will host a "Welcome Back Party" at 10 p.m. at the Southside Room in the Hampden Student Center. There is a $2 admission fee.

Saturday, Sept. 7

Dance — A Scandinavian Dance Workshop will be held this evening and every first Saturday from 8–10:30 p.m. at the South Amherst Munson Library. Arna Desser and/or Van Kaynor will teach with live fiddles. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. Call 549–1913 for more information.

Dance — An English Country Dance will be held tonight and every first Saturday from 8–10:30 p.m. at the South Amherst Munson Library. Helen Davenport teaches the dances and Van Kaynor leads the band. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. For more information, call 549–1913.

Special Event — "Welcome to the West Fest '96" will take place from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Southwest Horseshoe. The event is free.

Music — Melissa Etheridge will play at 8 p.m. in the Mullins Center. Tickets are still available. Call 545-0505 for information.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hirjas in India," an all–male religious sect that is considered an alternative, third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, is free and will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, room 301.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly fellowship meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, prayer, teaching and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church will hold its annual tag sale today from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. and tomorrow from noon – 4 p.m. Hot dogs, coffee, cold soda and fresh popcorn are available in addition to the wide array of sale items, including many collectibles, exceptional furniture, lamps and appliances; new and old merchandise; adult and children's clothing; luggage; dishes; and more. Rain dates are Sept. 21–22.

Sunday, Sept. 8

Religious — The United Christian Foundation invites students interested in fellowship to meet from 5 to 7 p.m. at Folsom House, located on 367 N. Pleasant and Fearing Sts. There will be activities, and all are welcome and respected. For more information, call Yuland at 546–3659 or Keny at 256–0109.

Notices

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday in September there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East ST, in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle Monday, Sept. 9, through Friday, Sept. 13, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. Information about preventing theft and bike identification will be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. – midnight. Dance to a variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. Call 584–8167 for more information.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Cappella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. at the Campus Center. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call (617) 641–2303.

Volunteer recruitment — The Boltwood Project, a community service project at UMass, is seeking 200–300 student volunteers to work in one of approximately 23 different groups in the Valley. Participating in Boltwood allows University and Five College students the opportunity to earn one or two credits while volunteering. Interested students need to attend one of three recruitment nights in the Campus Center Auditorium on Sept. 9 – 11 from 6:30–8:30 p.m.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

Sept. 5

A telecommunications vehicle backed into a parked housing vehicle on Thatcher Way.

Property damage to a car in parking lot 34 was reported.

Alarm — Car

Sept. 3

The owner of a vehicle in parking lot 33 was notified to check his vehicle for alarm sounding.

The alarm sounding of a vehicle in parking lot 33 was reported. The owner was en route to reset and the vehicle was secured.

Alarm — Intrusion

Sept. 3

Staff from Marcus Hall reported an accidental alarm activation.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Sept. 2

An individual, who left his vehicle parked three months ago in the Campus Center Garage, returned to find it damaged.

Drug Law Offenses

Sept. 3

William Duffy, 18, of 27 Rosemary Ave., Wakefield, was arrested in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall for possession of a hypodermic and Class D and E substances.

Drugs were confiscated in Pierpont Residence Hall. Charges are pending.

The odor of marijuana was reported in Patterson Residence Hall.

The odor of marijuana was reported in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Family Offenses — Domestics

Sept. 3

A security receptionist in Thatcher Residence Hall reported male and female residents having a verbal argument. The room was checked.

Larceny

Sept. 3

An individual reported a trek bike stolen from the rack at Webster Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations

Sept. 2

Alcoholic beverages were confiscated from underage individuals on the Southwest Residential Area Mall.

Sept. 3

Alcoholic beverages were confiscated from two underage parties in John Adams Residence Hall.

Alcoholic beverages were confiscated from an underage individual in Washington Residence Hall.

Lost/Found Property

Sept. 3

A ring was found in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

A passport was found in the Campus Center Garage.

A mountain bike was found on the lawn near parking lot 22.

Medical Emergency

Sept. 3

A party complaining of general weakness was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Missing Person

Sept. 3

An individual in Johnson Residence Hall reported concern for a new student who felt uncomfortable with crowds on campus, packed his belongings and told his roommate he was leaving.

Noise Complaint

Sept. 3

There was a report of M–80's going off in the Orchard Hill Residential Area Bowl. An investigation showed all quiet.

Sept.4

A group in Gorman Residence Hall was advised to quiet down.

A loud party in Lincoln Apartments was asked to quiet down.

Parking Complaint

Sept. 3

Fourteen cars were towed from parking lot 46 for parking violations.

Two cars were towed from the parking garage for parking violations.

Suspicious Vehicle

Sept. 3

The owner of an unlocked vehicle on Sylvan Drive with a computer in the back seat was notified.

The owner of a vehicle on Clark Hill Road was notified that his vehicle's lights were on.

The owner of a vehicle stopped in a bus stop on Massachusetts Avenue was asked to move.

Suspicious Person/Activity

Sept. 5

Individuals on Massachusetts Avenue were reported for roller skating down the center of the road.

An unwanted person attempted to gain access to Melville Hall.

Four individuals were observed tampering with a vehicle in parking lot 32, found trespassing and escorted from campus.

Vandalism

Sept. 3

A partial roll of toilet paper was set on fire in Crampton Residence Hall.

A parking officer reported a vehicle in parking lot 52 that he believed to be broken into; the owner said that the damage was from last semester.

With your help,
MDA is building a tomorrow
without neuromuscular diseases.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

1-800-COLLECT®

Proudly Sponsors Intramural Sports At

Univ. of Massachusetts-Amherst

★ ★ ★ 1-800-COLLECT® Intramural-Recreational SPORTS ★ ★ ★

SPORTS:	ENTRIES CLOSE:	CAPTAIN'S MEETING:	PLAY BEGINS:
Flag Football	Sept. 16	Sept. 19 & 20, 6:00pm	Sept. 23
Soccer	Sept. 16	Sept. 19 & 20, 6:00pm	Sept. 23
Softball	Sept. 17	Sept. 23, 6:00pm	Sept. 25
Ice Hockey	Sept. 18	Sept. 25, 6:00pm	Oct. 1
Tennis Singles	Sept. 24	Oct. 2, 6:00pm	Oct. 4
Field Hockey	Sept. 24	Oct. 2, 6:00pm	Oct. 4

Officials needed for Flag Football, Softball, Soccer, and Field Hockey.
Check with IM Office for meeting locations and for late entries.
Call 5-2693 or 5-0022 for more information or visit our website: http://www.umass.edu:80/umim/

SIGN UP TODAY

NIRSA Endorsed

See Your Intramural Recreational Department

1-800-COLLECT®
It's Fast. It's Easy. It Saves.

Netanyahu, Arafat meet, shake hands before discussing peace process' future

By Jack Katzanell
Associated Press

EREZ CROSSING, Gaza Strip — With his arm twisted, Benjamin Netanyahu yesterday shook the hand of Yasser Arafat, a man he once condemned as a murderer. Then the Israeli hard-liner and the former guerrilla talked peace.

The historic meeting at the Israel-Gaza border — arranged after months of U.S. pressure and Palestinian threats — helped clear the air of animosity that thickened after Netanyahu's Likud Party came to power in May.

It also signaled to the Palestinians that the other half of a deeply divided Israel has finally accepted them, and especially Arafat, as peace partners.

But it yielded few concrete results.

At a news conference after the hour-long meeting, Netanyahu said he was prepared to negotiate a final peace agreement and, in his most generous moment, added he hoped to "improve the prosperity and economic conditions of the Palestinian population."

Arafat said the meeting set the stage for progress in restarting the peace process, which has been frozen since Israel's election. "The path was cleared for us to negotiate on all levels and in all aspects," he said.

Netanyahu and Arafat arrived separately yesterday evening at the Erez crossing between Israel and Gaza.

Inside the meeting room, a grim-faced Netanyahu buttoned his jacket and reached across a table to briefly grasp the hand of Arafat, dressed in his usual black-and-white checkered headdress and olive military-style outfit. Israeli TV stations played the footage of the handshake over and over, sometimes in slow motion. Even as the leaders spoke, aides bickered about the height of the podiums set up for the news conference, with the Palestinians charging Netanyahu's was taller and insisting it be changed. The two men stood side-by-side during the joint 15-minute news conference — but they barely looked at each other, and the usually polished Netanyahu appeared stiff and uncomfortable.

The meeting did not address key outstanding issues, such as Israel's desire to change the terms of its promised pullout from Hebron and the Palestinians' demand that Israel ease the six-month closure of their territories.

The sides had earlier agreed on a vague statement declaring a liaison committee would start meeting today to oversee implementation of agreements already signed, including on Hebron. Netanyahu drew harsh attacks from hard-line Israeli politicians for meeting with Arafat. They accused him of breaking campaign promises and buckling under U.S. pressure. "It's a grave mistake," veteran Likud lawmaker Uzi Landau said.

Former Premier Shimon Peres, architect of the Israel-PLO accords, said the summit was an "enormous moral victory" for his policies.

Outside the meeting site, Israeli peace activists waved a sign saying, "It's about time."

Israeli elder statesman Abba Eban said Netanyahu had no choice but to honor existing agreements, terming the summit "a shotgun wedding."

Still, the encounter was the first recognition of Arafat by an Israeli premier from the Likud Party, which long opposed Israel-PLO peacemaking.

As late as February, Netanyahu had said he would not hold talks with Arafat. But as the May elections approached, he softened his position, saying he would only meet Arafat if it was vital for Israel's security.

Netanyahu said later yesterday that the meeting became possible after he received assurances the Palestinians would cease what he considered violations of the peace accords.

Netanyahu has argued that Arafat did too little to fight Islamic militants and operated government offices and security services in Jerusalem even though Israel-PLO accords limit his jurisdiction to parts of the West Bank and Gaza. In recent weeks Arafat closed down several Jerusalem offices.

The Palestinian leader, meanwhile, is angry with Netanyahu's decision to expand Jewish settlements and by the delayed withdrawal from Hebron, the last West Bank town under occupation.

Netanyahu wants Arafat to renegotiate the terms of the Hebron troop pullback to better ensure the safety of 450 Jewish settlers living in the heart of the city of 94,000 Palestinians. The Palestinians said they are willing to discuss some changes but are concerned about setting a precedent for reopening agreements. In Hebron, Palestinians warned that talk must be translated into facts on the ground.

"This meeting is just giving us an anesthetic," said Hassan Afazani, who runs a photo shop and studio. "There isn't going to be a peace at all in Hebron unless the redeployment comes soon." The summit followed pressure from the United States, Egypt and the international community, and a flurry of secret contacts involving U.N. envoy Terje Larsen of Norway.

An Israeli source said the Americans even hinted a meeting between Netanyahu and President Clinton next week was linked to his meeting Arafat. The warning was apparently passed to Netanyahu's foreign policy adviser, Dore Gold, by U.S. envoy Dennis Ross during a meeting in Paris last week.

"There has been a very intense engagement between representatives of the prime minister [and] Arafat. We obviously have been very helpful and supportive of that effort," Ross told Israel TV yesterday.

■ Fair Share

continued from page 1

bring resolve to the present inconsistency of funds."

Public higher education institutions will be responsible to a Fair Share Formula Review which is established in the bill. The review will evaluate the accuracy and effectiveness of the funding formulas used.

The bill also establishes accountability objectives for the public higher education system and requires that the Board of Higher Education work with each institution to develop a comprehensive system of educational and management performance measures and standards.

"In return for the state's investment, we hold the institutions responsible for their performance," said Rosenberg.

The Board will also provide grants to institutions for hiring independent consultants to help campuses improve their performance.

In addition, the Board of Higher Education will file with the legislature an annual "Condition of Higher Education Report" describing the progress of each institution.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Don't hate me because I'm beautiful.
A bird perches proudly on the cool water of the campus pond.

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0080

Emergency Medical Training
by
Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time / Evening
Classes start September 16, 1996
Call UMass Continuing education at 545-0474

256-8147 Andy's Pizza Savings!!! 256-8147
Clip this coupon for:
Small Plain Pizza FREE
with purchase of any large pizza at regular price

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

CAMPUS GEAR
For All Your Collegiate Needs
THE BEST SELECTION of UMass and Greek APPAREL
ALL GREEK MERCHANDISE 20% OFF EVERY MONDAY
225 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 549-0944
including Champion U.S.A.
VISIT CAMPUS GEAR TODAY!
ΔΧ • ΦΣΚ • ΠΚΑ • ΣΑΜ • ΣΦΕ • ΘΧ • ΑΧΠ • ΑΕΓ

The Mercantile
Northampton 18 Center St 584-1205
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1396
Mon-Sat: 10-6 Sun: 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9

Campus Activities Presents
First Week '96
"A Taste of UMass",
Friday, 6 Sept.
*FIRST WEEK VIDEO DANCE
Student Union Ballroom
9pm to 1am
*FIRST WEEK COMEDY SHOW
Bluewall Cafe
8pm
FREE ADMISSION
*FIRST WEEK MOVIE-"ERASER"
Campus center Auditorium
8pm and 10pm
-Welcome to UMass-

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1582

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mike McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Conventional wisdom

I sat, bleary-eyed, in front of the television watching the Republican convention, anxiously awaiting the next prelude, the next preliminary speaker before the main event. All in preparation for the final outcome. It was at about this time that I began to realize two things:

1) I'm not getting paid for this.

2) I (and the rest of the world) already know the final outcome.

It was a bit anticlimactic. After all, watching the convention when you've already known who the nominee is for quite some time is like seeing a movie adaptation of your all-time favorite book. You already know how it ends.

Not that it didn't have its surprises. Even though I'm no fan of Republican ideology, and even less of a fan of most Republicans, I was shocked at some of the depths that the party plunged to this time. Let's wallow in just a few lowlights from the convention floor, shall we?

• Merry Fisher, a long–time AIDS activist, who Tom Brokaw helpfully pointed out is "still" HIV–positive (just in case anyone forgot that a cure for the AIDS retrovirus hasn't been found yet), dragging a young HIV–positive African– American girl on the stage pleading with the crowd to elect Dole so he could continue the fight for a cure.

Unfortunately, Ms. Fisher forgot to mention that we'd probably be about six years closer to that cure if the problem hadn't been ignored by the administration of Ronald Reagan. Who, is "still" a Republican, by the way, Tom. Not to mention the fight this same party put up against universal health care a while ago.

The Democrats played their sympathy cards as well, bringing Christopher Reeve and James Brady out to rally the troops, but those people are adults, fully capable of understanding the ramifications and responsibilities associated with a political convention appearance. The young lady that Ms. Fisher brought out probably was not. Both Fisher and the party should be ashamed of themselves using a sick child in that manner to further their own goals.

• Speaking of helpless dupes, Scott O'Grady found himself as a mere puppet in the hands of the party, finding himself both on stage and on a huge video screen lauding empty praise on Ronald Reagan, of all people, and thanking the Republicans for his rescue from the jungle.

Um, Scott, hate to burst your bubble, babe, but the Commander in Chief at the time of your rescue was a Democrat, and Reagan hadn't been in office in quite some time. You might have read about it, simp. I used to have some respect for you.

He also had the nerve to salute Reagan on behalf of the members of the armed forces. I was in the armed forces. Don't even try to speak for me, pal.

• Speaking of Reagan, the tearful, maudlin overblown tribute to him would have been a nice touch, if it wasn't so deliberately misleading. It painted an image of Reagan as more of an icon than a seriously flawed leader. Going on and on about what s popular President he was, when almost every poll released since he left office shows exactly the opposite. Lee Iacocca even referred to Reagan as a good CEO. Not a President, but a CEO. I wasn't aware that the mark of a good CEO was running up deficit spending to the point where we're still feeling the pinch. As James Carville wrote, we wouldn't even have a deficit anymore if we weren't paying off the interest of the deficit rung up during the Reagan/Bush years. Way to run a business, Lee. By the way it's a country, not a corporation.

• Haley Barber calling the Republican party "big, bold and diverse." Brave words in front of a crowd almost exclusively white and male.

• The party holding up Christine Todd Whitman as a shining example of the diverse party that Barber spoke of. Almost as if to say to the predominantly anti–choice crowd, "See! We really like women! Here's one! Some of our best friends are women!"

Methinks they doth protest too much.

• Colin Powell's suspicious omission of "sexual orientation" from his tirade against discrimination, mentioning only sex, race and religion.

• Dole himself, who admitted that he hadn't even read his party's platform and had no plans to do so. Ask yourself, if this guy can't even be bothered to care what his own party thinks, what about the decisions he's going to make that affect people who aren't Republicans?

• And finally Dole, continually referring to his party as "the party of Lincoln," as if that's supposed to mean that the Republican party has always been about inclusion.

True enough Lincoln was a Republican, but in name only. At that time the Republican ideology was almost completely different from what it has been in the recent past and is today. I guess if they actually manage to cut education, no one will ever find that out anyway.

Ordinarily, I would worry about the sheer amount of methane being released from all the bull dung on the convention floor, but according to the Nielsen ratings no one watched, instead opting to breathe cleaner air elsewhere.

Bob Dunn is Collegian columnist.

A lesson in PC 101

It would be most appropriate in my first column of the year to welcome back all of us who are fortunate enough to return to this wonderful place called UMass. As for you first–year students, freshmen in particular, allow me to introduce you to the one aspect of campus life that you will see, hear and maybe even feel every single day you're here.

It's political correctness. While some of you may actually agree with this bunch of PC bull, I'm willing to wager that more of you will be sickened and driven to the edge of insanity by it all. I know I am.

Let me give you some examples of this "dookie" with which too many people choose to pervert the English language. How about starting with ways of classifying people? For instance, we have no more black people in this society. Now we have African–Americans. Chinese? Japanese? No, no... can you say Asian–American? Let's not forget the Indians... I mean Native Americans. I always slip up on that one. However, if you're white, there's no real fancy schmancy way of saying that. Unless you're really PC in which case you could go for something like pale–fleshed American or maybe pigmentally–challenged.

Give it up already. We know who you are. We know what your heritage is and we don't need you to wear it like a billboard. If you're a citizen of this country, you're American. Enough said. Unless you're an illegal immigrant, then you should be hung by the toenails and put on the first boat out of port. Don't let the door hit ya where the good lord split ya'.

Now for some of the evasions of truth people hide under to cover up their imperfections. How about something like the sudden lack of fat people we have found? You know why? They're not fat anymore, they're overweight or heavy– set. They may even have some sort of excessive gravity affliction.

No more deaf people, they're the hearing impaired. Blind? Uh no, you've just become a member of the visually impaired club. Maybe you're handicapped, but probably not because you're more likely physically challenged.

Maybe you're stupid, if so then suck it up buddy 'cause you're stupid. You're not learning disabled or you don't have an insufficient flow of knowledge into your data processing module. You're just stupid, live with it.

Whatever you do, don't call anybody gay, because gay means happy. We wouldn't want to call anybody happy now would we. The proper term is homosexual, but I think heterosexually challenged may be even a little better. Yeah right. You're gay. Be proud of it or don't be it. There are a lot worse things you could be called than gay, so hey... be happy.

If all of this PC has really annoyed the hell out of you, then use your voice. If I have annoyed you, I've done my job. Just learn to live with what, who or where you are and stop trying to change all of that simply by referring to it in a different way. My name is Andrew and you can call me whatever the heck you want, but when it's all said and done I'm still going to be the same person.

Plain and simple. I am what I am and no amount of adjectives (or expletives) can change that. I wear glasses, my hair is graying, I've got a beer gut, I'll probably go bald someday and I smoke. I'm not an alcohol–induced overweight, bespectacled, young fellow with hair discolormentation and the potential for unintentional cranial fur removal who likes to inhale carbon monoxide and other assorted health injurious agents. I'm just me.

In the words of George Carlin, "all of the PC crap makes me want to vomit... well maybe not vomit, makes me want to engage in an involuntary personal protein spill."

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Prospective Columnists!

So... You have an opinion. And you'd like to have that opinion expressed on the editorial/opinion page of the Daily Collegian. Here's what to do.

1) Come on down to speak with the nice folks at the Editorial/opinion desk in the Collegian offices in the Campus Center basement. They don't bite, and will be more than happy to field questions you present to them.

2) Prepare a sample column that will offer us a fleeting glimpse at the magic contained within your pen or keyboard, whichever may be the case.

3) Attend the meeting for interested prospective columnists. It will be held in the above–mentioned office at approximately 7 p.m. At that point, much more information will be available.

4) Have a nice day!

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A breath of something different

Since this is my first column, I suppose I should introduce myself. My name is Erik Molitor. I am a junior here at the University of Massachusetts. I come from Westfield, Mass., and before that I lived in New Jersey, a state which I am convinced has not a single redeeming quality.

I am a math major, but don't peg me for the introverted Unabomber type. I get pretty good grades, but that's because I enjoy what I'm doing, so that makes it easy. My toughest class so far was called "Fundamentals of Abstract Math," math with no numbers! Please, don't ask.

My parents are divorced, but I still love them both. I have lived with my dad since the split. I was quite proud to realize just how much I have become like him in the last couple of years. He's one of the greatest guys I know, and there are certainly worse things I could become.

I am extremely conservative, which is the main reason I decided I wanted to write columns for the Collegian. In the two years I have been here I have grown sickeningly accustomed to the liberal slant of virtually all of the columnists. The Editorial/Opinion page has been littered with fluff, rather than addressing more controversial and important political issues. So I decided it was time for a breath of something different.

Now this is not to say that my conservative ideals are right, or that they are the only way. They are simply a different view for the campus to mull over than the mound of politically correct, liberal columns that come out every other day. I know even before I write my first editorial that I am bound to get pounds of mail, and to start more than one heated controversy and debate. This is what I intend. I love a good argument, and I respect anyone who can communicate their ideas effectively and convincingly. You may never change my mind on an issue, but I will never assume that I can change yours either.

I am going to attack every issue I can think of that deserves it. Some of my favorite political issues include welfare, immigration, homosexuality, drug abuse, foreign policy, education and political correctness.

I have many beliefs about the human race that drive my political thought. I believe strongly in pure competition. We have attained the highest evolutionary position on Earth through natural selection. Those with the most power are the ones that prosper; this is true throughout society as well. If you have the influence, you have every right to use it to serve your own needs. This applies to economics, foreign policy, everything. The United States is the strongest nation in the world, so we have every right to guide the lower nations of the world in the direction that will profit us the most.

> "Those with the most power are the ones that prosper; this is true throughout society as well. If you have the influence, you have every right to use it to serve your own needs."
>
> Erik Molitor

I do not believe any racist ideologies. I think all people are pretty much equally worthless. Of course there are exceptions to every rule, but a person has to work pretty hard against this mainstream tendency.

I also have come to believe that people are, by nature, violent. Without laws to keep us in check, there would be chaos and murder everywhere. I do not think it has always been this way, but the moral decline of society has made it more evident. Sometimes I think it is no use to fight the trend; we should just ride the tidal wave of crime, corruption and violence down into the pits of hell. Our society will someday crumble without a moral base to hold it up, just as Rome's did.

We are smart enough to reverse this trend, but the apathy of our society is incredible. We just don't care anymore when we are shown the proof of our imminent downfall every night on the nightly news. As a society, we can no longer unite on any subject. The civil rights cause would have withered and died in an environment like today's, because no one would have gotten up off their couch to join a march.

Democracy is based on the involvement of its citizens. When people stop getting involved, stop debating the issues and turn out less than 30 percent of the population for national elections they are begging to be ruled rather than governed.

So if I strike a chord with you, fine. If you agree with me, great. If you hate what I say, even better! Pick up your pen and start writing, but don't expect me to give up without a fight.

Erik Molitor is a UMass student.

The sound of silence

I'm sitting in the Collegian News Room, and it is quiet. The faint humming blow of the vents is the only background music to the off–key tune of my typing.

It's rare to find any sort of quiet around here, especially in the newsroom, where there are usually 8 million people (myself included) running around like penguins with their heads cut off. By 5 p.m., things have really worked up to a fevered pitch and brain power has approached critical mass.

We are living at a time when technology and science allow us to communicate around the world almost instantly. If we are in our cars, there are cell phones and beepers. If a war breaks out, the 5 p.m. news is there to tell us about it.

With so much out there, we would be foolish not to use it. The problem is not in using it, but in abusing it, and not in the way that you probably think I am going to talk about. I'm not going to write about the "Idiot box" or Big Brother watching our every move.

It's not the right to privacy I'd like to address, that's an entirely different column. What really concerns me is not what others can do to us using this science, but what this new technology has stolen from us, kidnapped in the middle of the night and buried.

Quiet.

There are many kinds.

It's hard to find any place today that is truly devoid of distracting noise.

It's even harder to find anywhere on this campus that's even remotely quiet.

So many kinds of silence, so few places to find them.

Example: The mind–numbing, heart–pounding cloud of intensity that forms inside s person's head when one finds oneself hanging onto a mountain bike for dear life as they are hurtling down a steep rock–strewn, water bar covered, watch–out–for–the–low–branches–or–you're–going–to–eat–wood trail. People yelling, cars in the distance, dogs barking, all of it, every last noise, fades.

Example 2: The humble silence above tree–line. If you can find somewhere vertical, and it stays vertical for long enough, eventually you will come to s place with no trees. At first it's kind of eerie, while there is life above this man– observed line of demarcation, it is not what one would find at sea level. The only sound you hear is the wind dancing across the bare rock. The only thing you feel is the sun beating down on you. Often, there is no conscious thought, only the drive to continue onward. We all have our moments of doubt, but when the wind whistling in your ear is the only sound for miles around it's easier to grab that self– doubt by the throat, kick the crap out of it, and toss it over the edge. I find it amazing what we are capable of doing when we don't have someone there to tell us we can't do it.

A Funyak looks like a Kayak. A Funyak floats like a Kayak. A Funyak is paddled like a kayak. A Funyak, however, in all it's glory, does not roll like a kayak. In fact they don't roll at all.

At least not with a person still sitting in them. I know this well. I swam several times in the Pemigawasset river this summer. I swam in flat water, small rapids and a few not– so–small rapids. Often not on purpose.

OK, never on purpose.

But it was still fun. And the current isn't really that fast, unless you've been dumped halfway through a rapid, your boat gets away from you, and you're left standing there holding a paddle in waist deep white–water trying to figure out what your next move should be. Then it really looks like it's movin'.

Not that I know anyone to whom that has happened.

Not that it happened to me.

Well, OK, maybe it did.

Believe me, as soon as the sound of that rushing water starts to bounce around your brain, all extraneous thought is tossed overboard. It's a loud kind of quiet, different from others, a sound that washes the soul and quenches its thirst.

At 9:05 on a Wednesday morning, things are pretty quiet around here, and that's fine by me.

Daniel E. Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Mullins Center set for Etheridge

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

COURTESY FRANK OCKENFELS

Melissa Etheridge headlines the William D. Mullins Center on Saturday.

In recent years, it's hard to imagine Melissa Etheridge and not equate her with her sexuality. She is, perhaps, the most prominent lesbian musician performing these days. This Saturday, Etheridge returns to the Pioneer Valley to promote her latest album, Your Little Secret.

Yet while some argue that she became a bit of an overnight success with her previous release, the triple platinum album, Yes I Am, Etheridge has travelled a long road to fame. And now she intends to not only promote awareness and tolerance, but to give her fans what they desire most — hard–rocking music.

Though she currently lives in a posh mansion in Hollywood Hills with her lover of six years, Julie Cypher, it was not always luxury and riches for Etheridge. She spent her earliest childhood years in Leavenworth, Kan., listening to her idol Bruce Springsteen and dreaming of becoming a musician. Now, the 34–year–old singer has not only been compared to her idol, but sometimes even called the female Springsteen.

A large part of Etheridge's music is her sexuality, from the awkwardness of being in a first relationship to the pining of a lover gone away. Her songs are inspired by true life experiences, and most of her fans agree that they can relate to what she sings about.

"I will always write about the many human experiences," Etheridge said in a recent interview on an America On–Line (AOL) forum.

By listening to any one of her four albums, it seems Etheridge has been through her fair share of pain, and while times may have been rough, they provided her with inspiration for songs.

"I find [inspiration] from life," she told AOL. "Often that has been loneliness and anger."

These days she has no room in her life for such emotions. She recently announced that Cypher is four months pregnant. Etheridge is also being considered for a role as Janis Joplin in an upcoming film.

Her recent platinum success has also enabled her to forgo an opening act and perform solo.

Etheridge has many connections to New England. She attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston and performed at many of the Hub's clubs before moving to Los Angeles. It was there she began to embark on her career, often playing in small lesbian clubs.

Her first album, Melissa Etheridge was released in 1988, but it wasn't until 1992's Never Enough that she began to gain popularity and respect. The album earned her a Grammy in 1993 for Best Female Rock Vocal and in the same year she publicly came out at the Lambda Ball, celebrating Bill Clinton's inauguration.

1993 was, in fact, a big year for Etheridge. Yes I Am, spawned many hit singles, including "Come to my Window" and "I'm the Only One." She was also chosen as a recipient for the VH1 Honors in 1994 for her work with the Los Angeles Shanti Organization.

For Etheridge, her declaration of lesbianism seemed to boost her career. Suddenly, she realized many more people could identify with her songs. She has also used her popularity to help out many gay organizations, helping educate and inform people.

On her latest album, she doesn't lose any of the passion. The first single, "I Want To Come Over," explores the complicity of relationships. "Nowhere to Go" deals with her years in Kansas and the American dream.

Etheridge promises to excite audiences more than before. She plans to play for over two–and–a–half

Turn to MULLINS, page 9

Paltrow's Emma latest adaptation

Clueless, a '90s adaptation of Austen's novel, hurts newest version

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Correspondent

EMMA
Directed by Douglas McGrath with Gwenetth Paltrow, Jeremy Northam, Toni Colette, and Ewan MacGregor Playing at Academy of Music

Crawl out from under that rock you've been under if you haven't noticed that Jane Austen adaptations have been the hot art house darlings lately. Don't be afraid to embrace the bodice! The Austen films do differ, exhibiting characteristic stamps from each interpretation. The recent BBC production of Pride and Prejudice, a gentle giant weighing in at a hefty mini–series size, can't truly be compared to the sweeping romance of last year's more concise Persuasion.

Austen films tend to be quirkier than any old costume drama, unlike so many of those Merchant–Ivory films, popular enough a few years ago until the public wised up and refused to accept Nick Nolte as the title role in Jefferson in Paris. I wish the Merchant–Ivory boys better luck later this year when they release their Picasso bitter biopic starring Anthony Hopkins as the bald bad–ass.

Emma follows in the footsteps of the most popular of the recent plethora of Austen pics — Ang Lee's Oscar winning (all right, all right, I know it was Emma Thompson's screenplay...) Sense and Sensibility — high profile actors donning unflattering costumes in the name of the highbrow period piece and the upcoming free–for–all Oscar Watch. Emma lacks the simplicity of Sense and Sensibility by juggling potential suitors around and dropping various characters names like they were embroidered handkerchiefs.

Emma will no doubt grab its fair share of nominations as a double fisting, literary adaptation/costume comedy of manners, but the real question is does it deserve any? Probably not for what it will receive. Gwenneth Paltrow is charming enough as the titular heroine Emma Woodhouse who takes it upon herself to play yenta to the denizens of her village, but it's the strong supporting cast that shines in Emma.

Toni Colette, previously seen with Gwenneth Paltrow in The Pallbearer, ran the risk of character actress limbo for playing Muriel from Muriel's Wedding for the rest of her career. With Emma, Colette plays another ugly duckling role, this time as a young lady with a dubious pedigree who falls subject to the matchmaking whims of her friend (Paltrow). Colette's character falls in and out of love so quickly that under Emma's tutelage, "love" as a concept quickly loses its meaning.

What separates Emma from the rest of the pack is Amy Heckerling's multiplex hit Clueless. When Heckerling's film was released, those who were Austen–friendly touted it as a work of genius, an adaptation of Austen's Emma set in modern day Los Angeles. The rest of us thought it was darn funny. With McGrath's film, the rest of us can finally understand Heckerling's genius. It is argued that Austen's stories are timeless, but I believe it's difficult to subscribe as such until you compare Alicia Silverstone's "Cher" to Paltrow's "Emma," making an enlightening double bill, if not amusing.

With Clueless released over a year before Emma, an interesting problem is created. Essentially, those who have seen Clueless can predict every beat of Emma. At times the only thing I was waiting for was to see how Ewan McGregor's character would be portrayed as his figure in Clueless was "updated" into a "disco dancing, Oscar Wilde reading, Streisand ticket holding, friend of Dorothy..." Enter Ewan MacGregor, last seen as the hippest smack daddy this side of the Prime Meridian in Danny Boyle's Trainspotting.

Now, no movie–goer is an islard, but in tailcoats MacGregor still looks a little smarmy. His character, a flamboyant tease for Paltrow and Colette's marriage–minded dispositions, is disappointingly straight. The charm of Clueless was that this character was not only flamboyant, but he was rejecting not only the Emma figure (Silverstone), but her entire gender.

This is where Emma ultimately fails. Feeding wholesome meat to an audience who has already had a great meal at McDonalds. B+

Worship your Collegian!

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday-Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

NEW! BEER DISPLAY AREA ... WE NOW STOCK OVER 100% MORE ICE COLD MICROS & IMPORTS!

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.	HARPOON 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	FOSTERS 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	SARANAC 24-12 oz. Bott. $16.99 + dep.	BECKS 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	J.W. Dundee 24-12 oz. Bott. $14.99 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. "30 pk" $11.99 + dep.	ROLLING ROCK 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $13.99 + dep	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $9.99 + dep.	KEYSTONE LT. "30 pk" $10.99 + dep.	NATURAL LT 24-12 oz. cans $8.99 + dep.	HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.
SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.99 1.75L	GORDON'S GIN $11.99 1.75L	CANADIAN MIST $11.99 1.75L	CAPT. MORGAN SPICED RUM $15.99 1.75L	BEEFEATER GIN $19.99 1.75L	GORDON'S VODKA $10.49 1.75L
CANADIAN CLUB WHISKEY $15.99 1.75L	SEAGRAMS V.O. WHISKEY $15.99 1.75L	STOLICHNAYA VODKA $19.99 1.75L	KAHLUA $12.49 .750 ML	PEACHTREE GIN $6.99 .750 ML	SOUTHERN COMFORT $7.99 .750 ML
BLOSSOM HILL CHARD. & CAB. $6.99 1.5L	"STONE CREEK" WINES $8.99 1.5L	R.H. PHILLIPS "NIGHT HARVEST WINES" $5.99 .750 ML	SANTA RITA MERLOT & CAB. $4.99 .750 ML	BEERBALLS $22.99 + dep.
M/D 20-20 $1.99 .750 ML	BOONES FARM $1.99 .750 ML	ANDREA CHAMPAGNES $2.99 .750 ML	CARLO ROSSI $6.99 4.0L	WE DELIVER 584-8174

KEG OF THE WEEK!
BUD LIGHT $38.99 + DEP.
"KEGS"
BUD, BUD ICE, MICHELOB-ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, MICHELOB LT, LOWENBRAU DK., MICHELOB DK., LITE, LITE ICE ... $39.99 +DEP.
NATURAL LT. NATURAL ICE $34.99 + DEP.

MICRO KEGS
SAM ADAMS $89.99 LOTS
OREGON $89.99 PLUS
SARANAC $89.99 MORE
J.W. DUNDEE $69.99

ICE
10 LBS. $1.29
50 LBS. $5.99
100 LBS. $9.99
SALE GOOD THRU 9/19/96

THE CROSSROADS
MDA is where help and hope meet.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

Used Books
1000's of Academic Paperbacks in many subjects at 50-75% off list
Valley Books
190 N. Pleasant St.
Downtown Amherst
256-1568

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS HUGE BACK to SCHOOL SALE

TEAM UNIFORMS • TEAM TROPHIES • TEAM SWEATSHIRTS • TEAM PLAQUES
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS Also carries a complete line of trophies, awards, ribbons, & plaques. PLUS ...We can customize uniforms, caps, t-shirts & more for your team or organization! Call today for more information! 1-800-231-4311
CHECK OUT THESE SPECIALS PLUS MUCH MORE!
STORE LOCATIONS

Man... or Astroman? flies in

COURTESY CHRIS TOLMER

Man... or Astroman? — they're out of this world.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Man... or Astroman? isn't your average punk rock band.

They didn't grow up listening to the Sex Pistols or the Clash — those bands were never too big on their home planet. Actually they never listened to "Earthling" music. According to Coco the Electronic Monkey Wizard, several years ago a spaceship accidently crashed in Auburn, Ala., leaving the band stranded in a foreign land.

Since the crash, the band has been working in a top secret lab, reportedly in Atlanta, which is where I recently talked to Coco via a phone interview — unfortunately telepathic messages were not received.

Although the band has gained fame in the music industry, their primary mission on Earth has been research, with the intent of fixing the spaceship.

"We were not a band until we crashed on Earth. Then we needed a way to travel around the world to recollect pieces to our spaceship so we decided to form a [touring] band. The band is a means to the end."

Musically, the band is heavily influenced by surf rock of the early 1960's. Why surf and not more current sounds of punk or rap?

"Our database from out of space was out of date; basically our math was 30 years off," Coco explained. "If our math was correct we would probably sound like Rage Against the Machine."

Man...or Astroman? has adapted to Earth's backwardness in music. Coco explained that on their home planet most sound is produced by gamma and beta rays which are foreign to Earthlings. Their music serves a monumental purpose — preparing us for the Next Phase, a mind shattering new form of music. According to Coco, Earthlings will be prepared for this 'sonic bliss' in another six years.

In the surf tradition, Man...or Astroman's? thrives largely, but not entirely, on instrumental tunes using a variety of equipment from antique 1960's instruments to state-of-the art electronics invented by the band themselves in their private lab. Starcrunch plays guitar, Birdstuff sits behind the drums, Dexter X, who only performs live, switches effortlessly from bass and guitar and Coco is the bassist and mastermind of the samplers and other electronic gizmos.

For the first time, on the band's latest, and sixth overall, album, Experiment Zero (Touch & Go) Coco heavily used a Theremin adding a new sound to the band's attack.

"We played a few shows with Jon Spencer who has a Theremin and I messed around with his. Since then I've been totally into them. They were the first electronic instrument developed."

Coco went on to discuss his distaste of most electric instruments, except the Theremin, due to their lack of physical interaction between man and instrument.

On tour the band is known for dressing in space costumes and recreating their laboratory setting on stage complete with stacks of television sets. While this may sound like a scene out of movie, Man...or Astroman? does not support the recent blockbuster, about space aliens, Independence Day.

Coco said, "I had high expectations for the movie but I didn't enjoy it. I couldn't get over the Fresh Prince."

Surprisingly, Coco thought the portrayal of aliens wasn't bad for Hollywood but it wasn't nearly realistic as the 1960's Japanese B-movie Human Vapor which correctly represented life in outer space as less dense than Earth.

Last year Man...or Astroman? opened for Southern Culture on the Skids at Pearl Street Nightclub with one of the most powerful and enjoyable sets I've ever seen. Sunday night Man...or Astroman? returns for another night of space rock action.

Coco warned potential concert-goers that on Sunday, "we will learn a lot about our own existence and about life in outer space." Plus we will get a great night of music from the best punk surf band in the universe.

Man...or Astroman and the Henchmen perform at Pearl Street on Sunday might at 8 p.m. The show is 18+. Tickets are $6 in advance and $7 at the door. Call the club at 584- 7771 for more information.

Ringwald & Shields ready for TV debut

(Editor's Note: The following article was published yesterday. Due to an error most of the article was cut.)

What do Molly Ringwald, Brooke Shields, Bill Cosby and Ted Danson all have in common?

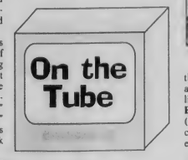
They're all debuting a comedy series this fall. Cosby and Danson have found new homes on CBS, while Shields settles into NBC's killer Thursday night line-up and Ringwald lands a cushy spot sandwiched between ABC's "Ellen" and "Grace Under Fire."

The new fall season starts this month with brand new episodes of older series and new shows trying to figure out if they've got what it takes to stay on the air. Of course the new shows face stiff competition from hit shows like "ER," "Roseanne," and "Murphy Brown." Over 30 new series will debut this fall, but only a handful will stick around after January.

CBS's Monday's line-up begins with the new "Cosby" show. Cosby is reunited with original "Cosby" co-star Phylicia Rashad and the team that produced the original show, Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner. The original "Cosby Show" was one of the most successful shows of the '80s and the '90s version of the show expects to be just as successful.



Follow that up with newlyweds Danson and Mary Steenburgen in "Ink." The show is about a divorced couple who work at a newspaper. Danson, of course, is a television veteran, but Steenburgen is making her first foray into the genre. The couple's impressive credentials (Danson has nearly a dozen Emmy nominations and awards from "Cheers" and Steenburgen owns an Academy Award) are strong and this show will have little trouble staying afloat, even if the writing is a little shaky, primarily because of its great position in the schedule.

"Murphy Brown" snags the 9

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Cosby

p.m. time slot after "Ink" while Cybill Sheperd's hit comedy series returns to its original Monday night time slot to provide the lead-in for the medical drama "Chicago Hope."

Last year both ABC and NBC had the miserable habit of placing luke-warm comedies, gutless dramas and sappy made-for-television-movies against CBS' "America's night for television" schedule which trounced the competition.

Jane Seymour returns for a fifth season as "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman." "Dr. Quinn" is followed by last season's surprise hit, "Touched by an Angel," starring Roma Downey. The new show is "Early Edition," starring a man who receives news one day early, just in time to warn people about disasters coming their way.

And don't expect NBC to catch up anytime soon to CBS on Saturday night. True, NBC is taking a gamble and debuting three new shows on Saturday night, but none of them sound credible enough to generate enough viewer interest to make a dent in CBS's lead.

Carrying on the momentum generated from the summer's hit movie Independence Day and FOX's "X-Files," NBC now brings us "Dark Skies." The show is based on the idea that years and years ago, aliens landed on earth and are now living among us. This show stars Eric Close and Megan Ward ("Party of Five"), as a disillusioned couple trying to root out the extra-terrestrials.

"The Pretender" shows viewers the adventures of a man who is so smart he can have any profession, from an airplane pilot to a doctor, anytime he wants to. Michael T. Weiss stars as the vigilante trying to do good in the world, while being pursued by a group scientists from a covert research facility.

The last show is "The Profiler," starring Ally Walker as some sort of psychic detective, who can reconstruct crimes by examining crime scene evidence. It's kind of eerie sounding, but out of the three shows, it looks like the best one.

Whatever else, NBC still owns Thursday night. Despite an earlier scare, you won't have to go Friendless this season. The cast of "Friends" returned to the set, despite the fact they didn't get the $100,000 per episode they demanded. Instead they settled for a tidy $75,000 per episode. That should pay for Jennifer Aniston's hair-dressing bills for a while.

Newcomer Shields managed to land her comedy, "Suddenly Susan," on NBC's Thursday night. That's the good news. The bad news is that, as of yet, the show has no point. Which explains why Shields was doing flips in a bathing suit and trying out different hair styles during promos shown at the Olympics instead of the usual pre-

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cybil Shepard

Turn to TUBE, page 9

Guide to campus eating; saving money & health

Mark McGrath

Well, it's that time of the year again. School is startin' and the eatin' is, ah... not so good and not so cheap... not so fast! With a little help from me, you'll be eating like royalty in no time at all; and at a reasonable cost too. Just take some simple advice.

• Eating at the Dining Commons (DC): If you're living large in the dorms, you're probably on the meal plan which means you have already paid for lunch, dinner and/or breakfast for a full semester. Take advantage of it.

While the quality of DC food may not be at the level of McDonalds, it can still be eaten. Just look at all the foods impossible to mess up. There's cereal, fruit, bagels and cold cut sandwiches. Anything cold should be safe to ingest. The best part of the DC is the chance to smuggle out future snacks. The possibilities are endless — an orange in the pocket, a slice of cheese between the pages of a book. While you're at it, you may want to pocket some silverware and dishes (see section: Eating in the Dorms).

Need something hot? Odds are even that you'll find something that your stomach won't throw back at you. For a conservative approach, stick with the chicken pucks. Eventually work up to the southern fried steak. If there's a cufinary bungee jumper in you, go all out and dive head first into the cavatelli supreme. Just don't ask what's in it.

Even the pickiest eaters should be able to take care of basic nutritional needs at the DC. The key to success: Don't like the look of the food? Shut your eyes. Don't like the smell? Block your nose. If it moves, stomp on it.

• Grocery Shopping: For many students, college represents the first need to actually shop at a grocery store. Students be wary. Inexperienced shopper + credit cards = grocer's dream. It's easy to lose track of your purchases, so to maximize your dollar follow these simple instructions.

1.) Get a scan card. The days of clipping coupons are over. These cards allow the buyer to take advantage of great offers and save lots of money.

2.) Buy no more than you need, otherwise the leftovers will go to waste. For example, when buying pasta and tomato sauce, never buy more sauce than pasta. Otherwise you will find a moldy jar in your microfridge next May.

3.) Compare prices. Bread is bread no matter which way you slice it. Eight Ramen Noodles for one dollar is not enough. Another store is bound to have them cheaper. No frills, baby!

• Eating in the dorms. Most dorms on campus have some type of kitchen. Take advantage of your kitchen, but understand the following:

1.) If you need a frying pan and don't have a frying pan, no one will.

2.) If you're looking for a sauce pan, someone will come up with a frying pan.

3.) If you cook something, make sure it doesn't smell good... otherwise it will gone before you eat it.

4.) Don't worry about buying silverware — the DC unofficially loans it out. Just don't ask and don't let them catch you, and don't forget to return those spoons to their rightful owner.

5.) Microfridges are only good for popcorn and cups of soup. Don't expect bagel bites to come out nicely.

• Calling Delivery: Alright, I know that there will be days when you miss your chance to eat at the DC and are too lazy to cook a meal for yourself. Only in this case, calling delivery is an acceptable alternative. Since delivery can be expensive, minimize costs by:

1.) Never order cookies alone. I've seen many fair– weathered friends pop out of the woodwork once the halls smell of white chocolate and peanut butter. Best bet is to order in numbers, therefore you can defend your cookies in numbers. Cookies you pay for but don't eat are equivalent to money down the drain.

2.) If your roommate is vegetarian, always order meat on your pizzas for the reasons mentioned above.

3.) Never pay with a credit card or a check. You'll find yourself in debt and nothing to show for it but an extra 10 pounds.

4.) Call and complain about delivery food and see if you can get more free!

Spoil yourself if you follow all my advice. Count up all the money saved and spend it on a nice dinner at a fancy restaurant. Good food is hard to come by out here.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian Columnist.

I taunt my MTV; a declaration of freedom

Over the course of our long relationship, you've given me everything from "Remote Control" to "Liquid Television." You've introduced me to the likes of Pauly Shore and Downtown Julie Brown. I've given to you, at times, my undivided attention. I've taken what you've told me as truth. I've bought your products. I've rocked the vote.

Now, it seems we're going in our own separate directions. Why is that? The answer is simple. Your product is no longer appealing to me, and, at times, it can be described more accurately as repulsive.

Let's start with what may be the most popular half hour of your programming day... "Singled Out." I have to admit, you guys have really found a way to get people's attention. Start with fifty beautiful people, and then bring out another beautiful person, usually (but not always) of the opposite sex who will, based on height, weight, breast size, body hair or any other irrelevant physical characteristic narrow the fifty down to a few, who will in turn be narrowed by other superficial means until there is left... you guessed it, a pair of beautiful people who have a date paid for by you. Throw in Jenny McCarthy and you have a real winner.

In a perfect world, "Singled Out" would be ridiculed as one of the shallowest creations ever to emerge from the minds of television producers. But we're not part of a perfect world. Instead of being a rather loud and obnoxious joke, the show finds its way on to millions of television sets, where it is free to send out messages as to what MTV and the "cool" world it pictures think makes people beautiful. Yes, we're in MTV land, where the people are beautiful and the thought patterns exceedingly simple.

Just take a look at the revered Beavis and the respected Butthead. I would like to think that that show's initial success was due more to shock value than to quality of entertainment. But its following seems as strong as ever. I've seen large groups of (physically) grown people stop whatever they were doing in order to watch their idiotic adventures.

You know as well as I do that "Beavis and Butthead" watchers are not of the average intelligence level. As a way of proving this point, you play before each episode a trailer which makes it blatantly obvious that your cartoon idiots are not role models, and that their antics need not be repeated. The worst part of the whole matter is that your viewers take this insult to their intelligence as a joke. I guess the joke's on them.

What's on next, The Fake World? You take seven beautiful people and place them in a beautiful apartment in a beautiful part of a beautiful city and wait for some beautiful problems to present themselves. Then you have the nerve to call it "The Real World." I don't want to ruffle any feathers, but there's nothing real about such an arrangement. Maybe you'd have a more realistic show if you threw a boat captain, his first mate, a millionaire and his wife, a movie star, a professor and a country girl named Maryann on an uncharted desert isle... or has that already been done?

And speaking of beaches, while I'm ripping you limb from limb, I might as well tell you what I think of your six months of spring break week. It sucks. Anyone who's really interested in that crap is already there, guzzling beer and chasing bikinis all over the place. What's the use in glamorizing activities that are otherwise known as the seven deadly sins?

COURTESY JOHN P. JOHNSON

Pauly Shore drowns alongside MTV.

Yes, there was a time when I needed at least an hour's dose of your programming each and every day, but that was when MTV had something to do with music videos. In your quest to expand your empire

Turn to MTV, page 9

Airwaves are buzzing with the sounds of WMUA

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

The valley is once again filled with the sounds of college radio as WMUA, 91.1, began their fall programming yesterday. WMUA is the University of Massachusetts student run station which also gives air time to graduate students and community members.

Glenn Siegel, the professional advisor to the station said, "Our mission is to act as a training ground in all facets of radio... and to provide the university and surrounding community with a diverse array of music and public affairs."

WMUA broadcasts at 1,000 watts and has a 20 to 30 mile listening radius.

During the week, the station has block programming which features different genres of music including jazz, rock, rap and folk.

Looking for jazz? Well, every weekday from 9 a.m. to noon, WMUA sets aside time for jazz music. Some other examples of blocks are the "World" block which airs weekdays from noon to 2:30 p.m. Plus, there are blocks dedicated to eclectic in the morning, blues, public affairs, and rock and urban contemporary. Schedules are available in the WMUA office located in the campus center basement.

One of the most successful shows is the long running Polka Bandstand, hosted by Billy Belinda and Mitch Moskal on Saturday mornings, which airs from 6 a.m. to noon. There is also a "Country, Blues and Bluegrass" show from one to five p.m. on Sundays.

"If somebody listens to WMUA consistently, they will become musically educated," Siegel said.

He mentioned the stations plays everything from punk rock to throat singers from Tuva.

"The only thing we don't play is European classical music," he said.

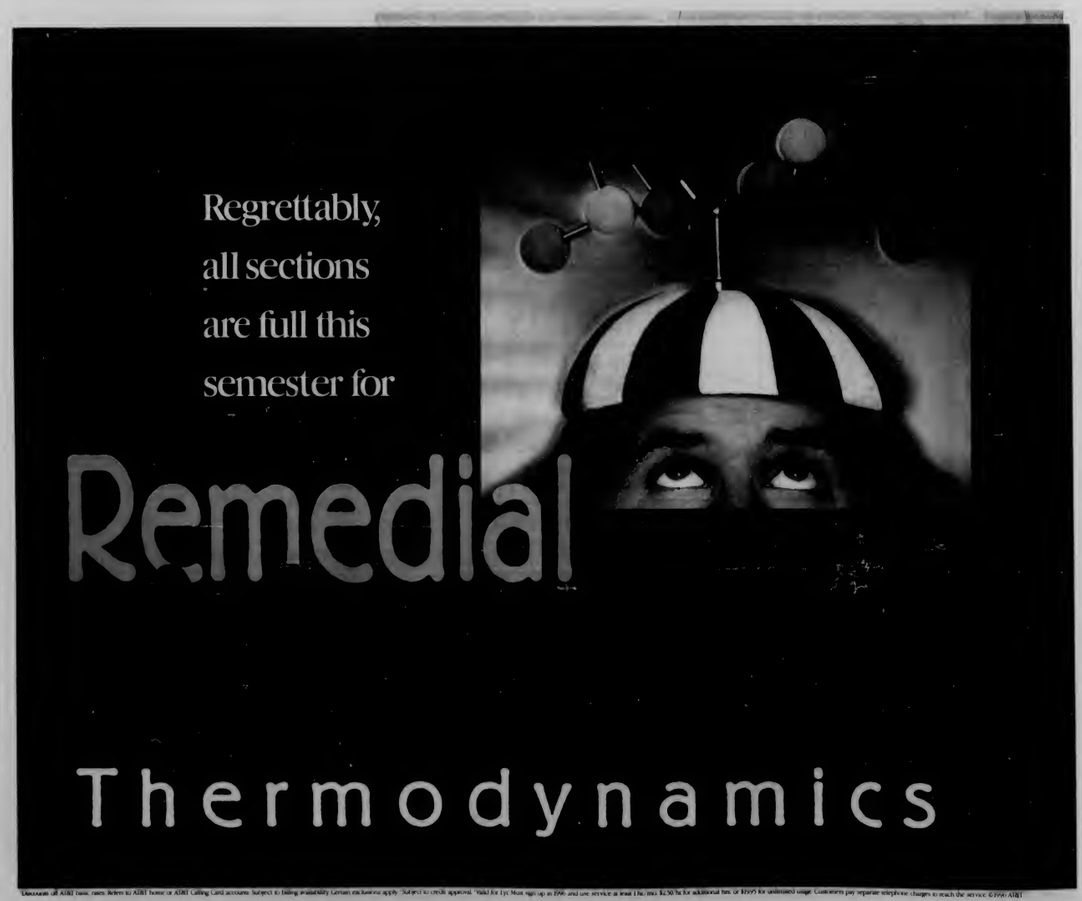
The block format has been in place for seven years, which is how long Siegel has been at the station.

Siegel said most people who become involved in the station have had no prior experience in radio. One route to involvement is participation in the DJ training class, which meets once a week for five weeks. Once someone has completed the course, they can substitute for DJs and apply for their own show.

WMUA is a member of the Associated Press and runs three news reports every weekday. There is also a half hour news show from 5 to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays.

Another way to become involved with the station is to join the sports staff. Mike Reise and Patrick Sheeran, the co- sports directors are holding a meeting for interested staff members Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the WMUA studios. The sports department covers the UMass football, basketball and lacrosse teams in their entirety, and occasionally covers the other athletic teams.

There is also a call-in sports show called "Sportsline" on Sundays from noon to 3 p.m.



"We try to cover as much as possible," said Sheeran.

Some of the new features this year include six hours of Latin music on Saturdays, starting at 4 p.m. There will also be a radio drama program called "Theater of the Mind" on Saturdays, beginning at 2 p.m.

Amy Strube, who has been working with WMUA for three years, was recently elected to be the program director.

"This is going to be a full time job," she said. "We are on the air 24 hours a day."

She said it is difficult to make a programming schedule because, "there are a lot of qualified DJ's out there and we want to get as many voices on the air as possible."

Discounts off AT&T basic rates. Refers to AT&T home or AT&T Calling Card accounts. Subject to billing availability. Certain exclusions apply. Subject to credit approval. Valid for 1yr. Must sign up in 1996 and use service at least 1 hr./mo. $4.50/hr for additional hrs. or $19.95 for unlimited usage. Customers pay separate telephone charges to reach the service 6 even AT&T

Luckily, you can still sign up for all this great stuff from AT&T.

Surviving in college is tough enough, right? That's why we've designed a package to make things easier. Choose AT&T and look at all you can get:

AT&T True Reach® Savings
Save 25% on every kind of U.S. call on your AT&T phone bill when you spend just $25 a month.[1]

AT&T True Rewards®
Get savings at Sam Goody/Musicland, TCBY "Treats" and BLOCKBUSTER VIDEO with the Member Benefit Card.

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
A credit, cash and calling card that brings you discounts on USAir. And no annual fee–ever.[2]

AT&T WorldNet℠ Service
Get 5 free hours of Internet access every month just for having AT&T long distance.[3]

To sign up, look for us on campus or call
1 800 654-0471

AT&T
Your True Choice

http://www.att.com/college

Netscape improves again; web surfing made easy

Surfing the Internet with Netscape Navigator has never been easier since Netscape made the best web browser better. And now there is the third release of Netscape Navigator which improves the standard web browsers must be measured by.

The new version will save you time in a multitude of ways. Like updates to previous releases, version 3.0 is faster than the last release.

Unlike the previous release, Navigator 3.0 lays out the entire page with boxes the size of the images before the page is finished loading. Alternate text appears in the boxes until the pictures are loaded and displayed. The older method simply left blank spaces until the graphics loaded. The new process significantly speeds browsing the Web.

Not only does the page appear faster, saving users time, but Netscape provides extra utilities not included in other browsers, allowing the user to spend more minutes browsing rather than waiting.

When the company released version 2.0 earlier in the year, a mail reader and an improved news-group reader accompanied the Web browser. Now version 3.0 offers chat and Internet phone utilities too.

The mail and news readers remain rather unchanged. The only improvement on the mail reader is the ability to actually read HTML tags embedded in e-mail. Netscape touts this as a marked improvement, but it is not that important. However, overall the mail reader is exremely useful because users do not need to waste time or resources fiddling with a second program.

The chat application allows users to log on to the world of Internet Relay Chat where other computer users meet and talk about everything under the sun. It is primarily intended as a form of entertainment, so it is not very useful.

I also found the Cool Chat utility extraneous. Cool Chat allows users to make long distance phone calls across the Internet provided the computer has a soundcard, speakers, and a microphone. This might become more useful when more people have the ability to take advantage of it. Another useless utility included with the third release is the virtual reality plug-in that allows users to view three dimensional worlds on-line.

A utility that eliminates the necessity for helper applications and increases multimedia capabilities is LiveVideo. Users no longer need to download AVI animation files, then view them through a different application. LiveVideo Netscape now displays them directly through the browser, freeing hard drive space.

Beyond extras like Cool Chat, the application is chock full of other superfluous accessories that are rather unnecessary and sometimes annoying, like embedded sounds. Webmasters can now include sound files in the background of a page, cre-

Turn to ON-LINE, page 9

Grisham's latest drama not a runaway thriller

by Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

JOHN GRISHAM
The Runaway Jury
Doubleday

John Grisham returns with his latest courtroom drama, gambling that it will capture as much attention as his past novels. In The Runaway Jury, he examines not only how corrupt the big cigarette manufacturers are, but also how easy a jury is manipulated.

As in all of his previous novels, Grisham revolves the action around a courtroom, his love and forte. Only this time it is not about a racially provoked rape or a conspiracy by money-hungry environmentalists. The featured case involves corrupt and shifty cigarette corporations vying to win a lawsuit placed against them. But like any Grisham thriller, the plot twists and secret agents make the story line complicated and arduous.

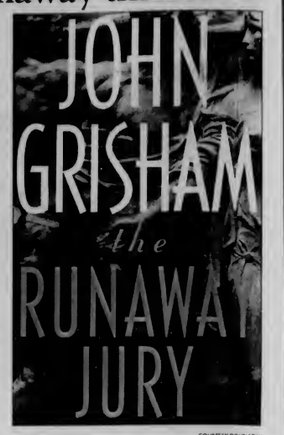
Rankin Fitch is introduced early on as a member of the "Big Four," a group of cigarette manufacturers who annually contribute $3 million to an undetectable fund. The Fund, as it is known, is used to pay for the lawyers and devices which they employ in cases against them — cases like those of Jacob Wood, a deceased plaintiff.

Wood's family sued one of the "Big Four" companies in a wrongful death case. His family believes they deserve compensation after he was afflicted with lung cancer as a result of years of smoking. And the companies know that if one case like Wood's is won, then smokers everywhere will follow suit, all trying to get a piece of the action.

The main nemesis of the cigarette companies is Nicholas Easter, an experienced juror who has travelled from state to state, changing his identity and look to serve on these lung cancer inspired trials. He is crafty, boisterous and virtually untraceable by Fitch's hired jury experts. The defense team cannot find out any information about him while concerned about his affect he will have on the jury.

Easter quickly enraptures his peers on the jury, telling them fantastic stories of how he spent time in law school. He befriends even the most unlikable characters, making all 13 put their ultimate trust in him. And while he is winning them over in one room, he is telling the judge about their every move and thought in another.

And, of course, no Grisham novel is complete without an informer — Marlee, a friend of Easter's, a foe of Fitch's, and appears to know more about the jury than the jury themselves. She provides almost a comic relief to the book, interjecting witnesses and baffling the defense team.



Grisham has the unique capability of turning something dull to many people into a lively, uplifting story. Until the emergence of such high profile cases such as the O.J. Simpson murder trial, courtroom drama has been far from exciting. Yet Grisham captures the drama with eloquence and flair.

At the same time, however, The Runaway Jury becomes stale. Grisham spends far too many pages on unimportant description and the book becomes bogged down with way too much legal jargon.

Whether or not Grisham tried to accomplish an anti-smoking novel, it is nearly impossible to desire a cigarette after reading this novel. The testimonies by his characters are so convincing that even the most ardent smoker might be a little disgusted at their habit. Grisham effectively communicates the message that, yes, lung cancer is related to smoking, and yes, the cigarette companies have been covering it up for years.

While Grisham in the past has dealt with social issues, this topic is not nearly as interesting or inspiring as some of his pervious themes. Also the novel is less compassionate than The Chamber and not as emotional as A Time to Kill. And perhaps this lack of spark contributes to the novel's dry spots.

The Runaway Jury is more entertainment than literature, making it fun to read. I only wonder how long it will take to be made into a movie. B–

COURTESY DOUBLEDAY

John Grisham's Runaway Jury.

Don't you hate it when
• the Army tries to recruit you into fighting in Bosnia?
• telemarketers call you when you are washing your dog?
• the Collegian runs little ads everyday begging you to write for us?
Well, if so run on down to the Collegian and start writing for Arts & Living today.
Ask for Mike.
We want your ideas and input.
Our first Arts & Living meeting is Monday night at 6 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. All staff writers and new writers must attend. Write about anything from gardening to death metal and Shakespeare to sky diving. Even if you don't want to write, give us some story ideas for future articles. We are here to please you, plus you can't hang up on us like those damn telemarketers. The Collegian is conveniently located at room 113 in the Campus Center Basement.

Get THE MESSAGE.
Your first month's FREE.
Finally, you can stop relying on other people for your phone messages. With Sprint Paging,SM you'll always get the message first. Sign up now, and get your first month of paging and three months of voice mail FREE. And if you get Sprint Residential Service, you'll get your sixth month of paging FREE, too. Add that to a simple, flat monthly rate with NO hidden costs and a high-quality Motorola® pager, and you're not only getting your messages, you're getting one great deal.
Call 1-800-825-8573
Sprint.
www.sprint.com (look for College)
Limited-time offer.
© 1996 Sprint Communications Company L.P.

COURTESY JOHN FALLS

Matthews at Mullins!

Dave Matthews Band is set to play the William D. Mullins Center on Oct. 6. Tickets go on sale Monday Sept. 9 at 10 a.m. at the Mullins Center Box Office and Ticketmaster outlets. Tickets are $23.50. Hands will be stamped and numbers will be distributed, to determine place in line, beginning on Sunday at 7 p.m., only at the Mullins Center Box Office.

■ Mullins

continued from page 5

hours, mixing both original songs with some of her favorite covers, likely including Joplin's "Take Another Little Piece of My Heart."

And if last year's show was any indication, Etheridge will be great.

Melissa Etheridge will perform at the Mullins Center on Saturday night at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the Mullins Center box office and at Ticketmaster outlets. For more info call 545-0505.

■ tube

continued from page 6

view clips.

Add solid shows like "Seinfeld" and "ER," and NBC has little to worry about.

ABC's new line-up is a mix of old and new. The network is bringing back "Roseanne" for its ninth season. Also returning to ABC are "Home Improvement," "Ellen," "Grace Under Fire," and the critically acclaimed "Murder One."

"Murder One" got annihilated last year when it debuted opposite "ER." This year, ABC has made some changes, adding Anthony LaPaglia and DB Woodside to the cast.

Remember Ringwald? You last saw her in movies like Pretty In Pink and The Breakfast Club. After living in self- imposed exile in Paris for the last few years, Ringwald is back with the first of this season's "Friends" rip-offs. Produced by the Carsey-Werner Company for ABC, the show features a group of twenty-something, small-town friends who hang out in a restaurant.

In the past, shows based on movies haven't always done well. ABC may have learned from those results, but they're going to try anyway with two shows, based on popular movies. The first series is based on Clueless. In this new, half-hour comedy, Rachel Blanchard takes on Alicia Silverstone's role as the well-meaning Cher. Stacey Dash and Heather Gottlieb reprise their roles as Dionne and Tai, respectively.

The second series is "Dangerous Minds." Former "Designing Woman" Annie Potts sports a new hair-cut in the role of Louanne Johnson, a teacher who arrives at a racially mixed, inner city high school in California. The show is based on the book written by the real Johnson and produced by Jerry Bruckheimer (Top Gun).

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff writer.

■ MTV

continued from page 7

even farther than it had grown, you have lost touch with the attraction that brought many of your viewers in the first place.

It seems that whenever I flick the dial to your channel, if one of the above mentioned shows is not running, then something even more ridiculous like "Road Rules" or "Buzzkill" is. These shows seem to have no realistic value, save to alienate those who have no real place in your imaginary beautiful world. Therefore, I will be forced to break off our long-running relationship as I am pursuing this thing called a life. You may have heard of it.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

■ on-line

continued from page 8

ating mood music. This follows in Netscape's tradition of adding unnecessary niceties like the addition of simple animated graphics in the second release.

Despite all these features, Netscape continues another tradition of providing more bang for your megabyte. Netscape Navigator is actually smaller and more feature rich than Microsoft's Internet Explorer, according to Netscape. A full featured copy of Netscape Navigator 3.0 is only 5.64 megabytes while a full featured copy of Microsoft Internet Explorer 3.0 is 10.62 megabytes.

In addition to eating less hard drive space, the price is right for this feature rich application because it is free for students and faculty — no wonder this application is the most popular in the world. A second advantage — it's available for all versions of Windows and Macintosh. A few weeks ago Netscape also announced plans for a version for OS/2. Users can not go wrong with this application. Download a copy at http://home.netscape.com. A

The version reviewed was for Windows 95. The system used was a 486DX/2 66 MHz with 8 megabytes, and both 14.4 kbps and 33.6 kbps modems.

Matt Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Love your Collegian

Campus Activities Presents
First Week '96
"A Taste of UMass",
Friday, 6 Sept.
*FIRST WEEK VIDEO DANCE
Student Union Ballroom
9pm to 1am
*FIRST WEEK COMEDY SHOW
Bluewall Cafe
8pm
FREE ADMISSION
*FIRST WEEK MOVIE-"ERASER"
Campus center Auditorium
8pm and 10pm
-Welcome to UMass-
THE BEST ACTION MOVIE OF THE SUMMER BY FAR!
ERASER IS TERMINATOR AND TRUE LIES ROLLED INTO ONE

• WWW.THEMEADOWS.COM • OFF I-91, HARTFORD • WWW.THEMEADOWS.COM •
The Meadows MUSIC THEATRE
The Cranberries
"FREE TO DECIDE" WORLD TOUR '96-'97
with special guest CRACKER
THIS SATURDAY SEPT. 7 • 8PM
Tickets available, cash only, at STRAWBERRIES Music & Video Stores located in Connecticut and Western Massachusetts. or call PROTIX.
860-422-0000
413-732-0202
This summer is about to get even Hotter!
GLORIA estefan
SEARS GLORIA Evolution
SEPTEMBER 11 • 8PM
THE CURE
THE SWING TOUR
SUNDAY, SEPT. 15 • 8pm
No refunds, No exchanges. Performances rain or shine. Food, beverages, glass containers, lawn chairs, umbrellas, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside the facility gates. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings, schedule is subject to change. Patrons are responsible for all parking charges and service charges.
Indoor Theater Seating
STOMP
THE INTERNATIONAL SENSATION
"STOMP finds beautiful noise in the strangest places." -USA Today
FRI., SAT. & SUN. NOVEMBER 1, 2 & 3 people's bank
It's Possible. At People's.
Member FDIC
SAINT FRANCIS Hospital and Medical Center
We've made a science of caring.
Budweiser
This Bud's For You
• WWW.THEMEADOWS.COM • OFF I-91, HARTFORD • WWW.THEMEADOWS. COM

Lily Dale's auditions set

COURTESY UMASS THEATER GUILD

"A Day For Surprises"

Looking for a few minutes in the spotlight?

The University of Massachusetts department of theater announced auditions for Lily Dale, a drama by Horton Foote. Foote, a Pulitzer Prize–winning playwright, explores issues of kinship, love and loss in a Texas family in the play set at the turn-of-the-century.

Would-be Thespians can sign up for slots at the department callboard located outside 112 Fine Arts Center from 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Copies of the script can be signed out for two hours on a first-come basis. The theater department encourages reading of the script before auditions.

Lily Dale will be performed at the Curtain Theater on Dec. 6–7 and 9–14.

Auditions will be held today and tomorrow at the Theater Department of Theater from 7–11 p.m. For more information, contact the department at 545-1490.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Emmys celebrate 50 years of TV

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif.— Each year, the Emmy Awards honor television's best from the preceding season.

This year, the show will honor not one but 50 years of the medium to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the academy that founded the Emmys.

That, says Emmycast producer Dick Clark, has given organizers a "treasure trove" of material to present during Sunday's three-hour ceremony at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, beginning at 8 p.m. on ABC.

But what exactly is the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences?

People outside Hollywood surely don't know. And even those in the know aren't quite sure what it's all about.

"You're asking the wrong guy," says Clark, before rattling off, "They preserve the heritage... it's a non-profit organization... but please ask them, I'd screw it up."

Even Emmy host Paul Reiser hesitates when asked if he's ever been to the academy.

"That's a good question... I can't say I have," Reiser says. "I know a lot of their work is in archives and preserving television. But they'd be better able to tell you."

Perhaps one reason for the uncertainty is that the academy isn't in Hollywood proper. Since 1991, a dusty rose building with green trim in suburban North Hollywood has served as its headquarters.

But hey, the rent is free, notes Academy President Richard Frank, since the building was part of a plan to revitalize the area.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Angela Lansbury

Outside, a courtyard is ringed with bronze busts of such legends as Milton Berle, Norman Lear, Rod Serling and Bill Cosby. Johnny Carson and Lucille Ball are among the few honored with life-sized statues.

The academy was founded in 1946 by retired journalist-turned-TV producer Syd Cassyd, who got his star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame just last month. The organization's first meeting was attended by only seven people.

"The Academy has won worldwide recognition beyond anything we could have imagined," Cassyd said while receiving his star.

With 9,000 members today, the academy claims to be the largest organization of professionals in national television, including editors, producers, actors and just about anybody else involved in the making of TV.

For the most part, the academy's main task is handing out the Emmys each year. But it also sponsors seminars, internships for college students and panel discussions held by those behind the cameras of some of TV's most popular shows.

So how do you honor such an institution and make it interesting to the general public?

"We will do our darndest to make it exciting, surprising, entertaining, but it really depends on what we pluck out of the files," Clark says.

The Emmy Awards, he concedes, are "not a blockbuster like the Oscars. Television is part of our daily lives. Movies are big deal, they're the big screen and you can't ever get away from that. This is just familiarity."

The show will open with a tribute to theme music over the past 50 years, with the orchestra playing tunes from 40 shows such as "Cheers," "All in the Family" and "Dragnet."

"This is 18,000 theme shows in a minute-and-a-half. The orchestra's doing calisthenics now," Reiser quips.

There's also a segment, Clark says, on "the kind of scenes we all talk about the next day" like the birth of Lucille Ball's baby on "I Love Lucy," the goodbye from the "Cheers" gang and the last episode of "M-A-S-H."

While yesteryear's shows will be honored, current shows such as "ER" and "Chicago Hope" are sure to hog the airwaves during the trophy giveaway.

NBC's "ER" leads the pack with 17 nominations, including best drama series and nods for its stars George Clooney, Anthony Edwards, Sherry Stringfield and Noah Wyle. CBS' "Chicago Hope" nabbed 15 bids.

"ER" also is nominated for the new President's Award for programs of social value in an era of increasing concern about sex and violence on TV. The idea for the award came from Frank, the academy president.

"I've sort of made myself the cheerleader for television," Frank says. "TV is always being criticized. I wanted to bring attention to important works that addressed social issues and addressed them in a positive way."

And this year's nominees are...

Nominees in top categories for the 48th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards, to be presented Sunday by the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences:

DRAMA SERIES: "Chicago Hope," CBS; "ER," NBC; "Law & Order," NBC; "NYPD Blue," ABC; "The X-Files," Fox.

COMEDY SERIES: "Frasier," NBC; "Friends," NBC; "The Larry Sanders Show," HBO; "Mad About You," NBC; "Seinfeld," NBC.

ACTOR, DRAMA SERIES: Andre Braugher, "Homicide: Life on the Street," NBC; George Clooney, "ER," NBC; Anthony Edwards, "ER," NBC; Dennis Franz, "NYPD Blue," ABC; Jimmy Smits, "NYPD BLUE," ABC.

ACTRESS, DRAMA SERIES: Gillian Anderson, "The X-Files," Fox; Kathy Baker, "Picket Fences," CBS; Christine Lahti, "Chicago Hope," CBS; Angela Lansbury, "Murder, She Wrote," CBS; Sherry Stringfield, "ER," NBC.

ACTOR, COMEDY SERIES: Kelsey Grammer, "Frasier," NBC; John Lithgow, "3rd Rock From the Sun," NBC; Paul Reiser, "Mad About You," NBC; Jerry Seinfeld, "Seinfeld," NBC; Garry Shandling, "The Larry Sanders Show," HBO.

ACTRESS, COMEDY SERIES: Ellen DeGeneres, "Ellen," ABC; Fran Drescher, "The Nanny," CBS; Helen Hunt, "Mad About You," NBC; Patricia Richardson, "Home Improvement," ABC; Cybill Shepherd, "Cybill," CBS.

SUPPORTING ACTOR, DRAMA SERIES: Hector Elizondo, "Chicago Hope," CBS; James McDaniel, "NYPD Blue," ABC; Stanley Tucci, "Murder One," ABC; Ray Walston, "Picket Fences," CBS; Noah Wyle, "ER," NBC.

SUPPORTING ACTRESS, DRAMA SERIES: Barbara Bosson, "Murder One," ABC; Tyne Daly, "Christy," CBS; Sharon Lawrence, "NYPD Blue," ABC; Julianna Margulies, "ER," NBC; Gail O'Grady, "NYPD Blue," ABC.

SUPPORTING ACTOR, COMEDY SERIES: Jason Alexander, "Seinfeld," NBC; David Hyde Pierce, "Frasier," NBC; Michael Richards, "Seinfeld," NBC; Jeffrey Tambor, "The Larry Sanders Show," HBO; Rip Torn, "The Larry Sanders Show," HBO.

SUPPORTING ACTRESS, COMEDY SERIES: Christine Baranski, "Cybill," CBS; Janeane Garofalo, "The Larry Sanders Show," HBO; Julia Louis-Dreyfus, "Seinfeld," NBC; Jayne Meadows Allen, "High Society," CBS; Renee Taylor, "The Nanny," CBS.

— Associated Press

9¢ a minute FROM 9 P.M. to 9 A.M.

It pays to be a college student.

Sprint gives you long distance the way you want it—plain and simple. Just 9¢ a minute from 9 p.m. to 9 a.m., whether you use your Sprint FÓNCARD, call from your college residence or call collect. And we'll give you 30 free minutes just for signing up. Pretty simple, huh?

9 cents. NOT NONSENSE.

Call 1-800-795-1162

Check us out on the Internet: www.sprint.com (look for College).

Sprint

Certain restrictions apply. Standard surcharges apply to FÓNCARD and collect calls. The surcharge for station-to-station calls is $2.25. On some campuses you may not be able to get this service for on-campus housing 1+ dialing. A one-time credit of up to $4.80 will appear on your first full-month's invoice. ©1996 Sprint Communications Company, L.P.

Newbury Comics™

50 Main St. • Amherst
256-8840

WICKED COOL BACK TO SCHOOL
CD BLOWOUT SALE!
$3.00 OFF ALL* DISCS
REGULARLY PRICED $12.99 OR MORE

Hang out with TODAY'S 99.3 MODERN ROCK WHMP-FM this Saturday 1pm - 3 pm!

Win Cool Prizes!

CHECK OUT OUR WICKED COOL SELECTION OF MANIC PANIC HAIR DYE AND NAIL POLISH!

AND MORE FOR BACK TO SCHOOL!
• 311 T-SHIRTS
• BLACK LIGHT BULBS & LAVA LAMPS
• DOC MARTENS

*SALE ENDS 9/8/96 • NO DOUBLE DISCOUNTS • SALE ITEMS EXCLUDED

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Stardate 2000.

The Doo-Wop-Shop; professor Walter M. Chestnut, the Campus Herald; Maurice Caston, SGA president, and administrators were all at hand for convocation of the class of 2000.

We want you to write for us!

Call the Collegian at 545-3500

CONSTRUCTION AHEAD

With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

Scott's LIQUORS

OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m Tel: 549-2692.

WELCOME BACK

SHOP SCOTT'S & SAVE LOTS!!

THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE

Quantity Discounts Available

Bud Light 24-16oz. bottles $13.99 + Dep.

Miller Genuine Draft Reg & Light 24-12 oz bar bottles $11.99 + Dep.

Busch & Busch Light 30 pack cans $11.99 + Dep.

Corona 12 pack bottles $8.99 + Dep.

Moosehead 12 pack bottles $11.99 + Dep.

Heineken Cases 24-12oz. bottles $18.99 + Dep.

Red Dog & Ice House 18 pack cans $9.49 + Dep.

Milwaukee Best Reg & Light 30-pack cans $9.99 + Dep.

Bud & Bud Light 1/2 Kegs $39.99 + Dep.

Southern Comfort 750 ml $8.49

Kahlua 750 ml $12.99

Absolut 1.75 ml $20.99

1.75 ml Captain Morgan 2L Coke $12.99

Zhenka Vodka 1.75 ml $8.99

Alize 750 ml $11.99

Jack Daniels Country Cocktails $3.49 4/pack

Sutter Home White Zin. 1.5 L $6.99

Boones Mix & Match 5 for $10.00

One Eyed Jack 6 pk. $5.69 + Dep.

PLANNING A PARTY OR FUNCTIONS, GIVE US A CALL, WE CAN HELP.

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER

Tele-Check for your personal check

We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !

6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Rafters | Alumni Stadium | University Drive | SCOTTS Victory Market X | Amity Street | Closest Package Store To Campus

Administration's new 'WISE' web site could make registration much easier

By Susan Nickerson
Collegian Corespondent

Sick of waiting in line for a course schedule? The implementation of the new WISE system web site, a branch of the Registrar's Office home page on the internet, may soon make the registration process significantly easier.

WISE (Web Information Systems for Everyone), is a brand new service offering University of Massachusetts students a secure, easy-to-use way of accessing their personal academic schedules and current on or off-campus addresses through the World Wide Web.

According to Marc Runkel, Network Specialist for the Registrar's Office, "the WISE system's best advantage to students is it's convenience. You can avoid waiting in long lines at Whitmore [Administration Building]. You can also access your own personal class schedule or current address from almost any computer at any time."

During the add/drop period, student records' are instantly updated if course scheduling is changed over the phone, avoiding any confusion when it comes to class time.

Security was a top concern for the system programmers, as confidential information will be accessible on-line.

To keep that information out of the hands of those it was not intended for, the system requires a student identification and pin number (the same used for phone registration).

Karen Mack, senior systems analyst for University Information Systems, hopes to see the system encompass all of UMass's academic and cultural departments in the future.

From registering for classes, checking ones billing status, to selecting a housing assignment, Mack intends for the system to become very popular as it eventually eliminate the hassle of waiting in the long lines at Whitmore.

The WISE system took months of planning and development to complete. Mack, WISE team leader, commended those she worked with.

"Together we had the skills to implement such a complex, yet easy-to-use system," Mack said.

Flak DiNenno, systems coordinator for Transfer Course Articulation, Ed Dunn, systems programmer, Howell Lee, systems analyst, and James Conz, UNINX/VMS systems administrator, compose the remainder of the system designers.

To take advantage the finished product, check it out at http://www.ureg.admin.umass.edu on the World Wide Web.

Come write for Jewish Affairs

Call or Visit, 113 Campus Center 545-3500

One step at a time...

A student is on her way to the first day of classes.

Everything.

- Complete multimedia computer customize for students
- Campus Z-Station® features:
  - Powerful Intel® processor
  - Large capacity hard drive
  - Plenty of memory to run today's hottest applications
  - Plug & Play into your campus network with a high-speed modem
- Desktop Systems include Microsoft® Natural® Keyboard and Microsoft Mouse
- Loaded with Microsoft software for study and fun
  - Microsoft Office for Windows 95 with Word, Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Microsoft Access, Schedule+, Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, Microsoft Internet Assistants
  - Microsoft Windows 95 with Microsoft Internet Explorer 2.0
  - Microsoft Plus!
  - Games for Windows 95
  - Norton AntiVirus and more
- Hewlett Packard Color DeskJet available
- Ask about Microsoft Programmer's Dream Pack

Processor	Pentium 100 MHz	Pentium 133 MHz	Pentium 166 MHz
Hard drive	1.2GB	1.6GB	2.1GB
Monitor	14" (13.2" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)
Price	$1799	$2199	$2499
with LAN card	$1899*	$2299	$2599

Experience Campus Z-Station.

The University Store
413-545-2619

http://www.zds.com
education@zds.com

Chang advances to semifinals

By Bob Greene
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Chang was a survivor today. As a result, he has a spot in the men's semifinals of the U.S. Open.

In a closely fought match with both players scrambling around the court, Chang prevailed, beating Javier Sanchez 7-5, 3-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

Earlier, Steffi Graf overcame surprisingly tough Judith Wiesner for a 7-5, 6-3 victory and a berth in the women's semifinals. Her opponent will be the winner of a quarterfinal later today between seventh-seeded Jana Novotna and No. 16 Martina Hingis.

The other women's semifinal will match No. 2 Monica Seles and No. 4 Conchita Martinez, both straight-set winners Tuesday. Chang's foe in the next round will be decided tonight when third-seeded Thomas Muster of Austria and No. 6 Andre Agassi play. Chang was only 17 years old when he won the French Open in 1979. He's still seeking Grand Slam tournament title No. 2.

Against Sanchez, Chang fell behind 5-3 in the opening set. But the right-hander, known for his speed, tenacity and big groundstrokes, used all three to capture the opening set.

After winning the second set, Chang went up two service breaks at 3-0 in the third. That's when Sanchez again found the winning touch, pulling even at 4-4 and finally capturing the set in a tiebreak.

"I knew that Javier was not going to go away, and he didn't," Chang said. "Javier did not get to the quarterfinals by playing mediocre tennis."

Chang, considered to be one of the best-conditioned players on the tour, appeared to tire late in the third set, played under an overcast sky with a threat of rain. Both players raced from sideline to sideline, from baseline to net until one finally hit a winner or made an error.

Just as he did in the third set, Chang jumped out early in the fourth. This time, though, he held on, finally closing out the 2-hour, 49-minute match on the fourth match point.

Graf, top-seeded and the defending champion in this hardcourt Grand Slam tournament, was pushed hard by Wiesner, who always plays Graf tough but has yet to beat the world's No. 1 player.

Wiesner, an Austrian ranked 24th in the world, made Graf work for every point and every game. There were only three love games in the match, and Wiesner served one of those in a match that lasted just six minutes short of 1 1/2 hours.

It was Wiesner who jumped on top, breaking Graf at 15 in the fifth game when the German pounded a forehand into the net. When she held at 30, Wiesner led 4-2.

Graf, however, hasn't had 20 Grand Slam tournament titles just handed to her. She held at 15, broke Wiesner at 30, then held at 30 to take a 5-4 lead. In the sixth game, Wiesner saved one set point, but not the second as Graf closed out the hard-fought, 42-minute, first-set battle.

The best was yet to come.

Graf served to begin the second set and quickly took a 40-30 lead, the last point coming when she boomed a service winner down the middle.

Wiesner, though, was not through.

Five times the Austrian reached break point. Five times Graf staved off the break. Then Graf finally held with a big forehand. Perhaps thinking of her missed opportunities, Wiesner lost her next two service games as Graf took a 4-0 lead. Wiesner broke back in the fifth game, and although she continued pressuring her opponent, she never was able to truly threaten the defending champion.

"Maybe I haven't played the best tennis the first few rounds, but I know when I get to the important matches, I'll be up there," said Graf, who won her 40th consecutive Grand Slam tournament match.

Tuesday night's Pete Sampras-Mark Philippoussis clash was billed as the big battle of the U.S. Open. It turned into the big bore. Philippoussis slammed 17 aces. Sampras cracked 11.

So what?

In a match almost devoid of drama, the top-seeded Sampras battered his way into the quarterfinals with a methodical 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 victory over the young ace-slinger from Down Under.

"I think maybe I was trying to force a bit too much instead of getting into the game slowly and playing some solid tennis," Philippoussis said. "But, you know, I learned a lot from here and will do well next time."

Philippoussis never broke Sampras' serve, and, in fact, only had one break point in the match. On the other hand, Sampras had 11 chances to break Philippoussis' big serve, converting four.

"It was pretty much uphill," Philippoussis said. "I was always fighting to get back instead of taking the pressure off. I was never up, always down, always trying to get back. Always makes it tough when that happens."

Stefan Edberg is making his final Grand Slam tournament one to remember, reaching the quarterfinals at the National Tennis Center for the first time since winning his second straight U.S. Open in 1992. He did it Tuesday by edging Britain's Tim Henman 6-7 (2-7), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-4.

"Today wasn't easy," Edberg said. "I had a little trouble with the timing today at times. But I think winning the second tiebreaker got me back to square one again.

"After that, the third and fourth sets were pretty good, I thought. That's really what tennis is all about," he said.

Goran Ivanisevic pounded out 20 aces in his 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-2) victory over unseeded Andrei Medvedev of the Ukraine and Corretja defeated Guy Forget of France 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 (7-5). Seles played nearly flawless tennis in eliminating South Africa's Amanda Coetzer 6-0, 6-3. Martinez had trouble only in the first set before beating unseeded American Linda Wild 7-6 (8-6), 6-0.

It is the second straight year Martinez has reached the semifinals. Last year she lost to Seles, her semifinal foe tomorrow.

Johnson may run final 400m of season; uncertain whether he will go to Sarajevo

By Piero Valsecchi
Associated Press

MILAN, Italy — Double Olympic champion Michael Johnson is gearing up for Saturday's IAAF Grand Prix final in the 400 meters, a race that likely will be his last of the season.

Johnson, who won the 200 and 400 meters at the Atlanta Games, said yesterday he was uncertain whether he would compete in a meet at Sarajevo Monday.

"I'll discuss the matter with IAAF officials tomorrow and I'll make a final decision by Saturday," Johnson said. "If I'm not going, the Milan final will be my last race this season. I need to take some vacation."

The Sarajevo event, called the IAAF Solidarity Meet and the first major sports event to take place in that city since the war ended in Bosnia-Herzegovina, is expected to be attended by more than 100 athletes.

Olympic champions Noureddine Morceli (1,500 meters), Kenny Harrison (triple jump) and Charles Austin (high jump) and world triple jump champion Jonathan Edwards are among the announced competitors for the meet at rebuilt Kosevo Stadium.

While praising the IAAF and the International Olympic Committee for organizing the Solidarity Meet, Johnson did not elaborate on the reason for his uncertainty.

Some IAAF members, who were present at Johnson's press conference yesterday, suggested that some athletes were concerned over security in Sarajevo.

In Saturday's final at Milan's Arena, Johnson will be seeking to win only, since he's out of contention for the 400-meter event title and the overall title, awarding a top prize of $200,000. Johnson is ninth in the IAAF 400-meter standings and made the final following the withdrawal of sixth-place Davis Kamoga of Uganda.

Only the top eight are qualified for the Grand Prix finals, which this year does not include the 200 meters.

Kenyan Daniel Komen, who shattered the world record in the 3,000 meters at Rieti Sunday, Edwards, Morceli and 400-meter hurdler Samuel Matete of Zambia are in the running for the men's overall title. Komen leads the three others, 76 points to 72.

Sweden's Ludmila Engquist, the Olympic 100-meter hurdles champion, and U.S. sprinter Gwen Torrence lead the women's overall standings with 66 points each.

Johnson is not thinking about a world record in the 400 in Saturday's race.

"My goal is to win, not to set world records," he said. "People can hardly understand that in this sport the important point is to beat the others. Each race is exciting."

He has twice broken the world record in the 200 this year, running an astonishing 19.32 in the Olympic final. He's second to Butch Reynolds in the 400 world list — 43.39 to 43.29.

Dallas' Smith ready to take on Giants

By Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Injured Dallas Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith threw away his neck brace yesterday and declared himself ready to take on the New York Giants.

"I honestly feel like I can go," Smith said. "I'm still sore, but I think I'll be OK."

It was less than 48 hours earlier that Smith fell on his head and shoulder trying to carry out a play fake in a 22-6 loss to the Chicago Bears. Doctors were so worried there might be spine or neck damage they cut his uniform off while treating him.

"They didn't want to take any chances, so they cut up that good looking uniform," Smith said. "I hated that. But I know this, I never had a feeling like that before. I've still got a lot of soreness and my back bothers me a little."

Smith stayed overnight in a Chicago hospital, then flew home Tuesday with owner Jerry Jones in the Cowboys private jet. Only last week Smith was recovering from a sprained knee ligament suffered in the final exhibition game.

"This definitely made me forget about my knee," Smith said. "This was a big burner down my body. I was numb. I could hear the crowd and everything, but I was wondering what happened."

What happened was Smith went into the air and expected to be tackled before he came down.

"I thought somebody would hit me and cushion my fall," Smith said. "Instead, they [the Bears] just let me fall, and all of a sudden, I was crashing face first into the ground. I'm just glad it was grass and not turf."

Smith said he won't carry out play fakes again with the same vigor.

"They'll have to get somebody else if they want somebody to make a big dive," Smith said with a laugh.

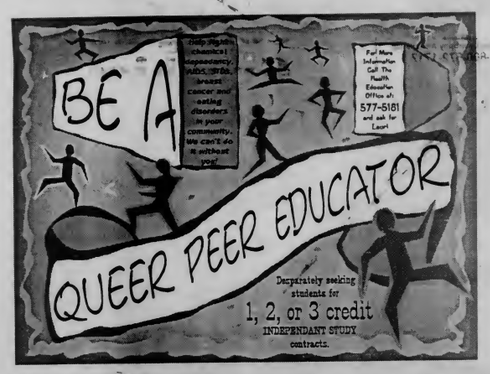
Smith has been deluged with letters, telegrams, faxes and telephone calls.

"I appreciate everyone's concern," Smith said. "I even saw [former Chicago running back] Walter Payton looking in on me. I'm a very lucky man. It could have been a lot worse."

Smith, who gained 70 yards before hurting himself late in the game, said the fact the Cowboys played so poorly didn't help his mood.

"We had a big breakdown," Smith said. "That's why I want to be in there Sunday and help the team win this game. We need to erase a bad memory."

With that Smith walked off. He didn't limp. And he didn't have his neck brace.



He has become the NFL's indestructible warrior.

Asked if that was so, Smith smiled and said, "You forget I missed a game once."

That was at the end of the 1994 season against the Giants after the Cowboys had clinched the NFC East Division title. He had a bad hamstring which needed rest for the playoffs.

In 1993, Smith rushed for 168 yards and caught 10 passes for 61 yards while playing with a separated shoulder against the Giants. New York coach Dan Reeves was asked yesterday in a teleconference call if he thought he would see Smith on the field Sunday.

"No doubt," Reeves said.

Attention Students
NEW At THE CLUB
Tennis and Fitness Complex
659 Amherst Rd. (Rt. 116)
549-3638
3 miles from campus on the bus line.

PLAN FOR SPRING BREAK
V.I.P. Student Memberships!
Buy a year membership for $319 and you'll get round trip airfare for two!
Choose from FLORIDA, HAWAII, BAHAMAS, OR CANCUN

CAMSTAR CIRCUIT AND NAUTILUS
Newly redesigned fitness area!
12 Machine circuit program
20+ Nautilus machines & Abs station

INTRODUCING THE SLIDE
Just one of the great additions to our NEW aerobics programs.

CARDIOVASCULAR
Brand New Equipment
7 Treadmills • 4 Stairmasters
4 Exercycles • 1 Rower

FREE WEIGHTS
Brand New
Cross over Cable Machine
A large variety of dumbells
barweights • benches
Squat rack

Some Restrictions Apply.
There's a lot of NEW going on at THE CLUB!
Campus Get Away !!!

JOIN TODAY!
V.I.P. Membership.....$319 (with tickets)
One semester$145.....(tickets not included)
Two semesters$245....(tickets not included)

WELCOME BACK TO THE LOWEST PRICES IN TOWN!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

LITE, LITE ICE MILLER BEER 30-12 OZ CANS 10 PACK SALE 15.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $12.49 + DEP.
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 30-12 OZ CANS 10 PACK $11.79 + DEP.
HAMM'S CASE 24-12 OZ CANS $7.29 + DEP.
HARPOON ALL FLAVORS 6 PK BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
SARANAC ALL FLAVORS 6 PK BOTTLES $4.29 + DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH
TURNING LEAF CHARDONNAY - ZINFANDEL - WHITE ZINFANDEL - FUME BLANC 750 ML $4.99
ALMADEN WINES RHINE, CHABLIS, GOLDEN, BLUSH, ROSE, BURGUNDY, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC $5.99 3.0 LT
MARCUS JAMES ALL FLAVORS 1.5 LT $5.49
GEORGES DUBOUEF BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 750 ML $5.99

POPOV VODKA 1.75L $9.99
MALIBU CARIBBEAN RUM $8.99 750 ML
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML $10.49
SEAGRAM'S 7 BLENDED WHISKEY 1.75L SALE 12.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.49

KILLIAN'S IRISH RED 12 PK BOTTLES $7.99 + DEP.
HORNSBY'S CIDER CIDER & DARK 'N DRY 6 PK BOTTLE $4.99
EVERYDAY LOW PRICE
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, LITE, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE, MICH, MICH LT, AMBER BOCK $39.99 + DEP
BACARDI Breezer ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. SALE 3.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.50 FINAL COST $1.99 + DEP.

BOONE'S WINE ALL FLAVORS 750 ML $1.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99
RON ROBERTO RUM WHITE & GOLD 1.75 L SALE 9.99 MAIL-IN-REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $7.99
JIM BEAM BOURBON 1.75L $13.99
GOLDSCHLAGER 107° CINNAMON SCHNAPPS 750 ML $13.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
Hadley 253-9344 Northampton 586-3007 Holyoke 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/5/96 THRU WEDS. 9/11/96

Holtz and Irish meet Vandy in opener

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Eric Vance wishes the Vanderbilt schedule-makers would pay attention to how other teams ease into a new season.

Vanderbilt, coming off its 13th straight losing season, entertains sixth-ranked Notre Dame tonight.

"I wish we had a preseason game, a scrimmage or something," the Commodores' safety said. "I don't think there's a tougher way to start the season.

"It always works to your advantage to have a lesser quality opponent. I see teams like Florida and Tennessee doing that. If you look at our record, that's what Notre Dame's doing with us," he said.

The gap is huge between Notre Dame, winner of eight national championships and home to seven Heisman Trophy winners, and Vandy, whose Southeastern Conference accomplishments include frequent nominations to the SEC's All-Academic team.

"You never know," Irish coach Lou Holtz said. "More upsets occur in the first game of the season than any other time." Like in 1995, when Northwestern beat Notre Dame.

Still, a down year for the Fighting Irish is not being among the national title contenders. Last season's consolation prize was a trip to the Orange Bowl.

Vanderbilt wound up 2-9.

Notre Dame has made some last-minute switches on offense. Holtz wants to pump up his offense with more passing, so he switched his second tailback Autry Denson to flanker — before leading rusher Randy Kinder pulled a quadriceps. Denson will stay at flanker, with Robert Farmer starting in Kinder's place.

Vance doesn't buy the talk that the Irish might struggle at receiver.

"They have a lot of talent at Notre Dame," Vance said. "The guy listed as third-team receiver... could play [here]." Vanderbilt's timing with Notre Dame hasn't been good. The Commodores lost 41-0 to the emotional Irish in the first game after Holtz's neck surgery last September. The Commodores now face a team determined not to repeat last year's opening loss to Northwestern. That's not likely to happen this year with a Vandy team relying on newcomers to lift an offense that managed an average of 230 yards per game in 1995.

The backup to quarterback Damian Allen is freshman Duce Reeder. The Commodores also have five freshmen receivers, including starters Todd Yoder and Tavarus Hogans. The line starts four sophomores.

"I think they're very good athletes and good competitors who've done a good job in practice, but they haven't teamed up against a crowd like Notre Dame," said Rod Dowhower, in his second year after being hired to fire up the offense.

When Holtz looks at Vandy, he sees a defense that held powerful Tennessee to 12 points in its final game last year. Vandy has 10 defensive starters back with the only loss James Manley, who's now with the Minnesota Vikings.

"I know they feel that they're going to stop the run, and they can do that by putting nine men up there," Holtz said. "If they do that, the question I have is can we throw the ball successfully?"

Tomich and Wistrom awesome ends

LINCOLN, Neb. — Tom Osborne talks about Nebraska's defensive ends the way a gambler might talk about a pair of aces that are dealt face up in a poker game.

He doesn't brag about them. He just smiles and acknowledges that they can make a big difference in the way things go.

Notre Dame has made some last-minute switches on offense. Holtz wants to pump up his offense with more passing, so he switched his second tailback Autry Denson to flanker — before leading rusher Randy Kinder pulled a quadriceps. Denson will stay at flanker, with Robert Farmer starting in Kinder's place.

Vance doesn't buy the talk that the Irish might struggle at receiver.

"They have a lot of talent at Notre Dame," Vance said. "The guy listed as third-team receiver... could play [here]." Vanderbilt's timing with Notre Dame hasn't been good. The Commodores lost 41-0 to the emotional Irish in the first game after Holtz's neck surgery last September. The Commodores now face a team determined not to repeat last year's opening loss to Northwestern. That's not likely to happen this year with a Vandy team relying on newcomers to lift an offense that managed an average of 230 yards per game in 1995.

The backup to quarterback Damian Allen is freshman Duce Reeder. The Commodores also have five freshmen receivers, including starters Todd Yoder and Tavarus Hogans. The line starts four sophomores.

"I think they're very good athletes and good competitors who've done a good job in practice, but they haven't teamed up against a crowd like Notre Dame," said Rod Dowhower, in his second year after being hired to fire up the offense.

When Holtz looks at Vandy, he sees a defense that held powerful Tennessee to 12 points in its final game last year. Vandy has 10 defensive starters back with the only loss James Manley, who's now with the Minnesota Vikings.

"I know they feel that they're going to stop the run, and they can do that by putting nine men up there," Holtz said. "If they do that, the question I have is can we throw the ball successfully?"

Tomich and Wistrom awesome ends

LINCOLN, Neb. — Tom Osborne talks about Nebraska's defensive ends the way a gambler might talk about a pair of aces that are dealt face up in a poker game.

He doesn't brag about them. He just smiles and acknowledges that they can make a big difference in the way things go.

With characteristic understatement, the coach of the top-ranked two-time defending national champions reflects on the combined power of All-American Jared Tomich and Grant Wistrom.

"As a pair, I don't know if I've ever had two better defensive players," Osborne said. "It's hard for a team to say they're going to run away from Wistrom, because Tomich is there."

Tomich and Wistrom were there often for Nebraska in 1995, usually arriving with a force that made opponents miserable. And their enthusiasm is apparent for Saturday's season opener against Michigan State.

Wistrom said that "whoever shows up to play us had better be ready to get hit in the mouth on every snap."

"We are very definitely ready... Nebraska can do better than last year," Tomich said.

Nebraska was second nationally against the rush in '95, fourth in scoring defense and 13th in total defense. The defense scored 44 points.

Over two national championship seasons, the Huskers allowed an average of 12.8 points per game.

Playing from the left side, the 6-foot-2, 250-pound Tomich led the team with 10 sacks, caused opposing teams losses of 79 yards, caused three fumbles, recovered two and was credited with 24 quarterback hurries.

Wistrom, 6-5 and 250 pounds, led the defense in tackles for losses with 15 and was second behind Tomich in sacks with four. He made 44 tackles, 21 of them solos.

"I was disappointed in myself last season," Wistrom said in spite of being a third-team All-American.

"My motto this year is 'three [downs] and out,' make the other guys give up the ball," he said. "I wanted to be a difference-maker much more than I was last year.

"We want to give the ball to the offense inside the opponent's 50-yard line at least three times every game," he said.

Tomich is among the Huskers who take an offensive view of defense.

"The ball belongs to whoever gets his hands on it," Tomich said. "We want to get the other offense off the field, take the ball and give our guys good field position and always be ready to put it in the end zone. We can do those things."

"We know we can never let ourselves be flat because we know that we are always going to get the other team's best shot."

"Jared and I don't have to talk on the field to pump each other up," Wistrom said.

Both also emphasize their pride in academics.

Tomich, a senior, began his career as a walk-on and had to sit out his freshman year to become academically eligible. He was diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder.

"Football was what I cared about and school was just a struggle for me, always," he said. "Now, I have to say that nothing that I've done as an athlete means more to me than getting that diploma."

SLOWER TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT
Your support keeps lifesaving research in the fast lane.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

It doesn't get any better than this!
BEST OF ALTERNATIVE
NEW! PEARL JAM No Code/Epic 11.99
A TRIBE CALLED QUEST Beats, Rhymes and Life Jive 11.99
ALICE IN CHAINS MTV Unplugged Columbia 11.99
NO DOUBT Tragic Kingdom Interscope 11.99
THE CROW: CITY OF ANGELS Soundtrack Hollywood 12.99
BEST OF MUSIC
BEST OF STEPHEN KING
20% OFF ALL GREEN MILE CHAPTERS!
NEW! 3.19
THE GREEN MILE PART 6 & COFFEY ON THE MILE Stephen King Signet - PB List 3.99
FINAL SERIES CHAPTER!
BEST OF Book's
BEST OF ANNE RICE
SERVANT OF THE BONES Ballantine/Ivy - HC List 26.00 16.90
BEST OF TOM CLANCY
20% OFF ALL TOM CLANCY NOVELS!
EXECUTIVE ORDERS G.P. Putnam's Sons - HC List 27.95 18.17
NEW!
35% OFF all New York Times hardcover best sellers
BEST OF MYSTERY
JACK AND JILL James Patterson Little, Brown & Co. - HC List 24.95 16.22
BEST OF Movies
BEST OF ACTION
HIGHLANDER: DIRECTOR'S CUT Republic NEW 12.99
Coming Sept. 5
BEST OF THE BEATLES
THE BEATLES ANTHOLOGY 8-PACK Turner Home Entertainment NEW 109.99
MAXELL GXT 120 VIDEO 5-PACK 8.99
MAXELL DISCWASHER ACCESSORIES SALE! 20% OFF
Sale ends September 12, 1996
MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MORE CHOICE. LESS PRICE. EVERY DAY.
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410
Sherry's Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777
Manchester Mall, Manchester, (860) 648-5871
STORE HOURS OPEN MON-SAT: 10AM-10PM, SUN: 11AM-7PM

NO U TURN
This is no time to turn back. Keep MDA's lifesaving research moving forward.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

Baseball labor talks go on

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball's executive council yesterday postponed next week's owners meetings in Seattle and decided the council will meet to discuss the sport's long-running labor talks.

"It is important to bring the labor situation to the executive council for review," acting commissioner Bud Selig said. "There still are several outstanding issues that must be settled. This deliberation is necessary in order to get a fair and equitable labor deal for all concerned. We are hopeful that soon after the subject is reviewed by the executive council, we can bring it to the full ownership."

The council, which runs the sport in the absence of a commissioner, made the decision during a telephone conference call yesterday. The council will meet with the sport's labor policy committee next Wednesday, probably in the Chicago area.

Selig and management negotiator Randy Levine had hoped to have an agreement with the players' association before the quarterly meetings in Seattle, which had been set for Sept. 11-12.

An agreement with the union, which would trigger the start of revenue sharing among the teams, requires approval from 21 of the 28 clubs. However, a bloc of owners led by H. Wayne Huizenga of the Florida Marlins, Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox and Andy MacPhail of the Chicago Cubs has prevented Levine from offering all players service time for the 75 regular-season days wiped out by the 1994-95 strike.

Management's last offer was to give service time to all players except the 18 or 19 who need it to become eligible for free agency following this season. The union has said it will not agree to any deal that doesn't include service time for all players.

Shifting the focus on the teams' side from the labor committee to the executive council might give a push toward closing the deal. The membership of the executive council is considered less hard-line than the labor committee.

Of the council members, only Reinsdorf and Montreal Expos president Claude Brochu are known to be opposed to granting full service time. The other council members are Selig, AL president Gene Budig, NL president Len Coleman, Bill Giles of the Philadelphia Phillies, Jerry McMorris of the Colorado Rockies, Carl Pohlad of the Minnesota Twins, George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees and Fred Wilpon of the New York Mets.

Boston Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington and Atlanta Braves chairman Bill Bartholomay are non-voting members. The labor committee includes Reinsdorf and Braves president Stan Kasten, who also has spoken out against granting service time. It also includes David Glass of the Kansas City Royals, viewed by the union as a hard-liner.

Others on the labor committee are Harrington, McMorris, Rusty Rose of the Texas Rangers and Phillies chief operating officer Dave Montgomery.

Levine and union head Donald Fehr had been scheduled to meet today in Baltimore but called off the session after the council made its decision.

The two basically agreed on the central economic points of an agreement during 13 bargaining sessions from Aug. 9-11. The deal would include a luxury tax in 1997, 1998 and 1999 designed to decrease the payroll disparity between large- and small-market clubs.

Other than service time, the major outstanding issues are the structure for the union's option year in 2001 and management's demand that salary arbitration cases be decided by three-man panels rather than single arbitrators.

The union has said it will agree to panels in either half the years of the contract or half the cases each year.

Owners have not met since March 20-21 in Phoenix. In making its decision to postpone the Seattle meetings, the executive council gave Selig the authority to reschedule them on three days' notice.

Collegian Graphics

Avsky's Pizza
175 University Drive
Amherst, MA
256-8147
256-8148
DELIVERY 11am - 2am
CALZONES Make your own... any tow items $4.75 + tax additional items 50¢

GRINDERS
	SM.	LG.
Meatless	3.75	4.75
Salami	3.75	4.75
Genova	3.75	4.75
Sausage	3.75	4.75
Eggplant	3.75	4.75
Turkey	3.75	4.75
Hamburger	3.75	4.75
Cheeseburger	4.00	5.00
Veal	4.00	5.00
Ham Egg	4.25	5.25
Pepper Egg	4.25	5.25
Italian	4.25	5.25
Roast Beef	4.25	5.25
Meatball	4.25	5.25
Seafood	4.25	5.25
Pastrami	4.25	5.25
Ham	4.25	5.25
Tuna Fish	4.25	5.25
Chicken Cutlet	4.25	5.25
Grilled Chicken	4.75	5.50

STEAK GRINDERS
	SM.	LG.
Plain	3.50	4.25
W/ Cheese	3.75	4.50
W/ Onion	3.75	4.50
W/ Pepper	3.75	4.75
W/ Mushroom	4.00	5.00
W/ Egg	4.25	5.25

PIZZA
	SM.	LG.
Plain	4.00	7.00
Pepperoni	4.75	8.50
Hamburger	4.75	8.50
Ham	4.75	8.50
Sausage	4.75	8.50
Onion	4.75	8.50
Pepper	4.75	8.50
Bacon	4.75	8.50
Olive	5.00	9.00
Mushroom	5.00	9.00
Garlic	5.00	9.00
Tomatoes	5.00	9.00
Broccoli	5.00	9.00
Pineapple	5.00	9.00
Salami	4.75	8.50
Anchovies	5.00	9.00
Eggplant	5.00	9.00
Pesto	5.00	9.00
Spinach	5.00	9.00
Feta	5.00	9.00
Artichokes	5.00	9.00
Chicken	5.00	9.00
Red Onion	5.00	9.00
Two Way	6.00	10.00
Three Way	6.75	11.50
Four Way	7.50	13.00
Super Special	9.00	16.00
Extra Cheese	1.00	1.50

DINNERS
Spaghetti with Sauce	5.00
Spaghetti with Meatballs	6.00
Spaghetti with Sausage	6.00
Spaghetti with Eggplant	6.00
Spaghetti with Mushrooms	6.00
Spaghetti with Chicken	6.00
Spaghetti with Veal	6.00
Cheese Ravioli	6.00
Meat Ravioli	6.00
Stuffed Shells	6.00
Manicotti	6.00
Tortellini	6.00
Lasagna	6.00
Veggie Lasagna	6.00
Grilled Chicken with Spaghetti	6.00

SIDE ORDERS
	SM.	LG.
French Fries	1.50	2.75
Garlic Bread	1.00	1.75
Mozz. Sticks	3.00	6.00
Onion Rings	1.75	3.00

Graduate Assistantships Available

Graduate Women's Network Coordinators

for Graduate Student Senate

Starting a.s.a.p., 2 positions @ 10 hrs. per week each
Salary: approximately $123 per week.

The coordinator will be responsible for working with international gradute women's communities, advocating for individual graduate women, organizing and implementing a graduate women's peer mentoring program, and political advocacy regarding all issues that affect graduate women.

Qualifications

Must be a currently enrolled graduate student at UMass-Amherst. Demonstrated organizing skills. Must be knowledgable or interested in issues facing graduate women on campus and active in campus politics.

Preferred: Experience in advocacy or organizing around women's issues

Application Deadline: September 19, 1996

Please send copy of resume and cover letter addressed to:
GWN Coordinator Search Committee
Graduate Student Senate
cc 919
Box 31212
UMass-Amherst
MA 01003

■ college football

continued from page 24

to decide between Scott Mutryn and Matt Hasselback at QB now if they're to dream of a bowl game.

If any of you caught the Michigan State–Purdue fiasco on Saturday, you know the name I'm about to throw out. State true freshman Sedric Irvin was the pimp daddy, scoring four touchdowns in his first collegiate game. He exhibited great quickness and vision, and his touchdown in the second quarter was the best scamper I've seen yet this season. (That includes Curtis Enis.) But the real coup for Coach Nick Saban is where Irvin comes from. This kid is a Miami, Fla. native, and former Hurricane great Michael Irvin's cousin. How did Butch Davis lose this one? Could the loss of a player of Irvin's talent be among the first signs that all the drama surrounding the vaunted Miami machine has affected them to the deepest level, recruiting? You have to admire Davis for what he's trying to do, which is give the Hurricane program some respect. But the sad truth of college football is wins first, grades second.

Butch had better get his troops ready for the Big East, because there's a certain team in upstate New York dying to knock them off the top of the food chain for good. Hint: it's not Colgate.

Out west, Colorado is hoping for big things in Rick Neuheisel's second season in Boulder. Much of that hope is resting on the broad shoulders of Koy Detmer. If you recognize the name, that's because he's former Brigham Young Heisman trophy winner Ty Detmer's little brother. The Buffs enter this week ranked No. 5 in the nation, but in the new and improved Big 8, now known as the Big 12, the big dog is still Nebraska. Texas looked good in squashing Missouri last weekend, and Texas A&M always puts a good squad on the field, but the road to the national championship still goes through Lincoln.

Although Tom Osborne may exhibit as much ethics as the Boston Globe does covering a UMass story, Ahman Green is a great back, and their defense will once again put fear into the hearts of coaches throughout the Midwest. They'd better watch out, though. The Big 12 has six teams in the top 15, and one of those teams, on a good day, can beat the Big Red.

Conference USA Football? Yeah, whatever.

Lastly, a tradition in college football was put to an end over the summer when it was announced that the Rose Bowl had finally bitten the bullet and joined the dreaded Alliance. Among all the New Year's bowl games, the Rose Bowl was always the classiest, and its matching of the Big 10 champ and the PAC–10 champ was more than just a tradition of football powers. It was almost a war between two ways of life, the Big–10 with its stereotypical blue–collar players and style clashing with the sun–drenched laid back surfer dudes of Southern Cal, UCLA and Arizona State. Now it's a bowl game like any other, and although I suppose it was inevitable, it's tough to see it pass. The Alliance is now complete. I even heard they've remade the national championship trophy. If I'm not mistaken, it's now going to be a big golden dollar bill on a plaque.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian staff member.

■ NFL

continued from page 24

Championship game last year. Brett Favre should come back from his off–season problems, and the defense remains tough. Reggie White doesn't have too many years left, so they want to win now.

Right behind them should be the Lions again, as head coach Wayne Fontes hopes his players can save his job for the third year in a row. The passing game, along with all– pro RB Barry Sanders should get the job done; the question is the defense, which lost Willie Clay and LB Chris Spielman.

Tampa Bay, with new head coach Tony Dungy, will have trouble on offense if they can't come to terms with RB Errict Rhett, Although third–year quarterback Trent Differ can only improve witlout former head coach Sam Wyche causing problems, Dungy, who masterminded the Vikings' defense for years, should create a vicious D for the Bucs out of Hardy Nickerson, one of the most overlooked LBs in the league, and Warren Sapp, Regan Upshaw and Marcus Jones, all former first round picks on the defensive line.

The Bears and Vikings should be competitive, but weaker defenses (the Vikings lost coordinator Dungy and the Bears have already lost DT Chris Zorich for the season) should keep them out of playoff contension.

The NFC East, despite having given us almost every Super Bowl Champion in the 90's, is probably the weakest division in professional football right now. New York fans had to suffer through the Jets' miserable season last year — this year the Giants should provide the fun. The one saving grace for the Boys in Blue is that they get to play Arizona — one of the few teams likely to be worse than them — twice.

The Redskins, surprisingly having made the correct choice in their QB controversy, are a team on the rise. Gus Frerotte has shown himself to be a winner, and RB Terry Allen can look forward to another good season. An average defense should do well against some of the lesser offenses, but might have problems against some tougher teams.

Everyone knows all about Dallas' problems — both on and off the field — and it's going to be hard for them to compete, even with the great players they still have. It only got worse when Emmitt Smith got hurt Monday. Barry Switzer's finally going to have to show whether he can coach, or if he's really as pitiful as everyone suspects. Dallas is going to have to get healthy and stay that way and win a lot at the end of the season to overcome what could be a slow start. Ray Rhodes' Eagles could well take over the division championship, but they'll have to overachieve again to do it. They have a tougher schedule than they did last year, and much of their success will depend on how Rodney Peete can handle the QB duties.

The AFC West should once again be dominated by the Chiefs, who kept almost their entire team together in the off– season, though it's hard to guess what the after–affects of their humiliating playoffs loss to the Colts will be. The question for them is not whether they'll get into the playoffs, but whether coach Marty Schottenheimer and QB Steve Bono will self–destruct again when they do.

San Diego, having gotten rid of the disruptive influences of RB Natrone Means and DE Leslie O'Neal, could make some noise again. They're lead by two of the best guys in the business in the Bobbies — coach Ross and GM Beathard, with Stan Humphries and Junior Seau providing on the field leadership.

After these two teams, Chris Warren should help lead Seattle to a respectable place in the division, but unless QB Rick Mirer can step it up in his fourth season, the team won't be playing in the post–season. A not–so–spectacular defense will also probably cost them a few games.

Denver will once again try to ride an aging John Elway, this year combined with last year's rookie sensation Terrell Davis, into the playoffs. And once again, a weak defense will keep them out of it. The Los Angeles… excuse me, Oakland… Raiders should do fine… until Hoss gets hurt again. Oh wait, that already happened.

The Central is another of the weaker divisions in football, though nowhere near as bad as the NFC East. Pittsburgh's effort to repeat as champs took an eerily familiar turn last week, when defensive stalwart Greg Lloyd was lost for the season. Last year, they overcame the loss of all–pro CB Rod Woodson, but can they do it again? To make matters worse, the loss of Neil O'Donnell has caused a full–blown quarterback controversy, with Mike Tomczak already replacing last week's starter, Jim Miller.

The biggest threat to the Steelers is probably the Cincinatti Bengals. QB Jeff Blake can beat defenses deep to receivers Carl Pickens and Darnay Scott, and Ki–Jana Carter should be recovered from the ACL tear that cost him his rookie season. If not, the Bengals signed former Arizona RB Garrison Hearst as a nice insurance policy. The big question is whether Dave Shula can create a defense. If he follows in his father's footsteps in that area, look for him to follow In his father's footsteps into unemployment at the end of the year.

Houston has a very strong defense and an improving offense, but isn't likely to challenge this year. Look for them as spoilers though, especially towards the end of the year when they unveil Steve McNair.

It's hard to guess how the Baltimore Ravens will do. This isn't that far from the team that went 11–5 and knocked the red–hot Patriots from the playoffs two years ago as the Cleveland Browns. Then again, they're not that far from the team that was horrible last year, though they can't really be blamed for that. New coach Ted Marchibroda, who was once play from the Super Bowl last year, should have Baltimore in every game, though the playoffs aren't likely this year.

Jacksonville should better last year's record, as they benefit from being in a weak conference.

The second most competitive division on the NFL is the Patriots' own AFC East. Look for the Buffalo Bills to vie again for the division championship. Thurman Thomas and Jim Kelly are another year older, but with Quinn Early and Eric Moulds making the move up north, they should have plenty of offensive punch. The defense will be strong again with Spielman helping out all–pro Bruce Smith and NFL Defensive Player of the Year Bryce Paup.

As far as the Patriots go, pre–season seems to have answered the riddle "what happens when you subtract Bob Kraft and Myron Guyton and add Bill Belichick and Willie Clay?" The answer: A solid secondary, which is vastly different from last year. In fact, if pre–season is any indication the Patriots' defense — despite not having the last year's leading tackler, Vincent Brown — could be very good. The offense should get going behind last year's offensive rookie of the year, Curtis Martin, though the big question, remains whether Drew Bledsoe, with the help of QB coach Chris Palmer, can return to pro–bowl form. However, a disappointing first game against Miami showed the difference between pre– and regular season, and New England needs to make sure they come to play every day if they want to win.

The Colts are a bit of an enigma. After coming one play from the Super Bowl, they let head coach Marchibroda leave, and replaced him with offensive coordinator Lindy Infante, who was last seen as a head coach in Green Bay. They had, and should continue to have, a solid defense, but does anyone really expect Jim Harbaugh to have a repeat of last season?

The Jets already had a good defense, and they decided to get an offense this season by adding a new coordinator (Ron Erhardt), a new quarterback (O'Donnell), new wide receivers (Jeff Graham, Keyshawn Johnson, and Alex Van Dyke) and a new offensive line (Jumbo Elliott and David Williams). They did make a mistake by taking Van Dyke instead of Leeland McElroy in the second round of the draf, — a suspect running game (as well as poor coaching by Rich Kotite) will keep them from contending.

Last is the Jimmy Johnson–led Dolphins, who despite many prognostications are not Super Bowl material. Their defense, which certainly didn't impress anyone last year, lost three of their top players to free agency (Troy Vincent, Bryan Cox and Marco Coleman). Their offense still has Dan Marino but does he have anyone to throw to? O.J. McDuffie can do the job, but he's going to get a lot of attention with Fred Barnett, who was brought in to replace Irving Fryar, out for the season. Johnson also needs to convince the team that they can run the ball, despite the temptation to fall back on Marino whenever things get bleak, which they certainly will.

So, barring injury, the playoffs in the NFC should consist of San Francisco, Tampa Bay, Detroit, Green Bay, Dallas and Philadelphia, with the Pack playing the 49ers for a trip to the Super Bowl. In the AFC, Kansas City, San Diego, Pittsburgh, Cincinatti, New England and Buffalo, with the Bills and the Chiefs looking to be the team to break the NFC Super Bowl dominance.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED

YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.

For decades, MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. We believe talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

1-800-572-1717

The new TI-83

The singular solution for a multi-function [world].

One calculator to handle algebra through calculus. Another for finance. And a computer program to perform statistical computations. Whoa! Wouldn't it be extraordinary if one calculator could handle so many diverse needs, and still be easy to use? Well, now one does just that. Presenting the TI-83 Graphing Calculator.

The revolutionary TI-83 handles a host of functions for a variety of college subjects. And if you're familiar with the popular TI-82, picking up the TI-83 will be a snap. The new TI-83. In a multi-function world, there simply is no equal.

Check it out at your campus bookstore or favorite retailer where TI calculators are sold.

START DOING THINGS

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

AVAILABLE: BEST BUY · BOSCOVS · BRAND NAMES · FEDCO · FRED MEYER · KMART · OFFICE DEPOT · OFFICEMAX · MONTGOMERY WARDS · SEARS BRAND CENTRAL · SERVICE MERCHANDISE · SHOPKO · STAPLES · SUN TV · TARGET · WAL MART · WIZ

COMPUTER FAIR MULLINS CENTER SEPT 14 10AM-3:30PM

Tri-State Fairs: Original Area Shows since 1987

Buy at wholesale prices directly at the show from nearly 50 independent competing companies under one roof. From full systems to shareware, it's all here

Located on the campus of UMass. Rte 9 onto Rte 116N at Staples taking first exit, turn right

This is a discount ticket. General admission is $7.00 each. Clip or photocopy this ad and save $2.00 ea

Our dealers feature the IBM/PC marketplace. Join us four times a year. Kids under 10 free with parent

Don't over sleep, one day show only!

ONE MONTH FREE INTERNET AT THIS SHOW FROM TIAC

WORKSTUDY & NONWORKSTUDY JOBS

- After School Child Care Worker
- Arts Management/Theater
- Building Supervisors
- Clerical Assistants (workstudy only)
- Volleyball Officials/Supervisor
- Water Safety Instructors
- Youth Basketball Officials/Supervisors
- Adult Basketball Supervisor & Scorekeepers
- Pee-Wee Tennis Instructor

Application Deadline: September 15, 1995

Apply at:
Human Resources Dept.
Town of Amherst
70 Boltwood Walk
Bangs Community Center
Amherst, MA 01002

TOWN OF AMHERST
USSE Leisure Services and Supplemental Education

■ Myers

continued from page 24

"I'm excited, because coming into the season you have to be," Myers said. "I think my last two years I did not really look at this ever ending, but now I see that ending. I have played all my life, and so it is now or never.

"You have to go out and give it all you can now, because I do not want to sit down at the end of the season and be like 'we could have.' I want to say 'we did.'"

For Rudy, he has noticed her increased training energy, which for the team is key to game–time work ethic.

"We feel good about her, and she has come in a little bit lighter, a little quicker," Rudy said. "With our pre-season training, Myers has been a factor in all of it. Slide tackles, getting up and chasing, organizing people at a more intense level than she did in prior years."

"She makes an impact in every game she plays," added Rudy. "Whether it is on corner kicks, runs from behind or 50–yard serves. She draws people like a magnet, and then that opens other people up."

A long time ago…

Soccer has been Myers' life. One of the earliest memories she has concerning this particular choice of athletic endeavor was at the tender age of 6 years old. Fooled by an offer to play soccer at a next door neighbor's party, the next thing she knew, she was signed up on a team. Myers thought it would be the backyard game they were going to play, but the next day she started her soccer life.

From day one her family has been there for her, especially her bigger brother Brian, and she still tries to hold on to her child–like regard of the game.

"My family was always there to support me, and they would come to my games," Myers said. "It is still a lot of fun, but I just remember when you were playing when you were little. You don't care, and you all just run around in clumps. I think my parents wanted me out of the house a little bit, too.

"The main thing for me this year is for everyone to have fun out there. I do not want [my teammates] to think of it as a job."

The development of the Marietta, Ga., native continued through her teenage years, as she was a member of the Tophatters Soccer Club that captured the State Club Championship in two consecutive years (1991–92). On that team, her friendship with UMass teammate junior keeper Danielle Dion began, creating a bond that stands to this day.

With her arrival in 1993, the start of her freshman season was hectic in more ways than one. With any incoming college student, the transition to university life can be hard. But Myers was in one of the luckiest positions of all, as teammates like Paula Wilkins and Briana Scurry made sure she felt welcome in her new home.

The team concept is the main emphasis for a Rudy–led team, and that, along with the tradition of this program, was one of the things that led Myers to make UMass her choice.

"When I came in as a freshman, the seniors and the upperclassmen made it that much easier," Myers said. "The level of play was definitely higher, but it helps a lot when your upperclassmen give you that support, let you in and show you the ropes.

"They made you feel at home, they knew you were going to be homesick and have a rough time."

The circle is complete…

Do not mention it to anyone involved with the team, but three years later, the list of Myers' achievements does nothing but impress: in 1993, Atlantic–10 Rookie of the Year, and honorable mention All–America selection; in 1994, MVP of the A–10 Tournament, and A–10 First Team and Soccer News All–America selection; in 1995, A–10 First Team selection, and moved close to the top in four of the all–time UMass statistical categories (points–4th, goals–6th, assists–4th, and shots taken–6th).

Without a little help from her friends, all of these accomplishments fall by the wayside. Most of her fellow seniors are her fellow midfielders, and through these last four years she has been consistently teamed up in the middle with the likes of Julie Magid, Amy Powell and Sandy Shimogaki.

JOHAN KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

UMass women's soccer player Rebecca Myers sits atop Mt. Skinner after a recent workout.

They all know her the best, and have helped her become one of the best in UMass women's soccer history.

"Rebecca's great to watch, because she is so offense– oriented, but she will get back on defense when she needs to," Powell said. "It has been a real blessing to play with people like Rebecca, Julie and Sandy. We all give a different aspect to the game."

"She and I have been in the center since our freshman year, so we have a good bond in there, and we know each other well," Magid said. "Its an understanding between us. Whoever goes up, the other stays back, and vice versa. So, it's worked out well, and we play really well with each other."

The leadership of those upperclassmen for Myers has had its positive effect, as she believes that kind of presence will be the key to success for the team this season. With all of the accolades that she has received, her focus is not on the all–time scoring lists, etc., it is now on the current group of underclassmen.

"I think we need to take each game as it comes, and not look over anyone," Myers said. "The overall goal in the back of everyone's head is the NCAA's, but it needs to stay back there.

"I do not want to sell anyone short, because all of the seniors have been to the Final Four, and we know what it feels like. I want to give that to the underclassmen, more than anything in the world… it is the best thing ever," she said.

The circle is almost complete, and it is now for Myers' place on the top of the Pioneer Valley to be reserved. She has seen the view from the Valley floor, but she has not seen her athletic peak yet, and wants to reserve that view from the top for a later time in the season.

"Hopefully, I haven't reached my peak yet," Myers said. "I hope I will in three or four months, but until then, I really hope I haven't."

■ women's soccer

continued from page 24

could play, and it was not as smooth as we have played."

Opening game jitters, a large debut crowd, a rare night game, slick playing conditions, any excuse could be used, but the fact is that Fairfield did not have a chance in this contest anyway. The win was no surprise, but the surprise for the Minutewomen was senior tri–captain Rebecca Myers debut at central forward, due to the loss for the season of the preseason favorite at that position in junior Samantha Frank.

UMass took the offensive initiative from the start, scoring a goal just 5:11 into the match. Senior Tina Lightning capitalized on a beautiful service from fellow senior midfielder Sandy Shimogaki to give the team an early 1–0 advantage. Lightning caught Fairfield keeper Christen Veach a little too far out of position, and chipped the ball right over her head.

The offense was all UMass for the first two–thirds of the half, but began to look a little flat as time wore on. The Minutewomen were unable to capitalize on scoring opportunities by both Myers and senior midfielder Amy Powell, while Lightning left another scoring chance in the bottle midway through the half, as she was back tackled on a breakaway by Fairfield's Jennifer Mitchell.

Myers' offensive influence was felt in the front, as Fairfield's defense was consistently marking her. But the real defense on the field was the one comprised of junior Erica Iverson, sophomore Amanda Thompson, senior Erin Lynch and freshman Robin Smith. Smith made her collegiate debut, while Iverson was literally on the ball with tough, physical defending throughout the match.

UMass' team defense in this opener was not unnoticed by Rudy, as they severely limited the impact of last season's leading scorer for Fairfield, junior midfielder Kelly Hurley, and he saw them as the strength in this win.

"To me, the defenders organized really well," Rudy said. "We got caught on a few counters, but you are going to do that when you dominate a game that much.

"I felt they knocked the ball around the back very well, reduced the other team's chances and with the exception of a few times in the box, I felt really good about them."

The second half was more of the same for the Minutewomen, as they mostly kept the ball in Fairfield's half of the pitch, while midway through falling a little flat again. It was all over when Erin Lynch was dragged down in the goal box, and converted on the ensuing penalty kick.

With 25 seconds to play, Fairfield made the score a little more appetizing for themselves at 2–1. However, it was an own goal, as the defensive scramble in front of junior Danielle Dion's net left Fairfield's Ann Rosdick ricocheted shot as the final score of the match.

"I think that own goal was a good product of our defenders trying to get back," Rudy said. "One out of 10 that will happen… I'm not worried about that goal."

THE CROSSROADS

MDA is where help and hope meet for people with neuromuscular diseases.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association

1-800-572-1717

COMPARE!

MORE MACHINES	BETTER AEROBICS
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights	Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step Bosweiss • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor

"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST 80. AMHERST 256-0080

GRE Computer Countdown

Computer Test Phobic?

GRE

Only a few more chances to take the GRE on Paper.

Call today to enroll.

Hurry! Classes are filling fast!

KAPLAN

Take it now. Your scores are good for 5 years.

1-800-KAP-TEST

www.kaplan.com

E-mail: GRE@kaplan.com America Online: keyword "kaplan"

L.B.G.A.

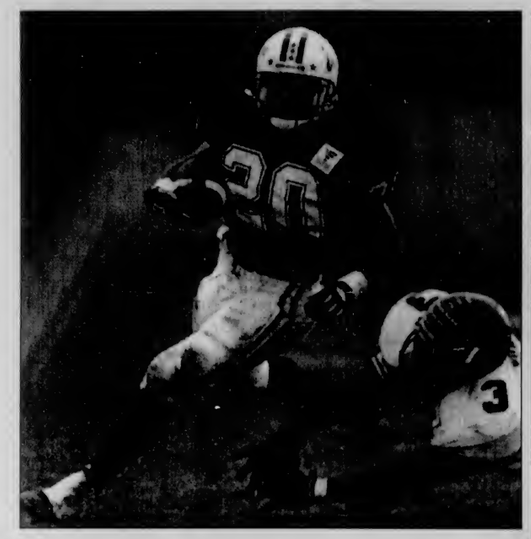
(Lesbian, Bi-Sexual, Gay, Alliance)

Weekly info socials every Tues. 7pm
Campus Center Rm. 803

Sponsored by:

THE GROTTO KITCHEN NOW OPEN!!
Northampton's Own Gay Cafe, Bar & Dance Club
★ GAY ★ LESBIAN ★ BISEXUAL ★ FRIENDS ★ ALLIES ★
25 West St. Northampton
413-586-6900

for more info call 545-0154 or stop by our Student Union office



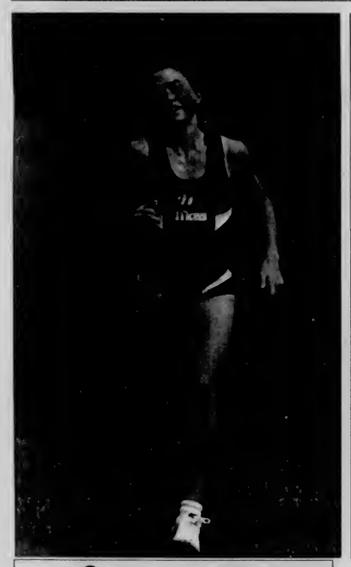
Look in the weeks ahead for the L.B.G.A.'s first dance at the Grotto.

Mon. Sept. 23rd

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).

EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY "LIKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK." WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.

We Want Writers!



Are you interested in writing sports???
If you are, come down to the Collegian offices Monday night, Sept. 9. There will be an informational meeting for all new writers at 5:30 p.m.
There will be a meeting for current sports staff members Monday Sept. 9 at 6 p.m.
Anyone is welcome, no experience is necessary.
If you have any questions, concerns, or comments call co– sports editors Casey Kane or Chris Stamm at 545–0719.

Clockwise from above: UMass men's soccer player Dave Siljanovski; women's tennis player Liz Durant; cross country standout Rebecca Donaghue; UMass tailback Frank Alessio.
Siljanovski photo Collegian file, all others courtesy Media Relations.

WMUA Sports

WMUA, the campus radio station of UMass, is looking for new talent. No experience is necessary.
There will be an informational meeting of the WMUA Sports Staff, tonight at 7 p.m. Anyone interested is encouraged to attend.
If you have any questions call WMUA Sports Directors Mike Reiss or Pat Sheeran at 545–2876.

Interested in Intramurals?

Entries are being taken now for soccer, flag football, co–ed softball, ice hockey, field hockey, water polo, ultimate Frisbee, and more. Call 215 Boyden at 545–0022, or stop by for info.

Officials are also needed for intramurals. Flag football, soccer, ice hockey, softball, and others need officials. The positions are paid! Call 215 Boyden at 545–0022, or stop by for info.

Join Men's Crew

The UMass men's crew wants new rowers. No experience is necessary, and everyone is welcome.
There will be an informational meeting Monday, Sept. 9 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Rm. 101.
Contact head coach Stew Stokes at 545–0487 if you have any questions.

MERGE
When we all work together, great things can happen.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

CAPTAIN VIDEO
549-6016
19 MONTAGUE ROAD NORTH AMHERST
OPEN MON-THURS 10AM-9PM FRI.SAT 10AM-11PM SUN.12-9PM
BETWEEN PIZZA HUT & COMMONWEALTH FARMS
ONE COUPON PER ORDER
2 MOVIES for 3$
CANNOT BE COMBINED WITH OTHER OFFERS • ONLY 3 NEW RELEASES

ULTIMATE AEROBIC TRAINING
Stairmaster 4400 PT

24 Months $139
CLIMB
PLUS
KEISER
NAUTILUS
FREE-WEIGHTS
STAIRMASTERS
LIFE CYCLES
LIFE ROWER
BIOCYCLES
CYBEX UBE
NORDIC TRACK
TREADMILLS
AEROBICS
AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 West St. South Amherst 256-0080

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus
Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
HiLow • Reebok Bench Step
Boxercise • Yoga • Area's Largest
Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST. SO. AMHERST 256-0080

The Boltwood Project
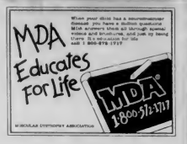
Recruitment Nights
Attend Only One
Monday, September 9 or
Tuesday, September 10 or
Wednesday, September 11
6:30-8:30 pm in the Campus Center Auditorium
Recruiting University and Five College Students interested in earning up to two credits while providing community service to the Amherst area
For More Information call 545-6753

Women's Crew

The Massachusetts women's crew is looking for motivated people interested in rowing. Rowers and coxwains are needed. No experience is necessary.
There will be an informational meeting Thursday, Sept. 12 at 7 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.
For more info call 545–9441 or stop by 230 Boyden.



Tryouts

The Massachusetts field hockey team will hold tryouts Friday, Sept. 6. The tryouts will start at 2:30 p.m. at Boyden. Call 545–4092 for more information.

Far left: Melanie Gore of the UMass field hockey team; above left: the UMass women's crew; below left: UMass women's soccer player Rebecca Myers.
All photos courtesy UMass Media Relations.

last chance to prepare for the October test LSAT
Last class begins on: September 8th!!
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST KAPLAN
*LSAT is a registered trademark of Law Services.

MDA Educates For Life

MDA 1-800-572-1717

KPMG
The Global Leader
KPMG In-Site There's nothing else like it in the www.
Find out why at the KPMG in-site
Your one-of-a-kind source for everything you'll need to know.
Watch for our In-Sites at www.kpmgcampus.com

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Bud Dry" bots $9.49 case
Sam Adams "Lager" $16.99 case bots.
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"!
Harpoon - Alt, Ale, Pilsner, Snakebite, & "I.P.A."!
Petes - Nine different flavors including; "Octoberfest"!
Catamount - Porter, Wheat, Amber, Gold, & "Octoberfest"!
Sams Long Shots - Pale Ale, Blk. Lager, & "Hazelnut Brown"!
Brewery Hill - Raspberry, Cherry, Honey, Blk & Tan, & "Pale"!
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 liter
Captain Morgan $16.49 1.75 liter
Hamm's $7.49 case 12oz
Citra Pale & Amber $4.99 1.2 liter
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

DaveMatthewsBand

with special guest
Boxing Gandhis
SUN. OCT. 6
All Tickets $23.50 - Showtime 7:30 pm
mullins center
university of massachusetts amherst
Tickets are available at the Mullins Center Box Office, or for an additional fee, at all TicketMaster outlets and charge-by-phone at 413-733-2500 or 203-772-4200.
For more information, call 413-545-0505.
Presented by Delsener/Slater Enterprises and MassConcerts
ON SALE MON. SEPT. 9TH AT 10 AM.
http://www.dmband.com

■ field hockey

continued from page 24

score from it, and that's one plus."

"The umpire just waited too long to make the call," Hixon said.

The Minutewomen were 0-for-5 on penalty corners, while the Demon Deacons were 0-for-3. Rose made six saves for UMass and Mumford stopped eight shots for Wake Forest.

"It was a great start for us this year coming off of last year's disappointing season," Rothenberger said. "We came out, we were confident. We followed the game plan to a tee."

"We still have a lot to do, but I'm very pleased we won the game," Hixon said. "It's really important we won the game, I think it's really important for our own confidence.

"Our defense played really well and that's important," she said.

The Minutewomen return to action on Saturday, when they travel to face New Hampshire.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Courtney MacLean was named Atlantic 10 Player of the Week following her two-goal performance in last Saturday's 4–1 field hockey win over Wake Forest.

■ football

continued from page 24

whole team has a strict focus and that's to work hard and get things going."

Alessio, along with sophomore sensation Matt Jordan, will look to keep up the always impressive UMass ground game. Entering this weekend's game the Minutemen have a streak of 35 consecutive games where they have rushed for at least 100 rushing yards as a team.

The Minutemen are returning with 16 of 22 starters and 31 total letter winners that will be looking to improve on the 6– 5 mark left a year ago. Five of the 16 returning are from the offensive line which accounted for the primary reason why UMass had the top rushing offense in the entire nation in Div. I-AA last season.

Villanova comes off a dismal 3–8 season from a year ago, but does hold a 7–0 all-time series lead over the Minutemen. Once a regular opponent, this time it'll be four years since the Minutemen have faced the Wildcats.

"I really don't know much about them," Hodges said. "Right now we're trying to take care of UMass. Their offensive coordinator is new, and we're expecting a completely different offense than we've seen out of Villanova in the past."

Speaking of a completely different offense, the Minutemen are hoping that their scheme will be a little different this year as well. In a season last year where passing was as rare as a kickoff returned for a touchdown, the Minutemen have named junior Anthony Catterton as their starting quarterback with the hopes of reinstating a solid passing attack.

"There's so much enthusiasm," Catterton said. "The guys are really ready to play. The guys in front of me are great and I couldn't ask for anything better. They're an amazing group and a bunch of hardworking guys.

Catterton will have three solid tight ends, and two strong wide receivers in senior Darryl Thomas, and sophomore Doug Clarke to do the duties of hauling in passes.

Last season the Minutemen averaged only 44 yards passing a game, 483 yards for the year, and only two passing touchdowns to six interceptions. Catterton will be hoping to change those numbers dramatically.

The Minutemen will see five new faces on the sidelines this season as they have brought in five new coaches to help Hodges and the Minutemen. Rich Rachel, from Rutgers, joins the team as secondary/special teams coach. Ben Albert, former Minuteman defensive lineman, is now the defensive tackle coach. Stanley Clayton, from Penn State, will coach the offensive line, Bob Colbert, offensive coordinator from James Madison with NFL coaching experience, will be quarterbacks coach, and Brian Crist, from Virginia Tech, assumes the duties of wide receiver/tight ends coach.

The defense for the Minutemen shapes up very well at the linebacker positions where all–America candidate Justin Reimer reins, with 155 tackles to lead the conference last year, including 95 solo tackles and 8 sacks. Another punishing linebacker coming off a strong redshirt freshman season is Khari Samuel. He led the team in forced fumbles with five and ranked second in tackles with 94. Mike Dawson begins the year as well in the middle linebacker position.

The defensive line will need to play tough as well as the secondary which loses three of its four starters including standout Breon Parker. Senior cornerback and co–captain Kory Blackwell will be relied on heavily to defend the opponents top receiver. He will also assume the kickoff return duties left by Parker.

"Enthusiasm is definitely a big key," Alessio said. "You got to work hard, you got to be enthusiastic, and if we keep working hard, we're going to be ready to play."

■ Lovell

continued from page 24

of his ability to carry the puck, in terms of his ability to take face offs and his ability to see the open man. Those are all going to be able to help us, especially his ability to handle the puck on the power play."

Lovell's transfer occurred shortly after the NCAA levied heavy sanctions against Maine this past summer, its hockey program in particular. Although 11 sports, ranging from cross country to football were hurt, none were hit harder than coach Shawn Walsh's squad, which received four years probation and scholarship reductions in addition to television and NCAA tournament bans for the upcoming season.

The Black Bears have been ranked No. 1 for parts of three of the past four seasons, and Lovell will bring a wealth of experience that the UMass hockey team, in its infancy, hasn't had an opportunity to enjoy just yet.

"[I'll bring] a lot of experience," the former Junior Bruin standout said. "I've been there. I've played in the national championship game and I've been in Hockey East playoff games. I've done all that stuff, with Maine, the top team in the country for three years in a row."

Due to NCAA transfer regulations, Lovell has the option of either playing from the conclusion of the fall semester through Christmas 1997, or sitting out the entire season, and playing all of next year. Both Lovell and Mallen said that a decision will be made in December, although at the moment it appears that Lovell will don the maroon and white at RPI's Houston Field House on December 27.

When Maine played in the RPI Invitational in 1994, Lovell won the tournament's MVP award, netting a hat trick against Miami of Ohio, and scoring a pair of goals with three assists against the host Engineers in the title game.

The addition of Lovell will boost the Minutemen, 10–19–6 a year ago, as they aim to finish above .500 this season, and advance to the Hockey East semifinals in March at the FleetCenter. Lovell will help thrust the program further into the limelight both on and off campus.

The transfer sparked a good amount of reaction in Maine, where the Black Bears serve as the state's single most followed sports entity, in a scaled down version of Nebraska's obsession with the Cornhuskers on the gridiron.

The folks in the Valley will likely take notice too. UMass already ranks amongst the league leaders in attendance, and Lovell's presence will likely boost the program's popularity, as fans take notice of the Mullins Center's "other" tenants.

"I'm excited," junior finance major Mark Lestuk, UMass hockey's superfan said. "Hopefully Lovell will make a big contribution, and get us a .500 season, maybe even a four– seed [in the Hockey East playoffs] and a trip to Boston."

* * *

Lovell is not alone in leaving the Black Bears' den.

Sophomore defenseman Brett Clark is taking his booming slapshot north of the border, and is listed on the roster for the Montreal Canadiens rookie camp which opens next week. If that falls through, the Hockey East All–Rookie team selection will press his luck playing Junior A with Brandon.

The Bangor Daily News reported yesterday that All–American goaltender Blair Allison and All–Hockey East defenseman Jeff Tory are leaving to try out for the Canadian national team.

Brad Mahoney has transferred to Northeastern and will add some muscle to new coach Bruce Crowder's squad.

Want to write sports?

There will be an informational meeting for new sports writers at 5:30 p.m. on Monday in the Collegian offices. Anyone and everyone interested in writing sports is welcome.

There will be a meeting for all current sports staff members Monday at 6 p.m. at the Collegian.

If you have any questions, call co–sports editors Chris or Casey at 545–0719.

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops —
affordable, fun, practical, including
Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program,
Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training,
Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog –
(413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Bud Dry" bots $9.49 case
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 litre
Sam Adams "Lager" $16.99 case bots.
Hamm's $7.49 12pk cans
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"!
Harpoon - Alt, Ale, Pilsner, Snakebite, & "I.P.A."!
Petes - Nine different flavors including: "Octoberfest"!
Catamount - Porter, Wheat, Amber, Gold, & "Octoberfest"!
Sams Long Shots - Pale Ale, Blk. Lager, & "Hazelnut Brown"!
Brewery Hill - Raspberry, Cherry, Honey, Blk & Tan, & "Pale"!
Captain Morgan $16.99 1.75 litre
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Citra 12pk bottles $4.99 12 oz
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Microbrews
Harpoon IPA 12 Pack Bottles $8.99
Middlesex Brewing Co. $4.99/six
Oatmeal Stout, Brown Ale, Raspberry Wheat
New Amsterdam $4.99/six
Amber, Black & Tan, ALe, Blonde, IPA
Longshot $4.99/six
Pale Ale, Black Lager, Hazelnut Brown
1/2 Keg Sam Adams Boston ALe $75.00
Beer Specials
Red Dog & Icehouse $8.99
18-Pack Cans
Rolling Rock $7.39
12-Pack Cans
Molson Golden & Ice $7.99
12-Pack Cans
Bud 16 oz. Bottles $3.99/six
Liquor Specials
Southern Comfort $7.99
750 ml
Stolichnaya Vodka $11.99
750 ml
Kahlua 750 ml $12.99
Bacardi Limon $12.99
750 ml
Jack Daniels $12.99
750 ml
Over 30 Microbrews
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

Fall Bike Sale
MONGOOSE
Treshold $299.95 $259.95
Switchback $329.95 $289.95
Sycamore $369.95 $349.95
Hilltopper $419.95 $389.95
Alta SX $734.95 $599.95
IBOC O-GSX $999.95 $899.95
KONA
Hahanna $469.95 $349.95
Fire Mountain $529.95 $409.95
Lava Dome $629.95 $539.95
CinderCone $849.95 $625.95
Kilauea $1049.95 $874.95
AA $1249.95 $1074.95
Explosif $1699.95 $1449.95
Kula $1949.95 $1649.95
Bicycle World
Rob Reynolds' Ride Visit
GreenBeld • 106 Federal Street • 774-3701
Amherst • 253-7725 • 63 South Pleasant St. (rear)
Our new location! Northampton • 32 Masonic St. • 586-8100
Serving the Valley's Cyclist for Over 25 Years

Volleyball goes unbeaten on the road

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

At this rate, the Massachusetts volleyball team will finish the season undefeated en route to bringing home its first NCAA championship.

But, of course, that fact amounts to nothing, and right now the Minutewomen are just happy to be 4-0 after hosting the Reebok/UMass Invitational to open their season. Since they are a team short in the depth department, and relatively inexperienced with two starting freshmen, just playing together against competition is considered a positive. A winning record is gravy.

And what's more, not only has UMass not lost a match, it hasn't lost a game. That's right, over the weekend, they beat up on Tulane, Southwest Texas State, Providence and Middle Tennessee State, all 3-0.

And there are other highlights. For starters, junior Lesley Nolan was named this year's first WHMP Athlete of the Week yesterday. The outside hitter was the tournament MVP after leading UMass with 53 kills and 46 digs, while hitting .323 for the tournament (season).

Also, senior Dionne Nash became the first Minutewoman in school history to reach the 1,000 career dig plateau in the opener against the Green Wave.

Without question, coach Bonnie Kenny was happy with those individual achievements, as well as pleasantly surprised about the collective effort of her squad.

"I thought [the tournament] would be a bit more challenging, actually," she said. "I certainly didn't think we'd be 3–0 in all four matches. But we played very, very hard. The two freshmen played great. I knew that the team who served well, passed and played defense would do well this past weekend, and I felt comfortable in the way we did those three things."

Against Tulane, where the Minutewomen won, 15–7, 15–5, 15–8, freshman Kari Hogancamp played impressively. The setter/outside hitter registered a whopping 22 digs to lead the team in her first collegiate match. Nash, meanwhile, totalled 15 kills and 16 digs. Nolan also gave a strong effort, with 14 kills and 10 digs.

UMass defeated SW Texas State, 15–4, 15–1, 15–7. Here, Nolan had a team–high 15 kills to go along with eight digs. Freshman middle blocker Jill Meyers played solidly in her second straight game, while Hogancamp picked up another 12 digs in the match.

The Friars were UMass' next victim, going down 15–3, 15–11, 15–9. Nolan was outstanding, leading both teams in kills and digs, with 13 and 18, respectively. Nash garnered 11 kills, while sophomore setter Katie Pearce remained consistent with 38 digs.

"Katie really did a great job this weekend," said Kenny. "She played very well defensively, as well as offensively. She was very creative out there for us."

Finally, UMass beat Middle Tennessee State, 15–7, 15–0, 15–9. While MTS relied on Deb Anderson (15 kills, 10 digs) for almost all of their offense, Nash (13), Nolan (11) and Meyers (11) all reached the double–digit mark in kills. Meyers improved or stayed the same in every match in number of kills, peaking in this one. Pearce managed 13 digs to lead the Minutewomen, while Hogancamp followed with 11 and Nolan 10.

So with their stellar start, has Kenny's expectations suddenly shot up? Is she making plans for Cleveland in December?

"No, I don't think that would be fair," she said. "We have to keep things in perspective. It's so early. We've got a lot to work on, and have got quite a ways to go."

So sure, at this rate they will be the NCAA champions. But that holds about as much weight as other facts. For example, not only is her record flawless on the road and in the conference, they are also tied for first with the best winning percentage in the nation. That sure does sound nice, doesn't it?

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Michelle Paciorek and the UMass women's volleyball team cruised to victory last weekend in the UMass Invitational without dropping a game.

Spring season a success for crew, Dietz & Co. look for same in '97

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Would you believe that there was a time when a Massachusetts athletic team which won last year's Atlantic 10 Championship needed to raise money just to compete?

Gone are the days when the Massachusetts women's crew spent as much time raising money for equipment as they did on the water. Since the UMass program was elevated to varsity status two years ago, coach Jim Dietz has transformed what was once a club sport into one of the leading squads in the nation.

Financial developments aside, Dietz and company have excelled in a sport traditionally dominated by private schools. While UMass' Ivy League opponents have the luxury of drawing from a pool of students, many of whom have rowed in high school, the Minutewomen still rely on on–campus recruiting. Has this effected the program? Let last season's record speak for itself.

'96 In Review...

Last season, UMass boasted regular season wins over Boston University, Northeastern, Columbia, Villanova, Navy and the Univeristy of New Hampshire. On the heels of a successful regular season, the Minutewomen found themselves entering the first ever A–10 Championship in Philadelphia with the first place seed in nearly every event.

In varsity eight competition, UMass brought home the gold, topping Temple, George Washington, and St. Joseph's in the final heat.

In novice competition, three boats continued the Minutewomen's successful streak. The first novice eight, racing in the junior varsity race disguised as the UMass lightweight varsity edged out St. Joseph's for the first place spot.

"This crew has the fight which I hope all UMass teams will become noted for," Dietz said. "Week after week, we saw this crew come from behind beating much larger crews as they clawed their way to victory."

The second novice eight, took second to George Washington while the third novice boat brought home the gold.

At the end of the A–10 Championships, the overall point trophy was awarded to UMass. At the end of conference competition, the Minutewomen brought the Commissioner's Cup back to Amherst for the second straight year after racking up the most points in the A–10.

Later in the season, UMass met with mixed results in Sprints, entering competition with a number five seed. However, rough weather put a damper on race day.

"With cold overcast skies and a 25 to 30 mile per hour quartering headwind, the varsity came close to sinking each time out and finished a disappointing fourth," Dietz said.

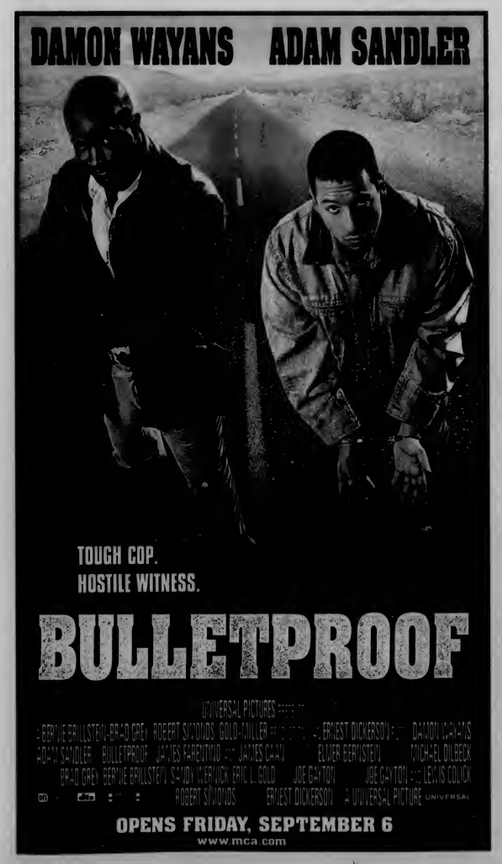
The junior varsity squad, competing in the varsity lightweights, however, brought UMass its first gold medal in the Sprints.

In the IRA Regatta held in Camden, N.J., the varsity eight brought home the silver, taking second to undefeated Sprints champion Brown. The story of the day was the lightweight boat racing in the junior varsity event taking first place.

The season concluded with a fifth place national ranking performance in the final Cincinnati Regatta, which will be replaced with the first ever NCAA Championship.

"Going varsity was the best thing that could have happened to UMass rowing," said senior lightweight rower Amy Kenney. "It allowed us to bring in the coaches and equipment that could bring us up to the next level."

This year, the Minutewomen will boast a varsity lightweight boat for the first time. In addition, UMass hopes to build off of last year's successes with solid on–campus recruiting.



"On–campus recruits are our lifeline, the blood that keeps UMass crew going," Kenney said.

Jim Dietz

UMass Women's Crew Fall 1995 Schedule

Oct. 6 Textile River Regatta
Oct. 12 Head of the Housatonic
Oct. 13 Head of Connecticut
Oct. 20 Head of the Charles
Oct. 26 Head of the Schuylkill
Oct. 26 Dartmouth Novice Regatta
Nov. 3 Yale Novice Regatta
Nov. 10 Foot of the Charles

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Want to start your own fraternity? Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to recolonize our chapter. If interested call Bret Hrbek at 317-334-1898 ext. 214

Poster Sale: Fine Arts; Movie, Animal, Rock. 3-D Most images $6, $7, & $8. S.U.B. Wed-Fri. 9am- 4pm Banafits UMASS radio WMUA 91.1 FM.

All University women invited to attend Sigma Kapa Open Rush. Thurs. 9/5 5-7 pm. Sun. 9/8 6-8 pm. Tues. 9/10 5-7 pm. Thurs. 9/12 6-8 pm. Please call Beth for more info. 256-6887 Located 19 Allan St. (Behind Hillel)

AUTO FOR SALE

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK: 79,000 mi.; very good condition; sunroof; tune-up work just done; $2900 OBO; Call 549-7298

'93 MITSUBISHI MIRAGE 40 miles; $5500 or best offer. 367-0384

EMPLOYMENT

NOW HIRING! COFFEE SHOP AND HATCH Now have positions available working during lunch Mon-Fri Come down and see us or call 545-0016 or 545-2597

PART TIME JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742.

FOR SALE

LAPTOP COMPUTER: IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HD/ with case and extras/ $1100/OBO Please contact Josh at 256-8966

BOOKCASES Unfinished pine- 24"x36"x9"- 3 shelves- $48.00 + tax- 536-1944

HELP WANTED

Want the toughest job you'll ever love?? People's- a student-run business- is seeking highly motivated undergraduate work-study and non-work-study students for long-term commitment. Learn to co—manage a small business, gain invaluable leadership skills, and have a blast! Applications available at the Center for Student Businesses. Student Union, Room 406, or the Market. EOE

Counter/Kitchen Help 25 Hr/Week. Must be able to work late nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst.

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Now Hiring Experienced Wait Staff Driver and Hostess; Apply with-in only; Kai Chi Restaurant

CAREGIVER WITH EARLY CHILDHOOD Experience for two and three year old. Monday, Tuesday, or Friday 8-5. cer required, references required. 253-3237

Looking for a fun, responsible companion with own transportation for our 13 year old son. Some afternoons and overnights in our home in Leverett. Call 548-9057

PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANT For evenings, overnights, and wekends. For male quad. $7.85 per hour. $15.70 for overnight. 5-0986

RECEPTIONIST: MULLINS CENTER, M-Th: 1:30-5:00 pm. F: 10:30am-5:00pm. telephone experience required, some clerical. $5.25/hr. MULLINS CENTER 2nd floor to apply.

Immediate Openings! Tennis shop sales help needed. Flexible knowledge of racket sports required. Call Jonathan. 585-8854

HELP WANTED

PAINTERS NEEDED- Now hiring painters for the greater Amherst area. Hiring quick and reliable painters. Experience preferred, but not required. Starts at $7/hr., plus bonuses. Part-time or Full-time. Contact Dan Wolman at Student Painters. 1-800-829-4777.

Cruise Ships Hiring- Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necassary. For info. call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring- Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620. Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring- Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services. 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector. Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info. call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info. call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute. Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Severs 549-0083

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97 - SELL TRIPS, EARN CASH AND GO FREE. STS is hiring Campus Reps/ Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida. Call 800-648-4849 for information on joining America's #1 Student Tour Organization.

YOUR AD HERE!!! 545-3500

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment For Rent
- Auto For Sale
- Employment
- Entertainment
- For Sale
- Found (2 days Free)
- Happy Birthday
- Houses For Rent
- Instruction
- Lost
- Musicians
- Miscellaneous
- Motorcycles
- Personals
- Room For Rent
- Room Wanted
- Roommate Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Transportation
- Wanted to Rent
- Wanted

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

50,000 EYES WILL SEE YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE CO[illegible]N C[illegible]DS THEY W[illegible]ORK!!

(WOULD I LIE TO YOU?)

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL & PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION

FREE TRIAL CLASSES
MUSIC • ACTING • DANCE
SEPTEMBER 9-13
CALL: PAD (413) 545-0519 • 73 BARTLETT HALL • UMASS

last chance to prepare for the October test
Last class begins on: September 9th!!
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST
GRE
KAPLAN
*GRE is a registered trademark of the Educational Testing Service

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
$5/hr. Mon.-Fri., Sat. & Sun. Unlimited Playoral $4/hr. Weekdays
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 9 ft. Tables
• Live Entertainment Every Fri. & Sat.
• All Sporting Events
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284

Andy's Pizza Savings!!!
Clip this coupon for:
2 Dinners for $10.50
plus tax
256-8147 256-8148

Dept. of Germanic Languages & Literatures
510 Herter Hall 545-2350
OPEN CLASSES
All German language courses, elementary to advanced.

GERMAN 297A	Crusades and the Image of Islam	MWF 12:20
GERMAN 304	From Berlin to Hollywood (AT)	TuTh 1:00-2:15, screening W 6-9 p.m.
GERMAN 380	Weimar Germany	TuTh 2:30-3:45
DANISH 190A	Hans Christian Andersen	TuTh 1-2:15

All of the above are taught in English

SWEDISH 110	Elementary Swedish	MWF 11:15

FOOTWEAR DEN
~ Sizes ~
Men's: 6-18
Women's:5-12
Brand Name Athletic and Casual Footwear Specializing in Running Shoes
CLOSEOUT PRICES
321 Main Street, Amherst • Down the street from Amherst Police Department

• Haircutting
• Hair Color
• Permanent Waving
• Tanning
• Extensive Professional Products Available
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526
189 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

Always Wanted one of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

Well, my voice went up again today at 3 o'clock. The same as yesterday.

Maybe it's the lack of oxygen inside the beaver suit I've been wearing.

I need to enjoy life more.

I'm miserable. I have to learn how to pick the fruit of life.

Got any ideas where to find some fruit?

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I'm sorry, sir, but your insurance company requires that you first get a referral slip from your primary care physician before we can treat you."

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Quote of the Day

"If no one were more like they are now than they ever were before.

–Dwight Eisenhower"

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Just stay submerged and keep calm, ma'am. Ray here found a piece of your suit, and other staff members are looking for the rest."

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Mike Elliott
Copy Editor

Elizabeth Brown
Photo Technician

G. Tony Morse
Production Supervisor

Marc Dionne
Sandra Krauss, Matt McArthy
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet	Roast Beef
Spicy Black Bean Burger	Cheese Lasagne
Macaroni & Cheese	Chicken Breast Sandwich

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on Roll	Roast Beef
Chicken Cutlet	Baked Ziti
Grilled Cheese

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese	Roast Beef
Rotini with Italian Sausage Sauce	Caponata
Red Beans	Pastabilities
	Baked Ziti

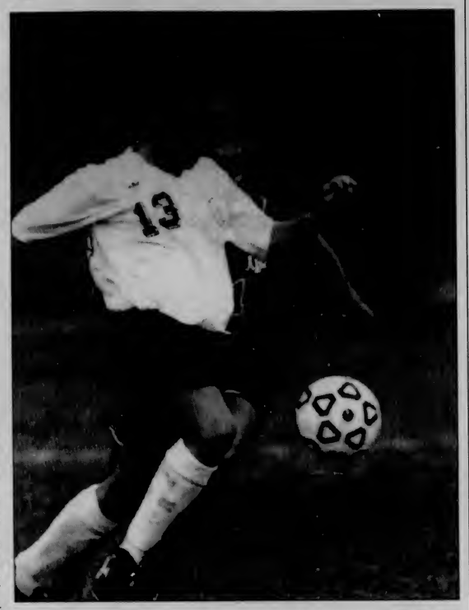
Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese	Roast Beef
Rotini with Italian Sausage Sauce	Chick'n wings
Tri Bean Caserole	Pastabilities
	Baked Ziti

Sports

Minutewomen get fast start at Fairfield

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff



AGAWAM — This past weekend in Agawam, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team opened up their season with a 2–1 victory over Fairfield University.

The Minutewomen drew 1,653 screaming fans for the battle between last season's A–10 and MAAC champions, more than enough for a "home away from home" advantage. The match was more one–sided than the final score, as the UMass defense limited the Fairfield offense to just 10 shots on goal.

On the other hand, the team did not look as sharp as they did in their preseason games, like their 5–0 demolishing of the University of Vermont two weeks ago. This game that was played under the lights last Saturday was also under the critical spotlight of head coach Jim Rudy, and even with the win, he was and was not satisfied with their overall performance.

"Well, we were pleased with the victory, but I do not think we are too pleased with the way we played," Rudy said. "It was not as smooth as we

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 17

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Erin Lynch scored once in the Minutewomen's victory over Fairfield last Saturday.

Myers returns to lead women's soccer to top

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

In her four years at the University of Massachusetts, Rebecca Myers has experienced the peaks and valleys of sporting competition. From last second NCAA Tournament wins to mind–baffling losing streaks, the central midfielder and senior tri–captain for the women's soccer team has seen it all.

Now, her final season for the No. 18 nationally ranked Minutewomen (1–0) is at hand, and the journey towards the last peak in her collegiate career has begun.

On a less metaphorical note, one of the traditions that head coach Jim Rudy uses to officially end the preseason for his team is "The Mountain." The last workout before the real season entails a run to the top of Mt. Skinner, a more condensed metaphor concerning the toughness of the season–long grind.

From one of the peaks surrounding the Pioneer Valley, Myers reflects on her stellar career up to this point, with the enthusiasm of high expectations for her upcoming final season.

Turn to MYERS, page 17

Field hockey destroys Wake as Hixon returns

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

WESTFIELD — Though much of the fanfare before the Massachusetts field hockey team's season opener last Saturday was focused on the return of coach Pam Hixon to the Minutewoman squad, the spotlight after the game was focused squarely on the shoulders of a new member of the team.

In her collegiate debut, Saskia Fuchs, who was named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week, scored two goals and assisted on one, as UMass rolled to a 4–1 victory over the Wake Forest Demon Deacons at Westfield State College. The win gave the Minutewomen a 1–0 record, while Wake Forest dropped to 0–1.

"[UMass] is a really great team and I think we made a good start today," Fuchs said.

"We're not prolific scorers, so I think if [Fuchs] brings scoring to our team that will be a real bonus," Hixon said. "She's very skillful, and she'll be very dangerous, somebody that people will have to worry about."

The game was played at Westfield State College because of the lack of artificial turf at UMass' Richard F. Garber Field. The Minutewomen will host two more games this season, North Carolina on Oct. 5 and West Chester on Oct. 6, at Westfield State.

Massachusetts got on the board first when Fuchs, who is recovering from a bad groin pull, beat Deacon goalie Wendy Mumford 11:23 into the game. Fuchs then converted a Kyle Rothenberger pass 32 seconds later to give the Minutewomen a 2–0 edge.

Wake Forest was able to get within one during a scramble in front of the UMass cage, Marv Moore pushed the ball past UMass goalie Hilary Rose for Wake's only score of the game.

In the second half, the Minutewomen put the game out of reach, tallying twice more. Junior Courtney MacLean, who garnered A–10 Player of the Week honors, scored the first of her two goals on the day off a Kate Putnam assist just four minutes after halftime.

MacLean put the finishing touch on the Massachusetts scorecard, collecting the rebound of a Fuchs shot and putting it past Mumford.

"Courtney is a natural goal scorer," Hixon said. "She's been working well. I expect that she will have more goals this season than she's ever had."

Wake Forest threatened to score again when a penalty corner was awarded with 1:45 remaining in the game. The Demon Deacons were unable to convert on the opportunity, but were able to force another shot when they stopped the UMass clearing attempt. Rose went to the ground to protect the goal and a scramble in front of the net ensued.

UMass' Amy Ott tried to clear the ball from Rose's pads, but a swarm of Wake Forest players also played the ball, pushing it under Rose. A penalty stroke was awarded to Wake Forest.

Wake's Susan Bowman faced Rose for the stroke, after Rose visibly argued the call with the referee. Bowman couldn't put the shot away, sending the ball to the left of the net.

"Corner. Corner saved. I'm laying down and there are five black shirts treading on me, playing the ball," Rose said. "The decision should have been to go out. But [the umpire] let play carry on and then the stroke was awarded.

"Obviously you have to defend the stroke, but there is frustration in knowing the decision should have been made three tackles earlier than it was. But she didn't

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 20

Kicking around the NFL: NFC Central on top again

The NFL season kicked off last weekend and it's just 16 more weeks until we know who's headed for the playoffs and who's headed for an early golf season and getting ready for next year.

Which means now is the perfect time for season predictions. So, going around the league…

The NFC West will, appropriately, be dominated by the only team actually in the west — San Francisco. Jerry Rice and Steve Young will again lead the attack and with Terry Kirby adding to the running game, the 49ers should get through the regular season pretty easily. The defense is also solid, though the loss of Eric Davis could hurt against some of the pass–happy teams in their division.

The rest of the teams in the division are all matched fairly well. The Falcons have an explosive offense with the run and shoot, but didn't get their defense much help during the off–season. The Rams, provided bad–boy first–round selection Lawrence Phillips is on the field and not behind bars, could be good. Isaac Bruce is an all–pro, and their second first–rounder, Eddie Kennison, could join him. Now the question is who will throw the ball to them? Steve Walsh did a good job two years ago in Chicago, but doesn't have the best arm. The final answer could be Tony Banks, who was impressive in the preseason.

Right with these two should be the Panthers, who will continue to improve with QB Kerry Collins having more experience and Tim Biakabutuka providing a running threat. Defensively, the Panthers have a very good secondary, with Davis jumping from the 49ers to add to Tyrone Poole, and Brett Maxie.

The Saints are the worst team in the division and coach Jim Mora will have to do a great job with Jim Everett, Michael Haynes, Willie Roaf and a few good defensive linemen to keep his job.

The NFC Central is probably the toughest division in football once again. Gone are the bruising running attacks of yesteryear, replaced with the throwing combinations of Favre to Brooks and Chmura, Mitchell to Moore and Perriman, Moon to Carter and Reed, and Kramer to Conway and Engram.

The Packers are the clear favorites in the division after going to the NFC

Turn to NFL, page 16

UM gets Maine hockey star

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Amidst a monsoon in Orono, Maine, on Jan. 27, Maine's Tim Lovell registered a hat trick as the Black Bears downed Massachusetts 6–3, before the second largest Alfond Arena crowd of the season. In fact, Lovell, an All–Hockey East selection, rained down on the Minutemen all year long, tallying goals in each of his three meetings with UMass.

However, the UMass faithful will not be faced with this possibility when the Black Bears venture to the William D. Mullins Center February 14 and 15.

Fourth year coach Joe Mallen announced last week that Lovell has transferred to UMass, and is eligible to start playing after Christmas at Rensselaer.

Lovell was Maine's leading scorer for much of last year's Hockey East runner–up campaign, before suffering a deep thigh bruise, and finishing fourth overall. As a sophomore, Lovell was named the MVP of the NCAA's East Regional, helping the Black Bears advance to the national championship game.

Lovell's speed and agility will benefit the Minutemen the moment he takes his first shift. He is a deft playmaker, and until the 1995 NCAAs, was one of Hockey East's best kept secrets. His work on the power play is particularly strong, where he led Maine with 10 goals last year. His ability to quickly work the puck into the zone and set up the play will greatly help the Minutemen in their umbrella formation.

COURTESY MAINE SPORTS INFORMATION
Tim Lovell

"I think that Tim Lovell is a terrific addition to our team," Mallen said. "When we've played against Maine the last couple of years, I thought that he was a player that was always a threat against us. He's a big asset to our team now. He's going to be able to push the program forward.

"He's going to bring experience and he's going to bring maturity. He's going to bring the skill level that our underclassmen can look at and watch and learn from and I think he's also going to raise the skill level of our upperclassmen."

Lovell, still adjusting to the Pioneer Valley's relatively busting pace of life compared to Orono, agreed with his coach's sentiments.

"I'm excited to be here," he said. "It's an up and coming team and I'm excited to play for them. [I like] the coaching staff, the facility and that they're up and coming, and I'd like to see if I could help them out."

After three seasons, Lovell was 27th on tradition rich Maine's all–time scoring leaders chart, and a strong season would have had him cracking the top 10.

The senior center from Norwood, ranks as one of the league's strongest skaters, and is excellent in neutral–zone transitions. Both of these characteristics will only be amplified on the Mullins Center's spacious Olympic–sized playing surface.

"The big sheet is going to allow him to move around," Mallen said. "His game is puck control and finding the open man and this is a great surface for him to play on.

"All college hockey teams that play on a big sheet like us are still adjusting to how to play on a big sheet. I think that Tim can bring to us a lot of characteristics in terms

Turn to LOVELL, page 20

College football: boastful Big 12, 'Canes miss out

Last Saturday kicked off the college football season for most teams, a sure sign that exams, foliage and Halloween are on the horizon.

While it's great to spend a lazy Saturday afternoon listening to Keith Jackson call names like Biakabutuka and McDuffie, and debating whether the Big 12 will be better than the Big 8, I know some of us still long for the dog days of August. Well, there's only one thing to say to that. Suck it up, chief. Classes started yesterday, and if you're like me, you're already broke. That being said, some early thoughts on the college football season.

Every season, the so–called "experts" will pick one golden boy, give him the Heisman in September and lament on how great he'll be in the NFL. This year is no exception. If you listen to anyone in the know, Tennessee's Peyton Manning is the greatest thing since sliced bread. Manning did his best to prove them right Saturday, leading the Vols to a 62–3 pounding of Nevada–Las Vegas. He only played one half, and did the things that the Knoxville faithful expect of him. But, I mean, come on, UNLV? Was that Moses Scurry at quarterback? Stacy Augmon at flanker? The fact is that Manning is good, really good, but he's not all the way there yet. He might not even be the best QB in the Southeastern Conference, with Danny Wuerfel returning to a Florida team that had the pleasure of being smacked by Nebraska in the National Championship game last January. Give Peyton time. He will be the man, someday.

Seeing as most of us grew up in the Commonwealth, there must be an undercurrent of sentiment concerning Boston College football floating around campus. (Doug Flutie to Gerald Phelan?) Without a solid quarterback and a schedule that includes the likes of Virginia Tech, Michigan, Syracuse, Notre Dame, Miami, and a West Virginia team that kicked the holy hell out of Pitt Saturday night, BC will be about as good as the new Pearl Jam album. I know they beat perennial powerhouse Hawaii this weekend, but they've got

Turn to COLLEGE FOOTBALL, page16

Football: something old, something new

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Justin Riemer set a UMass record for solo tackles last year with 95. He'll be back in action this weekend when the football team travels to take on Villanova.

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Entering the 1996 football season, the Massachusetts Minutemen have undergone numerous changes, adjustments, and new looks. However, some things will remain the same.

Throughout the spring and preseason this team has been looking to finally put together the talent, enthusiasm, and chemistry that has before brought them 17 Yankee Conference Titles.

"I think probably one of the things that has prevented us from being a championship football team the last couple of years has been the lack of enthusiasm," head coach Mike Hodges said. "So, we're talking a lot about that and we're trying to practice that way so we'll play that way."

UMass will begin the season this weekend on the road for the first of three games away from Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium. The Villanova Wildcats will be first on the list in a non–conference game for the Minutemen. This will be the first time that UMass has played the Wildcats since their 13– 9 victory over the Minutemen at home back in 1992.

Despite having lost Rene Ingoglia, the UMass all–time leading rusher to graduation, the Minutemen did not have to make many adjustments in that department. The adjustments will be getting used to the different numbers and faces that are tearing up the field.

Senior All–America candidate Frank Allesio, ranked third on the all–time UMass rushing list, ran for a team high 276 yards and was the Yankee Conference leading rusher.

"[Ingoglia's] gone and we've got a lot of great backs stepping up," Alessio said. "I go at the season with the same focus every year, and this

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 20

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 3 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, September 6, 1996

The Harder They Come

Jimmy Cliff inspired Pearl St. on Tuesday night with a passionate set of classic reggae tunes. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Air Borne!

Junior quarterback Anthony Catterton will look to resurrect the Minuteman passing game against Villanova tomorrow (See Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Brutal vigilante justice shown on Mexican TV

MEXICO CITY (AP) — As dozens of people watched, a man was tied to a tree, doused with a flammable liquid and set ablaze. As he died, writhing, a video camera roiled.

All day Thursday, television stations across Mexico broadcast the gruesome footage of vigilante justice, the latest in a series of incidents in which Mexican townsfolk, fed up with crime, have taken the law into their hands.

Residents of Playa Vicente in the Gulf Coast state of Veracruz had accused the man, identified as Rodolfo Soler Hernandez, of raping and strangling a woman last Saturday.

A close-up of the man before the execution indicated he had been badly beaten. Shots taken later Saturday showed him twitching and jerking as flames consumed his body. His corpse finally slumped forward in its bonds.

Veracruz Attorney General Rodolfo Duarte Rivas said Thursday his office had investigated the burning, as well as the videotaping and distribution of the tape.

"We have identified those responsible," he said, adding that the body was being exhumed and an autopsy planned as part of a criminal investigation.

NATION

CIA-Contra connection examined by Deutch

WASHINGTON — Insisting that he has found no evidence of wrongdoing, CIA Director John Deutch has ordered his inspector general to investigate allegations that the CIA was involved in drug trafficking to support the Nicaraguan Contras.

In a letter to Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., dated Wednesday, Deutch said the CIA inspector general would examine charges raised in a series of articles by the San Jose Mercury News.

The California newspaper reported that throughout the 1980s, a San Francisco Bay area drug ring sold tons of cocaine to Los Angeles street gangs and funneled the profits to some of the CIA-directed Contra forces in Nicaragua.

"I consider these to be extremely serious charges," Deutch wrote. "Although I believe there is no substance to the allegations in the Mercury News, I do wish to dispel any lingering public doubt on the subject. Accordingly, I have asked the agency's inspector general to conduct an immediate and thorough internal review of all the allegations concerning the agency published by the newspaper."

Deutch said a previous review he had ordered and already completed by his staff, as well as past CIA examinations of the issue, "supports the conclusion that the agency neither participated in nor condoned drug trafficking by Contra forces."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	day
HIGH: 81 LOW: 48	HIGH: 78 LOW: 45	HIGH: 78 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 12
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 14

Rape victim settles in civil suit; UM fraternities to pay $200K

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts student who was allegedly raped at a fraternity party last April has settled her civil lawsuit against Sigma Phi Epsilon for the payment of $200,000.

The suit, filed in Hampshire Superior Court on April 10, claimed that Sigma Phi Epsilon was responsible for failure to provide the student with adequate security, and that alcoholic beverages were served to her assailant to the point of his intoxication. The fraternity was also sued for negligence in that they failed to verify the identity of the individuals entering the fraternity house, and failed to act properly by having security present.

The victim, who was at the time a sophomore pre–medical major, claimed that shortly after midnight on April 1 she was approached by a male student who danced and talked with her for 10 to 15 minutes. He consumed several drinks in that time period, and appeared to be intoxicated.

The victim alleged that as she and the man were heading outside to get some air, he pushed her into a bathroom, locked the door and forced her to engage in oral sex. He then allegedly pushed down her pants and attempted to rape her. Because of students knocking on the bathroom door, the assailant fled the scene.

According to the victim's attorney, Jeffrey A. Newman, the victim did not know her attacker's name, but he told her he was a fraternity pledge. The party was supposed to be for invited guests only. The assailant was never apprehended, and the criminal case under investigation by the Amherst Police has been closed.

Newman said that before a full discovery was even completed for the Superior Court filing, he and his client were approached by the fraternity's insurance representative, and they discussed a settlement with Sigma Phi Epsilon and the other fraternities who sponsored the party.

Sigma Sigma Sigma, Phi Mu Delta, Alpha Delta Phi, Alpha Chi Rho, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Delta Zeta and Chi Omega jointly sponsored the party.

Newman said the case is significant because it was settled within four months of filing and because the victim refused to execute a confidentiality agreement, which would have made the terms of her settlement private.

"She was very pleased with the settlement," Newman said. "In the sense that she is a pre–med student, her goal was to alert other women and protect other women who go to fraternity parties."

However, because of psychological reasons, she left UMass and has entered another college to complete her studies.

Director of Greek Affairs Michael Wiseman had a mixed reaction to the settlement.

"I can say one side of me was not surprised," Wiseman said. "I have known of cases at other campuses with similar outcomes. I was also somewhat surprised because the decision was not based on an actual incident, but an environment that was created."

Dan Backer, the public relations coordinator for the Interfraternity Council and a member of Zeta Psi, said he was glad that the issue was resolved to the satisfaction of the parties involved. Last semester, after the incident was reported, a committee was formed to revise the Greek social policy regarding safety, health and environment.

The policy was formally published yesterday, Backer said.

"The whole situation is something that never should have happened in the first place," Backer said. "Right now we have to prevent it from happening in the future."

Faculty Senate holds first meeting; plan for AAU affiliation discussed

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Robert Karam, the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, spoke yesterday to the Faculty Senate.

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate convened yesterday in 227 Herter Hall for their first meeting of the fall semester.

The new Chair of the Board of Trustees of the University of Massachusetts, Robert Karam, began the meeting with an address to the senate.

"I recognize that UMass Amherst is the flagship of the UMass system," Karam said. "We have to work together and move forward in order to continue to be great."

Karam had been a trustee for 13 years before becoming the Chair of the Board.

"No one on the Board of Trustees has pushed stability and realistic goals more diligently than trustee Karam," Chancellor David K. Scott said.

Karam stated that he represents a very dedicated select group of trustees who have the best interest of UMass in mind.

He challenged the Faculty Senate to prepare a plan to gain affiliation with the American Association of Universities (AAU), a challenge which Scott said that he supports and desires.

Only one school will be allowed into the AAU in New England, which puts UMass in competition with the University of Connecticut.

If UMass gains affiliation with the AAU they will become one of only 16 schools who are both Landgrant and AAU higher learning facilities.

However, it will cost a large sum of money over a several year period plan to make UMass the best candidate for AAU. Karam will have to ask for special appropriated funds from the Massachusetts legislature.

However, Karam did offer a source of inspiration to spur the funding drive.

"Do you [Massachusetts legislation] like it when UMass basketball beats UConn?" he asked. "Well let's do it again with AAU. Do we want to be a first class or second class University?"

Karam left the podium to a round of applause after his closing statement, which urged the University to "work as a family."

Scott then began his presentation.

"It is nice to come back, everything is on the upswing," Scott said as he began his address. "I appreciate the hard work of the Trustees, President William Bulger and the entire campus. We have a lot to be proud of."

Provost Patricia Crosson informed the Senate that 24 new faculty members have been hired, almost all of whom are tenure track positions. However, there was a net loss of about 15 faculty members.

Also, the Director of the Library Search Committee has invited seven candidates who will soon be interviewing.

See Related Story Page 3

Vice Chancellor of Administration and Finance Paul Page reported that major classroom renovations have taken place in several buildings on campus, such as Herter 227. Also, landscaping is being done and the pond will be dredged.

Mike Begay of the Department of Community Health Studies asked why the Annual Gay and Lesbian Brownbag Luncheon was not being funded by the Chancellor's office.

"We first funded the luncheon as a seed project, then we hope that it continues through other means," Scott responded.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson added that his office will be funding the luncheon.

Scott reported that approximately 17,000 applications were received by the University this semester. Regularly, 74 percent are admitted, and 33 percent of the admitted applicants accept.

However, the class of 2000 is about 300 students over the expected yield.

"UMass is an institution which is rapidly changing," Scott said. "I commend the admissions office to be within the target yield by 300."

A special report, which will add three new faculty members to the Athletic Council, was also debated. Secretary of the Faculty Senate John Bracey said that the Faculty Senate has tried a laissez–faire attitude with the council, but that the policy has run out of control and requires Senate intervention.

Make sure you hang it straight...

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Becky DaSilva, a sophomore environmental science major, and Bill Tobin, a first–year Russian major, check out the selection at the poster sale held yesterday at the Student Union.

UMass project to recruit

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

It's that time of year again when Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) are busy organizing events for the upcoming year. To plan events, RSOs need workers and volunteers.

The Boltwood Project will be holding a recruitment night next week in the Campus Center auditorium.

The Boltwood Project is sponsored by the Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning Department. It is a service learning course offered by the University of Massachusetts.

The project combines the classroom with a community service project. Students who participate in the program will receive one or two academic credits.

There are a few course requirements that go along with the course. Once a week, for ten weeks, each group meets for two hours. Students are expected to attend seminars, community service events and complete a journal and a paper by the semester's end.

A large part of the student's grade depends on attendance and participation, and participants in the program are expected to see the volunteers each week.

The Boltwood Project is also a community outreach program in which volunteers work primarily with individuals with a mental or physical disability.

Senior Jeff Chapdelaine has been a part of Boltwood since the first semester of his sophomore year and is now the project's coordinator. He oversees the entire program, along with associate coordinator Kelly Warren and Mary "Becca" Mix.

"As students, it gives us the opportunity to create a positive relationship with our campus and the communities which we share with neighboring towns," Chapdelaine said. "In return, the Boltwood Project allows us to be a part of what is happening around us."

"The participants and volunteers get exposed to something new. It's good for both parties," said senior Jen Kalis, who is beginning her fifth semester with the Boltwood Project. She has volunteered at The Fun Club in the Banks Community Center where there are about ten participants who are developmentally disabled.

"We spend two hours a week doing a lot of out of house activities, such as bowling, miniature golfing, visit a petting zoo, hiring a magician," Kalis said, a consumer studies major.

Last year, senior Dan Hoffman, along with 14 others, volunteered their time at a Northampton Boy Scout troop.

"We help the Scouts work on earning their merit badges," Hoffman said. "We try to get the scouts to earn two or three a semester. Sometimes they have to write a story about their favorite pet and they can't read or write very well so we help them work on that. Other times we teach them how to fold flags and about safety issues.

"You get to see the effect you have on someone else's life… like with the Boy Scouts, we walk into the room and they all start clapping and cheering."

This semester Hoffman is working at the Farren Care Center.

"The volunteers at this center spend two hours a week playing bingo, carving pumpkins, and just doing fun activities," he said. "You get to help people who otherwise might not have had a chance to do the activities that we do with them.

"It's also great for your people skills. If you have the patience to deal with a situation when it arises, it can help you later in life."

Most volunteer groups through the Boltwood Project are allowed to make up their own programs for the participants. However, the exception is when working with the Boys and Girl scouts.

"The Boy Scouts are more structured. The troop leaders tell us what to do and we help the Scouts. In the other groups we plan the programs," Hoffman said.

This semester the Boltwood Project is looking for 220 volunteers. They are holding three recruitment nights next week from September 9–11 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Students interested in the project must attend one of the meetings.

"We are looking for anybody who wants to volunteer. Any UMass or five–college student. Your year and age doesn't matter either," Chapdelaine said.

Students are warned however, that a formal application process exists before entry into the program, which is by no means automatic. They also must complete an application during their session, and on September 12 a letter to each applicant will be at the Boltwood Table in the Campus Center, notifying them of their selection status.

"We as students have the amazing responsibility and power of changing the world around us," Chapdelaine said. "Our piece of the world is Amherst while we are at the University and Boltwood allows us to do just that. The satisfaction we get in return is incomparable to the time we put in."

For more information call Jeff Chapdelaine at 545–6753 or Merle Willmann, Director of the Boltwood Project at 545–6609.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Sept. 6

Dance — The Fourgone Conclusions Contradance will be held tonight and every first Friday at the Greenfield Guiding Star Grange. The evening starts with Scandinavian couples dances followed by contras called by Mary Desrosiers. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. For more information, call 549–1913.

Comedy — "First Week Comedy Show" will be held at 8 p.m. at the Bluewall Cafe. The event is free.

Film — Eraser will be shown at 8 and 10 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event is free.

Party — CASA Dominicana will host a "Welcome Back Party" at 10 p.m. at the Southside Room in the Hampden Student Center. There is a $2 admission fee.

Saturday, Sept. 7

Dance — A Scandinavian Dance Workshop will be held this evening and every first Saturday from 8–10:30 p.m. at the South Amherst Munson Library. Arna Dessen and/or Van Kaynor will teach with live fiddles. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. Call 549–1913 for more information.

Dance — An English Country Dance will be held tonight and every first Saturday from 8–10:30 p.m. at the South Amherst Munson Library. Helen Davenport teaches the dances and Van Kaynor leads the band. Beginners and singles welcome. Admission is $5 each or barter. For more information, call 549–1913.

Special Event — "Welcome to the West Fest '96" will take place from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Southwest Horseshoe. The event is free.

Music — Melissa Etheridge will play at 8 p.m. in the Mullins Center. Tickets are still available. Call 545-0505 for information.

Dance — Hillel House will host "Club Hillel House" at 10 p.m. All are welcome. The event is free with a Hillel Activity Card, and $2 without.

Sunday, Sept. 8

Religious — The United Christian Foundation invites students interested in fellowship to meet from 5 to 7 p.m. at Folsom House, located on 367 N. Pleasant and Fearing Sts. There will be activities, and all are welcome and respected. For more information, call Yuland at 546–3659 or Keny at 256–0109.

Religious — The Chabad House Model Factory, located in Chabad House in Amherst, will demonstrate and have visitors participate in the art of shofar making at 2 p.m. The event is free, with a $7 cost for visitors who wish to take home their shofar. For more information, call Yonah Blum at 549–4094 or 549–7855.

Music — "Singer's Delight" at Bezanson Recital Hall will feature pianist Will Crutchfield and soprano Sharon Hayes performing "Treue und Trost" by Peter Cornelius and lieder by other composers. The concert begins at 3 p.m. Tickets are $8 and $4, and are free for students with valid ID.

Sale — The "Tag and Super Sock Sale" will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Amherst Town Common. Small furniture, appliances, sports goods and toys will be available in addition to a big selection of socks and other legwear. Sales benefit P.E.T.S., the all–volunteer animal welfare network.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hijras in India," an all–male religious sect that is considered an alternative, third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, is free and will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, room 301.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly fellowship meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, prayer, teaching and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church will hold its annual tag sale today from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. and tomorrow from noon – 4 p.m. Hot dogs, coffee, cold soda and fresh popcorn are available in addition to the wide array of sale items, including many collectibles, exceptional furniture, lamps and appliances; new and old merchandise; adult and children's clothing; luggage; dishes; and more. Rain dates are Sept. 21–22.

Notices

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientations are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. The room will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253– 0874.

Discussion group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. Call 253–3795 for more information.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday in September there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East ST, in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle Monday, Sept. 9, through Friday, Sept. 13, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. Information about preventing theft and bike identification will be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. – midnight. Dance to a variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. Call 584–8167 for more information.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Cappella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. at the Campus Center. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call (617) 641–2305.

Volunteer recruitment — The Boltwood Project, a community service project at UMass, is seeking 200–300 student volunteers to work in one of approximately 23 different groups in the Valley. Participating in Boltwood allows University and Five College students the opportunity to earn one or two credits while volunteering. Interested students need to attend one of three recruitment nights in the Campus Center Auditorium on Sept. 9 – 11 from 6:30–8:30 p.m.

UM Golden Key delegation attends international conference in Arizona

By Daniel Sullivan
Collegian Staff

In an effort to improve procedures and recruitment, the University of Massachusetts Golden Key Honor Society chapter sent 11 people to an international convention in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Golden Key recognized the top 15 percent of juniors and seniors in a class. Five hundred UMass students are in the academic service society.

"The officers attended workshops that will help the charter," said Jenn Cooper, graduate advisor to the Golden Key Honor society. "It helped to develop skills to help the community."

"We learned new outreach programs, new ways to get campus programs involved. We will work to get more people other than the officers involved with more publicity of meetings," said Briana Kelly, a senior communications disorders and co–newsletter coordinator of Golden Key.

Chapters from as far away as Australia, Puerto Rico and throughout the United States attended the event.

The UMass chapter, however, logged the most combined miles of any groups. Co–vice president Sarah Gardner, senior operations management, said the convention gave the UMass contingent many strategies to implement.

"The convention was held to get people excited about Golden Key," Gardner said. "It was to help get people to know more about Golden Key and to meet the corporate sponsors."

AIDS awareness, improved Amherst student/town relations, and scholarship funding were highlights from last year, Kelly said. During the four day event, the UMass chapter received honorable mention for most improved.

"The society can help students with their careers," Kelly said. "Corporate sponsors recruit people, we get people involved in community service and award scholarships."

Over $50,000 in scholarships were given out through Golden Key, Gardner said. In the beginning of their junior year, eligible students receive a letter asking for membership, she added.

The event will try to improve student and Amherst town relations, Kelly said.

"We are planning to volunteer at the Apple Harvest Festival on the Amherst Common on October 5," Gardner said. "We have a Halloween party to help the kids in North Village. It's a fun time for the kids."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst's chapter of the Golden Key National Honor Society receives the Most Traveled Award in Scottsdale, AZ.

Both Women's Issues and GLB (Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual) Issues are looking for writers for the new Collegian semester. To get involved, call Michelle Hillman (Women's Issues) or Jamie Sinsheimer (GLB Issues) at 545-1762.

CAMPUS GEAR
FOR ALL YOUR COLLEGIATE NEEDS
THE BEST SELECTION of UMass and Greek APPAREL
ALL GREEK MERCHANDISE 20% OFF EVERY MONDAY
225 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 549-0944
Including Champion U.S.A.
VISIT CAMPUS GEAR TODAY!
ΔΧ • ΦΣΚ • ΠΚΑ • ΣΑΜ • ΣΦΕ • ΘΧ • ΑΧΠ • ΑΕΠ

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog — (413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

Attention Students
NEW At THE CLUB
Tennis and Fitness Complex
659 Amherst Rd. (Rt. 116)
549-3638
3 miles from campus on the bus line.
CAMSTAR CIRCUIT AND NAUTILUS
Newly redesigned fitness area!
12 Machine circuit program
20+ Nautilus machines & Abs station
INTRODUCING THE SLIDE
Just one of the great additions to our NEW aerobics programs.
CARDIOVASCULAR
Brand New Equipment
7 Treadmills • 4 Stairmasters
4 Exercycles • 1 Rower
FREE WEIGHTS
Brand New
Cross over Cable Machine
A large variety of dumbells
barweights • benches
Squat rack
Some Restrictions Apply.
There's a lot of NEW going on at THE CLUB!
Campus Get Away !!!
JOIN TODAY!
V.I.P. Membership.....$319 (with tickets)
One semester$145.....(tickets not included)
Two semesters$245...(tickets not included)

INCENSE • SINGLE EARRINGS • COTTON CLOTHING • AREA RUGS • TOYS • MUG • SCHOOLSTICKS • UNIQUE PRICES • LAMPS • INCENSE • BOXES • T-SHIRTS • JOURNALS • PAGES • POUCHES • SUNGLASSES • INKS
THE MERCANTILE HAS TAPESTRIES! AND COOL POSTERS!
The Mercantile
Northampton 18 Center St 584-1205
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1396
Mon-Sat 10-6 Sun 12-5 Thurs & Fri till 9
• CANDLES • SUNGLASSES • WORLD CRAFTS • BASKETS • BANDANAS

UM asbestos questions continue; SGA office a concern for Tirrell

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

Asbestos, a once valued insulating material used in some buildings on campus, is now known to cause cancer. Careful management is required if potential health problems are to be avoided.

According to John Findley, associate director of housing at the University of Massachusetts, asbestos is still a legitimate insulating material, as long as certain precautions are taken to insure student safety.

"Our job is to keep it in good shape and contained," Findley said.

He added that asbestos in the residence halls has either been removed or sealed using a special process.

Brian Tirrell, student government association (SGA) speaker, is concerned about possible problems with asbestos in the SGA office, located in the Student Union Building.

"There is asbestos in our office," Tirrell said. "I don't believe that they plan to do anything about it."

Tirrell said that while he does not think the asbestos poses an immediate threat, he is concerned about its presence there.

Richard Stein, a retired professor of chemistry, explained that the shape of the asbestos fibers used in the insulation is part of the problem with using that material. The structure is particularly receptive to human lungs, causing the asbestos to lodge in the organs, he said.

According to Stein, as long as the asbestos is contained, it does not pose a threat. Asbestos is often released into the air during removal, and Stein said that a safer course of action may lie in the sealing and containment of the fibers.

"Asbestos fibers do cause cancer when they are inhaled," Stein said. "If it's bound it isn't harmful."

Dr. Alan Calhoun, acting medical director of University Health Services, said that asbestos irritates the lungs, much like smoking.

"It's when asbestos becomes airborne that it's a problem," he said. "It can cause shortness of breath over many years. Smoking exacerbates the effects of asbestos."

He said that in addition to cancer it can also cause lung disease similar to emphysema in smokers. The cancer caused by asbestos is called mesothelioma. It is not lung cancer, but rather a cancer of the lining of the lungs.

Calhoun said that if someone suspects they may be working in an area where asbestos could be a problem, that they should "contact physical plant asbestos shop and ask someone to come over and evaluate the material."

The material was often used to insulate hot–water pipes, it was later abandoned in favor of fiberglass. Asbestos insulation was also used in some floor and ceiling tiles.

Senate serves many roles to UMass

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate held their 528th meeting yesterday, yet many students do not know what the purpose of the Faculty Senate is, or that it even exists.

As stated in the Constitution of the University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate, their purpose is threefold: "To ensure the representation of all faculty members of the campus community in the governance of the Amherst Campus and the University as a whole; to discuss and recommend policies affecting the campus and the University as a whole; and to promote faculty participation in the development of policies and procedures within the UMass."

The Senate derives its authority from actions by the Board of Trustees.

All voting members of the Senate are elected. The elected membership must range from 120 to 140. Only qualified voters with at least one academic year of service to the University shall be eligible for election to the Senate.

The Senate has five elected officers: the secretary; a presiding officer; a delegate to the Board of Trustees; associate delegates to the Board of Trustees; and at–large members of the rules committee.

Elections are conducted by written ballot in accordance with procedures in the bylaws.

There are 15 councils and 12 standing committees which keep the Senate running.

Committees produce special reports concerning relevant subjects which are then presented before the Senate for discussion. After the discussion, the Senate votes whether or not to approve the report.

On September 19 the Senate will decide upon the special report of the Rules Committee concerning the bylaw amendments to the Athletic Council, and will discuss the annual report of the Faculty Senate Council on the status of women.

The Faculty Senate holds meetings every other Thursday at 3:30 pm in Herter Hall, room 227.

Your Daily Collegian - covering all sides of the story

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Get yourself connected...

Students waited patiently in the Campus Center yesterday to open e–mail accounts.

DaveMatthewsBand

with special guest
Boxing Gandhis
SUN. OCT. 6
All Tickets $23.50 - Showtime 7:30 pm
mullins center
university of massachusetts amherst
Tickets are available at the Mullins Center Box Office, or for an additional fee, at all SUPERCHARGER outlets and charge-by-phone at 413-733-2500 or 203-772-4200. For more information, call 413-545-0505.
Presented by Delsener/Slater Enterprises and MassConcerts
ON SALE MON. SEPT 9TH AT 10:00 AM
http://www.dmband.com

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
Drivers Wanted
for AM Paper Delivery
Must have car or access to car
Hours 7:45 - 10:15 a.m.
Please contact Rob McDonald or Alycia Hines @ 545-3500

The Road to building your resume...
Junior or Senior SOM preferred; all may apply
Applications available until September 13th
Any questions contact Alycia or Peter, 545-3500

The Collegian is Looking for a
Marketing Manager

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Mcrae Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Clinton's Bloody Campaign

By launching yet another brutal military attack against Iraq, President Clinton has once again revealed the nature of his regime and his own character.

In trying to criticize the Iraqi President, Clinton actually supplied the perfect description of himself: "While his objectives may change, his methods remain violence and aggression." The cowardly attack, carried out by unmanned cruise missiles, left at least five Iraqis dead, including civilians.

No one, even the ultra-gullible American press, doubts for a minute that this current bombing was merely aimed at impressing voters and amounts to a murderous election-eve public relations ploy. Democrats like to "prove their masculinity" with a little blood-letting in the Third World.

Hussein Ibish

As for the latest pretext for Clinton's unending violence against Iraqis, even the most tortured reading of international law, including Security Council Resolution 688, can't provide a fig-leaf. It is particularly sickening for those of us of Kurdish origin to have to endure the crocodile tears of Clinton and his cronies as they try to cloak their evil machinations in the guise of concern for the Kurds.

Ever since the end of the Gulf War, the United States has sought to use Iraqi Kurds to divide Iraq through phony "safe havens" and illegal "no-fly zones." Clinton hoped to gain control of Iraqi Kurdish leaders Jalal Talabani and Massud Barzani, and ultimately get them to jointly declare an independent republic in northern Iraq.

Neither effort has been successful, and the ostensible reason for the recent American bombing is that Barzani's forces used Iraqi government troops in fighting Talabani's forces for control of the city of Erbil. Clinton claims that the Iraqi army somehow has no right to enter a large Iraqi city, and that by bombing southern Iraq, he is somehow defending Kurds in northern Iraq.

Iraqi Kurds have been cursed with leaders like Barzani and Talabani who blindly side with every malevolent anti-Iraqi force, whether Iranian, Turkish or even Israeli and American. Needless to say, most such actors have little regard for the interests of Iraqi Kurds. These petty, foolish, blundering leaders continue to place the Iraqi Kurds in impossible situations, and are their greatest enemies.

It is particularly stupid to imagine that anyone in the United States or Britain gives a second's thought about the fate of the Kurds. Few peoples have suffered more as a result of Anglo-American perfidy than the Kurds. From the days when the dream of an independent Kurdistan was sabotaged by the British in the 1920s, to the unbelievably cynical U.S. betrayal of the Iraqi Kurds in 1973, to the continuing abuse of Kurdish nationalism since the 1990-91 Gulf War, the litany of betrayal is endless.

The transparent fallacy of "American concern for Kurds" is further exposed by the fact that the United States has funded and supported the huge but little publicized war that Turkey has been waging against its own Kurdish population, which it dismisses as "mountain Turks." The vast majority of Kurds in the world live in Turkey, under the severest repression, far worse than what has been known in Iraq. And in the course of its brutal anti-Kurdish war, with full U.S. support, Turkey has repeatedly attacked Kurds in Iraq.

But, of course, Turkey is a U.S. NATO proxy, and home to many an American military base. American silence and indifference regarding Turkey's besieged Kurds reminds us that no one in the United States really gives a damn about Kurds. They just want an excuse to butcher Iraqis.

Moreover, the real purpose of Clinton's bombing is to grub for votes in November, the old "October surprise" tactic again.

It serves as yet another reminder, as if any were needed, of the brutality and immorality of Clinton and his unscrupulous henchmen. Reports indicate that, yet again, the Five-College community's own Professor Tony Lake has been instrumental in instigating this vicious bombing.

Lake's mentor, Henry Kissinger, oversaw the 1973 U.S. betrayal of Iraqi Kurds. He had incited the Iraqi Kurds to rebel as a means of helping Iran put pressure on Iraq, only to cut them off completely when Iran and Iraq came to terms. When asked how he could treat a people so ruthlessly, Kissinger blandly observed that "covert action should not be confused with missionary work."

Lake has already emulated his mentor in cynically exploiting the Iraqi Kurds. If Clinton is re-elected, Professor Lake may well get a chance to go the whole hog.

The key question for the readers of this newspaper remains whether or not you will be voting for Bill Clinton in November. His most recent killings in Iraq, like his Welfare Abolition Law, only serve to underscore exactly the kind of policies and actions that you will be endorsing and perpetuating when you give him your vote. But remember: "If you don't like the effect, don't produce the cause."

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian Columnist.

Reflections on hogwash

As most of you already know, I know everything. And most of you people have come to realize that in the past I've been rather stingy in revealing my knowledge to anyone — close friends, professors, whatever.

Steven Grant

Well, that's all going to stop for a while. I've thought about it, and it's time you learned the truth, regardless of who wants to prevent you from attaining it (Uncle Sam, the scientific community, etc).

First of all, as a select few of you have contended all along, the Earth is indeed flat. Although I don't normally give away how I know such things (mainly because I don't speak of what I know (see paragraph one), this one is an exception. Without becoming too detailed, I apply my always useful Principle of Common Sense (PCS). (Are there too many parentheses so far?)

Come now, you all know it to be the case. You've all wondered why we're not all grabbing the South Pole, watching our hands slip away as we fall into outer space. But you keep quiet because the SCIBYs (scientific community is brainwashing you) throw all these jumbles of numbers and letters which they call formulas and conform you into thinking otherwise.

Try this at home: Take a basketball. Now try and place G.I. Joe on it. Now pour some prune juice for oceans. See? Furthermore, picture yourself spinning the ball on axis while revolving it around your room. Der.

How do people travel around the world? They don't. Um, they actually enter an almost identical parallel universe once they go the "diameter" (distance) of the "planet" (plane). Besides, have you ever met someone who travelled around the world?

Actually, there is a big tent made out of a souped-up hypercolor material covering us.

So, you ask, then how did we land on the moon? That was all a scam. You know that film of Armstrong first setting foot on the surface? Well, if you look in the upper-righthand corner of your screen, you can see some guy in jeans holding up a sign that reads, "This is the moon, honest." Big Neil figured he'd get fancy.

Oh yeah, and then there's the one where they tell you if you put a red sweater in a dark closet, it loses its color. Hogwash. How come it never comes out of the closet turquoise and camouflage or something? Come on! These people are toying with you here. I mean, they're sitting around thinking of ways to trick you. National security is one thing, boredom is another.

By the way, every event has a cause, and you have no free will.

Oh, listen close, this next one is a biggie. The world revolves around you. (Or so to speak, of course, but we've already covered that.) Yes, you. Not the guy next to you reading this column. You.

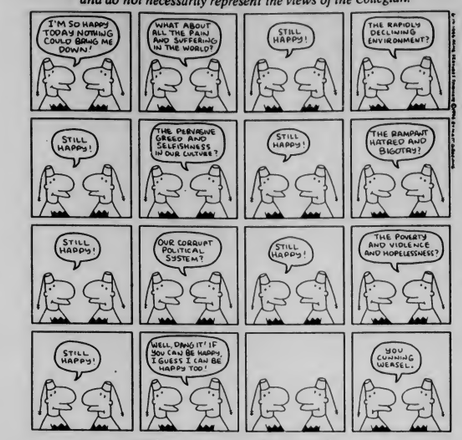
Even I'm in on it. We're all actors in the big performance entitled "Your Life." There are tribes in Africa just sitting around in their villages, living their lives in hopes that someday you'll happen upon them. Everyone who walks by you is at least looking at you in the corner of their eye. Your parents had great auditions before they were chosen to have you.

Don't get me wrong, we all lead our own, sort of secondary lives, but it's just to pass the time before we're due to stand behind you in the D.C. or something. And trust me, the person who's driving slow in front of you is only doing their job.

And talk about having to wing it. Remember last week when you asked that guy for the time, but he wasn't wearing a watch? He's still kicking himself. He missed out not only on helping you but quite the hefty bonus. Listen, I need you to play it cool for a while. If anyone asks, you DID NOT read this.

Oh, no, someone's coming. He's FBI. And he's with God! Man, they're pissed! Here's one last thing. It's about your fate. Your life depends on it. Tomorrow afternoon, at exactly 3:29 be at the corner of M...

Steven Grant is a Collegian staff member.



Need Advice?

The editorial opinion page of the Daily Collegian will be periodically running a new advice column. In it, two UMass students will give their solutions to your problematic situations, whether they deal with life on campus, or life in general. Send your questions to the editorial opinion desk c/o Mark McGrath, at 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA, 01003. For more info, call 545 1491.

Also, we are currently looking for columnists to fill up the editorial opinion page. Come to the meeting for prospective columnists on Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office. Have a nice day!

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The struggle within

Nicole Cournoyer

I imagine not everyone will understand what I am about to describe. Some may never have experienced it. Others may know it in a different form, may have assigned their own images or metaphors to it, and may approach it from another direction. Some, I suspect, feel its truth more deeply, more painfully, more vividly than I can even imagine, let alone put into words.

There is a softness somewhere. A softness, a tender spot, an inner core. Maybe it's in a closet or a box. Maybe it's in the "soul" or the "mind." You decide where it lives and where it suffers.

Mine is in a cave. A dark, cold cave whose walls echo an endless, cavernous emptiness and close in around me at the same time. The softness shivers and flinches in this cold darkness, lost in a place too small and tight to fit it.

The softness is bruised and broken, curled into a ball, a beaten animal, whimpering, cringing, barely breathing. So many painful blows to such a defenseless creature.

Something outside the cave must protect the softness. Don't let anyone or anything in. Guard the entrance with anger, fury over what's been done here. Strike out. Strike back. Take that. Come near me again and I'll kill you, I swear I'll rip you in half. Rage. Teeth-bearing, growling, flesh-tearing rage. This animal, this snarling beast is avenging an injustice, reacting instinctively to the intense pain it feels when it sees into the cave's darkness. Pain indirect. Pain through pity.

But even this animal, whose intent is only to protect, must not go into the cave where the softness cowers alone, whimpering in exhaustion. Always alone.

Outside, another being says he hates the softness. He calls it weak. Why can't it be more like him? Hard and strong and firm. He is a concrete wall. Rock. Nothing moves him. Nothing can hurt him. He is independent, solid.

"Don't let it get to yer," he says. "Let it roll right down yer back. Water off a dolphin. No need to cry and pity yerself. Be a man about it. Don't think so much a yerself. Yer not the only one with problems 'round here. Suck it up, yer little wimp."

But the wall doesn't really hate the softness, because it, like the beast, is only trying to protect it. Shielding blows from the outside world as best he can, even concrete can't block them all.

The softness whimpers on. Even without fresh wounds, the creature's tender body aches ceaselessly with the old.

Another being outside the cave tries to help the softness by making the cave entrance more attractive to the rest of the world. This one focuses on controlling the beast and may be called the peacemaker.

"Be nice now. Don't fight. How do you expect anyone to like you when you growl at them? Think of the softness. How can it heal if you scare potential healers away?"

Sometimes the peacemaker is successful in calming the beast, sometimes it is not.

A chisel works off and on at the wall, chipping away at its thick concrete. It is also trying to help the softness.

"Mr. Well, if you just let the world out here see inside the cave, if you just step aside for a moment, just let them get a peek, well maybe someone out here can help the poor, battered dear."

Sometimes the chisel makes progress and sometimes the wall thickens, spoiling the chisel's work.

What's the answer? The protectors? The helpers? Who should give in? Their intentions are all good, but which is the best way to move?

The decision-maker controls these four creatures and many more outside of the cave. It is she who decides day to day, minute by minute, who should give in a little and who should gain a little ground. But the decision-maker is unsure. She is frightened for the softness, so she never lets any one creature have complete control. She doesn't know the answers and she will do all she can to prevent any further injury to the softness.

Sometimes, however, it seems the decision-maker becomes desperate, or maybe she just simply loses control over her pawns. The raging beast escapes momentarily, or the wall becomes almost impenetrably thick or the chisel pierces a tiny hole and the horrible pain of the softness pours out in an instant of deafening whimpering.

Thus far, the decision-maker has always been able to regain control. What if someday she can't? Will it mean insanity? Or will it mean a cure for the pain?

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

College ball not the same

Chris Stamm

The times they are a changin'. Strike that — they have already changed, especially when it comes to big time college basketball.

The days when five young men pulled their socks up to their knees to toss a ball into a peach basket hoisted up on a poll in a dusty gymnasium are history. In this day and age, college basketball is as much about running a business as it is about winning games.

This is something we here at UMass learned this summer when allegations that Consensus National Player of the Year Marcus Camby took money and jewelry from agents wishing to represent him after his career as a Minuteman came to a close. In addition to prompting a University investigative committee to analyze the situation, Mr. Camby's subsidized income also spurred yet another aggressive media blitz. (I'll save the traditional Collegian bitch session on the objective way in which The Boston Globe and Boston media in general covers UMass sports for another column.)

After two years of being a die-hard Minutemaniac, I have begun to question the system considerably. Et tu Marcus? What the hell was he thinking? While I won't be too hasty to pass judgement until the committee releases its findings later this month, the fact that Camby would even consider placing the program and University as a whole in jeopardy is beyond me.

With talks of possibly having to give back revenue earned in the post season or even erasing our Final Four appearance from the history books, Marcus did a great job tarnishing a program that worked long and hard at becoming one of the big boys. Needless to say, I won't be rushing out to the store for Toronto Raptors gear anytime soon.

It was obvious to everyone from Dick Vitale to the guys that sweep down the Mullins Center court after games that Camby would earn big bucks as soon as he went pro. Did he really need the money so soon? What's a few grand when you will be making millions in a matter of months?

There has been an ongoing debate as to whether or not collegiate athletes should be paid, and many people believe that poor Marcus took what he could because he didn't have the time or was not allowed to hold down a part time job. Bologna. He took it because it was there, not because he didn't have time to scrub dishes in the D.C.

But since we're on the topic, why shouldn't athletes get some sort of financial compensation? With money pouring in from ticket revenues, merchandising and television deals, there are literally millions of dollars turning over. That's not to say that University big-wigs are getting rich off hoop revenue, as it's not cheap to run a big name program. However, none of this would be possible without the players. I'm not talking about giving them cars or two grand a week, but something could be done. Couldn't a trust fund be set up for players, so at the end of their collegiate career they got a little piece of the pie?

This is something that needs to be addressed not just here at UMass, but in college basketball in general. It's all about business, and if you think there are many (if any) Div. I programs that don't bend the rules in their favor, you are crazy. I'm not saying that every major college hoop coach has a Jerry Tarkanian alter-ego, but just like in big business, things happen. The public has to drop its naive facade.

People shouldn't be floored when a coach with amazing business savvy like coach Calipari goes to the NBA for $15 million, there's nothing illegal about that. I would go too, if I could. People shouldn't be floored when athletes like Camby take money. That's not to say that it's right, but that's just the way it goes these days.

Unfortunately, it takes something like the Camby situation to get the NCAA legal gears in motion and the general public thinking.

Chris Stamm is a collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Iron Horse readies for eclectic mix, "Wild" style

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Correspondent

California-based, yet internationally-assembled, the eclectic rock band Wild Colonials visit Northampton tomorrow night for what should prove to be an entertaining show.

On their recent release, This Can't Be Life, on DGC, the Wild Colonials combine folk and roots rock with a lyrical twist. In her music, lead singer/lyricist Angela McCluskey attempts to, "explore the darker side of relationships, but the music is much more spirited."

The band's guitarist, Shark, spoke of the band's collaborative songwriting method.

"Paul will play some 16th century Gypsy folk riff, which I'll find really exotic," he said. "Or I'll start playing some old country riff and someone will say, 'Ooh what's that?' Scott will just pick up whatever instrument seems appropriate, Thad will start trying out rhythms, Angie will pluck something out of her bag of poems and start singing a melody, and it just goes from there."

McCluskey's powerful voice has been compared to Natalie Merchant and Tanya Donnelly, but her tender yet edgy vocals take on a character quite her own. And with a variety of instruments that include guitar, violin, piano, bass, keyboard, drums, saxophone, pennywhistle, melodica, and didgeridoo, the band's sound is just as worldly as the quintet's origins.

McCluskey was born and raised in Glasgow, Scotland; guitar-vocalist Shark hails from Toronto; and once concert pianist (now violinist) Paul Cantelon spent most of his life in Paris. Only drummer Thaddeus Corea and Scott Rowe originate from the United States — New York City and Delaware, respectively.

The five met in Los Angeles in 1991 and soon thereafter began a regular gig during open mike night at the Cafe Beckett. A few months later the band moved to the larger Cafe Largo, where the likes of Bono, Winona Ryder and Keanu Reeves regularly checked them out. Now the Wild Colonials — the name comes from an Irish song called "Wild Colonial Boy" — have gone from playing tiny clubs to playing for thousands of people. They have recently toured with King Crimson, Chris Isaak and Toad the Wet Sprocket.

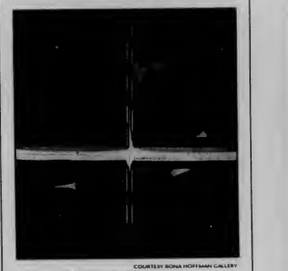
Tomorrow's show is just one of many stops on their busy East Coast tour. They will be playing many songs from their latest album, This Can't Be Life (released this August) including the hit single, "Charm," as well as some of their earlier work.

Wild Colonials perform at the Iron Horse Musical Hall tomorrow at 10 p.m. The show is all ages. Call the club at 584-0610 for more information.

COURTESY DANA TYNAN

The Iron Horse Music Hall hosts the Wild Colonials tonight at 10 p.m.

Augusta Savage, Mead among local galleries to feature new exhibits



Augusta Savage Gallery: Monday & Tuesday, 1–7 p.m., Wed–Fri 1–5 p.m. "How Many Witnesses?," a photography exhibition by Ellen Eisenman opens Sept. 25. Reception is 5–7 p.m. Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the New Africa House in the Central Residential Area. University of Massachusetts. 545–5177

Hampden Gallery: Mon–Fri 3–7 p.m., Sunday 2–5 p.m. Gallery officially opens October 1–5 for the Festival of Tibet. Hampden Gallery is located in Hampden Commons in the Southwest Residential Area. UMass. 545–4197

Herter Gallery: Mon–Fri 11–4 p.m., Sun 12–4 p.m. Herter Art Gallery is located at 125A Herter Hall. Currently on display is "France 1996," a group exhibition of work by students in the summer European Art program. "Foundations" exhibition opens Sept. 18. Reception is 4–6 p.m. UMass. 545–0976

Mead Art Gallery: Mon–Fri 10–4:30 p.m., Sun–Sat 2–5 p.m. Current exhibitions are: "Western Art from

Turn to EXHIBITS page 7

COURTESY ROSNA HOFFMAN GALLERY

Dawoud Bey's "Amishi"

Patricia Cornwell falls flat–faced on From Potter's Field

By Seema Gangotirkar
Collegian Staff

PATRICIA CORNWELL
From Potter's Field
Scribner Books

With her newest novel, Cause of Death knocking John Grisham out of the top spot on the bestsellers' list, Patricia Cornwell can easily claim the distinction of being one of the top mystery novelists.

Her previous novels (including Post Mortem) have all been bestsellers. Cornwell draws on her experience working as a computer specialist in a medical examiner's office to create taut and suspenseful drama, creepy enough to send chills down the spines of the most hardened of Stephen King fans.

Following the success of Cause of Death, From Potter's Field was rereleased in paperback. From Potter's Field is the sixth novel starring Kay Scarpetta, the brisk and cool chief medical examiner for the state of Virginia.

Throughout previous novels, Scarpetta has been after the elusive and maniacal Temple Brooks Gault. Gault, a sadistic killer, seems to murder for the pure enjoyment of it. His latest victim is an unidentified woman, found in the snow in Central Park. Even as she searches for the identity of the woman, Scarpetta pursues Gault, knowing that she is tantalizingly close to the killer and all his secrets.

Scarpetta tries to piece together Gault's motives and if she ever figures out what makes Gault tick, Cornwell doesn't let the reader know. What is clear though, Gault's killings have become a morbid offering to Scarpetta, probably with the idea of impressing her.

If there was ever a chink in Cornwell's armor, From Potter's Field would be her Achilles' heel.

Cornwell's style of writing is terse, sparing relevant details and background. She expects that the reader has read the previous novels and relies on the information in those books, rather than repeating anything in this one.

For the first time, Cornwell loses what made the other books so powerful: her concentration and focus. Story threads are begun here and there, never quite culminating in anything tangible.

What Cornwell does have to her advantage is the character of Kay Scarpetta. She is not a particularly likeable character — you get the impression that Cornwell bases Scarpetta on her own life.

Scarpetta, even in her most frightening moments, is exasperatingly calm and hopelessly stubborn. Scarpetta likes to do things her way and that kind of strength is admirable, if not a little stupid occasionally.

From Potter's Field is a disappointment, especially if compared to Cornwell's earlier books, such as Cruel & Unusual. The novel lacks sufficient enthusiasm and punch to make it the ingenious novel it could have been. It's almost as if Cornwell was writing the book in a daze, counting on the success of the other books to carry this one. But if you discount this one disappointment among the seven Kay Scarpetta books, Cornwell still ranks among the most brilliant authors today. C

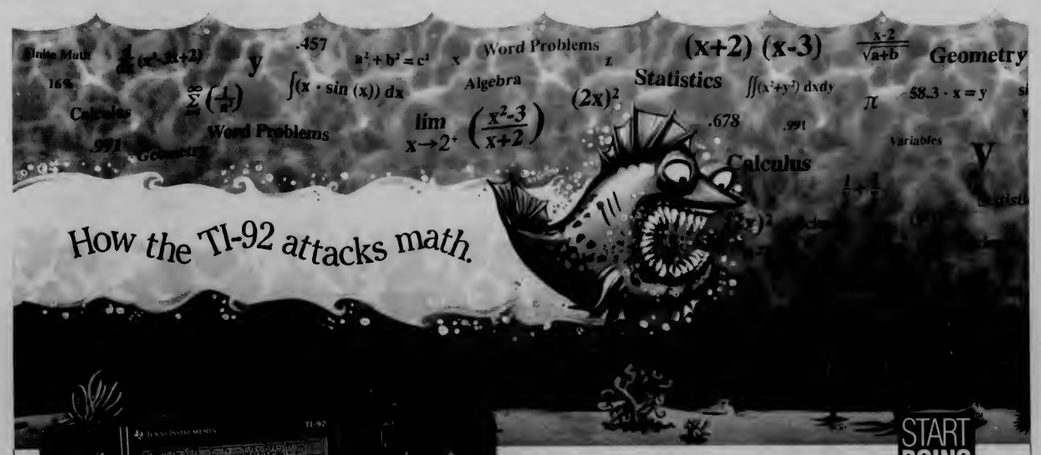

Photo Essay by Elizabeth Brown

THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS rocked the house down at the Iron Horse in Northampton Wednesday night. THEY played two sets, one at 7pm and another at 10pm. Fans without tickets were stranded outside trying to catch a glimpse of the show through the window.

Regrettably, all sections are full this semester for

Remedial

Thermodynamics

Discounts off AT&T basic rates. Refers to AT&T home or AT&T Calling Card accounts. Subject to billing availability. Certain exclusions apply. ²Subject to credit approval. ³Valid for 1yr. Must sign up in 1996 and use service at least 1 hr. mo. for 5¢/hr. for additional hrs. or $19.95 for unlimited usage. Customers pay separate setup fee or charges to attach the service. ©1996 AT&T

Jimmy Cliff heats up Pearl St.crowd

By Tim Gleeson
Collegian Correspondent

JIMMY CLIFF
Pearl Street
Sept. 3

Jimmy Cliff stormed into Pearl Street Tuesday night and wowed a sweaty, dance fever crowd. The global music star from Jamaica brought this reggae philosophy into full hilt, backed by the strength of the tight Oneness band.

The combination of Cliff's vocal perfection and the fine orchestrated mastery of his band left none in doubt of their acclaim. They were the sirens and the crowd was drawn to them.

The band wasted little time in pulling the audience into dance and the fans were able and eager, warmed up by the opening act, New Horizons. Cliff and his band swung right into "Beautiful World, Wonderful People," setting the tone for the evening.

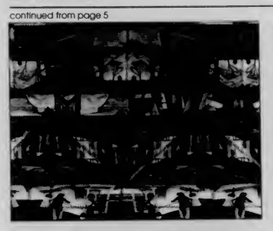
There was no rest as Cliff treated the crowd to an uplifting musical experience. He controlled a ride of non-stop thrills, taking his fans to higher states. Whether it was working the crowd into a clapping, singing frenzy with, "You Can Get It If You Really Want," or calming them with the acoustic score, "Sitting Here in Limbo," they did not disappoint.

At one point Cliff stopped to help usher in the approaching millennium with a plea to all to help make peace for our future generations. He immediately started into a powerful rendition of his tune, "Vietnam." Also included was a high energy reggae classic, "The Harder They Come" and his vocal wonder, "Many Rivers to Cross," a tune that never fails to hit.

Left breathless and high at the end of the show, the crowd made the cry for more and Cliff quickly delivered an encore. The Oneness band returned to the stage with drums ready and performed a session medley of "Bongo Man A Come" and "Rivers of Babylon." This highlight was a perfection of harmony to end the night as Cliff left the stage stating his message: peace and love.

Never before or again could someone grace the stage with any more passion than Jimmy Cliff. It is an amazing experience to see a performer with such love for what he does.

Dancing, kicking, slashing and wailing with such energy and emotion, Cliff can simply charge his crowd with the same feeling that has made him a reggae great for over 20 years. Such genuine feelings opens listeners up to his philosophy that anyone can do what they want and get it if they really want.



COURTESY JRS RECORDS

Jimmy Cliff wooed Pearl St. crowd with passionate and inspirational sounds.

■ exhibits

continued from page 5

COURTESY AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY

Ellen Eisenman's "There's No Place..."

the Middle Ages to the Modern Era," "The Art of Ancient Peru," "Built and Unbuilt: Amherst College Architecture: 20th Century American Art." Amherst College. 542-2335

Museum of Art: Tues, Fri, Sat 9:30-4 p.m., Wed & Sun 12-4 p.m., Thursday 12-8 p.m. On display now is "Landscapes." Smith College. 585-2760

Student Union Art Gallery: Mon-Fri 11-4 p.m. Gallery opens with an exhibition of computer generated images by artist Yeon Choi on Sept. 12. Reception is 5-7 p.m. The Student Union Art Gallery is located in the Student Union Building. UMass. 545-0792.

University Gallery: Tues-Fri 11-4:30 p.m., Sun-Sat 2-5 p.m. Opening reception Friday, September 6, 5-7 p.m. at the gallery. Exhibits opening this weekend: Daisy Youngblood, Dawoud Bey and Nina Payne's "Over & Over: Works in Waxed Linen." UMass. 545-3670

Wheeler Gallery: Mon-Thu 4-8 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. Gallery opens with "All Dressed Up and No Where To Go," a mixed media exhibition by Kathleen Anderson. Wheeler Gallery is located in the Central Residential Area. UMass. 545-0680

— Seema Gangatirkar

Summer hardcore keeps the scene alive

Adam Dlugacz

Listen up kids, hardcore is back in full effect. The summer witnessed a slew of new releases that proves the scene may be mighty once again. Throughout the semester, this column, "Keeping It Real," will bring you up to date on what's going on in the hardcore punk scene in terms of record releases and shows.

Once again New York City showed that when it comes to hardcore, its scene reigns with an iron fist. H2O released their debut, self-titled LP on Blackout Records — ten songs of raging, fun hardcore destined to become a classic.

Madball's back and their second LP, Demonstrating My Style, on Roadrunner Records, proves they are still the best when it comes to the harder side of things. Surprisingly, their new album calls for unity and self-reliance, as opposed to the tough-guy lyrics that occupied their last album.

Hardcore kings Murphy's Law released their fourth LP, Deadicated, on Another Planet Records. If you love hardcore, then you probably already own this.

Killing Time's new EP, "Unavoidable," on Blackout Records, shows that despite their layoff, they haven't lost a thing.

No Redeeming Social Value (N.S.R.V.) released their debut LP, Rocks The Party, on Striving For Togetherness Records. N.R.S.V. sing about skinheads, Old-E malt liquor and fighting ignorance; you'll mosh and laugh at the same time. Sub-Zero released their debut LP, Happiness Without Peace, on Two Damn Hype Records. Fans of the Cro-Mags should check them out.

Two of Long Island's best bands, Silent Majority and Tripface, also made some noise this summer. Fans of Avail should take a listen to Silent Majority's second EP, "Distant Second," on Reservoir Records. Anyone who likes heavy hardcore that doesn't sound like metal and is not full of tough-guy or militant straight-edge lyrics should find Tripface's debut 7", "This Foundation," on Exit Records.

Look for new albums by Sick Of It All, Killing Time, Crown of Thornz, Vision Of Disorder, Tripface and Stillsuit. Shutdown and Fahrenheit 451 will also be releasing their debut EP's in the fall.

Plus new 7's by Murphy's Law, CIV and H2O are in the works. Striving For Togetherness Records and Blackout Records are both releasing compilations featuring some of New York's finest.

Victory Records was very busy this summer releasing albums by Refused, By the Grace Of God and Path Of Resistance.

Sweden's Refused's second album, Songs To Fan The Flames Of Discontent, is one of Victory's best releases ever. Their combination of Born Against and Sick Of It All influences put many American hardcore bands to shame.

By The Grace Of God's new EP, featuring ex-members of Endpoint and Falling Forward, exceeds both band's previous works. Look for new albums by Earth Crisis, Snapcase and Integrity in the fall. Finally Stife, who broke up and will be missed, are releasing a post-split live record. Battery put their debut LP out on Conversion records and it rocks. Coverage put out their debut LP on Lost and Found Records and it is very Slayer-esque.

The only show scheduled in the near future is Madball at Pearl Street on Sept. 22.

Please send show information, music to review, or comments to the Collegian c/o Keeping it Real — Arts Section.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY BLACKOUT RECORDS

H2O's self-titled debut album highlights summer hardcore scene.

Luckily, you can still sign up for all this great stuff from AT&T.

Surviving in college is tough enough, right? That's why we've designed a package to make things easier. Choose AT&T and look at all you can get:

AT&T True Reach® Savings
Save 25% on every kind of U.S. call on your AT&T phone bill when you spend just $25 a month.[1]

AT&T True Rewards®
Get savings at Sam Goody/Musicland, TCBY "Treats" and BLOCKBUSTER VIDEO with the Member Benefit Card.

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
A credit, cash and calling card that brings you discounts on USAir. And no annual fee – ever.[2]

AT&T WorldNet℠ Service
Get 5 free hours of Internet access every month just for having AT&T long distance.[3]

To sign up, look for us on campus or call
1 800 654-0471

AT&T
Your True Choice

http://www.att.com/college

COURTESY MEI TAO

New York's hippest band, Versus returns to Northampton Saturday.

ICP hosts Versus concert

Ex–small factory folks, God Rays, open

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Two years ago Versus and small factory highlighted the 1995 Loud Music Festival with back-to–back stellar shows at the Iron Horse Music Hall. Since then Versus has gained even more recognition while small factory splintered into two off–shots: the God Rays and Flora Street. Tomorrow night Internal Combustion Productions (ICP) brings Versus and the God Rays to Pearl Street in what hopes to be a fantastic night of music.

Versus and small factory both emerged, from New York and Providence, respectively, on the underground rock scene in the early 1990s. Although their sounds differed greatly — Versus listened to lots of Sonic Youth and Mission of Burma, while small factory had a quieter background — both bands found homes on the indie rock scene.

Besides sharing fans, both bands popped up on compilations together on labels such as Simple Machines and Pop Narcotic. small factory even paid homage to Versus on their last full length record, For If You Cannot Fly, on the tune, "Versus Tape."

Unfortunately small factory broke up last summer after a farewell show in Providence — of course, Versus opened up. Months later ex–small factory members Alex Kemp and Phobe Summersquash formed the God Rays.

While the God Rays suffer from an inevitable personality complex, Versus has never been troubled. Their music alone sets them apart from 99 percent of the rest of the scene. Although strongly influenced by the early 1980s post–punk scene that spurned Mission of Burma, Versus has established an identity all its own combining noisy assaults with melodies that would make Burt Bacharach proud.

Last month the band released their sophomore full length, Secret Swingers, a brilliant work that captures the band at its finest. While their previous works were exceptional, Secret Swingers grabs listeners and sucks them in. Led by the hit single, "Yeah You," Versus is quickly becoming a popular favorite on the underground rock scene.

Since forming last fall the God Rays have experimented with different line–ups and instruments trying to capture a new sound. Kemp and Summersquash remain in the spotlight though never quite recapturing the charm of small factory.

Versus and the God Rays perform at Pearl Street on Saturday night at 9 p.m. Call the club at 584–4256 for more information.

COURTESY LEGO

Ex–small factory folks lead the God Rays into the limelight.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST athletic CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0060

Emergency Medical Training
by
Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time / Evening
Classes start September 16, 1996
Call UMass Continuing education at 545-0474

20% off tanning packages
Regency Hairstyles
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9526

STUDENTS WITH LEARNING DISABILITIES
This Spring semester, researchers at the UMASS School of Education will be conducting a research project/independent study course which focuses on the life experiences of students with learning disabilities. The title of the project is Learning Disabilities and Adolescence: an Autobiographical Perspective. Students who participate in the project will write a personal essay about their own adolescence and how it has been affected by having a learning disability. Participants will receive 3 undergraduate independent study credits and individualized instruction in writing.
If you are interested in participating, please call 665-6729 for more information. Students who elect to participate will be asked to begin in mid September, so please call soon!

what's in a Z
As low as $36.22* per month
Everything.
■ Complete multimedia computer customize for students
■ Campus Z-Station® features:
• Powerful Intel® processor
• Large capacity hard drive
• Plenty of memory to run today's hottest applications
• Plug & Play into your campus network with a high-speed modem
■ Desktop Systems include Microsoft® Natural® Keyboard and Microsoft Mouse
■ Loaded with Microsoft software for study and fun
• Microsoft Office for Windows 95 with Word, Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Microsoft Access, Schedule+, Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, Microsoft Internet Assistants
• Microsoft Windows 95 with Microsoft Internet Explorer 2.0
• Microsoft Plus!
• Games for Windows 95
• Norton AntiVirus and more
■ Hewlett Packard Color DeskJet available
■ Ask about Microsoft Programmer's Dream Pack

Processor	Pentium 100 MHz	Pentium 133 MHz	Pentium 166 MHz
Hard drive	1.2GB	1.6GB	2.1GB
Monitor	14" (13.2" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)
Price	$1799	$2199	$2499
with LAN card	$1899*	$2299	$2599

Experience Campus Z-Station.
The University Store
413-545-2619
http://www.zds.com
education@zds.com

Older, wiser McNabb ready for 'Cuse

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The last time he faced North Carolina, Donovan McNabb was an unproven redshirt freshman making his first college start.

Now he's a sophomore star preparing to lead No. 9 Syracuse against the No. 24 Tar Heels on Saturday at the Carrier Dome.

"We just want to come out and show that we can compete with anyone," said McNabb, the nation's third-ranked passer last season. "We're a very talented team. We'll never know until the end of the season how good we really were."

Last year, McNabb led the Orangemen to a 20-9 win over North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The rematch will again be the season-opener for Syracuse, who went 9-3 last year. North Carolina got off to an impressive start last week with a 45-0 win over Clemson.

"Syracuse has an experienced team coming back," North Carolina coach Mack Brown said. "They're going to play really good in the opener."

The Tar Heels dominated Clemson, piling up 429 yards on offense while holding the Tigers to 91.

"It was a good game for us," Brown said. "We have a lot of inexperience on our team... and I thought they responded really well. They played with confidence."

While McNabb returns for Syracuse, his favorite receiver from last season, Marvin Harrison, is now in the NFL. McNabb's new targets include Deon Maddox, Kevin Johnson and Jim Turner.

"We've got to see what that group of guys bring to the table, what we're going to be able to do with them," coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "Last year, Marvin was the strength, and we highlighted him."

Syracuse-North Carolina is the only game Saturday matching two ranked teams.

In other Top 25 action, it's Michigan State at No. 1 Nebraska; UCLA at No. 2 Tennessee; Duke at No. 3 Florida State; Georgia Southern at No. 4 Florida; No. 5 Colorado at Colorado State; Louisville at No. 7 Penn State; New Mexico State at No. 8 Texas; Rice at No. 10 Ohio State; The Citadel at No. 11 Miami; No. 13 Northwestern at Wake Forest; Southern Mississippi at No. 14 Alabama; No. 15 Virginia Tech at Akron; Houston at No. 17 LSU; Fresno State at No. 18 Auburn; No. 19 Southern Cal at Illinois; Washington at No. 20 Arizona State; Indiana State at No. 21 Kansas State; Arizona at No. 22 Iowa; and Central Michigan at No. 23 Virginia.

Peyton Manning, the pre–season Heisman Trophy favorite, will lead Ten against UCLA.

The Volunteers routed UNLV 62-3 in their opener last week. UCLA will be playing its first game under Bob Toledo, who took over after longtime Bruins coach Terry Donahue left to become a television commentator.

"We hope to at least get a little pressure on Peyton so he doesn't sit back there and pick us apart," Toledo said.

Hingis to face Graf in U.S. Open today

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A handicapper examining today's women's semifinals at the U.S. Open would have to give 15-year-old Martina Hingis a better chance against defending champion Steffi Graf than Conchita Martinez has against Monica Seles.

After all, Hingis has beaten Graf this year. That's more than Martinez has done against Seles, who has swept all eight matches and all 16 sets they have played. Their last meeting was in the Open semifinals a year ago.

"I remember the match," Martinez said. "She played well, but I didn't play good at all. I don't know why. I wasn't passing, wasn't aggressive enough.

"I just have to play deep and make her move a little, not let her be aggressive. I know her game is being aggressive. I have to try to move her around with my forehand, not let her play comfortable."

Seles dismisses their history. "It has been one year since I played her," she said. "A lot has happened in her game and in my life."

There are some basics, though. Seles knows what to expect and how she must deal with it.

"She has a good first serve and she has a great forehand so I'm going to try and stay away from that," she said. "She doesn't make a lot of unforced errors. I have to hit a lot of winners. If they're in, great; if they're not, I'm in trouble."

Seles is nursing a sore left shoulder that restricts her movement and might require surgery. She also benefitted from a second-round walkover and has played fewer sets than any of the semifinalists because of that.

Hingis, whose engaging smile and carefree style has captivated the Open, defeated Graf at Rome, her only win in five matches with the No. 1 player in the world.

"It was another surface," she is quick to point out. "And the last time, I lost on grass at Wimbledon. I am in the semis now. I have nothing to lose against her."

The loss to Hingis does not weigh terribly heavy on Graf for one simple reason. "I have beat her since," she said.

Of more concern is the confidence factor and go-for-broke approach Hingis brought with her to the Open. It produced victories over highly regarded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Jana Novotna on the way to the semis.

Chiefs–Raiders rivalry heating up again

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — As the Kansas City Chiefs trotted onto the practice field one day this week, coach Marty Schottenheimer looked suspiciously at a low-flying helicopter buzzing overhead.

"Is that Al up there?" he asked.

He was probably joking. But to everyone involved, the 36-year rivalry between Lamar Hunt's Kansas City Chiefs and Al Davis' Oakland Raiders is no laughing matter.

It's no joke to Chiefs fans who hold Raider-Hater parties every year and reminisce about the good old days, like the time Ben Davidson speared Lenny Dawson and ignited an epic player brawl. It's no joke to Chiefs players who cannot help but get caught up in the intensity of the moment.

"This becomes one fired-up town," said tackle Joe Phillips.

"It's Raiders week," noted safety Mark Collins. "That's all you have to say."

It most assuredly is no joke to the Raiders. The Chiefs have dominated them throughout the Schottenheimer era like no other team ever did.

Heading into their kickoff Sunday in Arrowhead Stadium, the Chiefs (1-0) have beaten their archrivals 12 of the last 15 games. The Chiefs are the only team ever to mount a six-game winning streak against the Raiders, and they've done it twice in this decade.

"Nobody likes to be dominated by anybody," said Raiders quarterback Billy Joe Hobert. "Certainly, it's on our minds. You don't build a tradition and you don't build respect by getting your butt kicked twice a year by the same team. It's about time we turned that around."

"It's still like 'us versus them' when you get to Kansas City," said safety Eddie Anderson. "Like in college, there's one team that's your real rival. They're in our division and it's a game we've got to win."

Like a gambler on a lucky streak who dares not count his chips for fear of breaking the spell, Schottenheimer dislikes even discussing his domination of the Raiders, let alone explaining it.

"Each game has come down to a play here and there," said Schottenheimer, whose Chiefs began defense of their AFC West crown with a ragged 20-19 victory over Houston. "I honestly have no reason I can think of. They've been two evenly matched teams."

It's not just one losing streak the troubled Raiders (0-1) will be looking to snap. They lost their seventh in a row dating back to last year when they failed to hold a 14-7 halftime lead and dropped a 19-14 verdict last week in Baltimore.

Whether Hobert or the injured Jeff Hostetler would start Sunday remained murky. The last time they met, Hobert threw a pair of TD passes that came too late to prevent a 29-23 Chiefs victory. But that was all Hobert needed to get caught up in the rivalry.

Cincy back in hunt after dismal start

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Not close enough to be a contender, not so far back that they're out of it. This is baseball's version of purgatory, and the Cincinnati Reds are in it.

The defending NL Central champions bought themselves some time by sweeping the Atlanta Braves the last three days. They remain 4 1/2 games out of first, trailing St. Louis and Houston, as they prepare to open a four-game weekend series against San Francisco.

"This series was so critical," manager Ray Knight said. "It could have buried us. What we did was stay alive.

"If we don't play them well, it's 'See ya.' Well, we played them well and we're still hanging in there."

Hanging is what the Reds do best. They haven't been consistent enough to make a charge at first place, nor bad enough to eliminate themselves.

It has helped immensely that St. Louis and Houston, the two teams setting the pace, have stumbled along as well. A hot streak by either one in the past two weeks would have eliminated the Reds. Neither one could pull it off.

So the Reds languish. They've been between four and six games out of first place since Aug. 5, playing 16-15 baseball over that span.

They gain a little ground, then stall out and fall back, only to regroup and start inching forward again.

"It's like baiting you," Knight said.

It's been that way all season. The Reds have never been more than three games over .500 and never more than 11 games under. After a slow start, they have settled into mediocrity. Since July 22 — a span of 45 games — they've been within three games of .500. The lack of a winning streak has cost them valuable time. If they continue playing around .500 for much longer, they'll simply run out of time to catch up. They're 70-69 with 23 games left.

Because there are two teams ahead, the situation is compounded. On most days, one of the two is likely to win. That means every loss by the Reds will cost them ground against one of the two teams they have to catch.

"The situation is, we have to win as many games as we possibly can," shortstop Barry Larkin said.

The only thing working in the Reds' favor is the schedule. They have seven games left with the first-place Cardinals — four at Riverfront Stadium and a three-game series in St. Louis that finishes the regular season. The Reds don't play the Astros again. That alone has given the Reds hope and made them play some of their best baseball of the season. Their three-game sweep of the Braves was their first at Riverfront Stadium since June 1992.

"It looks as if they're concentrating more and paying more attention," Knight said. "We're not making a lot of mistakes in crucial situations."

MATCH POINT
Always keep a shovel, rake and water nearby when burning debris.
REMEMBER, ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES.
A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and Your State Forester
Ad Council

MATCH POINT
When putting out a campfire, drown the fire, stir it, and drown it again.
REMEMBER, ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES.
A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and Your State Forester
Ad Council

MATCH POINT
When building a campfire, clear a 5-foot area around the pit down to the soil.
REMEMBER, ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES.
A Public Service of the USDA Forest Service and Your State Forester
Ad Council

four opportunities to learn about arts management at the Arts Extension Service
1 Introduction to Arts Management, 3 credits
Meets Mondays, 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. Offered through the Division of Continuing Education (Fee waiver available to qualified students through support from the UMass Arts Council)
2 Internships at AES/credit possible
• Arts for social change research
• Publications marketing • Artist Business Library
Meeting: Wednesday, Sept. 11, 4 p.m., 602 Goodell
3 Work Study Positions
• congenial staff • nationally respected organization
• great experience
4 The Artist in Business Library houses over 600 reference volumes, periodicals, directories and three job listing publications.
Interested? Call AES, 545-2360 or stop by 602 Goodell.
AES is a program of the Division of Continuing Education.

SORORITY RUSH ! ! SORORITY RUSH ! ! SORORITY RUSH ! ! SORORITY RUSH ! !
SIDE by SIDE
we wear our LETTERS...
ΛΧΩ ΔΖ ΣΔΤ ΑΕΦ ΣΚ ΚΚΓ ΠΓΥ ΣΣΣ ΧΩ
... with PRIDE !!
Orientation:
September 8th, Campus Center @ 12pm, room 163
Rush Dates:
September 8th - 15th
 For more information call: Greek Affairs at 549-8459

Mike's Famous Schmorg is coming back on a new night ... Saturday at 5:00
Pile your plater high for $2
• roast beef
• baked chicken
• chicken parm.
• eggplant parm.
• ziti & meat balls
• kielbasa & beans
• au gratin potatoes
• pasta salad
• rice & vegetables
• lots more !
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

■ horn

continued from page 14

support from the bench.

And now he will get his turn to play, although the Dodgers are unsure how much playing time Butler will see. It all depends on how he does.

Similar uncertainties rested on the shoulders of New York Yankees pitcher David Cone last week. Cone, who was playing for the first time since May 2, was diagnosed with an aneurysm in his pitching shoulder in May. Cone threw a no-hitter through seven innings.

"People said 'You can't do this, or you can't do that' and here I am," Butler said.

• Boston Bruin Cam Neely has been forced to put his skates on the shelf because of a degenerative hip condition.

Neely, a powerful forward, has been hampered in the past few years by nagging injuries, including problems with his hip and knee.

The Bruins called a 4 p.m. press conference yesterday to discuss Neely's condition. Doctors have told both Neely and the Bruins organization that Neely will need an artificial hip, and may never regain his old form.

Neely was a first round draft pick of the Vancouver Canucks in 1983, and was traded to Boston in 1987.

He scored more than 35 goals in each of his first five seasons in Beantown, breaking the 50 goal mark in the 1989–90 and 1990–91 seasons.

Injuries began to slow Neely down after that. In 1993–94 he scored 50 goals in just 49 games. Only Wayne Gretzky has scored 50 goals in fewer games.

Neely finishes his NHL career with 395 goals and 299 assists over 13 seasons.

• Everybody's favorite criminal Lawrence Phillips is back in the news again. Don't worry though, it's nothing good.

Phillips has had a lawsuit filed against him by his ex- girlfriend, Kate McEwen.

Phillips and McEwen have a long and rocky relationship, one that was splashed across the sports pages last fall when Phillips pleaded no contest to misdemeanor trespassing and assault charges for a Sept. 10, 1995 attack on McEwen.

McEwen has brought forth the lawsuit, which was filed Aug. 16 in Jackson County Circuit Court, and it includes a broader spectrum of abuse.

The lawsuit asks for actual and punitive damages for sexual assault, battery, kidnapping, assault, false imprisonment, emotional distress, and violation of rights.

Allegations in the lawsuit include that Phillips beat and kicked McEwen while she was at a friend's house, grabbing her hair "caveman" style, pulling her down three flights of stairs and slamming her head into a wall; and that he slashed her tires and threatened to kill her when Phillips asked for a glass of water and she told him to get it himself.

Mitch Frankel, Phillips' agent, has said that his client has gotten a bum rap.

"Since he's come to St. Louis, there's been a lot of things that have surrounded his life and not all of them have been good," Frankel said.

Understatement of the year, Captain Clue.

Frankel also said that he thinks the real Lawrence Phillips will surface once he has put his personal problems behind him.

"I think that as time goes on and everyone gets to know him a little better, I think you'll find him very engaging and very hospitable," Frankel said.

Whatever.

• Virginia Tech men's basketball coach Bill Foster has announced that he will retire at the end of this year's season.

Foster, 60, is entering his sixth year as head coach of the Hokies. He guided the team to a 23–6 record last year and a final national ranking of No. 15, the school's highest ever final ranking.

He led Virginia Tech to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1986.

Foster, who has been a collegiate head coach for 29 years, has left a legacy at Shorter College, North Carolina– Charlotte, Clemson, and Miami.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Minnesota and Atlanta head into a week two showdown

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Jeff Brady feels like he's stuck in the wrong season.

In the season opener, it was the Detroit Lions and all their offensive weapons. On Sunday, Brady and the Minnesota Vikings have to contend with Atlanta's run-and-shoot frenzy.

"I feel like I haven't really played any run defense," said Brady, the defensive player of the week after he intercepted two passes in the 17-13 victory over the Lions.

"We're just in a basketball game. And this week's even going to be worse with four wide receivers."

Of course, it won't be so bad if the Falcons play like they did last week in a 29-6 loss to Carolina Panthers.

The Vikings, though, realize that game was symbolic of Atlanta's Jekyll-and-Hyde personality: pushovers on the road, beasts at home.

The Falcons have lost 13 of their last 15 games outside of the Georgia Dome. At home, Atlanta is 12-4 over the past two seasons.

"They're not playing at Carolina this week, they're playing at the Georgia Dome," Minnesota coach Dennis Green said. "The team we'll see is the one that has won 12 games at home. It's a team built for speed, and that's what the Georgia Dome gives them."

The Falcons failed to score a touchdown last week for the first time in 27 games, largely because they were baffled by Carolina's simple four-man rushing schemes. Preparing for a more elaborate defense, Atlanta's lineman were caught flat-footed as the Panthers racked up seven sacks of Jeff George.

George, who threw for a team-record 4,143 yards in 1995, was only 16-for-35 for 215 yards in the opener.

"Our offense played about as bad as it could play," coach June Jones said. "We didn't complete anything, not even our base stuff. I don't have a reason why."

The Vikings retooled defense, with five new starters in the front seven, allowed Detroit 435 yards, but came up with four interceptions, and a fumble recovery at its own goal line.

"There's definitely a concern when you give up that many yards," defensive end Derrick Alexander said. "But we did the thing that's most important, we kept them out of the end zone. For teams to move the ball between the 20s and not score, that doesn't really mean a lot in this game."

Look for the Vikings to use the same bend-but-not-break philosophy against Atlanta, which last year became the first team in NFL history to have four players with 1,000 yards receiving or rushing.

"Between the 20s, it's a great offense," said Minnesota quarterback Warren Moon, who played in the run-and-shoot at Houston when Jones was an assistant coach.

"But sometimes you have problems in short-yardage situations or down around the goal line, where they can usually defend you pretty good. A team can stack it up at the line and not have much field to cover behind them."

Unfortunately for the Vikings, this will be their first game against Atlanta since 1991. The run-and-shoot — with its four receivers, no tight end and only one running back — is unlike any other offense in the league.

"Maybe if we played the Falcons twice a year like Carolina, we could be ready for it," Green said. "But... we'll be scrambling."

The Falcons defense, supposedly improved with the addition of linebacker Cornelius Bennett and safety Patrick Bates, did plenty of scrambling against Carolina as the Panthers set a franchise-record for points in a game.

The cornerbacks, Anthony Phillips and Darnell Walker, were especially tentative, but Jones said he wasn't planning any changes in the secondary — or anywhere else, for that matter.

"We've got a lot to prove," linebacker Jesse Tuggle conceded. "We definitely know that all eyes are on us. We're trying to believe that this defense can work."

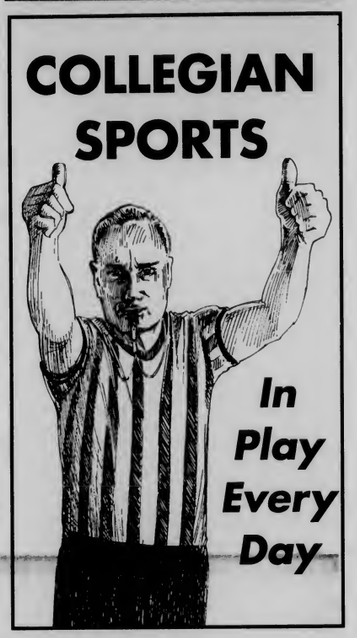
Perhaps the Falcons won't have to contend with Moon, who suffered sprains to both ankles against Detroit and also was nursing a sore toe. He was questionable at week's end, and the coaches will let Moon decide if his 39-year-old body can handle the artificial turf at the Georgia Dome.

"I don't want to do anything to injure myself again," Moon said. "I want to play it smart."

If he can't go, the Vikings will give Brad Johnson the first start of his pro career. Last week, Johnson came off the bench to throw a game-winning 31-yard touchdown pass to Cris Carter with just over a minute remaining.

After five years as a reserve in Minnesota — and a backup during most of his college career at Florida State — Johnson relished the thought of finally getting a chance to prove he can be a No. 1 quarterback.

"It's been a great change for me as far as actually throwing the ball, my confidence on the field, being a leader in the huddle," Johnson said. "I'm the same person, but I'm a changed quarterback."



If the Vikings win, it would be their first 2-0 start since 1987. If the Falcons lose, they could wind up in a hole too deep to climb out of.

After Minnesota, Atlanta has a difficult schedule: at home against Philadelphia and trips to Detroit and San Francisco.

"Our guys know it's a long season," Jones said. "We have a good team and we're going to prove that before the season is over."

The Collegian Staff positions of Staff Artist and Systems Manager have been filled.

Thank you to all those who applied.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

The Boltwood Project
Recruitment Nights
Attend Only One
Monday, September 9 or
Tuesday, September 10 or
Wednesday, September 11
6:30-8:30 pm in the Campus Center Auditorium
Recruiting University and Five College Students interested in earning up to two credits while providing community service to the Amherst area
For More Information call 545-6753

FOOTWEAR DEN
~ Sizes ~
Men's: 6-18
Women's:5-12
Brand Name Athletic and Casual Footwear
Specializing in Running Shoes
CLOSEOUT PRICES
321 Main Street, Amherst • Down the street from Amherst Police Department

Campus Activities Presents
First Week '96
"A Taste of UMass",
Friday, 6 Sept.
*FIRST WEEK VIDEO DANCE
Student Union Ballroom
9pm to 1am
*FIRST WEEK COMEDY SHOW
Bluewall Cafe
8pm
FREE ADMISSION
*FIRST WEEK MOVIE-"ERASER"
Campus center Auditorium
8pm and 10pm
-Welcome to UMass-

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Plan now for next summer...
SEASONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM
This 288-hour program qualifies graduates for a federal Level II law enforcement commission, needed for a position as a seasonal law enforcement officer in national parks, or other environmental agencies.
The program includes instruction in (among other topics):
• Law Enforcement Techniques • Firearms Training • Detention and Arrest
• Defensive Tactics • Crime Scene Management • Search and Seizure
• Accident Investigation • Federal Law and the U.S. Code • Patrol Procedures
• Defensive Driving
Nov. 2, 1996-March 22, 1997. Weekdays during Wintersession and Spring break, plus 7 Weekends
Registration deadline/confirmation: October 18, 1996
Registration Materials and More Information are available from: Division of Continuing Education, (413) 545-2484.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Water Polo in Navy Invitational, Midshipmen main event for UM

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

So much for easing into the season.

UMass coach Russ Yarworth takes his defending Eastern Championship water polo squad down to Annapolis, Md. to face Navy (and two other opponents — Richmond and George Washington) In the Navy Invitational this weekend.

The Midshipmen were the only team this side of the Mississippi to defeat the Minutemen in the regular season last fall, and perennially are Massachusetts' only major competition in the east for an NCAA playoff berth.

Navy brings an aggressive, attacking style at both ends of the pool, and Yarworth expects them to be ready.

"They're usually a little further along at this time of year than [other teams]," Yarworth said. "It should be a dogfight."

In sharp contrast to the intense rivalry of a UMass–Navy match that features physical struggles and tense last–minute possessions, UMass–Richmond games usually come down to third stringers trying to impress the coaches in fourth quarter garbage time.

Last season, the Minutemen swept three matches from the lowly Spiders (18–5, 16–14, 23–13). In addition UMass is 6–0 all–time versus Richmond.

"Richmond has a couple good individual players," Yarworth said. "If you don't pay attention, you can get yourself in trouble."

Richmond (10–17 last season) lost its top two goal scorers from last season, but returns 44–goal scorer Tom Haggerty and Chris Sirras, who netted 28 goals a year ago.

After ending the regular season last year winning seven of their last nine matches, the Spiders finished a disappointing eighth at the Eastern Water Polo Association tournament, losing all three of their matches including a 16–5, first–round drubbing by the Minutemen.

George Washington is yet another club on the docket that has yet to beat the Minutemen.

UMass has beaten the Colonials both times the two teams have met. The latest Minuteman victory came in an 11–9 decision at the Labor Day Invitational last autumn.

The Colonials, like Richmond, have strong individual performers, and Yarworth figures it will take a strong team effort to keep GW at bay.

Junior driver Brent Stoll is the Colonials' only proven legitimate scoring threat, having led GW in scoring last season with 146 points (111 goals, 35 assists), a mark that would have led the UMass squad last season.

Jeremy Yamamoto, a midget (145 lbs.) driver who may be physically mauled by either Brian Stahl (215) or J.C. Limardo (205) down low, scored 29 goals and tallied a .659 shot percentage in his freshman season a year ago.

Stahl, Limardo, et al. should have their way against Yamamoto's Colonials and Richmond. The real test will be the physical style of the host Midshipmen.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 14

"The coach has been kicking our butt this week, so what we might have lacked in fitness in the last game we have made up. Everyone wants it this year, taking their own initiative, and making fit what the coach has not made."

Even though the Lady Bulldogs are in their second year as a Div. I program, they can not be overlooked. They already have two wins under their belt this season, beating Georgia St. and Georgia Southern by scores of 5–1 and 3–2, respectively. Last season they took NCAA Tournament standout NC State to the wire in a 2–1 loss. Their defense up to this point has been successful in all parts of the pitch, with sophomore defenders Stephanie Yarem (5 points) and Suzannah Weathersbee leading the team in scoring.

Factor in that head coach Bill Barker was an old teammate of Rudy's at Rollins College, and was also an assistant for him at Central Florida, and emotions could run high.

"These are two games that are the biggest on their schedule for the year," Rudy said. "They are young, very fast, very aggressive and they had quite a good team last year for a first year program. I expect them to be well prepared, fit and physical as hell."

"Georgia is a very young program, and they are all very excited and eager about their opportunity to start a new program with coach Bill Barker," assistant coach Chris Chamides said. "I think it is going to present a very big challenge for us, in the sense that this is going to be a really good introduction to the grind of the season."

SMU is on the other side of the spectrum, as the quality of their soccer tradition rates up with the likes of UMass. Last season they reached the Final Four, losing only to Portland by a score of 4–2. Even though they lost head coach Alan Kirkup to the University of Maryland, and also their three top scorers to graduation and transfers, they still come in as a strong team. Their No. 22 national ranking is deceptive, and the core remains from last season's impressive 23–1–1 squad, led by their solid midfield of senior Amy Kline (24 GP, 24 GS, 30 points last season) and juniors Danielle Brousseau, Emily Rogers and Kristen English.

UMass connections continue with the Mustangs as Rudy is more than familiar with new coach Greg Ryan. In his first season, UMass lost to Ryan's old team, Wisconsin, by a score of 2–1 in the NCAAs. In addition, assistant coach Brett Hall has worked with sophomore defender Robin Smith in the past. SMU freshman forward Morgan Rittenhouse was recruited by Rudy last year, but slipped through the cracks, and leads a talented recruiting class coming into this season.

With their losses in the off–season, Rudy and Chamides will not take this team lightly.

"[Ryan] has some good players on that team, and plus they are coming off some great success last year," Rudy said.

"SMU is solid, a Final Four team and no matter what you say, they are going to have players on the field with Final Four experience," Chamides said. "They did lose some scoring, but they still will be very strong.

"It is going to be a really good benchmark test to see where we stand against quality NCAA teams. It will be a good check to see where we stand as compared to last year, because they advanced further than we did, and we would like to get where they were."

All in all, this weekend will be an experience for the Minutewomen. On Sunday afternoon, at approximately 4:00 p.m., you will know the result from the crowd noise at Garber Field. Sorry, all of you UConn haters, the rematch of last year's tournament loss is in Storrs on Oct. 19.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Sandy Shimogaki will have her work cut out for her in the midfield as UMass faces SMU and Georgia this weekend.

Sports Notice
There will be a meeting for all new writers interested in wwiting for sports Monday at 5:30 pm in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center Basement.
A Sports staff meeting will follow at 6:00 pm.

DO NOT ENTER
Great pioneers don't hesitate. MDA research pursues every possible avenue.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

See campus computer store for details
Buy an IBM PC 340 or 350 desktop computer and an IBM Multimedia Kit. And you'll get a CD software package that includes Windows 95, Lotus SmartSuite, Netscape Navigator, World Book Multimedia Encyclopedia and the Infopedia collection of essential reference software.
Buy a ThinkPad and you'll get Windows 95 and Lotus SmartSuite. You can also take advantage of special student, faculty and staff financing. Just call 1-800-4IBM-LOAN for information. Hurry, visit your campus computer store today. After all, no one looks good in a checkered apron.
IBM
IBM and ThinkPad are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. Windows is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation. Other company, product or service names may be trademarks or service marks of others. ©1996 IBM Corp. All rights reserved.

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus
Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
HiLow • Reebok Bench Step
Boxercise • Yoga • Area's Largest
Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST 60. AMHERST 256-0080

last chance to prepare for the October test
GRE
Last class begins on: September 9th!!
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
*GRE is a registered trademark of the Educational Testing Service

NO U TURN
This is no time to turn back. Keep MDA's lifesaving research moving forward.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

Used Books
1000's of Academic Paperbacks in many subjects at 50-75% off list
Valley Books
199 N. Pleasant St.
Downtown Amherst
256-1368

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
KLEIN*S ALL★SPORTS
Welcomes You With Back To School Savings!
Golf • Ski • Hockey • Basketball • Swimming • Lacrosse • Football • Hiking • Running • Walking • Snowboarding • Tennis • Racquetball • Weight Lifting • Baseball • Soccer • Field Hockey • Bowling • Volleyball • In-line Skating • Watersports
Klein's Coupon
15% OFF
Any Non-Sale Item
With Coupon Only • Expires September 15, 1996
CONVERSE Reebok adidas FILA AIRWALK
For Your Sporting Good Needs . . . KLEIN*S ALL★SPORTS Has It All!
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Panhellenic Council is sponsoring a Great Area Carwash benefitting AIDS Foundation Saturday, September 7th 12-3 behind 375, 387, 389 and 395 N Pleasant Street $3

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come meet the sisters of CHI OMEGA at our Open House on Sept. 8 at 1:30, Sept 9 at 5:30 and our Barbeque on Sept. 10 at 5:30. Call Heather for more information at 549-4742

Want to start your own fraternity? Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to re-colonize our chapter. H interested call Brat Hobak at 317-334-1898 ext. 214

Poster Sale Fine Arts, Movie, Animal, Rock. 3-D Most images $6, $7, & $8 S U B Wed-Fri 9am- 4pm Benefits UMASS radio WMUA 91.1 FM

All University women invited to attend Sigma Kapa Open Rush Thurs 9/5 5-7 pm. Sun 9/8 6-8 pm Tues 9/10 5-7 pm Thurs 9/12 6-8 pm Please call Beth for more info. 256-8887 Located 19 Allen St. (Behind Hillel)

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Buick Century SW Good condition $1,000.00. Contact David 549-8273

86 Ford Escort Runs good, tires in good condition, new starter, very little rust. $800 call Brian 586-0263

MAZDA '91 323 HATCHBACK, 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done, $2900 (OBO). Call 549-7286

'93 MITSUBISHI MIRAGE 40 miles, $6500 or best offer. 367-0384

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Jobs for the environment. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434

Largest Student Travel Planner on East Coast looking for Campus Rep. to promote Kodak Spring Break Trips "Guaranteed" lowest package prices and best incentives. You handle the sales we handle the bookkeeping. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre, Orlando & Key West. Earn BIG $$$ and/or FREE TRIPS!!. GREAT FOR RESUME!!! Call 1-800-222-4432

EMPLOYMENT

NOW HIRING! COFFEE SHOP AND HATCH! Now have positions available working during lunch Mon-Fri Come down and see us or call 545-0016 or 545-2597

PART TIME JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT! Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434

Now Hiring part-time salesmarketers. Morning, afternoon and evening hours available. Earn $6-$7 per hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

Child Care Three great kids in Amherst: M, T, Th 2-7pm; W 4-8; Sat Eve. Car needed, non-smoking. Robin 253-0660 9am-9pm

School Bus Driver 10 hours a week, afternoon, $10.00/hour with free health club benefits. Must have a Class 2 DPU license 586-0833 Call or apply in person Kid Sport, Rte. 9, Hadley.

Want the toughest job you'll ever love? People's a student-run business is seeking highly motivated undergraduate workstudy and non-work-study students for long-term commitment. Learn to co—manage a small business, gain invaluable leadership skills, and have a blast! Applications available at the Center for Student Businesses. Student Union, Room 408, or the Market. EOE

Counter/Kitchen Help 25 hr/Week, Must be able to work late nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Now Hiring Experienced Wait Staff/Driver and Hostess; Apply with-in only, Kai Chi Restaurant

CAREGIVER WITH EARLY CHILDHOOD Experience for two and three year old. Monday, Tuesday, or Friday 8-5; car required, references required. 253-3237

Looking for a fun, responsible companion with own transportation for our 13 year old son. Some afternoons and overnights in our home in Leverett. Call 548-9057

PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANT For evenings, overnights, and weekends. For male quad $7.85 per hour $15.70 for overnight. 6-9068

RECEPTIONIST MULLINS CENTER, M-Th; 1:30-5:00 pm F 10:30am-5:00pm telephone experience required, some clerical. $5.25/hr MULLINS CENTER 2nd floor to apply

EMPLOYMENT

PAINTERS NEEDED. Now hiring painters for the greater Amherst area. Hiring quick and reliable painters. Experience preferred, but not required. Starts at $7.hr., plus bonuses. Part-time or Full-time. Contact Dan Wolman at Student Painters, 1-800-829-4777

Cruise Ships Hiring. Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full-Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info. call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring. Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students needed! Entry-level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services. 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment: Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Computer, Compaq 486, 8 RAM, 210HD, Software, $750 or B.O. 367-9874 or 253-2822

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 OBO 548-9728

LAPTOP COMPUTER IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HD/ with case and extras/ $1100.OBO Please contact Josh at 256-8986

BOOKCASES Unfinished pine- 24"x36"x9". 3 shelves- $48.00 + tax- 536-1944

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Retire rich in ten years

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed for dark, post alternative pop/rock We have EP and Boston gigs. If you are serious and can chill or rock out/call Phil 549-5836

ROOM FOR RENT

2BR Apt in Sunderland HW floors, washer/dry, porch, garage 315+ BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4384

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

WANTED

Sell me your purple lot sticker Call Greg w/prica $ 2196

HOROSCOPES

For The Week Of September 1–7

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Put more emphasis on meeting your financial obligations on time. Don't fall behind. Use your organizational skills to get on top of things. Devote the weekend to a little rest and relaxation. You'll need it for a busy upcoming week!

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

It's your turn to be in the spotlight—don't be afraid to show what you've got! You will be recognized for your first-rate performance and hard work. Be open and honest and your good name will be protected. Postpone travel plans for next weekend.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

Change is good, but think things through first! Don't take others for granted, especially your family members. You will depend on them more than ever in the upcoming months. A big surprise could be just around the corner!

CANCER
June 22-July 22

Business plans could take a turn for the worse. Don't get upset, it's out of your control now. Keep looking ahead. Things will soon be in your favor again. Others will admire your flexibility. Think about your family's financial future

LEO
July 23-August 23

Let yourself go creatively this week at work. There are no limits, and you might surprise yourself. A fellow employee might inspire you. Turn more of your attention to budgeting in the upcoming months. Start saving for something you have been wanting.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

Plan a special evening with a good friend. It will lift your spirits and give you a new perspective. An unexpected phone call might leave you confused. Don't read too much into it. Take time to read the fine print. It will clarify an ambiguous issue.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

Be on the lookout for opportunities for advancement. They may be right around the corner. Be cautious when beginning a new relationship. There may be more to it than what's on the surface. Do some research on a new subject of interest.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

Confidence is the key to success. Others will admire you for your knowledge and ability to work under pressure. You will be recognized for your contributions. Keep it up, and you will soon take steps up the career ladder.

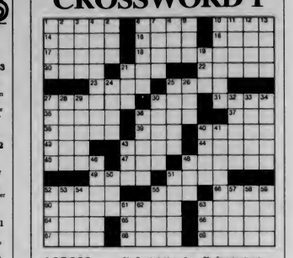
SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

A hectic week at home overshadows a personal goal you've been trying to work on. Don't let your stress level rise—instead, focus on taking things one step at a time. Catch up on chores you've been avoiding before it becomes overwhelming.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Use your head this week when it comes to planning an excursion. Although it's tempting to go first class, cutting a few corners will save you some money without affecting your enjoyment one bit. Take a friend along for the ride.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18



Give yourself a break from the hectic—whether it's the outdoor kind or the high stress kind. Little gestures mean a lot, especially when it comes to an intimate relationship. Everything's going your way so the work comes to a close—so celebrate!

PISCES
February 19-March 20

Your focus and dedication are starting to pay off, but don't let up now. You could accomplish even greater things. A platonic relationship could be developing along new lines. Make your choice, and then stick to it, when it comes to your family.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD 1

ACROSS
1. Under
6. Cats' feet
10. Baseball hit out of play
14. "____ a Piano" (2 wds.)
16. Has debts
17. Ingrid's role in Casablanca
18. Wafted
19. Feigned
20. Soothsayer
21. Skeleton, for one
22. Dated
23. Misrepresents
25. Brunch or lunch
27. Elliptical
30. Egg ____ yung
31. Like a DeMille film
35. By hook or by ____
36. Author Sillitoe
37. Geriatric initials
38. Vails
39. ____ City (Houston film)
40. Goldbricks
42. Ho's gutter, for short
43. Members of the pine family
44. Eighteome
45. Take ten
47. Fury
48. Kitchen tools
49. Grade
51. On which "du jour" is found
52. Held title
56. Slicker
58. Brood
60. Geometric measures
63. "That girl" who married Phil
64. Tarzan portrayer Lincoln
65. "Well Street ___"
66. Pointless
67. English money: abbr.
68. No ifs, ____ or buts
69. Cartography collection

DOWN
1. Parts of overalls
2. Author Wiesel
3. Mineral vein
4. Disregard
5. Unite
6. Lao and Pious
7. Wrong
8. Like Willie Winkie
9. Jet-setting transport
10. Ending
11. Poet Sharon
12. Exploits
13. Do dock work
15. Clean air gp.
21. Beer barrie
24. Reaches a printing press
25. Encircling trenches
26. Vast age
27. Relish
28. Truck stop?
29. Mopiaces
30. Warning light
32. Babble
33. Sunrise
34. Break coverings
36. Burning
39. Area above the flank
41. Junk-mail addressee
43. ___ to bed
46. Oscillation
48. Cookbook item: abbr.
50. Lemon refresher
51. Prepares to paint windows
52. Poetic works
53. Droop
54. Appellative
55. Talking horse (2 wds.)
57. Ph.D. postulant's exam
58. Arm bone
59. Little piggies
61. Airline letters
62. Bard's time
63. Alice star

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED

YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.

For decades, MDA has shown how valuable people with disabilities are to society. We believe talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION
1-800-572-1717

DO NOT ENTER

Great pioneers don't hesitate. MDA research pursues every possible avenue.

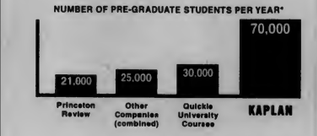
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

last chance to prepare for the October test
LSAT
Last class begins on: September 8th!!
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
*LSAT is a registered trademark of Law Services

ART SUPPLIES
DESIGN SUPPLY STUDIO
ON TOWN COMMON • 65 SOUTH PLEASANT STREET • AMHERST • 413/253-5592
FREE DISCOUNT CARD
WITH THIS COUPON • CLOCKED FOR 10% OFF ALL PURCHASES FOR ONE FULL YEAR
EXPIRES 10/1/96

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

WELCOME BACK TO THE LOWEST PRICES IN TOWN!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive



LITE, LITE ICE MILLER BEER 30 PACK 30-12 OZ. CANS SALE 15.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $12.49 + DEP.
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 30 PACK 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.79 + DEP.
HAMM'S CASE 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.29 + DEP.
HARPOON ALL FLAVORS 6 PK BOTTLES. $4.99 + DEP.
SAMUEL ADAMS ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.29 + DEP.
KILLIAN'S IRISH RED 12 PK. BOTTLES $7.99 + DEP.
HORNSBY'S CIDER CIDER & DARK 'N DRY 6 PK. BOTTLE $4.99
EVERYDAY LOW PRICE
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, LITE, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE, MICH, MICH LT, AMBER BOCK $39.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
TURNING LEAF - CHARDONNAY - ZINFANDEL - WHITE ZINFANDEL - FUME BLANC 750 ML $4.99
ALMADEN WINES RHINE, CHABLIS, GOLDEN, BLUSH, ROSE, BURGUNDY, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC 3.0 LT $5.99
MARCUS JAMES ALL FLAVORS 1.5 LT $5.49
GEORGES DUBOUEF BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 750 ML $5.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99
BOONE'S WINE ALL FLAVORS 750 ML $1.99
BACARDI Breezer ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. SALE 3.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.50 FINAL COST $1.99 + DEP.

POPOV VODKA 1.75L $9.99
MALIBU CARIBBEAN RUM 750 ML $8.99
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML $10.49
SEAGRAM'S 7 BLENDED WHISKEY 1.75L SALE 12.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.49
RON ROBERTO RUM WHITE & GOLD 1.75 L SALE 9.99 MAIL-IN-REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $7.99
JIM BEAM BOURBON 1.75L $13.99
GOLDSCHLÄGER 107 CINNAMON SCHNAPPS 750 ML $13.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/5/96 THRU WEDS. 9/11/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Kaplan prepares more students... one student at a time.

Here's Why.
Kaplan teachers are dynamic, experienced and highly effective. Using Kaplan's unique, customized prep system, they'll create an individualized study plan that focuses on your needs.
Don't risk your future with an inferior prep course. At Kaplan, we'll make sure you get a higher score.
1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
*1993 estimate

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabie By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabie By Kevin Fagan

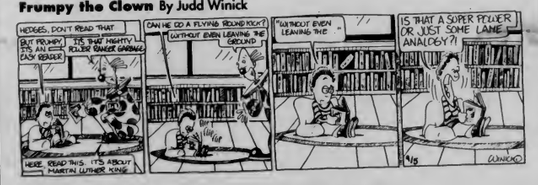
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

O.K.
Let's imagine that every week or so we get 2 nights in a row ...with no day in between.
So, at 6 a.m. when it would normally start to become light in the morning, it'd begin to get dark again....maybe you'd see a sliver of sun for 15 minutes....then it'd be a whole night all over again.

I told my friend who might have cancer that life is a 50/50 deal...half of it is a blast and half is terrible.
Whatever you want... two nights of darkness or two days of light.....



you be the weatherman.... but you don't need to broadcast your report as most weathermen do.

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

"Always wanted one of those" By A. Morse & S. Dumas

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Day

"If you take a good look at history you might get a black eye."

–BMCP

Life . . . Liberty . . . Happiness

Every American is entitled to the same basic rights and freedoms. And MDA makes these rights into realities for people with neuromuscular diseases.
The medical care and essential equipment that MDA offers guarantee my most basic rights by helping me to stay alive. MDA's assistance also offers me freedom to work and pursue my interests. And that makes me happy.
Thanks to MDA, I can make use of all my rights and all my abilities.
David Shorkey, County Attorney
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Here, I rigged this up to help with your poison ivy."

Today's Staff

Chris Conner
Night Editor

Lisa Oliveri
Copy Editor

Liz Brown
Photo Technician

Tony "Xot" Morse
Production Supervior

Marc Dionne, David X. Voldan
Josh Sylvester
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Hot Turkey Sandwich; Grilled Cheese & bacon; Fish Munchies
DINNER: Barbecued Spareribs; Baked Ziti; Charbroiled Chicken Breast

Hampden

LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll; Chicken Puckslll!; Fish Munchies
DINNER: Beef Strips with Snow Peas; Tilapia Santa Fe Fish

Worcester

LUNCH: Fish Munchies; Mesquite Chicken Sand.; Bow Ties/ Meat Sauce; Tri-Bean Caserole
DINNER: Beef Strips w/Snow Peas; Stir Fry Veggies; Eggplant Parmesiana; Half Time Deli

Berkshire

LUNCH: Fish Munchies; Mesquite Chicken; Raviolo with Sauce; Vegan Ravioli
DINNER: Beef Strips w/Snow Peas; Stir Fry Veggies; Eggplant Parmesiana; Barbecue Spareribs

Sports

Football kicks off season on road with Villanova

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Preparing and producing. The first word of the two is something that the UMass Minutemen football team has been doing all off-season. The second is what they're hoping will be the result of all that hard work as they tackle the Villanova Wildcats tomorrow afternoon at 1:00 p.m. in Philadelphia.

"You can talk all about what you have to do out there, but the most important thing is you've got to get out there and play," Head Coach Mike Hodges said. "I really think we're prepared. We've got a very business like group."

The Minutemen take to the road which will be the first of three games away from the confines of Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium. They will be facing a team which they have not faced since 1992 where the Minutemen came up with a 13-9 victory at home. The Wildcats lead the overall series between the two schools 7-6 since their first meeting back in 1961.

Villanova began their season last week, where they played a solid game against Rutgers, but lost by 10 (38-28) before a crowd of over 27,000. The Villanova attack looked like the exact opposite of the Minutemen who are known for the running game which averaged over 303 yards a game last season. In the first game the Wildcats ran for only 23 yards, but quarterback Clint Park threw for 350 yards.

Last season the Minutemen threw for only 483 yards all year. However, Mike Hodges said he feels that will definitely be different this season.

"I think we'll be a lot better this time out," Hodges said. "We put a lot of effort into our passing game. I think a lot of teams think that 'If we can stop the run against UMass we're going to win the game,' and we're trying to change that."

Junior Anthony Catterton will have the duties of trying to change that this week as he begins the year as the number one quarterback.

Though the Minutemen are trying to establish a passing game for themselves, they need to try to shut down the Wildcats passing attack first.

Last week Park set career highs in five different categories including completions (24), attempts (56), yards passing (350), touchdowns (3) and interceptions (5). The Minutemen might be hoping that at least that last record- breaking mark will be repeated in this game.

To stop the air assault, the Minutemen will need the secondary to step it up, a group in which UMass lost three of it's four starters from last year. Co-Captain Kory Blackwell, the lone returner starter, is very strong at the cornerback position and will defend one of the two excellent receivers the Wildcats have. Last week junior Josh Dolbin caught six balls for 94 yards, putting him over 1000 career yards receiving, and junior Brian Finneran caught 10 passes for a career high 166 yards.

Senior Bryan Mooney takes over the starting free safety duties, making the switch from strong safety, and will be counted on heavily as well to shut down some of the passing attack of the Wildcats.

The Minutemen are approaching this season with a different attitude, one which Hodges said he feels will give his team a very rewarding year.

"We need to play emotionally every week," Hodges said. "The coaches and players have been working real hard with being enthusiastic in practice, and we just need to transfer that to a game."

The UMass running attack is once again in full gear and ready to put up big numbers again this season. Senior All- America candidate Frank Alessio, the leading rusher in the Yankee Conference last season, will lead the attack, along with sophomore Matt Jordan.

Villanova ran into problems rushing the ball last week, gaining only 23 yards on 27 carries, and with All-America candidate linebacker Justin Reimer, last year's conference leader in tackles, times won't be any easier this week for the Wildcats. Back him up with sophomore Khari Samuel and middle linebacker Mike Dawson, second and third on the team in tackles last season, respectively, and the Minutemen will hope to put the stick in the Villanova rushing game this week as well.

Playing against a team that the Minutemen don't know much about, Hodges said he feels they're going to have to be ready in all areas, physically and emotionally.

"We're going to have to adjust, and we're going to have to be able to make the necessary changes," Hodges said. "We've been practicing hard, and we need to go out and play with a lot of enthusiasm and emotion."

Broadcast Notes: Listen to the game live on the only station broadcasting Minuteman football in FM Stereo, 91.1 FM WMUA, beginning with the pregame show at 12:45 p.m. Game time is 1:00 p.m.

PHOTO COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Co-Captain Kory Blackwell and the Minutemen kick off their season on the road at Villanova tomorrow.

UMass to face UNH Wildcats

By Jen Ryder
& Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team travels to Durham, N.H. Saturday to face the University of New Hampshire at 2 p.m.

Last Saturday the Minutewomen (1-0) won their season opener as they defeated Wake Forest, 4-1. On Wednesday, they beat the University of Toronto, 4-0, in an exhibition game.

Junior Courtney MacLean and freshman Saskia Fuchs, who scored two goals apiece in last week's victory against Wake, were named Atlantic 10 Player and Rookie of the Week, respectively.

MacLean scored twice on five shots, while Fuchs converted on two of her three shots. Fuchs also came away from the game with an assist.

Senior midfielder Kyle Rothenberger also had a strong performance last week as she recorded two assists, and sophomore Kate Putnam helped the offensive effort with an assist as well.

On defense UMass needs to look no further than senior goaltender Hilary Rose. She enters the game following a six- save performance against Wake Forest.

UMass coach Pam Hixon, who has been away from the college game for two years in order to coach the U.S. National Team, has little background information about UNH.

"I honestly don't know what to expect," Hixon said. "I've heard that they are strong, physical, big kids who hit the ball hard. And that they're relatively experienced."

For New Hampshire, tomorrow's game will be the season opener. Robin Balducci's Wildcats, who are hoping to improve on last season's 7-12 record, return eight starters, including their top scorer, senior JoAnne Fortin.

Other notable returnees on offense include junior Kate Roberts, and sophomores Caroline Coyne and Carey Blalobrzeski.

Becky Craigue started all 19 games last year, seeing time at both the back and forward positions. This year her role has switched to the midfield, where she will team with senior Courtney Lucksinger.

Defense will be a key weakness as New Hampshire returns no starting midfielders. Senior co-captain Aimee Tanguay and junior Kristen Wagner will lead the relatively inexperienced defense in 1996. Tanguay will lend a lot of stability to the defense, having started 41 games over the past two years in a Wildcat uniform.

Both teams are still adjusting to the no-offsides rule, which is new to collegiate field hockey this year.

"With the new rules and the offsides, I think people are going to be changing what they are doing almost daily," Hixon said.

Wednesday's game against Toronto gave the Minutewomen a chance to see a different perspective of the no-offsides rule. Canadian teams have been playing under the rule change for over a year.

"It was interesting to see what they're doing differently that might work or that we could implement for our team," Hixon said. "We picked up some pointers."

New Hampshire won last year's tilt at Totman Field, 1-0, in double overtime.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Kate Putnam, who tallied an assist in UMass' 4-1 win over Wake Forest, faces off against UNH tomorrow.

UMass classic comes to town, Minutewomen face SMU, Ga.

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

You wanted the best, and you got the best...

All references to stadium rock metaphors aside, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team will be hosting some of the hottest programs in the country this Friday and Sunday. Richard F. Garber Field will be the happening place to be, as the UMass-Reebok Women's Soccer Classic comes to town. The Classic is the home opener for the No. 18 nationally-ranked Minutewomen (1-0), and looks to be one of the top four team tournaments in collegiate soccer this season.

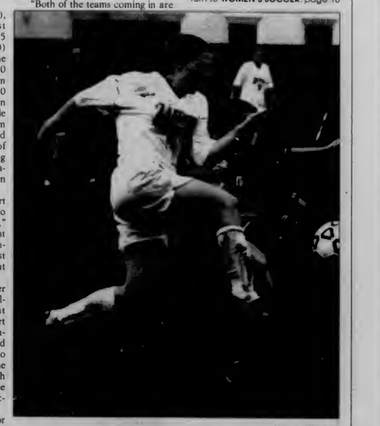
The University of Georgia (2-0), No. 22 Southern Methodist University (1-0) and No. 5 University of Connecticut (1-0) will be competing. UMass' home debut is against Georgia at 4:30 p.m. today, while SMU and UConn face off in the early game at 2:30 p.m. Sunday's slate includes UConn vs. Georgia at noon, with the finale of the Classic at 2:30 p.m. when UMass faces SMU. Head coach Jim Rudy is the catalyst of this competition, and he is looking forward to getting both the tournament and season rolling on an even further positive note.

"It would be a great way to start off the season, if the people want to see a decent level of competition," Rudy said. "This is one of the best four team tournaments in the country this year, never mind the first week. We might as well start out looking at the best."

Last weekend's season opener was a good result in the win column for UMass, as they beat Fairfield by a score of 2-1. But start of the semester problems, combined with the overzealous crowd atmosphere in Agawam, seemed to leave them a little distracted. The crowd noise in itself was high pitched, to say the least, due to the enthusiasm of over 1000 youth soccer players who were present.

It was a double-edged sword for the team, but one that Rudy did not dislike that much in the long run, and would openly wish for again this weekend.

"We were happy that the crowd was so large, but it was shrill," Rudy said. "It was nervy with so many young shrill voices, but bless their hearts, they cheered the whole time.



"I think we have to improve on what we did in the first game, and there was so much unneeded pressure. They better be prepared, because we can not play like we did against Fairfield this weekend and win."

For the players themselves, they know that this weekend's tournament will be a test for how they face the competition in the remainder of the season.

"Both of the teams coming in are going to be very competitive, and we are going to need a lot of hard work and commiment throughout the squad," senior midfielder Tina Lightning said. "We need to be on form, and it is going to take a 110 percent from, all of us to get through the weekend with two wins."

"The key to UMass has always been our defense, but hey, I am a little biased," junior defender Erica Iverson said. "Our only problem is that we need to establish who our front-runners are going to be, and who is going to make that step up in the front line.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER page 10

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Junior defender Erica Iverson and the Minutewomen host the UMass/Reebok Classic this weekend at Garber Field.

Men's soccer face in-state rivals Boston University

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

After three somewhat uninspiring pre-season games, the Massachusetts men's soccer team kicks off their regular season against Boston University. Although the team did not look sharp in their tune-up contests, a lot is expected of them this year.

All three of the preseason games were tight throughout the entire duration, and could have gone either way. Against nationally-ranked Boston College, Massachusetts fell victim to a costly penalty call in the box late in the second half.

"There are no excuses, we just did not do what we had to do," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "We have to improve a lot of things if we are going to beat BU, but I am pretty confident we will."

Facing Boston University is not a new experience for the Minutemen. They played the Terriers last year, and defeated this tough In-state rival 2-1. Led by junior forward Nick Bone, BU promises to put up quite a fight. Bone tallied 27 points last year, with 13 goals. Joining Bone is sophomore midfielder Christian Steen, a flashy playmaker who can also be extremely dangerous. Containing these two and slowing down Boston's midfield will be two keys to the Minuteman gameplan.

On both sides of the ball, UMass has many talented players. Offensively two players appear to be vital to the Minutemen's success.

"Mike Butler always has a good game against BU. For us to win we need to have a good game out of him," Koch said.

Another key man in the Massachusetts attack is senior Dave Siljanovski, a pre-season All American. Koch praises Siljanovski's ability to work hard away from the ball and to get into scoring position.

"If he does this successfully, BU is going to have a hard time stopping us," Koch said.

Defensively, Joe Jacobson becomes a key player. He draws the responsibility of containing Bone. A tough assignment, but as Koch says, "He is probably one of the best markers in the country."

Jacobson, who just recovered from a broken ankle, might have a hard time playing on the turf at BU. However, his play is crucial to the team's success.

In the net for the Minutemen is sophomore Tim Pearson, who, after a solid freshman campaign, gets the nod over fellow sophomore Jeff Jablonski. Both goalies performed well in the pre-season, making the decision a tough one. Entering the season UMass has some depth at this important position.

"They are both starting goalies, but right now Tim Pearson is the one who is starting in goal," Koch said.

After making the Atlantic 10 Conference Finals last season, expectations are high for the team. A pre-season rank of 20th in the nation is more reason for optimism.

Things are looking positive for the men's soccer team, as they have fielded their most competitive squad in years. The Minutemen do not play a home game at Richard F. Garber Field until Sept. 18, when they face the University of New Hampshire.

Butler makes a comeback; Phillips is in trouble again

It wouldn't come as any surprise to me if someone said that Brett Butler believes in miracles. It's hard not to believe in them when you happen to be one.

Butler is scheduled to return to the field at Dodger Stadium tonight when Los Angeles opens a homestand against the Pittsburgh Pirates. Butler will start in center field and man the leadoff spot in the batting order.

Around the Horn with Casey Kane

If you've been living underground for the past five months or so, Butler's come back to the L.A. lineup may seem like a routine activation from the disabled list, but in truth his comeback is nothing short of incredible.

Butler last played May 1 against Colorado, stating after the game that he was to have his tonsils out. But during the tonsillectomy doctors found something, a small lump in his throat. It was cancer.

Since that game against the Rockies, Butler has had two surgeries and 32 extensive radiation treatments.

But he is back, having rejoined the Dodgers in uniform on Aug. 26 in Montreal. Although he didn't play then, he has provided rock-solid

Turn to HORN, page 10

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 4 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, September 9, 1996

The Sound and the Fury return

Melissa Etheridge returned to the Mullins Center for an exciting, three-hour set. Check out the review (See Arts & Living, page 5)

UMass cruises through Classic

Junior goalkeeper Danielle Dion posted two shutouts as UMass went undefeated in the UMass/Reebok Soccer Classic (See Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Yeltsin boasts faith in Russian heart doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin says he will be in good hands when he undergoes a heart operation performed by Russian surgeons, according to a published interview.

"In any medical field Russia has world-class specialists... I will be operated on here. The decision is final," Yeltsin wrote in response to questions submitted in writing by the Russian newsmagazine Itogi.

Excerpts of Yeltsin's comments were published in the Sept. 16 issue of Newsweek, which has a publishing agreement with Itogi. The interview was made available to other news organizations on Sunday. Yeltsin, 65, announced last week that he would be undergoing heart surgery later this month. Details of his condition are not known, although in the interview he said he had "ischemic heart disease."

His announcement confirmed months of rumors but still stunned Russians, accustomed to decades of Kremlin stone-walling and outright lying about their leaders' health.

NATION

Oprah, Spielberg top latest Forbes ranking

NEW YORK (AP) — Oprah Winfrey has talked... and talked... and talked her way to great wealth.

In fact, she's talked so well during the past two years that she once again ranks atop Forbes magazine's list of the 40 best paid entertainers. Her combined 1995 and '96 earnings: $171 million. That puts her $21 million ahead of No. 2, director Steven Spielberg, and returns her to the top spot she last occupied in 1993.

"The reigning queen of talk television, Oprah just keeps on going, despite a temporary dip in ratings two years ago," Forbes says in its Sept. 23 issue, released Sunday. The magazine said a fitness book she co-wrote added to her talk show earnings. Spielberg, ranked No. 1 in 1994 and 1995, fell to the No. 2 spot Winfrey occupied last year as his $150 million two-year estimated gross income failed to stack up. Next on the list are the Beatles at No. 3, singer Michael Jackson and the Rolling Stones in fifth place.

Rounding out the top 10: the Eagles, Arnold Schwarzenegger, magician David Copperfield, actor Jim Carrey and Michael Crichton, author of "Jurassic Park."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 70 LOW: 45	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

New Greek party policy begins effort to better houses' security

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

In response to the growing need for security at University of Massachusetts fraternity parties, the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Association have published new social policy regulations which have radically changed aspects of the Greek community.

In the aftermath of several incidents which threatened the security of fraternity partygoers last semester, the GAMMA (Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol) Committee was formed.

One of the incidents includes the alleged rape of a UMass student at Sigma Phi Epsilon last April, for which Sigma Phi Epsilon and eight other fraternities were held responsible. The fraternities paid $200,000 to the victim in the settlement of her civil lawsuit, filed in Hampshire Superior Court, for failure to provide adequate security, failure to regulate alcohol distribution, and failure to monitor entrance to the party.

The victim's attorney, Jeffrey A. Newman, said, "My client is fervent that UMass fraternities are not doing enough to protect women at parties."

According to Dan Backer, the public relations coordinator for the Interfraternity Council, GAMMA hopes the new social policy will create much safer conditions within the Greek Area.

"We as a Greek community recognize that this policy is essential in improving our environment," Backer said.

The social policy lists strict regulations for fraternity sponsored parties, particularly regarding alcohol consumption. According to the policy, fraternities are required to compose lists of invited guests and register them with the Greek Affairs Office at least two weeks prior to the event. Fraternities are no longer allowed to advertise their parties, and only one list party is allowed per week.

Host fraternities are not permitted to serve alcohol at parties, and kegs and punch bowls are prohibited. Guests may bring their own beverages or a third party vendor, such as a catering service, may supply alcohol. However, the fraternities are required to employ a TIPS certified bouncer to check I.D.s and distribute wrist bands or hand stamps to those of legal drinking age.

The social policy also requires that there be at least two sober chapter officers at each event to check names on the guest list. Two sober drivers must also be provided for each event.

The fraternities are obligated to provide a certain amount of non-alcoholic beverages and food for guests, determined by the social policy.

There have not been any social events yet this semester, but Backer said enforcement of the new rules will not be a problem. GAMMA will conduct event evaluations and has devised sanctions for various infractions of the policy, including fines and weeks worth of social probation.

"Some people of the Greek community don't like certain aspects of the policy, but we understand that this is something we have to impose quickly and effectively," Backer said.

According to Fabio Pari-di-Monriva, vice president of Zeta Psi, some members of the Greek community disagree with Backer.

"The University is trying to move too quickly, and it's not going to work," Pari-di-Monriva said. "The ideas are good, but when you radically change everything, it will end up leading to chaos.

"If no parties are allowed on the Row, it will spill over into the town. There will be a mass exodus to Hobart [Lane] and the bars uptown, requiring more manpower from the Amherst and UMass police departments."

Pari-di-Monriva also said that the fraternities do not receive outside funding to hire bouncers, and they cannot afford it on their own.

"Any brother could do it, but TIPS certification is expensive," he said. "Speak to anyone in any house — some people are not happy with the new policy. We're being punished for one person's actions, which were wrong, certainly not right, but I didn't do it, my brothers didn't do it, the Greek community didn't do it."

Pari-di-Monriva said, however, that Zeta Psi intends to fully comply with the new regulations, whether or not certain fraternity members agree with them.

MTV "Choose or Lose" to hit UMass

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

In January, Rock-the-Vote and MTV's "Choose-or-Lose" bus started their journey across America to register voters, and raise awareness on political issues facing young people.

The journey will lead the bus to the University of Massachusetts on Tuesday.

The bus will arrive outside the Student Union Building to help kick off the Student Government Association's (SGA) voter registration campaign.

It is expected to arrive at 10 a.m. and conduct voter registration until 3 p.m.

"It will be an excellent kick-off event for the voter registration drive for the election," said Steve Guy, coordinator for the Choose-or-Lose bus visit to UMass. "[The SGA Voter Registration Campaign] is a real aggressive attempt to make sure the whole student body participates [in the election]," he said.

According to organizers, the voter registration table will be run by student volunteers with a large portion coming from students employed by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

"The (registration campaign) is a good chance to meet people and it's a worthwhile cause," said first-year animal science major Darren Merves, who is a campus canvasser for the campaign.

In addition to Merves, SCERA has hired about 20 students as a result of their attendance at first night events for first- year students.

All of the students are work study, and will be paid $8 an hour for the duration of the campaign.

In addition to the table, the bus will feature two television monitors, two speakers and two computer kiosks that poll political views.

During the Democratic and Republican National conventions, MTV set up a scoreboard with the top five most important issues facing the people polled by the kiosks.

"The scoreboard tabulated the number of times [the issues] were mentioned at the conventions," Guy said.

According to Guy, a representative of the Massachusetts State Board of Elections will be in attendance.

Voting registration programs, similar to that of the SGA, are being conducted with great success across the country at universities and colleges.

During a visit to the University of Oregon, registration at the bus was impossible because the "phenomenal" registration program conducted at that university, Guy said.

According to Frank Mozell, voter registration coordinator for the SGA campaign, UMass has a chance to break the record for most registrations in a day if 1300 people register.

"I am very interested to see how turns out for them," Guy said in reference to the SGA voter registration campaign, which has set a goal of registering 10,000 students.

The most frequently asked question concerns absentee balloting. The SGA campaign has solved the problem effectively by mailing absentee ballots on behalf of the students, Guy said.

In partnership with MTV, the non-profit California-based organization, Rock-the-Vote will be at the bus distributing voting information.

Rock-the-Vote, in addition to attending bus events, produces public service announcements with various music artists to instruct young people to exercise their voting power.

UMOC gears up for new members

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students are fortunate that the natural beauty of the Pioneer Valley can provide a refreshing break from the daily academic grind, made all the more accessible by the affordable and frequent outdoor events offered by the UMass Outing Club (UMOC).

UMOC's general membership and info meeting is tonight at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Activities include cross-country skiing, biking, white water rafting, rock climbing, kayaking, canoeing or simply just being outside in the fresh air of the wilderness.

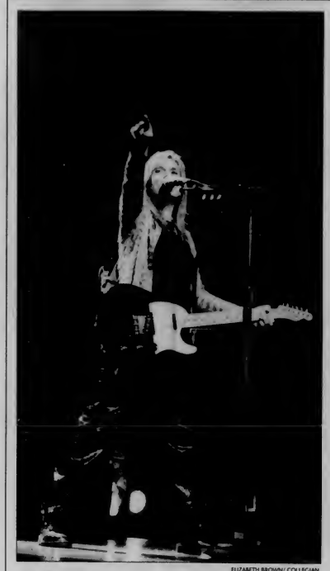
At the meeting, there will be a slide presentation, showing pictures of past trips to Mexico, Virginia and Hawaii, as well as local area trips to the Berkshires.

"We just want to introduce freshmen and students new to the University to the Outing Club," said Chris Gasbarro, president of UMOC.

"UMOC is a great way to get to experience the outdoors, try new and exciting things and meet many new people," said Vice President Craig Hovey.

A $5 membership fee discount will be offered to those who attend the meeting tonight. The standard fee, valid for one year, is $15.

Members are also able to rent equipment at lower prices.



"If a student participates in a club sponsored trip, they can rent all the equipment that they need for only a dollar. If we are going skiing and you need to rent poles, skis and boots,

Turn to OUTING, page 2

COURTESY UMASS OUTING CLUB

The UMass Outing Club (pictured here) on a recent caving journey.

ELIZABETH BROWN/ COLLEGIAN

"Tell me do you want me..."

Melissa Etheridge got the crowd going on Saturday night at the Mullins Center.

Drug war at stalemate

By Lawrence L. Knutson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Counterpunching Bob Dole's claim that he's soft on drugs, President Clinton says Congress will stymie the war on narcotics unless it quickly provides all the money "to get the job done."

In a letter to House Speaker Newt Gingrich, the president said House action to date falls more than $640 million short of paying for his anti-drug priorities, and he urged action before Congress recesses.

"In particular, the House once again is attempting to cut ... my request for the Safe and Drug Free School program, the only federal program fully dedicated to helping schools combat alcohol and drug use, as well as violent behavior," Clinton said in the letter dated Saturday.

The president recalled he vetoed legislation last year because it cut that program by 50 percent. "We should not slash funding for a program that gives parents the security that their children are receiving the same anti-drug message in school that they receive at home," he said.

Gingrich spokesman Tony Blankley strongly criticized the president for "making demands on a Saturday afternoon of the Republican Party" when many members of Congress, including Gingrich, were out of town.

"It is impertinence," Blankley said Sunday in an interview. He added that most of Clinton's anti-crime and drug programs that aren't fully funded are "designed to strengthen government rather than to fight the problems."

Overall, Clinton said that while the $15.3 billion he requested for the 1997 fiscal year represents the largest anti-drug budget ever, House action so far on 1997 appropriations bills would provide only $14.9 billion.

GOP presidential nominee Dole contends Clinton is not serious about fighting illegal drug use. Republicans have latched onto the issue ever since the release of statistics showing the use of marijuana, LSD and cocaine more than doubled since 1992 among young people aged 12 to 17.

Chechen tension rises

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — The war with Russia may be over, but Chechens who oppose independence fear their republic faces another conflict that could shatter the ambiguous peace that has descended on Chechnya.

"For us this is not a holiday, it's a funeral," said Mukhadin Shimayev, a local official holding forth on a dusty town square in Urus-Martan, a stronghold of Chechen opposition to the separatist rebels.

"They want us to kill each other. This is the peace established by Lebed," said Shimayev, referring to Russian security chief Alexander Lebed, who negotiated a peace agreement with Chechen rebels who want independence.

An uneasy silence has replaced the throbbing of helicopter gunships and thudding of artillery that resounded throughout Chechnya for more than 20 months. Lebed and the rebel military commander, Aslan Maskhadov, are making progress on a political settlement. The first stage of a Russian withdrawal of thousands of its troops from Chechnya began on Sunday.

But one unsettling truth has emerged: None of the disputes that led to war have been resolved.

The separatists, flush from their military triumph, apparently will not bend on their insistence on full independence. The Kremlin remains vague about a final military withdrawal or a deal on independence.

The Russian disengagement leaves Chechnya still teeming with weapons and divided into two main groups: the separatists and the pro-Moscow "oppozitsiya," or opposition who want to remain part of Russia. The two sides fought a brief war in 1994 and the opposition formed a pro-Moscow government when Russia sent troops into Chechnya later that year.

Many Chechens, who are predominantly Muslim, see a worrisome similarity to the situation a few years ago in Afghanistan, which plunged into bloody factional fighting after Moscow ended its disastrous incursion into that Muslim country.

"Just like in Afghanistan, the Russians have deliberately left without a political agreement in place. It's not the right way to make peace," said Akhmed, a Grozny civilian who returned to a destroyed home last week. He would not give his last name. "People fought each other in Afghanistan and they'll do it here," he predicted.

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Sept. 9

Special event — Harvard professors Cornel West and Skip Gates will participate in a conversation about their new book, "The Future of the Race" at 7:30 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall at Smith College. The event is free. A reception will follow in the Davis Ballroom.–

Tuesday, Sept. 10

Volunteer — MassPIRG, SCERA, Hillel House and other RSOs are looking for more than 70 volunteers for MTV's "Choose or Lose" Bus from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. to help register students to vote and break MTV's record of registering 1300 people in one day. To volunteer or get more information, contact Leigh at MassPIRG at 545-0199 or visit the office at 423A Student Union.

Religious — Chavurah Ha Ruach Shul, an alternative Jewish Sunday school, will hold an informational meeting from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the children's House on 51 Bates St. in Northampton. For more information, call Karen at 584–4352 or Robin at 549-6403.

Panel — The Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruitment is sponsoring a workshop for incoming minority graduate students on "How to Survive the First Year" from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 162–175. Panelists will be continuing American graduate students of color who will discuss their experiences in their departments, the University and the community.

Wednesday, Sept. 11

Community — The Student Alliance for Israel and Zionists for Action will hold "Ice Cream Israel" at 6:15 p.m. at Hillel House.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hirjas in India," an all-male religious sect that is considered an alternative, third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, is free and will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, room 301.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly fellowship meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, prayer, teaching and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 6 p.m at Hillel House, and liberal/egalitarian services will be held at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Seminar — The UMass Polymer Science and Engineering Department will have Dr. Joseph Davidovits deliver a lecture entitled, "Aluminosicilate Polymers for Ultra-High Temperature Structural Applications" at 3:35 p.m. in Conte Center Room A11.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church will hold its annual tag sale today from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. and tomorrow from noon – 4 p.m. Hot dogs, coffee, cold soda and fresh popcorn are available in addition to the wide array of sale items, including many collectibles, exceptional furniture, lamps and appliances; new and old merchandise; adult and children's clothing; luggage; dishes; and more. Rain dates are Sept. 21–22.

Notices

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club begins auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. Students are advised to bring water and a snack. For more information, call 546–2771 or 546–1318.

Auditions — Tryouts for Neil Simon's "Rumors" will be held at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 12 and Friday, Sept. 13, and on Saturday, Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. Callbacks will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15. Special arrangements can be made for religious conflicts. For more information, call the UMass Theatre Guild at 545– 0415 or visit the office at 423 Student Union.

Community — Womanshelter Companeras is a battered women's shelter located in Holyoke serving the greater Holyoke–Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter ahs an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on thew following topics: domestic violence; teen–dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the womanhelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday throught Friday at 538–9717.

Sale — The UMass Ski Club will hold a mountain bike sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday on the lawn of the Student Union. Bikes by Cannondale, Giant, Scott and more will be available. Prices start at $195. For more information, call 545–3437.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientations are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. The room will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253– 0874.

Discussion group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. Call 253–3795 for more information.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday in September there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East ST, in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle Monday, Sept. 9, through Friday, Sept. 13, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. Information about preventing theft and bike identification will be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. – midnight. Dance to a variety of music in a smoke and alcohol-free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. Call 584–8167 for more information.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Cappella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

outing

continued from page 1

you can rent it all for a dollar," Gasbarro said.

Members who are not participating in a club–sponsored event may still rent equipment.

"If you just want to rent a canoe for a day, it'll probably cost you 75 percent less than what it would to rent one from EMS (Eastern Mountain Sports) or some place like that," Gasbarro said.

Trips and activities are just as inexpensive, he added.

"Depending on where you go, if the trip is over night or not, you are usually just paying for gas money. Everyone knows that colleges students do not have a lot of money," Treasurer Katie Tracy said.

Next weekend, UMOC will hold the 4'h bi-annual newcomers weekend to their cabin in Bethlehem, NH.

"The purpose of this weekend is to get everyone to know each other really well and to get comfortable with the cabin. We usually do some group bonding programs; split up the duties. We also go on a 4,000 foot hike," Gasbarro said.

Gasbarro, who went on his newcomers trip three years ago said he "had a great time and I've been hooked ever since."

Every weekend, UMOC offers two or three trips. Next weekend, in addition to the newcomers trip to the cabin, there will be a caving trip to Knox Cave in New York and a kayaking trip. In addition, UMOC trips are offered for all levels of difficulty.

"If there's a trip going rock climbing and you want to go but have never tried it before, there will be someone there it help you," said Tracy.

Gasbarro said they welcome members to come and try new activities.

"If a member has experience in a activity that we don't sponsor, we encourage them to start it," he said.

The cabin, which is located a half mile into the woods from the parking lot, sleeps 25, and is 20 years old. There is no electricity or running water.

Members can rent the cabin out on weekends during the school year for $100, and non–members can rent the cabin for a weekend for $150.

UMOC has been in operation for 74 years, and is the largest and most active outing club on the east coast. They currently have 500 active members. Next year, for UMOC's 75th anniversary, the organization is planning fundraising events to finance the renovation of the New Hampshire cabin.

During the first weekend in October, a leadership seminar will be held at the cabin with the officers of UMOC.

"We usually take fifteen people who want to be leaders on trips. We get to know them, fix up the cabin and get to know their abilities, especially in first aid and out door survival," Gasbarro said.

Beginning in two weeks, kayak–rolling lessons will be held every Friday night in the Curry Hicks pool from 6pm–10pm.

"For safety precautions, we don't like people to go out kayaking unless they know how to get out of a kayak when it tips. We practice wet exits and Eskimo rolls," Gasbarro said.

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Halloween already?

The River Bend Farm Produce is just one of the many places you can these sweet pumpkins this time of the year.

UMass
Division of Continuing Education

Academics and More !!!

- Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
- More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!

Call for a free course catalog – (413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

PHOTOGRAPHERS NEEDED!

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN IS LOOKING FOR PHOTO TECHNICIANS TO WORK FOR THE PAPER. IF YOU ARE INTERESTED, PLEASE CONTACT LIZ BROWN OR THANG VO AT 545-1701, OR COME ON DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN AND FILL OUT AN APPLICATION!

CAMPUS GEAR
FOR ALL YOUR COLLEGIATE NEEDS
THE BEST SELECTION of UMass and Greek APPAREL
20% OFF ALL GREEK MERCHANDISE EVERY MONDAY
225 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 549-0844
Champion U.S.A.
VISIT CAMPUS GEAR TODAY!
ΔΧ • ΦΣΚ • ΠΚΑ • ΣΑΜ • ΣΦΕ • ΘΧ • ΑΧΠ • ΑΕΠ

The Road to building your resume...
Junior or Senior SOM preferred; all may apply
Applications available until September 13th
Any questions contact Alycia or Peter, 545-3500

The Collegian is Looking for a
Marketing Manager

GLBT events abound

By Jamie Sinsheimer
Collegian Staff

The Stonewall Center and New WORLD Theater have both released some of their forthcoming events for the fall semester.

The Stonewall Center, located in Crampton house on the University of Massachusetts campus, is a Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay and Transgender Educational Resource Center.

New WORLD Theater was founded in order to present the dramatic works of people of color as a vibrant and important dimension of contemporary theater.

These events range from a Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Studies Lecture Series to several dramatic works addressing the issues that face young GLBT people of color today.

In September, some of the events sponsored by The Stonewall Center include GLBT Lectures and a GLBT Cafe. The lectures will be conducted every Thursday at 12:30 p.m. in various rooms throughout the Campus Center.

The first lecture of the semester will be this coming Thursday, Sept. 12 featuring Serena Nanda, Professor and Chair of Anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. She will be speaking on "Hirjas in India," an all– male religious sect considered an alternative, third gender in India.

Other topics throughout the month will include the issue of professional homosexual men and women and the hardships that face them in the work place.

The GLBT Cafe will be held on Thursday, Sept. 19, at 7:00 p.m. in the Hampden Gallery. It will be a visual arts exhibit and poetry reading featuring paintings and other work on paper by local Latino artists and readings from PoeSida:An Anthology of AIDS poetry from the U.S., Latin America and Spain, edited by Carlos Rodriguez. This event is also part of New WORLD Theater's Gay Latino Theater Project—Positive/Positivo: Gay and Lesbian Latino/a Identities in the time of AIDS.

New WORLD Theater's Positive/Positivo is a festival that will be held from September 19–28. Over that time, the festival events will explore issues of identity and gender through theater, media, art and discussion. Two dramas, Milk Of Amnesia and H.I. Vato, will be presented on Friday September 20 and Friday September 27 at Hampden Theater, respectively.

Milk Of Amnesia, written and performed by Carmelita Tropicana, is a one woman travelogue that blends the persona of Carmelita with the more personal voice of her creator, who describes the hardships of growing up in the U.S. via Cuba. The story shifts from the U.S. to Cuba, from modern times to colonial times all the while presenting an array of characters male, female, and animal.

H.I. Vato, written and performed by Beto Araiza, is a "Baile con la muerte (dance with death.), and offers a poetic reflection of an everyday vato's life at the end of his first decade, living with H.I.V. From his initial "death sentence" diagnosis to defiant survivalist, H.I. Vato documents that road traveled by few and survived by fewer still.

Both Milk Of Amnesia and H.I. Vato are part of the festival which will also feature a commissioned piece exploring issues affecting sexual behavior in the Latino community.

Since 1988 the New WORLD theater's Latino Theater Project has given special focus to the exploration and support of Latino theater through productions, workshop residencies, commissioned work, and symposia.

Other events sponsored by The Stonewall Center and New WORLD Theater will continue throughout the entire fall semester. The GLBT Lectures will run every Thursday from now until December and will always include a wide variety of topics and issues that face GLBT people.

For more information about any of the events, contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824 or New WORLD Theater at 545–2511.

Two Kurdish towns captured after fighting

Husseins's Kurdish faction led offensive; Iraqi government denies involvement

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

IRBIL, Iraq — A Kurdish faction allied with President Saddam Hussein captured two towns from a rival Kurdish group in fierce fighting Sunday. The groups gave conflicting accounts of whether Saddam's forces took part in the assaults.

Iraq, meanwhile, claimed it fired anti-aircraft weapons at U.S. and allied aircraft patrolling no-fly zones over its territory Sunday. The Iraqi fire missed and the planes fled, the official Iraqi News Agency said. Iraq made the same claim on Friday and Saturday, also saying there were no hits.

American pilots have said they have detected no Iraqi response to their sorties.

In northern Iraq, the Kurdistan Democratic Party pressed ahead with its week-old offensive, marching east and taking the towns of Degala and Kuysanjaq from the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

Both groups agreed that the towns, 20 and 30 miles east of Irbil, changed hands amid heavy fighting.

But the KDP said in a statement from London that it launched the assaults on its own, while PUK spokesman Latif Rashid, speaking to The Associated Press from London, said the faction was overwhelmed by the combined forces of the Iraqi army and the KDP.

The Iraqi government said its forces were not involved. "We stress once again that our armed forces have already returned in full to their previous positions," an information Ministry source told the state-run Iraqi News Agency.

No details of the fighting were available, and there was no word on casualties.

Iraqi forces teamed up with the KDP on Aug. 31 to capture Irbil, the de facto capital of the Kurdish safe haven established in northern Iraq after the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

The United States responded with missile attacks on southern Iraq on Tuesday and Wednesday, hammering air defense sites in southern Iraq.

Since then, the Iraqi forces appear to have refrained from playing a major role in the battles between the rival Kurdish groups.

But Iraq placed its heavy weaponry only a few miles behind the front-line positions of its KDP allies. Almost 100 Iraqi tanks could be seen in the region on Friday, and Defense Secretary William Perry, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," said Sunday that some Iraqi troops "are still nearby and still dangerous."

A United Nations officer in Irbil, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a force made up mainly of KDP fighters, but aided by some Iraqi government troops, was moving to the east on Sunday. He said the intense fighting prevented U.N. officials from going to the scene.

In Washington, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili told NBC's "Meet the Press" that Saddam "is clearly exploiting the difference between those two Kurdish factions.

But he said "very, very few" Iraqi troops were still in the safe haven area. "There continue to be reports of a few hundred here, a few hundred there."

The KDP said it was pushing east toward the Dokan Dam hydroelectric plant. The group said the PUK, which controls the plant, cut power and water to Irbil after being driven out a week ago. It said Irbil, a city of about 1 million, was suffering from "severe water and sanitation problems."

The offensive was also taking the KDP in the direction of Sulaymaniyah in the east, the last major stronghold of the PUK.

According to the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, many families fled Kuysanjaq, a town of about 80,000, in response to Sunday's fighting.

The group appealed for "urgent and decisive" help from the United States and its allies.

But the Americans have made clear they do not want to take sides in Kurdish infighting. The missile attacks last week targeted southern Iraq, and Washington has taken no action in the north.

"We should not be involved in civil war in the north," Perry said. He said any retaliatory attacks would take place "where our interests are."

Shalikashvili said there are signs that Saddam is trying to repair the surface-to-air missile sites damaged in the U.S. raids.

"We have warned Saddam Hussein that any attempt to repair those sites or reinforce them will be taken very seriously," he said.

Washington also expanded the southern "no fly" zone this past week in conjunction with the missile strikes.

About half of Iraq, comprising wide swaths of both the north and the south, are off-limits to Saddam's aircraft. The zones were established after a U.S.-led military coalition drove Saddam's occupation forces out of Kuwait in the Gulf War.

Saddam said last week that Iraq would no longer honor the no-fly zone and would target U.S. and allied aircraft that fly dozens of missions daily over the exclusionary zones.

The Iraqi News Agency said the aircraft made 99 flights Sunday over the newly expanded southern no-fly zone, and 12 over the northern zone.

Along the border with Turkey, meanwhile, Kurdish rebels killed nine soldiers in ambushes of army patrols, the government said. Turkey has said it will send troops into northern Iraq to prevent Kurdish rebels from crossing its border.

Free the Press
— write for Collegian news.

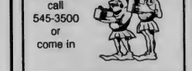
The Collegian news desk is still looking for new writers. Experience, nor a major in journalism are required. Those interested must attend a orientation meeting, Friday, Sept. 13 at 2 p.m. in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center (basement). If you are unable to make this meeting at the given time, please contact Michael Elliott in the office or at 545–1762.

Thank you to all those who have already contacted us about writing.

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Aaahhhhh...

John Guz from Holyoke enjoys the breathtaking view at Enfield lookout in the Quabbin reservoir.



ROAD CLOSED
DETOUR
Not to us! We're going straight ahead for treatments and cures for 40 neuromuscular diseases.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717
People help MDA. Because MDA helps people.

The Collegian is looking an Assistant Manager to help the News Room.
For more infomation call 545-3500 or come in

CONSTRUCTION AHEAD
With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 Initiation
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0060

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!
GOTTA BE A PEER EDUCATOR
Peer Health Educators...
...learn about cool stuff
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...enhance their own self-knowledge.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!
PEER HEALTH EDUCATION I & II
PUBLIC HEALTH 213/214 or EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 577-5181.
Class will meet on Tuesdays & Thursdays from 9:30am-10:45
*NOTE: The class time in the course schedule book is wrong.

MERGE
When we all work together, great things can happen.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

The Collegian is like Brussels Sprouts... You just have to read it.

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus
Technogym • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step
Bowercise • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST SO. AMHERST 256-0080

Emergency Medical Training
by
Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time / Evening
Classes start September 16, 1996
Call UMass Continuing education at 545-0474

FOOTWEAR DEN
~ Sizes ~
Men's: 6-18
Women's:5-12
Brand Name Athletic and Casual Footwear
Specializing in Running Shoes
CLOSEOUT PRICES
321 Main Street, Amherst • Down the street from Amherst Police Department

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quiet Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

No nonsense

Step right up... don't be shy. I'm about to share with you one of the biggest secrets to a successful college career and life for that matter. The tool I am about to present to you could be the most trouble-saving device that you've ever seen. It will help you avoid a multitude of pitfalls and it costs nothing. Hear that? NOTHING!

The tool is a word... a very simple word consisting of only two letters. Take an "N" and add to it an "O." What you have is a big fat NO. Yes, that's the secret. The cat is out of the bag — all you need is a little spine to use it. Think of the trouble you could save.

The next time one of those application-toting, slimeball credit card company representatives approaches you in the Campus Center, all you have to do is say "no." Say "no" to the T-shirt. Say "no" to the water bottle. Say "no" to the debt and the accumulating interest. Say "no" to the annual fee (and to the alluring prospect of no annual fee). Say it loud. Say it clear. Let it echo throughout the Campus Center Concourse. Make them hear you. It's your privilege.

"No" is a wonderful word, and it can be used in so many ways. Have you ever taken a look at your tuition bill? On it is a really big number. That's what you have to pay to go to school here. That amount is artificially inflated by a waivable contribution to MassPIRG. Unless you take the contribution off the bill yourself, you'll be throwing your money to a special interest group which you may or may not favor. It seems that by making the act of saying "no" a process, they think they can catch the lcsll-paying student body napping. The next time you receive your tuition bill, ask yourself what MassPIRG is. If you don't know or couldn't care less, don't give them your money. Rise to the challenge. Say "no" to the waivable fee. Subtract it in green ink.

Assertiveness is extremely hard to come by in our society. People so often go along with anything that anyone wants them to do that it's hard to know what anyone is really thinking in the first place. Whose loss is that? Certainly not credit card companies and/or MassPIRG. The real loser is you, unless you learn how to make your voice heard.

To be able to use this word effectively is in itself an art form. Everywhere you go, there are people who, for some insane reason, think they are entitled to bother you and make you feel bad for not giving in to their silly little causes. They are bound to harass you into submission if you're not strong enough to say "no."

If you need to, practice saying the word in front of a mirror. Look at yourself. Stare into your own eyes. Take a deep breath. Now say it. Louder! Say it again. Feel the power. Beat your chest. How liberating was that? You know how to do it, the trick is being able to say "no" to real people.

Try it out. Take a big box of chocolate chip cookies to class with you. Wait for a crowd to gather. When someone asks for one of your special cookies, scream the word "no" in that person's face. As you watch the crowd scatter, feel the power contained within those two letters. Make a game out of it. Try and say it clearly with a mouthful of cookies. While the action may seem selfish, rude and even a bit disgusting, you can feel comfortable in knowing that the display is merely a spine-developing exercise, meant not to hurt others, but to prepare yourself for more serious situations...

Like if a member of the Cannabis Reform Coalition was to ask you if you really believed that stuff they say about marijuana not hurting anyone and not leading to more serious drugs. As Nancy Reagan so eloquently stated, "Just say no!"

Or if some bum claims that because he smells bad you should contribute change to his "Buy More Booze Fund." If you run into this one make sure you respond with a "get a job" in addition to your "no."

Or if you're walking through the mall, and some lady offers you free cheese if you follow her down a long corridor so she can ask you a series of ridiculous questions that anyone in his or her right mind would have absolutely no opportunity at getting right. Example: "On how many days of odd weeks in the past month have you consumed at least two servings of any kind of cheese (real or fake) that has a fluorescent orange additive?"

The point is that by saying "no" you can save yourself from a number of situations which you may find weird, uncomfortable or just plain annoying. As a member of the Doormat Club, I can assure you that being walked over is no way to live. Wait for a crowd to gather. When someone asks for one of your special cookies, scream the word "no" in that person's face. As you watch the crowd scatter, feel the power contained within those two letters. Make a game out of it. Try and say it clearly with a mouthful of cookies. While the action may seem selfish, rude and even a bit disgusting, you can feel comfortable in knowing that the display is merely a spine-developing exercise, meant not to hurt others, but to prepare yourself for more serious situations...

Like if a member of the Cannabis Reform Coalition was to ask you if you really believed that stuff they say about marijuana not hurting anyone and not leading to more serious drugs. As Nancy Reagan so eloquently stated, "Just say no!"

Or if some bum claims that because he smells bad you should contribute change to his "Buy More Booze Fund." If you run into this one make sure you respond with a "get a job" in addition to your "no."

Or if you're walking through the mall, and some lady offers you free cheese if you follow her down a long corridor so she can ask you a series of ridiculous questions that anyone in his or her right mind would have absolutely no opportunity at getting right. Example: "On how many days of odd weeks in the past month have you consumed at least two servings of any kind of cheese (real or fake) that has a fluorescent orange additive?"

The point is that by saying "no" you can save yourself from a number of situations which you may find weird, uncomfortable or just plain annoying. As a member of the Doormat Club, I can assure you that being walked over is no way to live. Wait for a crowd to gather. When someone asks for one of your special cookies, scream the word

Follow your bliss

Ed Hurley

As I look back over my career here at UMass, I have some advice to give first-year students. I came here three years ago as a shy freshman not knowing a soul on this entire campus, but I have made friends and grown as a person since then. I won't kid you, it wasn't a fun first couple of weeks, but I would never change it. The excitement of finding your place in this vast crowd is something beyond comparison. It will happen. Give it time.

I should start with why we are here at UMass — partying. Just kidding. We're here to get an education. I will address the former later, but let's get the work out of the way first. The main reason we are here is to get a degree. Do not fret about what your major will be. It will find you. Joseph Campbell, a favorite scholar of mine, put it best when he said, "Follow your bliss." Take classes that interest you or are recommended to you, or just fit cleanly into your schedule. By doing this, I can virtually guarantee that you will find the right major.

The best advice I can give incoming students is to not skip classes. Stay up half the night partying (I know I did), but get to class in the morning even if you are there more in body than in mind. You might think to yourself, "Oh, I can get the notes from such and such." NO! Notes are not the same. If you are in a class, then you must keep your finger on the pulse of the class. I learned this the hard way when I showed up to a discussion group I had not attended the whole semester, and found out I had missed a paper and an exam. You can get by not doing a lot of work, but by all means go to those lectures, and especially discussions, since they are prime opportunities to meet (suck up to) your professors and to discuss (pry the answers for) the upcoming exam.

Now for the real reason why some of us are here... partying. UMass is as great place to party if that is your thing but it is also a great place to do other things besides partying. I'm afraid that UMass has gotten a bad rep for being nothing but a party school, thus underscoring all its other elements. Take some words of wisdom from an old hand at partying at UMass: Balance is the key. Play and party hard, but make sure you work and study just as hard. There are natural lulls in the semester that allow for more hearty partying, such as around Thanksgiving, but there are times one should work more and play less, such as the end of the semester when it comes time to catch up on the work that you let slide during the semester.

It's pretty cool having your parents commend you on your good grades when you consider how much partying and fun you had as well. It's a little known secret but the W. E. B. Du Bois library has some mystical way of relieving hangovers. Maybe it's the attitude or some curative fumes from the thousands of books it contains. But it does work.

The thing to remember is to have a good time here at UMass. This is a great place to grow academically, socially and emotionally. I hope incoming students will take some lessons from what I've written, and I wish you all well for this grand journey on which you are embarking.

Ed Hurley is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Fresh man

Mike Rybicki

Being a freshman here at the ultra-splendid University of Massachusetts, I can imagine how overwhelming it must be for the lesser humans who are also beginning their college careers at this most miraculous of academic institutions. I have spent the last week or so experiencing the magic of this educational paradise on earth, and have generously decided to write up ten little tips for my fellow first-year students.

Hopefully, my hints and suggestions will make your life here more enjoyable, since I love each and every one of you. Non-Freshmen (or "Stalemen") may find them helpful as well, but it ain't gonna break my heart if you don't read it. You people can go read the funnies for all I care.

1. You may have noticed that some of your professors recommend attending a bizarre ritual they call "lecture." Such professors seem to be under the impression that they work at Harvard. Explain to these blokes that you did not come here to rot in some classroom. You came here to throw cows off the roof of your dorm.

2. Be economical. It is not always necessary to buy your own beer, as many people will considerately leave unfinished bottles of alcohol around for the benefit of their fellow lushes. One could probably get pretty well tanked off leftovers found in just the elevators alone. The cost of college is rising all the time and since many of you will be here five or six years, it is essential to make your booze dollar count. Word of caution: be sure to remove any and all cigarette butts before drinking.

BrewSpeak
Familiarize yourself with the following types of dorms.
• Wet dorm: Dorm in which drinking is allowed
• Moist dorm: Dorm in which drinking is not allowed yet practiced anyway (most common variety)
• Slightly Damp dorm: Moist dorm with just one drinker in it
• Dry dorm: Non-existent

3. With thousands of hormone-charged thugs roaming the campus, it is important to be on guard against crime. The best way to do this can be summed up in two words: packing heat. Travel only in cover of night and bring plenty of ammunition. Avoid well-lit areas and jumpy campus cops.

4. The food here is fine when compared to pig droppings. If you're reluctant to try anorexia or think it's not for you, you may want to consider transferring.

5. Our school mascot's head is simply oversized. His head is really big. I mean, it's much, much larger than it ought to be. It cannot be emphasized enough that this individual has one seriously enormous gourd. This bothers some people.

6. The Textbook Annex is, surprisingly, the place where you buy your textbooks. I believe it was also a level of Dante's Inferno. One taste of the Textbook Annex and you'll agree that the Nazis had the right idea about book burning. The only way you're ever gonna get to the front of the line is if you pretend you're in labor, and don't even bother trying it if you're a guy. They just threw me out.

7. Many students try to delay taking their final exams by lying. Some have even pretended that a relative died and they have to attend the funeral on exam day. To fib in this manner is morally repugnant and ethically reprehensible. If you must use this scheme, take the time to actually kill the relative so that the funeral is legit. The professor will in some cases morbidly ask to see an obituary, so do him one better and bring in the remains.

8. It's important for freshmen to be involved. On our first day here, for example, they held a new students convocation. This glitzy gala featured a performance by Walter M. Chestnut, who played us some tunes on a long trumpet-type thing like in those Ricola commercials. It was a supreme irony: the audience was riveted by this amazing wheelchair-bound musician playing in a wheelchair, yet no one hung around to watch the marching band.

9. Beware the "MicroFridge". The MicroFridge is an electronic monstrosity that is half microwave, half refrigerator. This is a flavor mother nature never intended. It's like something from the kitchen of Dr. Moreau. You're gonna wind up cooking your ice cream and freezing your tea and stuff like that. Also, the sheer amounts of radiation this thing gives off result in dizziness, bright orange feces and loss of teeth and hair.

10. The best thing about UMass is that you don't need to bring your own stereo. Your neighbors will be more than happy to blare incredibly loud music from their dorms at all hours of the day and night. It's gotten to the point where I just shout requests out my window. So if you hear someone yell "Play 'Piano Man'!" at 2 a.m. it's probably me.

I'd love to keep writing, but I heard there's an opening at center on our basketball team, so I'm gonna go try out. If anyone has the misfortune to read this whole article, let me know and I will immediately lose all faith in humanity. Sweet dreams, kids!

Mike Rybicki is a UMass student.

The strength of words

Bryan Schwartzman

"Never believe your story will make a difference."

"Then why do reporting at all?"

"Listen, it is my job to simply observe and record all that I can."

I had spent several weeks as an intern for a weekly newspaper, but this was my first opportunity to ask a professional journalist any profound questions about the job. We were in the car driving to an assignment. In my inexperience, I had serious difficulties with what we were going to have to do.

"But how can we just knock on this woman's door?" I asked. "If it was me, I would slam the door in a reporter's face!"

"Every reporter has his or her own philosophy, but I like to identify with the ancient scribes who recorded words and deeds."

We were trying to do a story on a flight attendant who was killed in the TWA Flight 800 crash. (The only reason I was involved was because I had a car.) We were on our way to the victim's mother's house in Queens, where we would simply knock on the door and start asking questions. Were we tapping this poor woman's grief for the sake of selling papers? I felt what we were about to do was rude and intrusive, but even so, I was in the car and on my way.

When we got there, the mother's house looked like every other house in the residential neighborhood. There was no sign of the tragedy that had occurred less than 40 miles away and less than two weeks before.

My companion knocked on the door, while I stood behind with a camera, just in case she decided to let us take a picture. The victim's aunt came to the door, explaining that her sister was still bed-ridden. She told us a few bits and pieces about how the victim grew up and was about to close the door when the victim's mother appeared.

She was an older woman, and her grief was apparent. It was so apparent that her facial expressions conveyed a pain more clearly than I had ever seen. Her face showed signs that a sudden tragic event had altered her life.

I stood behind the reporter unsure of my role. Was I supposed to show support for the reporter, for the victim? I struggled to make my facial expression show some compassion, some meaning, some reason for my being there, and for this whole tragedy having happened. I was unable to do any of these things.

The mother tried to speak about her daughter, but she broke down into tears. She reached out to the reporter, needing someone to hold, and the reporter embraced her and consoled her as best he could. I was angry at my editors for putting me in the position, but were they wrong?

The most cynical of observers might say that in such a situation, a local newspaper is just using a person's grief as a way to sensationalize a local angle to a story.

That situation forced me to evaluate the roles of a local newspaper. Most journalists start at that level, and local newspapers play an integral role in their respective communities. Without local newspapers, there would be a tremendous void. If a paper is to record the day's events then it also must record its grief. One of the reasons journalists try to get to the scene of accident is because people are often willing to talk, expressing feelings that often help them deal with a sudden tragedy.

Several weeks later, a woman about whom a reporter at the paper wrote a story brought doughnuts to the staff in the news office, in gratitude for an article that had been written about a business she was starting. Having an article written about a local business can make a difference in the business owner's life. So I ate the doughnuts, and they reminded me that, at least in some small way, each article can make a difference.

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian columnist.

Ed/Op needs columnists!!
Come down to 113 Campus Center and speak to Mark McGrath

Arts & Living

Melissa 'comes on over' to Mullins Center

Etheridge wows a nearly sold out Valley crowd on Saturday with fierce performance

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

MELISSA ETHERIDGE
Mullins Center
Sept. 7

Melissa Etheridge certainly had her number of 'Brave and Crazy' fans on Saturday night. Though Fran dropped her fair share of rain on the hundreds of fans waiting in line to get into the Mullins Center, it was Etheridge who was the hurricane inside.

Two years ago, Etheridge played a terrific on-campus show but on Saturday, she rocked the house, surpassing her previous Mullins visit. From her melancholy ballad, "Nowhere to Go," to her chic anthem, "All American Girl," Etheridge enticed the audience with her powerful voice and superb guitar playing.

Though new songs like her most recent single, "I Want to Come Over," garnered a healthy applause, her old favorites pleased the audience the most. Songs such as "If I Wanted To" and "Resist" clearly excited her fans.

One sure sign of a great performer is their ability to interact with the audience. During her three hour set, Etheridge told stories and gave advice, even calling audience members up to the stage. She often introduced songs by sharing a brief tale of the song's genesis.

Many of Etheridge's songs deal with young love and the exploration of sexuality. And as she explained to the audience, she bases her music on life experiences. She gave a nearly ten minute monologue on living in Leavenworth, Kan. and a certain place called, "Shriner's Park." It was here, Etheridge told with a smirk, that she discovered the facts of life with long lost pals, and then questioned if they even remembered her.

For many of her audience members, Etheridge is surely an unforgettable woman. Her presence is enormous on stage — at times it seemed as though she was shouting more than singing.

Midway through her set, the arena went dark and a curtain appeared on stage. Then, almost magically, Etheridge reappeared — at the other end of the Mullins Center.

Near the back of the floor seating, a small stage had been constructed, with barely enough room for Etheridge and her band. Yet, she was able to reach the audience even more during the songs she performed here — it was almost as though she was becoming part of the audience, rather than performing for them.

After that, there was no stopping the fans who wanted a piece of Etheridge. They swarmed the stage, hands outstretched, almost begging for a handshake. Though at times she was almost pulled into the audience, Etheridge took the time to greet people.

There was an overwhelming thunder of applause as people cheered, clapped and stomped their feet in a standing ovation for Etheridge at the end of her second set.

ELIZABETH BROWN/ COLLEGIAN

Melissa Etheridge rocks up Mullins Center with powerful return to campus.

She returned to the stage with two, ten minute encores, extending her songs by jamming with her more than proficient bandmates. She performed her hit, "Like The Way I Do," an epic tune about unrequited love to all her adoring, female fans who by now were dancing and singing in the aisles.

Her unbelievable repertoire with the audience seemed to make her fans the subjects of her songs. She ended her show bellowing out her words of the heart, asking the hundreds of screaming women, "Does she want you, like the way I want you, does she captivate you...", leaving them breathless and energized.

No need to worry Melissa — the audience wanted you. Really, really wanted you.

Island can't stand weight; Kilmer and Brando sink

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Correspondent

THE ISLAND OF DR. MOREAU
Directed by John Frankenheimer with Marlon Brando, Val Kilmer, David Thewlis and Fairuza Balk
Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

A friend of mine annually tries to convince me that Val Kilmer has never made a bad movie. Going so far as to justify his performance in The Real McCoy, my friend (who shall remain nameless to protect the guilty...) is either obviously an idiot or never bothered to check out The Island of Dr. Moreau.

I've never had any ill will toward Val Kilmer. I also don't believe that the sun rises and sets with him. My friend's tirades, aside from bordering upon the homoerotic, confuse Val's skills as an actor with his ability to choose parts that are "cool." Val has become the poster boy for smart alecs for over a decade since his earlier Real Genius days.

Embarrassingly enough, Marlon Brando (a one time poster boy for cool in his own right...) had been seen on "Larry King Live" touting the power that Moreau would carry once it was released, claiming that "it will make more money than any other film in history." Now, a few weeks after its release, Marlon Brando is nowhere to be found to eat crow, or anything else for that matter.

That may be a cheap shot, but so is everything about The Island of Dr. Moreau. Promoting the film as a vehicle for either Brando or Kilmer is not only misleading, but possibly damaging for both of these actors' cult followings. Screen time for both actors is ridiculously small, as if we can't hold them accountable for the debacle that follows.

The "plot" of the film comes from H. G. Wells' story of a mad doctor who uses "science" to create creatures that are half-man/half-animal. I'm sure we can all imagine the possibilities for terror. Marlon Brando plays the doctor with the wish to cure mankind of its imperfections by creating this race of mutant peaceful vegetarians. Val Kilmer plays his smirking companion who helps him deliver terrifying mutant babies and serve lentil soup.

The main character of the film, played by David Thewlis (so chilling as the acerbic drifter in Mike Leigh's Naked), is a shipwrecked outsider who finds himself on Moreau's island. Thewlis tries to seem shocked and disgusted every time he sees another abomination of nature occur, but nothing can really hide the fact that he seems plain embarrassed to be seen next to two preening peacocks dis-

Turn to MOREAU, page 6

HR Hoffman Recruiters
• Consulting • Biotechnology
• Accounting • Engineering
• Software Development • Investment Banking
• Internet Technology • Sales and Marketing

Attention Masters Candidates & Undergraduate SENIORS

Hoffman Recruiters is a career matching service which will give you exposure to multiple potential employers at no cost or obligation and with only one first-round interview.

★ Widen your job search to include companies which don't recruit at your school
★ Gain exposure to multiple companies with only one first-round interview
★ The half-hour interview will take place on your college campus
★ Your career preferences will be matched with all available positions
★ You decide which companies to pursue further
★ This is a FREE service for students
★ All sign-ups are done over the Internet for your convenience

http://www.HoffmanResources.com/recruit.html
Questions? Call us toll free at 1-888-5-RECRUIT

Training & Certification

The Boltwood Project
Recruitment Nights
Attend Only One
Monday, September 9 or
Tuesday, September 10 or
Wednesday, September 11
6:30-8:30 pm in the Campus Center Auditorium
Recruiting University and Five College Students interested in earning up to two credits while providing community service to the Amherst area
For More Information call 545-6753

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Nordic Track • Kaiser • Nautilus
Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step
Boxercise • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST. 80 AMHERST 256-0080

Oasis covers Beatles and more at Centrum

COURTESY STEVE DOUBLE

Oasis takes on the Beatles and more at the Worcester Centrum.

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

OASIS
Worcester Centrum
Sept. 6

The thunderous roar of helicopter blades filled the Centrum as Oasis mulled onto the stage. They electrified the crowd who moshed and danced along with their first song, "Roll With It."

Oasis performed three sets filled with a multitude of new favorites and a few older songs. The first set encompassed such favorites as, "Morning Glory," and "Don't Look Back in Anger," two hits off their current album, (What's the Story) Morning Glory?

Thrown in amongst the newer more popular hits were older songs from their debut, Definitely Maybe, like "Cigarettes and Alcohol," a declaration of their vice ridden lifestyle.

Peppered in throughout the entire show were a few new unreleased songs, a couple of b–sides, and the expected Beatles cover.

Following a trend popularized by the Stone Temple Pilots, Oasis sandwiched an acoustic performance between two heavier ones. The band left the stage, and Noel Gallagher sat in a chair strumming an acoustic guitar, singing without his brother Liam.

Noel opened the acoustic set with a b–side entitled, "Free to be Whatever I Want." The crowd went wild when he concluded the song with a few verses from the Beatles' "Octopus' Garden."

The enthusiasm spilled over to the next song, "Cast No Shadow." Audience members began to sing along with Noel, who seemed to enjoy the accompaniment. The acoustic set exemplified the band's multifaceted abilities.

Oasis began their third set with a chord that sounded as though it were lifted from R.E.M.'s Monster. Liam returned to the mic, and the rest of the band followed him on the stage for a final three song set.

The closing performance included familiar favorites like, "Wonderwall" and "Champagne Supernova." The audience had waited all night for these hits, but their excitement peaked when the band played a heavily distorted rendition of the Beatles', "I Am the Walrus."

After Liam finished singing, he bolted from the stage leaving Noel and the band who continued to play the loud distorted feedback.

Oasis left the audience pining for more, but there was nothing left to give, since they had exhausted their repertoire of songs.

Two bands, England's Dust and an old American modern rock favorite, the Screaming Trees, opened for Oasis. Dust's half hour set was lackluster, which was evident in the crowd's lack of response.

The crowd moshed and crowd surfed to the Screaming Trees' hour long set. They performed such hits as "Nearly Lost You," and their latest single, "All I Know."

Versus scorches crowd at swinging Pearl Street concert

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

VERSUS
Pearl Street
Sept. 8

In support of their brilliant new album, Secret Swingers, Versus performed at Pearl Street on Saturday at an Internal Combustion Productions show, blowing away the crowd with an onslaught of new songs and crowd favorites.

Versus hit high gear quickly on, "Yeah You," the album's first single and killer track. Led by bassist Fontaine Toups' seductive vocals and ace melody, the quartet gelled tightly and never let up.

Throughout the hour–long set, Versus kept the intensity high and allowed for no let–downs — even the two new songs meshed fluidly.

While the new tracks were all standouts, the crowded club was electrified during old favorites such as "Astronaut," "Forest Fire" and "Tin–Foil Star." The latter tune was reluctantly performed after an audience member relentlessly requested this song. His wish was granted.

Besides "Yeah You," Versus rocked through half of Secret Swingers, including "Glitter of Love," "Double Suicide (Mercy Killing)" and "Jealous."

Surprisingly, the band ignored any concert favorites off their debut album, The Stars Are Insane, and debut EP, Let's Electrify. However, they encored with "Frog," off a 1994 single on K Records.

If there was any question of Versus' talent or live show, Saturday's performance was a solid one hour answer that left no doubts. Hopefully the band will be back soon.

The Godrays opened and made a lackluster effort to recreate the charm and joy of small factory. Low performed a slow, slow set.

Don't you hate it when the Army tries to recruit you into fighting in Bosnia? Don't you hate it when telemarketers call you when you are washing your dog? Don't you hate when the Collegian runs little ads everyday begging you to write for us? Well, if so, run on down to the Collegian and start writing for Arts & Living today. Ask for Mike. We want your ideas and input. Write about anything from gardening to death metal and Shakespeare to sky diving. Even if you don't want to write, give us some story ideas for future articles. We are here to please you. Plus, you can't hang up on us like those damn telemarketers. The Collegian is conveniently located at room 113 in the Campus Center Basement.

■ Moreau

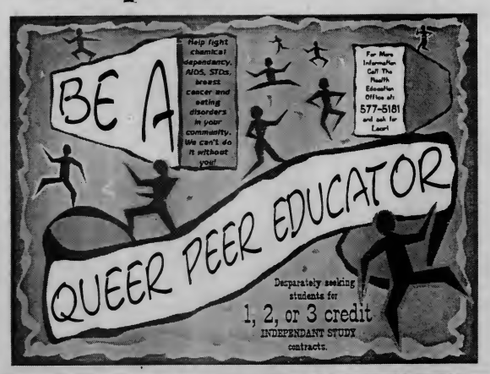
continued from page 5

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS



Val Kilmer sinks even deeper in new film.

guised as actors. The same can be said for Fairuza Balk, playing Moreau's "daughter," a half–cat/half–girl, but you'd think she'd have learned her lesson about roles in fantasy epics from Return to Oz.

In typical style, Kilmer does end up stealing the show by the end. The only redeeming scene of the film comes with Kilmer, drugged and on a Messianic complex trip, playing somewhere between his performance as Jim Morrison from The Doors and Brando's as Kurtz in Apocalypse Now. The horror, the horror...F

Collegian Graphics

With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases. Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

PSYCHIC READINGS
Palm ★ Astrology ★ Tarot Cards
Crystal ★ Psychometry ★ Spiritual Readings
Readings by Vandela
Are you worried about: Love ★ Marriage ★ Health ★ Business ★ Money
Do you need help with family problems?
ADVICE FOR ALL PROBLEMS
29 DAMON ROAD NORTHAMPTON, MA 190 MAIN STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA
(413) 585-1601

Collegian
TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0060

Come write for the Massachusetts Daily Collegian!!

Come join us at the Collegian. Staff Librarian position now open.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid Officials Needed For Flag Football, Softball, Soccer, & Ice Hockey
Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 18, 19, 20
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 19, 23, 24
Ice Hockey - Sept. 25
Call for times & locations
Still Time To Enter Flag Football, Soccer, & Softball
More Info In 215 Boyden, 5-2693/5-0022 on the web: http://www.umass.edu.80/umim/

20% off tanning packages
Regency Hairstyles
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9526

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m.
	Increasing Self-Esteem, Building Self-confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self-esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self-confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m.	Letting Go and Moving On— This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group. Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.	Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

Sports—savvy people needed

The Office of Media Relations is looking for students interested in all aspects of sports information. There will be an informational meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in 249 Boyden.

No experience is necessary, and everyone is welcome.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Julie Magid, a senior midfielder, celebrates after scoring in yesterday's 2–0 win over Southern Methodist in the UMass/Reebok Soccer Classic.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

pushed them all over the place."

With SMU trying to adjust to the changing UMass formations, the Minutewomen sustained the pressure, including a solid scoring chance for the freshman Kurowski, in the match's 25th minute.

Magid attacked out of the midfield, working a give–and–go with fellow midfielder Sandy Shimogaki, to double the Minutewoman lead at 31:58.

Magid made a run through the center of the field, just off to the right, and fed Shimogaki, who was outside of the goal box on the right hand side. Shimogaki returned the pass and from 18 yards out, Magid buried it into the net to goalkeeper Erin Poole's left, for her first goal of the season.

The Minutewomen kept the Mustangs on their heels for most of the remainder of the half, getting several quality scoring opportunities after an Erin Lynch free kick with 40 seconds remaining in the first half.

The Minutewomen held a 10-1 shot advantage at half time. The UMass defense smothered any offensive chances for SMU in the second half. Even with UMass thinking more about defense, the Mustangs could only muster two shots in the 45 minute period, both by Marci Miller.

One of the closest things SMU had to a scoring chance in the stanza was a counter attack break down the left wing by Brown, but Thompson cut her off from her stopper position, slid, and deftly knocked the ball out of bounds before the Mustangs could strike.

UMass goalkeeper Danielle Dion made just one save in the match, and had precious few touches.

"[SMU] had a very good tactical plan," Rudy said. "They started with three people up front and had a plan to keep us from coming out of the back. Even though that happened, we still did it.

"We adjusted and defeated their plan and still got effective flank penetration from [Robin] Smith and from [Erica] Iverson, but the key there was Lynch because she messed them up. She read it, made the adjustment and split them and came out of the back and did well."

In a spirited affair on Friday, the Bulldogs showed no patented Southern hospitality towards their hosts, Myers in particular. Georgia took the body hard all day, looking more like the Broad Street Bullies than a soccer team, even a Brazilian one.

Myers frequently bore the brunt of the Bulldogs' bites, being fouled hard four times in the match's opening 20 minutes. The native of Atlanta suburb Marietta was tightly marked by Georgia coach Bill Barker's squad, which was well aware of Myers' prowess around the goal, especially in the air.

Georgia's physically aggressive tactics nearly handed UMass a goal in the 30th minute. Georgia's Jennifer Ahern clipped Lynch during a rush, as Lynch neared the left hand corner of the penalty box. Off of the ensuing free kick, Lynch served the ball for the far post, where Myers had broken free of the Bulldog defense, but her head missed the ball — and an open net — by a matter of inches.

Myers head also factored in UMass' first serious scoring opportunity, coming in the match's 12th minute. Tina Lightning fired a Magid pass off of the crossbar, with the rebound ricocheting straight to Myers. The senior, who is tied for third on the UMass career goal list, struck the ball well off of her head, but was stymied by a solid save by goalkeeper Mindy Hyde.

The Georgian got the last laugh against her state university though, tallying the match's lone goal at the 49:12 mark.

Emma Kurowski sent a cross from the left corner that was pushed across to Amy Powell. Powell's shot struck the cross bar, and Myers emerged from a mad scramble for the rebound to knock the ball into the goal.

The Minutewomen, playing their standard ball-control style, kept Georgia off the scoreboard for the remainder of the match, as the Bulldogs posted a total of nine shots on the day, forcing Dion, another native Georgian, to make just two saves, one in each half.

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

got behind the defense, kept it alive under defensive pressure, and was surprised by how far the goalie came out.

"I saw the ball go over the defense, it was pretty far out and the goalie popped out for it, so I just went for it," Kurowski said. "I saw her [Myers] running through a couple of other times, and I had tried to hit her. A few times she was offsides, and I probably should have taken the shot myself.

"I looked up and saw the open net, so...I shot it."

Part Two: senior midfielder Amy Powell hits crossbar on rebound from Kurowski shot. Georgia keeper Mindy Hyde was able to track back on the shot by Kurowski, but the ball bounced out of her hands into an open goal mouth. Lady Bulldogs and Minutewomen converged and collided in the box for the loose ball, with senior Amy Powell's shot clanging the top post.

"I think it was the product of a lot of hustle," Powell said. "Emma was in there, then I slid in there, and Rebecca slid in there, and she finally got it in. It was just one after another, and we gave it our all.

"It was just one of those things, you put the ball in the net, and it does not matter how it gets there sometimes. It was a little too close for comfort, and it was not too pretty, but..."

Part Three: the game–winning header by Myers. The world began to come to a halt, as time seemed to slow down to a crawl, the ball laying at the doorstep of victory. While in the real world, the importance of this goal was that UMass really did need it in a tough, physical game that left scoring at a premium. The midfielder–turned–forward took advantage, and the game was won at the 49:12 mark of the game. "All I remember is that Emma kicked the ball to me, and she kept going, so I flipped it on to her," Myers said. "[Emma] hit the keeper with it, then Powell was there, and she hit the crossbar. I was just like, 'Go for it!'"

The pleasure was all hers, and doubly so, as it was against her state university, Georgia, and her old teammate and adversary, Mindy Hyde. But for the main tandem at the forward position this weekend, it was enough for them to be successful — and comfortable — in their roles.

The key moment that brought all this about was Rudy's substitution of Kurowski for senior Tina Lightning midway through the first half. It was more of his wanting the freshman prospect in, rather than taking his senior out, and in his inimitable style, takes all the credit.

"It was just a sign of brilliant coaching, knowing when to bring her on, with just fifteen minutes to warm up," Rudy said, laughing. "But, no, that is Emma, and what we have expected is that she would make an impact. That goal was pretty incredible stuff, I cannot wait to see the video.

"It helps a lot when [Emma] can get a ball and hold on to it up front, then we can get more penetration in the final third. Usually, the final third of the field is the last part to come together. But usually, we are there by this point. The thing is that we did not have any frontrunners through preseason, so we are trying to do it now."

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

junior forward Mike Butler and senior forward Dave Siljanovski. Citing Butler's vision of the field and Siljanovski's ability to work hard away from the ball and get into scoring position, he hoped the one–two punch would be what they needed. It was.

In the 29th minute, Butler sent a soft lob over the BU defense where a breaking Siljanovski met the pass and hammered it home. Throughout the course of the match, the Minutemen would only let loose four more shots on Terrier goalkeeper Bryan Murphy, who earned two saves on the day.

On the other side of the ball, defenseman Joe Jacobson fared well in one of the game's toughest assignments — to contain Nick Bone. Jacobson, who is described by Koch as being, "one of the best markers in the country," kept the heart of the Terrier attack at bay.

Perhaps the most relieving aspect of the game came from inside the 18–yard box, where freshman Tim Pearson did a more–than–adequate job protecting the net. With 11 saves against the Terrier attack, Pearson calmed one of UMass' most irksome preseason fears: With last year's starting netminder lost to graduation, who would fill in between the posts?

In the games leading up to Saturday's regular season, Pearson split time with sophomore Jeff Jablonski. According to Koch, both keepers are of starting caliber, yet it is evident that Pearson is up for the challenge of the collegiate game.

UMass is on the road again on Tuesday, when they travel to Worcester to face the Crusaders of Holy Cross. The Minutemen do not make their home debut on Richard F. Garber Field until their Sept. 18 contest against the University of New Hampshire.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

In the their season opener against Wake Forest, the Minutewomen were unable to convert on their penalty corner opportunities. Against New Hampshire, UMass went 1–for–5, as Rothenberger converted off a corner for the game's first score.

The Wildcats had trouble with their corners, going 0–for–2 in that category.

Massachusetts returns to action on Wednesday, Sept. 11 when the team travels to Chestnut Hill for a game under the lights at Boston College. Game time is set for 7:30 p.m.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services Amherst, MA 01003 577-5000

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services

An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of the UHS Eye Care Services Spring 1996.

My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the University Health Service Eye Care Program and the high quality of eye care delivered to more than 80,000 individuals over the last 20 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry and recently co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. In addition, I am credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Eye care services include:
- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Services over the years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS."

uhs EYE CARE SERVICES
Convenient Hours & Campus Location
Call 577-5244

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
Drivers Wanted
for AM Paper Delivery
Must have car or access to car
Hours 7:45 - 10:15 a.m.
Please contact Rob McDonald or Alycia Hines @ 545-3500

Choices Not Chances
Free Contraception Education
Every Mon & Thurs 3 - 4:30 pm and Tues & Wed 7 - 8:30 pm in rm. 302 UHS
Men and Women Welcome
For more information call the Health Education Office 577-5181

TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

Write Write Write Write Write Write Write for the Collegian

■ football

continued from page 10

Villanova wasted no time getting back on the board. The Park to Finneran connection moved the 'Cats down field with ease, and Park hit Sifford with a six-yard TD pass, to put the Minutemen down 14-0 with 5:26 remaining in the first quarter.

After two more unsuccessful series by the Minutemen, Villanova was once again on the move. But with 11:50 remaining in the second quarter, Sifford fumbled and Minuteman linebacker Justin Reimer recovered.

With the ball on their own 49, UMass capitalized on the Wildcats' mistake. On third and three at the Villanova 44, Catterton went deep and found sophomore Doug Clark, who fought off Villanova defensive back Adamole Turner for the reception and a Minutemen touchdown.

Kicker Eric Oke missed the extra point, but UMass closed the gap to 14-6.

It was as close as the Minutemen would get all day, as the Wildcats would score 22 unanswered points to end the half.

Villanova's next drive lasted only 36 seconds. Park found Finneran wide open down the sideline and Finneran raced to a 35-yard touchdown. With the score 21–6, the game began to spin out of the Minutemen's reach.

Backed up deep in their own territory on their next possession, UMass was forced to punt. Under intense pressure, sophomore Andy Maclay's punt was blocked by the Wildcat's Turner for a safety.

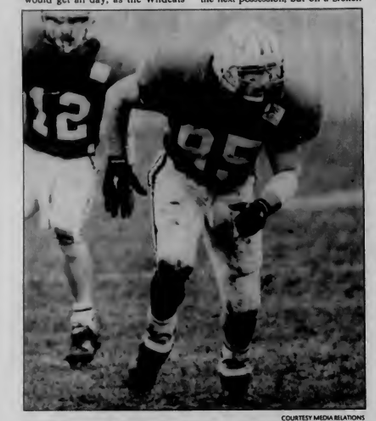
On the free kick awarded to Villanova, Maclay punted the ball out of bounds and the Wildcats started at midfield. A personal foul by the Minutemen put the Cats at the UMass 35, and after a three-yard scramble by Park that failed to garner a first down, Villanova placekicker Mark Kiefer boomed a 46 yard field goal, giving the 'Cats a 26–0 lead.

The Minutemen began to drive on the next possession, but on a broken play Catterton tried to improvise and found only the huge arms of Villanova defensive end Nate McIntyre. McIntyre intercepted the ball and embarked on a 35-yard return that brought him to the Massachusetts eight yard line before Catterton took him down. Three 'Nova plays produced four yards, and a 22 yard Kiefer field goal put the 'Cats up 29–6.

Massachusetts needed only one play to give the ball back to Villanova. On first and 10 from their own 12, Catterton fumbled on a pitch and the Wildcats recovered. Three plays and an Anthony Cowsette plunge later, Villanova had given themselves a 36–6 cushion to take into the locker room.

Despite the apparent impossibility of the task at hand, the Minutemen came out fired up in the second half. Jerard White picked off a Park pass at the Villanova 47, and on the subsequent Minutemen possession senior fullback Ron Brockington busted through the Villanova defensive line and stormed to a 38 yard touchdown run. After Brockington converted the two-point conversion, UMass had cut the lead to 22 with 11:29 remaining in the third quarter.

The Minutemen optimism faded quickly, however, as the Wildcats scored again with 5:37 remaining. Freshman quarterback Cliff Boden, in place of Park, threw a 22-yard scoring strike to Cowsette to give 'Nova a 42–14 lead.



With the outcome largely decided, Hodges replaced Catterton with freshman Jeff Smith. Smith responded by going 5-for–12, with 62 yards, and impressed with his strong arm.

After the game, Hodges, though obviously disappointed about the game, focused on the positive.

"People say, first game mistakes," Hodges said. "That's a bunch of baloney. You can't do those things, and we did them today. I don't feel good about what we did here, but these kids will come back.

"I really like this football team, despite what you just saw [Saturday]. That's not the football team we're capable of being, and we will be back. We will be back."

The Minutemen travel to Worcester next Saturday to take on Holy Cross. UMass has won the last four meetings against the Crusaders, by a combined score of 127–10. It will be the season opener for Holy Cross. Game time is scheduled for 1:00 p.m.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Linebacker Mike Dawson and the rest of the Minutemen seemed defenseless in a 50–14 spanking by the Villanova Wildcats.

Nash and Paciorek lead UMass to strong finish in Invitational

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The good news is that for the fifth and sixth straight matches, the Massachusetts women's volleyball team, playing in the Penn State Invitational this past weekend, swept its opponent, 3–0.

And, in keeping with the cliche, there is bad news. In their seventh match of the year, the Minutewomen got a taste of their own medicine, losing 3–0 to the #6 Penn State Nittany Lions, 15–8, 15–9, 15–4.

But is it really bad news? Preseason concerns were that UMass was a young, inexperienced team and would need time to gel before really being capable of consistent success.

And what happens? The Minutewomen open the season 6–0, without losing a single game, let alone a match. And when they finally do fall, as they did on Saturday, it's to a top ten team, and the home team, no less.

True, the quality of opponents has been a step down from UMass (6–1). But no one really knew that was the case until the matches were actually played.

The Minutewomen had one match on Friday, with fellow Atlantic 10 member St. Bonaventure. Keeping with recent history, they trounced the Bonnies, 15–2, 15–6, 15–3. The Minutewomen are now 9–1 all–time against the women in brown.

On Saturday, they beat the Connecticut Huskies, 15–1, 15– 10, 15–7, avenging last season's loss in the Mullins Center. Their final match was the loss to Penn State.

Senior outside hitter Dionne Nash (24 kills, 19 digs, two aces) and junior middle blocker Michelle Paciorek (27 kills, 20 digs, two aces) were named to the all-tournament team. Junior Lesley Nolan played true to form, making 32 kills and 28 digs.

UMass will next be in action when it hosts the UMass Classic on Sept. 13 and 14. The four opponents will be Central Connecticut St., Villanova, Delaware and Seton Hall.

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

cute," Hodges said. "We've got to have people make some plays and we can't have balls go through our hands, we can't have interceptions, and we can't fumble. We have to be careful with the football, which we weren't doing today."

However, that doesn't take anything away from the Wildcats, who played a solid game both on offense and defense. Quarterback Clint Park tossed in a solid performance, going 11–for–21 for 153 yards and two TDs in just over two quarters of work.

Park was replaced by Chris Boden early in the third. Boden went 9–11 with 108 yards and one TD.

The UMass secondary felt the effects of losing three of its four starters from last year. But, co–captain Kory Blackwell and freshman corner Jerard White were all over the place making good plays.

"We'll jump back from adversity," Blackwell said. "Football to me and the rest of the guys I play with is like a game of life. It's ups and downs, we'll jump back from it. It's a test of our character."

One bright spot may have been that Catterton showed signs that a passing attack could be present in future games for the Minutemen — it just wasn't in full swing on Saturday.

The Minutemen's solid rotation of wideouts — Doug Clark, Darryl Thomas, Raphael Quinn, and Eric Dawley — were among nine different players who caught passes for UMass.

This is the first time in a very long while that the Minutemen passed for more yards than they ran for.

"He showed some flashes at times, completed some balls, but made some mistakes, threw some interceptions, missed some calls, and missed some reads," Hodges said. "I think he showed he can throw the football, but being able to throw it and doing it on a consistent basis to help us win is what we've got to do."

Freshman quarterback Jeff Smith also saw time throwing the ball, going 5–for–12 for 62 yards.

UMass certainly saw a much more balanced attack, with running and passing, using the option, and even a fullback pass by Pizano. It was just the mistakes, and the positioning and timing of them that put a quick end to making the UMass drives more productive.

"They get slow balls on you and they're on a short field all day because your turning the ball over and you add the penalties and that stuff to it and you just don't give yourself a chance to win," Hodges said. "You can't do that against a good football team. We didn't give ourselves a chance [to win] today."

The Minutemen will try to put this one behind them heading next week to Holy Cross, which they pummeled last year 52–0. However, they can not take anything for granted at this point.

If UMass can use a balanced attack like it showed on Saturday, while eliminating the penalties and turnovers, this team can win.

"I don't feel real good about it, what we did here, but I know these kids will come back," Hodges said. "I really like this football team, despite what you saw out there because that's not the type of football team we're capable of being, and we'll be back. We will be back."

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Panhellenic Council is sponsoring a Greek Area Carwash benefiting AIDS Foundation Saturday, September 7th 12-3 behind 375, 387, 389 and 395 N Pleasant Street. $3

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come meet the sisters of CHI OMEGA at our Open House on Sept. 8 at 1:30, Sept. 9 at 5:30 and our Barbeque on Sept. 10 at 5:30. Call Heather for more information at 549-4742

Want to start your own fraternity? Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to recolonize our chapter. If interested call Bret Hirsh at 317-334-1998 ext. 214.

Faster Solo: Free Acro, Movie, Animal, Rock, 3-D Most images $6, $7, & $8 S U B Wed-Fri 8am- 4pm Benefits UMASS radio WMUA 91.1 FM

All University women invited to attend Sigma Kapa Open Rush Thurs 9/5 5-7 pm Sun 9/8 6-8 pm Tues 9/10 5-7 pm Thurs 9/12 6-8 pm Please call Beth for more info 256-6887 Located 19 Allen St. (Behind Hillel)

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Buick Century SW. Good condition $1,000 BO. Contact David 549-8272

86 Ford Escort Runs good, tires in good condition, new starter, very little rust $900 call Brian 586-0363

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK 79,000 mi. very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done. $7300 OBO. Call 549-7786

'93 MITSUBISHI MIRAGE 40 miles, $8500 or best offer 367-0384

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Jobs for the environment. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere Call Alex at 256-6434

Largest Student Travel Planner on East Coast looking for Campus Rep to promote Kodak Spring Break Trips "Guaranteed" lowest package prices and best incentives You handle the sales, we handle the bookkeeping Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre, Orlando & Key West Earn BIG $$$ and/or FREE TRIPS!! GREAT FOR RESUME!!! Call 1-800-222-4432

NOW HIRING! COFFEE SHOP AND HATCH Now have positions available working during lunch Mon-Fri Come down and see us or call 545-0018 or 545-2587.

PART TIME JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434

New Hiring part-time telemarketers Morning, afternoon and evening hours available. Earn $6-$7 per hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

Child Care Three great kids in Amherst. M, T, Th 2-7pm, W 4-9, Sat Eve Car needed, non-smoking. Robin 253-0660 9am-3pm

School Bus Driver 10 hours a week afternoon, $10.00/hour with free health club benefits. Must have a Class 2 DPU license. 586-0633 Call or apply in person Kid Sport, Rte. 9, Hadley

Want the toughest job you'll ever love?? People's- a student-run business- is seeking highly motivated undergraduate work-study and non-work-study students for long-term commitment. Learn to co—manage a small business, gain invaluable leadership skills, and have a blast! Applications available at the Center for Student Businesses Student Union, Room 406, or the Market EOE

Counter/Kitchen Help 25 Hr/Week, Must be able to work late nights and weekends Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst

Spring Break!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions!! Lowest Prices!! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Now Hiring Experienced Wait Staff Driver and Hostess. Apply with-in only: Fat Chi Restaurant

CAREGIVER WITH EARLY CHILD-HOOD Experience for two and three year old. Monday, Tuesday, or Friday 8-5 car required, references required 253-3237

Looking for a bus, responsible companion with own transportation for our 13 year old son Some afternoons and overnights in our home in Leverett Call 548-9057

PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANT For evenings, overnights, and weekends For male quad $7.85 per hour $15.70 for overnight. 6-0666

RECEPTIONIST: MULLINS CENTER. M-Th 1:30-5:00 pm F 10:30am-5:00pm telephone experience required, some clerical $5.25/hr. MULLINS CENTER 2nd floor to apply

PAINTERS NEEDED- Now hiring painters for the greater Amherst area Hiring quick and reliable painters. Esperance preferred, but not required. Starts at $7/hr, plus bonuses. Part-time or Full-time. Contact Dan Wolman at Student Painters 1-800-829-4777

Cruise Ships Hiring- Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info. call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring- Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring: Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50017

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible Let us help. For more info. call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info. call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Computer, Compaq 486, 8 RAM, 210MB, Software, $750 or BO 367-9814 or 253-2822

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 (280) 548-9729

LAPTOP COMPUTER IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HD/ with case and extras/ $1100/080 Please contact Josh at 256-8966

BOOKCASES Unfinished pine- 24"x36"x9"- 3 shelves $48.00 + tax- 536-1944

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute, Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Retire rich in ten years.

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed for dark, post-alternative pop/rock. We have EP and Boston gigs. If you are serious and can chill or rock out call Phil 549-5606

ROOM FOR RENT

2BR Apt in Sunderland. HW floors, washer/dry, porch, garage $15+ BEAUTIFUL SETTING!! QUIET! 665-4394

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

WANTED

Sell me your purple lot sticker. Call Greg w/price 6-7196

Collegian

We'll wrap up the news for you!

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Cautious optimism is the watchword when evaluating a new solution to an old problem. Don't be afraid to let your creativity have free rein—you could come up with something really spectacular. Keep your thoughts to yourself during an important meeting.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
You're ripe to do some groundbreaking, especially in your personal affairs. Do your homework before accepting a new responsibility. If the opportunity seems too good to be true, it probably is. Let a loved one talk you into something a bit wild and crazy.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
A recent milestone has you feeling excited about the future. Share your enthusiasm with your mate. A distant relative could get in touch to ask a favor of you. Don't feel obligated if it's something outrageous. Just be tactful, and things will work out eventually.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Everything is going your way early in the week. Try to accomplish as much as possible now, because the tides will turn later. Nothing too terrible, but you'll be swimming upstream on a number of issues. Lean on a family member for some extra support.

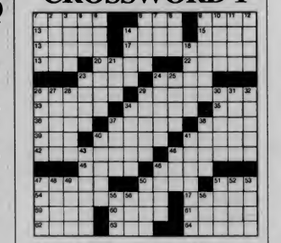
LEO
July 23-August 23
Plan an escape from your regular routine. Learn a new skill, try a new food—anything to break the monotony. Focus on your health as the week draws to a close—a new diet or exercise routine could refresh you and prepare you for the days ahead.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Something that seems straightforward could have pitfalls lurking behind the next corner. Plan ahead and listen to the advice of those who have gone before. If the stakes are low, you may be able to figure things out on your own.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Be sure to do lots of research before making a decision. If someone seems hesitant, that person could be hiding something. Don't be a bully—instead, read between the lines to learn what's upsetting that person. Pull your own weight at work.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Team up with an older person to form an unbeatable combination. You'll surprise yourself with your level of insight, especially in circumstances where you have no experience. Reserve the weekend for quality time with your family or a loved one.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Difficulties this week translate into valuable experience in the days to come. The simplest solution may be the best. Be sure to look at your problems from every possible angle—and enlist some help if you think you've forgotten anything.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
It's tempting to be irresponsible this week, but if you can force yourself to get the job done, you'll reap the rewards this weekend. Clear your conscience of an old obligation, and contact an old friend whom you've not spoken to for awhile.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Family and personal matters keep you hopping in the middle of the week. If you can take the heat, you'll clear up some matters that have been smoldering for a long time. Then you'll be free to enjoy a really spectacular weekend.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Catch up on sleep if you're exhausted —now is the time to get ahead on petty chores and obligations. It's time for some teamwork in your family or professional life. Several minds are better than just one, but you'll have to put your ego on hold.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD 1

ACROSS
1. Wither
6. ___ adze (tipsilkw)
8. Gibe
12. Helper
14. It may be solid white
15. Bowery bum
16. "Four ___ and seven years ago . . ."
17. Team stats
18. Possessive word
20. Road guides
22. Oregons
23. Haunches
24. Portion
25. Plucklest
29. Resolute
33. "One Day at ___" (2 words)
34. Become aware of
36. Between Sun. and Tues.
38. Ceremony
37. In the future
38. Electrical unit
39. Hydrocarbon suffix
40. Averse
41. Chile's prey
42. Answers
44. Tasty
45. Lyric poems
46. Tracy nee Trueheart
47. Teen talk
50. Breather
51. Guacamole, for example
54. "I'm in Love with a ___ Guy"
57. Mrs. Peron
58. English composer Thomas
60. Liver spread
61. Tors asunder
62. "... and shed a ___ letter ..."
63. "Me and ___ Jones"
64. Shell games

DOWN
1. Flan
2. Chinese staple
3. "The kitchen stinks"
4. "___, the land of the free ..."
5. Assumption
6. Irving's six
7. Watson and Crick's shtick
8. Newsman Rather
9. Distorts
10. Takes the laurels
11. Bus Stop playwright
12. Hat-in-the-ring action
13. Recipe amts.
18. "Beyond the Sea" singer Bobby
21. Very likely
23. Rose flour
24. Yogurt flavor
25. Israeli city
26. One with a dropped jaw
27. Seek penance
28. Gestures silently
29. Fender marks
30. Mirror reflection
31. Ejector
32. Ledger unit
34. Guides
37. Sharpen a razor
38. Comics
40. Hunting cabin
41. Cenacogists, often
43. Think over
44. Director Craven
46. Prefix for scope or vision
47. Kill a fly
48. Folk stories
49. Black Beauty author Sewell
50. Grooves
51. Sutherland or Sills
52. List unit
53. Lily and rose
55. Disc speed (abbr.)
56. "The ___ Side"
58. Area (abbr.)

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."

"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S ENCHIEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Always Wanted one of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Hear Say By Emile Yang

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

Lowell and I were walking down the street and I thought this girl was waving at me but she was actually fanning her face from the heat.
i almost said,"Hi."
I'm a jerk.
I told Lowell, "We're losers. We have nothing going on in our lives."
Lowell said, "Yeah, we're losers."
Then I said, "Actually, I'm not a loser, Lowell, but you are."
I said, "Really, Lowell, you can't be a loser. It's virtually impossible because you have a beautiful new mountain bike."
Lowell said, "Thanks, Leold, I forgot I had the bike."
i said, "Yeah, no problem... .....loser."

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Close to Home By John McPherson

Little League officials soon got wise to Jason's dad and the remote-control glove.

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE

instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Day

"Desire what is good. Therefore, everyone who does not agree with me is a traitor.

–George III of England

Yesterday's Crossword Answers

D	R	O	O	P		O	D	D		T	W	I	T
A	I	D	E	R		T	U	N	A		W	I	N	O
S	C	O	R	E		S	T	A	N	D	I	N	G	S
H	E	R		M	A	P	S			A	S	S	E	S
		H	I	P	S		P	A	R	T
G	A	M	E	S	T		D	E	C	I	S	I	V	E
A	T	I	M	E		L	E	A	R	N		M	O	N
P	O	M	P		H	E	N	C	E		W	A	T	T
E	N	E		L	O	A	T	H		T	I	G	E	R
R	E	S	P	O	N	D	S		W	A	T	E	R	Y
		O	D	E	S		T	E	S	S
S	L	A	N	G			R	E	S	T		D	I	P
W	O	N	D	E	R	F	U	L		E	V	I	T	A
A	R	N	E		P	A	T	E		R	I	V	E	D
T	E	A	R		M	R	S			S	C	A	M	S

Today's Staff

Chris Conner
Night Editor

Suzanne Barber
Copy Editor

Thang Vo
Photo Technician

Tony Morse
Production Supervior

Chris Lavin
Lorraine Urbanski, Sandra Krauss
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Pucks
Turkey Tetrazzinni
Philly Cheese Steak

DINNER
Chicken Breast
Spaghetti/ Sausage
Italian Tofu Balls
Quarter Pound Burger

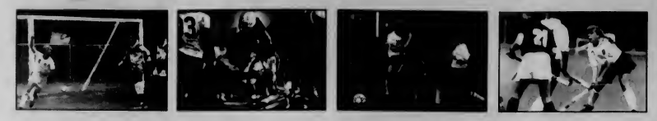
Hampden

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Puck
Turkey Tetrazzinni

DINNER
Chicken Breast w. Rice
Spaghetti & Sausage

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Sneeze
Grilled Ham & Sneeze
Spaghetti & Sauce
Latin Stew



DINNER
Chicken Breast
Black I'd peas
Pastabilities
Meatball Grinder

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Sneeze
Grilled Ham & Sneeze
Spaghetti & Sauce
Wheatball Grinder

DINNER
Shrimp & Sausage
Black I'd Peas
Pastabilities
Chicken Breast

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- the women's volleyball team had a strong showing at this weekend's Penn State Invitational. For the complete story turn to page 8.
- the men's water polo team suffered a disappointing first weekend of the season, dropping two of three matches at the Navy Invitational. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

Collegian Sports • Monday, September 9, 1996

'Nova capitalizes on UMass mistakes, wins 50–14

Massachusetts loss keyed by blunders on both sides of ball

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

VILLANOVA Pa. — Mistakes, mistakes, mistakes.

Three fumbles, 10 penalties, a blocked punt, an interception and a safety — all in the first half— spelled disaster for the University of Massachusetts football team on Saturday, as the Villanova Wildcats raced to a 36–6 halftime lead and cruised to a 50–14 blowout of the Minutemen.

"We can play a lot better than this," UMass coach Mike Hodges said. "We were ready to play from an emotional standpoint. We were flying around, that doesn't get it done if you don't execute. You got to have some people make some plays. We can't drop passes that hit us right in the hands, and you have to protect the football, which we just didn't do today."

Villanova came out on fire. On the second play from scrimmage, junior quarterback Clint Park connected with All–American candidate wideout Brian Finneran on a 56–yard pass play that set the tone for the afternoon.

VILLANOVA	50
MASSACHUSETTS	14

Two successive pass plays of 11 and 12 yards brought the Wildcats down to the UMass four yard line, where junior tailback Curtis Sifford waltzed through a huge hole and into the endzone. The drive took only 1:02, and the extra point put Nova up 7-0.

The Minutemen's first drive was long and sustained, but it failed to produce any points. With a steady march highlighted by the running of senior standout Frank Alessio, UMass looked poised to get on the scoreboard.

An Anthony Catterton screen pass to Alessio brought the Minutemen down to the 31, and UMass caught a break when Villanova was called for a late hit. The 15-yard penalty put the Minutemen on the Villanova 16, but the hit shook up Alessio, forcing him to sit out the rest of the drive.

With sophomore tailback Matt Jordan out with a sore right hamstring, fullback Jim Pizano handled the rushing chores, and on third down and five, Pizano fumbled. Villanova recovered on the three yard line.

The subsequent Wildcat drive was unsuccessful, but UMass senior co-captain Kory Blackwell mishandled the Villanova punt and the Wildcats recovered in UMass territory, on the 49 yard line.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior quarterback Anthogy Catterton threw for 118 yards in Saturday's 50–14 loss to Villanova.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 8

Offense displays new balanced attack, but can't overcome penalties, turnovers

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

This past weekend the University of Massachusetts football team was given a rude introduction to the 1996 season by the Villanova Wildcats, losing 50–14.

Although the Minutemen made many mistakes, not all of them began on the field — many occurred in their heads. Mental errors plagued the Minutemen throughout the game, allowing Villanova to take control of the contest early on.

Only 1:02 into the game, Villanova marched 84 yards on five plays to light its side of the board at 7–0. On their first possession however, the Minutemen looked as though they would get those points right back as fullback Jim Pizano took a run inside the Villanova five-yard line. But he fumbled at the three, beginning the string of bad luck and mistakes that would hurt the Minutemen the rest of the way.

UMass quarterback Anthony Catterton was sacked four times on the day and threw two interceptions. Minuteman penalties would be the problem, as they became a familiar occurrence throughout as UMass racked up 12 mishaps for 91 yards, including many mistakes that came from not being focused and mentally sound. There were offside penalties, personal fouls and delay of game and holding calls, all of which occurred more than once.

"The penalties are just inexcusable," UMass coach Mike Hodges said. "You can say first game mistakes. That's a bunch of bologna. It doesn't make any difference. First game, second game, third game, you can't do those things."

The statistics of the game do not give you a true indication of how this game really turned out. The Minutemen rushed for 172 yards while the Wildcats put up 154. UMass had 180 yards passing. Villanova had 261 yards passing. The Minutemen had the ball longer, they converted the same number of third–down conversions, and had only three first downs fewer than the Wildcats.

However, the stats that stand out are the penalty yards, (UMass 91, Villanova 40), and the turnovers (UMass 5, Villanova 2). The stats don't tell you where the turnovers occurred. There was a UMass fumble on the Villanova three–yard line, an interception run back to the UMass eight– yard line, a fumbled punt return that Villanova recovered in UMass territory, and a fumble that Villanova recovered at the UMass 12–yard line.

"Turnovers and penalties continued to put our defense in bad situations and we just can't do that," Hodges said. "We're not a dominant football team that we can afford to make those kind of mistakes and have an opportunity to win."

UMass did have some opportunities on some solid drives, many of which were cut short from dropped passes, penalties and ill–advised plays, such as when UMass attempted a quarterback keeper on a third and 15 play.

"We need to come out and exe-

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 8

Women's soccer blanks SMU, UGA; now 3–0

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

While Friday's muggy weather might have made No. 22 Southern Methodist and Georgia feel right at home as they ventured to Richard F. Garber Field for this weekend's annual UMass/Reebok Women's Soccer Classic, their northern opposition was far less hospitable.

The No. 18 Massachusetts side downed Georgia 1-0 on Friday and topped SMU, a 1995 Final Four participant, 2-0 yesterday in more typical, nasty Pioneer Valley weather. Meanwhile, No. 5 Connecticut topped SMU and Georgia 4-0 and 2-0 respectively, as both teams from below the Mason-Dixon line flew home without scoring a goal.

MASSACHUSETTS	1
GEORGIA	0

After their 4-0 shellacking at the hands of a powerful UConn side, the Minutewomen had cause to worry about SMU yesterday.

The team responded with its best team effort of the season thus far as it contained a formidable SMU attack, and was able to consistently mount offensive pressure of its own both from the back, and with its forward unit.

"This was the best and longest consistent effort that we've had," UMass coach Jim Rudy said of his team.

"Our coaches are very pleased with the way we played," said Amanda Thompson, who took official recruiting visits to both SMU and Georgia while in high school. "It was a good effort all the way through. There were no mental lapses like our other games. We're becoming more focused and organized together."

After twenty minutes fought primarily in the midfield, UMass' new three–forward formation paid dividends at the 23:12 mark. Emma Kurowski sent a cross for Rebecca Myers, playing in her new center forward spot. Myers redirected the cross from the right post into the open side of the goal for a 1-0 UMass lead.

"The first goal though gave us the momentum to carry through," midfielder Julie Magid said afterwards.

"Yeah, [the new formation worked]," Rudy said of the different offensive shape. "They were calling to bench and saying 'what do we do over here?' We gave them a different look and it was good because those players played well. We had total mobility. We

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7

Field hockey tames Wildcats, wins 4–0

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Erica Johnston netted a goal in Saturday's 4–0 field hockey win over New Hampshire.

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

On paper, the Massachusetts field hockey team made Saturday's 4–0 victory over the New Hampshire Wildcats seem easy.

After a scoreless first half, the Minutewomen rolled to the win, with four different players scoring all four goals in the second. The win pushes UMass' record to 2–0, while UNH falls to 0–1.

After a first half deadlock, UMass broke through the Wildcat defense for the first tally of the game. Senior All–American Kyle Rothenberger put the Minutewomen on the board, scoring her first goal of the season.

The score came just over two minutes into the second half, when Rothenberger converted off a penalty corner. Sophomore Kate Putnam and freshman Saskia Fuchs were credited with the assist.

MASSACHUSETTS	4
NEW HAMPSHIRE	0

Just over four minutes later, Courtney MacLean gave the Minutewomen a 2–0 lead, scoring her third goal of the season off a Putnam assist.

UMass increased its lead with a little over 24 minutes remaining in the game. Sophomore Erica Johnston put away an unassisted goal for her first tally of the season to boost the Minutewomen to a 3–0 margin.

Junior Jen Gutzman rounded out the Massachusetts scoring, connecting for her first goal of the season.

Senior goaltender Hilary Rose had an easy day in the net, as she didn't have to stop a shot. The game marks the 27th shutout of Rose's career, and the first of the season.

New Hampshire goalie Mary Pearsall turned back 7 Minutewoman shots.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

Forwards Myers and Kurowski step up to power Minutewomen

There were not very many pressing questions concerning the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team (3–0) coming into this weekend's UMass/Reebok Women's Soccer Classic: solid in the midfield, defense and keeper positions, with nine returning starters for the 1995 A–10 Champions.

In the world of sports reporting, though, "we" breakdown the makeup of the teams we cover to the point of having a breakdown.

But, truthfully, the main dilemma for the Minutewomen at this juncture was the most visible, and most overanalyzed side of the pitch: the forward position. Head Coach Jim Rudy has been looking for a frontrunner, and after this weekend, he might have a pair of them: senior Rebecca Myers and freshman Emma Kurowski.

Two out of the three goals scored in this weekend's wins over Georgia and SMU were the products of their hustle and teamwork. Continuing with that "breakdown" theme, the Georgia game–winner was the one of the weekend, due to the clincher by senior midfielder Julie Magid in the SMU game, so let's take that infamous closer look.

Part One: the give and go between Kurowski and Myers, and the freshman forward's run to set up the scoring opportunity. Myers got the ball in the center of the field from her fellow forward, worked it back to Kurowski and she was off to the races. Kurowski

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

Single Siljanovski goal snuffs BU

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

In the game of soccer, it's not always the quantity of shots on net that drive a team to victory as much as the quality of those shots.

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team kicked off the regular season on Saturday with a big 1–0 non– conference win over Boston University.

MASSACHUSETTS	2
BOSTON UNIVERSITY	0

After beating BU last year, coach Sam Koch knew the Terriers would be geared up to defend their turf at Nickerson Field this time around.

BU proved to be a force to be reckoned with, outshooting the No. 17 Minutemen 21–5 — 15–1 at the half. But the Terriers could not capitalize on their powerful attack, not even on their nine corner kicks.

While BU seemed to own the offensive side of the stat chart, it was UMass's lone first half shot in the 29th minute that secured the Minuteman victory.

Before the game, Koch stated that in order to win the contest, he would need big games from

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 5 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, September 10, 1996

Water polo drop two over weekend

The men's water polo team had a disappointing weekend against Navy. Check out our coverage (See Sports, page 12).

Blast off Astro style

Man...or Astroman took their out of this world sound to Pearl Street on Sunday. Check out our review, (See Arts & Living page 5)

WORLD

Saddam Hussein regains control of Northern Iraq

DOKAN, Iraq (AP) — Kurdish allies of Saddam Hussein captured the last stronghold of their rebel rivals Monday, giving the Iraqi leader control over much of northern Iraq for the first time since the Persian Gulf War.

With Iraqi troops trailing close behind, the Kurdistan Democratic Party claimed control of the city of Sulaymaniyah after the crumbling forces of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan abandoned their posts, U.N. workers in the city fled in advance of the offensive, leaving the city quiet after its fall, Clarry said.

The United States, which launched missile strikes against southern Iraq last week, made clear it has no plans to take sides in the fighting between the Kurdish factions.

NATION

Morris denies details of prostitute's story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential adviser Dick Morris told Congress Monday that he told a prostitute "everyone thinks" Hillary Rodham Clinton was behind the FBI file search, but that he was relating polling data and not firsthand knowledge.

"I have no personal knowledge or information from any source whatsoever as to who was responsible for ordering the FBI files," Morris said in a sworn statement to the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee.

It was the first time that Morris publicly acknowledged a relationship with Sherry Rowlands, although pictures of the pair were published in a tabloid newspaper. The disclosure in The Star that Morris had a longtime relationship with Rowlands forced his resignation Aug. 26 from the Clinton team.

Last week, The Star published what it said were excerpts of Rowlands' diary.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thur.
HIGH: 70 LOW: 55	HIGH: 75 LOW: 60	HIGH: 75 LOW: 60

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Comics.....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
News.....page 3

Volunteer fair reaches out

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

The Community Service Program (CSP) will be holding a volunteer fair this week — the first of many activities aimed at reaching out to surrounding communities and University of Massachusetts students.â

The volunteer fair will be held Sept. 11 at the Campus Center Concourse from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. to recruit students interested in involving themselves in their community.

Karen Elam, coordinator of the CSP, which is located at the Mather Career Center, is excited that there will be more than 40 agencies representing a wide variety of interests.

There will be several volunteer positions available, from tutoring children to working in shelters for both animals and people.

Those interested in health issues such as AIDS, or the protection of the environment will also find relevant organizations available for volunteer placement.

Both national and local agencies will be represented, including the Boltwood Project.

This volunteer fair, according to organizers, is intended to make students new to the University aware of their options, and comfortable in exploring them.

"We're definitely appreciated," said Sally Carter,â who is on the executive board of Students Helping Area Reach–out Efforts (SHARE).

"There are always projects that need to be done but the council doesn't always have the time or the people to do them," she added.

Elam said that the CSP is not only dedicated to providing volunteer placements to students, but enriching their lives in the process.

"This is not just volunteering. it's not just service," Elam said. "But I'd like to see more students involved over longer terms and see learning be an integral part of that."

To accomplish this, the CSP, with the support of the Vitally Involved in Voluntary Action (VIVA), is combining classroom learning with hands–on experience.

VIVA is a council which includes students, UMass faculty and administrators, and members of the community.

David Schimmel, chair of the Provost's Special Committee on Service Learning, would like to see volunteer service as a "part of everybody's college experience."

Schimmel hopes serving the community will be "as much a part of campus life as going to a basketball game or concert."

Each of these volunteer committees intends to integrate what students learn in classes, taking that knowledge into the community to help create and work on service programs.

In return, Schimmel strongly believes that the students will then take the experience and knowledge they have gained from their volunteer work and apply it to what they are learning at the University. A broader education is the result, he said.

Grants have already been awarded to over 20 faculty members who have included community service aspects to their courses. Some of the departments include Anthropology, Art, Polymer Science, Nursing, Consumer Studies, English and a variety of other disciplines. The specified courses include community service relating to that subject.

Coming attractions include the annual "Make a Difference Day," a food drive that serves all of Hampshire County, in October. In November and December, they will be holding a "Fill–A–Bus" clothing and toy drive which will go to the Amherst Survival Center.

Students interested in getting involved with the VIVA council should attend their first meeting on Sept. 25, between 12 p.m. – 1 p.m. Contact Karen Elam at 545–3368 for more information.

Looking to reduce bike thefts, UMass police offer solutions

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Heather Garber jots down vital information outside the Student Union as part of the bicycle registration program.

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

In efforts to reduce the number of bicycle thefts on campus, the University of Massachusetts Police Department will conduct free bicycle registration and engraving services all week.

The UMass Security Department and Alpha Pi Omega, a service fraternity, will set up a registration table outside of the Student Union Building from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. today through Friday.

Lawrence G. Holmes, Deputy Chief of the UMass Division of Public Safety said the main goal of the program is to protect students' bicycles by educating owners about various theft prevention methods.

"We're encouraging people to register and engrave their bikes, which will act as a very strong deterrent against theft," Holmes said.

Once registered, each bicycle's engraved serial number, brand and color are entered into the UMass Police Department's computer system. Registration makes each bicycle traceable, as well as easier to report with insurance agencies in the event of a theft.

According to the Security Department's report, over 350 bicycles were reported stolen on campus in the past three years — a majority of those being mountain bikes, valued at more than $400. With the registration service, over 75 percent of owners who reported thefts received insurance money.

The report also stated that the highest amount of bicycles are stolen in September and May.

"Bikes are high in value, and high in demand," Holmes said. "But people steer away from stealing bikes they won't be able to sell — bikes that are engraved and dissay a registration sticker."

Kerry, Weld race close

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. William F. Weld and U.S. Sen. John Kerry are running neck-and-neck in their race for Kerry's Senate seat with less than two months to go before the election, a new poll indicates.

The survey of 404 likely voters was done for The Boston Globe and WBZ-TV (Channel 4) Wednesday and Thursday. It found Kerry leading Weld 42 percent to 38 percent when people were asked who they would vote for if the election were the next day.

The poll, conducted by KRC Communications Research of Newton, had a 5 percent margin of error, however, which means that the race was a statistical tie. A similar poll in April gave Kerry 45 percent and Weld 40 percent, The Boston Sunday Globe reported. Last month, a Boston Herald poll put Weld ahead of Kerry, 46 percent to 38 percent. That survey of 401 likely voters had a margin of error of 4.8 percentage points.

The Globe also reported that voters rate Weld higher than Kerry on issues such as taxes, welfare reform, crime and education, but Kerry gets recognition for his record of working to create opportunities for minorities. The poll also found Weld more personally appealing than Kerry. About 45 percent said they find Weld "warm and likeable," compared to only 31 percent who said that about Kerry.

Kerry and Weld also were about even on the question of who is more compassionate, with Kerry getting 37 percent and Weld getting 35 percent. A hopeful sign for Kerry: nearly a third of those surveyed said they would be less likely to vote for Weld if that would increase the Republican majority in the Senate.

A number of voters also indicated that they were concerned about the large personal debt of Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci. Cellucci, who would automatically become governor if Weld were elected to the Senate, owes more than $750,000.

But Kerry's attempts to alarm voters by tying Weld to House Speaker Newt Gingrich don't appear to be working. Only 22 percent of those responding said they believed Weld would follow Gingrich's conservative agenda, while 47 percent said they believed Weld would keep his independence.

President Clinton led Bob Dole by 51 percent to 32 percent, with Reform Party candidate Ross Perot getting 6 percent. But pollster Gerry Chervinsky, KRC president, said that was down from a 61-28 percent lead for Clinton over Dole in April — and that could be bad news for Kerry. "It doesn't appear Clinton's coattails will be as long as the Kerry campaign had hoped," Chervinsky said.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Open for business!
Shannon Hodgson works the register at the People's Market, one of the student–run businesses on campus.

Hawaii court to look at marriage law

By Bruce Dunford
Associated Press

HONOLULU (AP) — Are children better off when they are raised by two parents — one man and one woman?

The state of Hawaii says they are, and will try to convince a judge that that's a valid reason to deny marriage licenses to couples of the same sex.

The trial that begins Tuesday comes three years after Hawaii's Supreme Court touched off a political, religious and social furor when it said the state's ban on gay marriages is unconstitutional unless the government can show a compelling interest in keeping it. Whatever the outcome of the 10- to 12-day trial in Circuit Court, the fight will return to the Supreme Court on appeal. Deputy Attorney General Rick Eichor said his main argument will be that the ban is aimed at giving Hawaii's children the best possible upbringing.

"We're not engaging in any gay-bashing," Eichor said.

"Our focus is what is best for the children, and not the particular predilections, good, bad or indifferent, of gays and lesbians." Eichor's witnesses will include psychologists who will testify that a family unit with a married mother and father gives a child the best environment in which to develop.

"Children of gays and lesbians do just fine, thank you," countered plaintiff's attorney Dan Foley, who also plans to call child psychologists to make his case that same-sex couples can be good parents.

Foley represents three gay couples who sued the state when they were denied marriage licenses in 1991.

Foley said the state's argument implies that marriages are licensed for the purpose of procreation. In 1984, the Legislature removed the ability to have children from the criteria for a marriage license, saying the requirement discriminated against the elderly and the handicapped.

Should Judge Kevin Chang rule in favor of same-sex marriages, he is expected to stay his ruling to prevent gay couples from getting licenses until the state Supreme Court hears the case again. The effect of the case could extend across the country. Under the U.S. Constitution, states recognize each other's laws. Thus, gay marriages performed in Hawaii might be recognized in other states as well.

Already anticipating the Hawaii court's ruling, 16 states have acted to refuse recognition to same-sex marriages performed elsewhere, while 18 other states have considered such a law and rejected it.

Gingrich shifts blame back to Clinton on drug funding & increase in usage

WASHINGTON (AP) – Returning fire in the political war over drugs, House Speaker Newt Gingrich says the administration is undermining congressional efforts to curb surging drug use. "After three years of serious neglect from your administration, your recent letter to me seems to indicate that you are now prepared to join Congress in addressing escalating drug use, particularly among our young people," Gingrich, R-Ga., wrote the president.

He was responding to a weekend letter in which Clinton, counterpunching Bob Dole's claim that he's soft on drugs, told Gingrich that Congress will stymie the war on narcotics unless it quickly provides all the money "to get the job done."

The president said the House has fallen more than $640 million short of paying for his anti-drug priorities and urged action before Congress adjourns in a month or so.

"In particular, the House once again is attempting to cut... my request for the safe and drug-free school program, the only federal program fully dedicated to helping schools combat alcohol and drug use, as well as violent behavior," Clinton wrote. Gingrich replied that the Republican-led Congress is providing the necessary funds, "in many cases providing more money than requested by the administration."

Dole and his Republican supporters contend that Clinton is not serious about fighting illegal drug use. Republicans have stepped up their criticism since the release of government statistics last month showing the use of marijuana, LSD and cocaine more than doubled since 1992 among young people aged 12 to 17.

A Columbia University survey released Monday said two-thirds of baby-boomer parents who experimented with marijuana as teen-agers said they expect their own children will do the same.

In his letter, Gingrich reiterated GOP complaints about the administration's drug policy, including the assertion that Clinton had appointed federal judges "who are easy on drug pushers and users."

Gingrich, who like Clinton has acknowledged smoking marijuana as a college student, also needled the president on a personal level, calling a Clinton remark during his 1992 campaign about drug use "totally irresponsible."

In a 1992 MTV appearance, Clinton was asked whether, if he could repeat his youthful experiment with marijuana, he would inhale this time. "Sure, if I could; I tried before," replied Clinton. "We need to have leaders who will tell kids that drug use will not make you look cool," Gingrich wrote Clinton.

Gingrich in the past has acknowledged smoking pot while in college, saying in late 1994, that use of marijuana in graduate school "was a sign we were alive."

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PIF, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Sept. 10

Volunteer — MassPIRG, SCERA, Hillel House and other RSOs are looking for more than 70 volunteers for MTV's "Choose or Lose" Bus from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. to help register students to vote and break MTV's record of registering 1300 people in one day. To volunteer or get more information, contact Leigh at MassPIRG at 545–0199 or visit the office at 423A Student Union.

Religious — Chavurah Ha Ruach Shul, an alternative Jewish Sunday school, will hold an informational meeting from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Children's House on 51 Bates St. in Northampton. For more information, call Karen at 584–4352 or Robin at 549–6403.

Panel — The Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruitment is sponsoring a workshop for incoming minority graduate students on "How to Survive the First Year" from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 162–175. Panelists will be continuing American graduate students of color who will discuss their experiences in their departments, the University and the community.

Wednesday, Sept. 11

Community — The Student Alliance for Israel and Zionists for Action will hold "Ice Cream Israel" at 6:15 p.m. at Hillel House.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hijras in India," an all–male religious sect that is considered an alternative, third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, is free and will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, room 301.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly fellowship meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, prayer, teaching and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 6 p.m at Hillel House, and liberal/ egalitarian services will be held at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Seminar — The UMass Polymer Science and Engineering Department will have Dr. Joseph Davidovits deliver a lecture entitled, "Aluminosicilate Polymers for Ultra–High Temperature Structural Applications" at 3:35 p.m. in Conte Center Room A11.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church will hold its annual tag sale today from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. and tomorrow from noon – 4 p.m. Hot dogs, coffee, cold soda and fresh popcorn are available in addition to the wide array of sale items, including many collectibles, exceptional furniture, lamps and appliances; new and old merchandise; adult and children's clothing; luggage; dishes; and more. Rain dates are Sept. 21–22.

Notices

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club begins auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. Students are advised to bring water and a snack. For more information, call 546–2771 or 546–1318.

Auditions — Tryouts for Neil Simon's "Rumors" will be held at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 12 and Friday, Sept. 13, and on Saturday, Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. Callbacks will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15. Special arrangements can be made for religious conflicts. For more information, call the UMass Theatre Guild at 545– 0415 or visit the office at 423 Student Union.

Community — Womanshelter Companeras is a battered women's shelter located in Holyoke serving the greater Holyoke–Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter ahs an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on thew following topics: domestic violence; teen-dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday throught Friday at 538–9717.

Sale — The UMass Ski Club will hold a mountain bike sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday on the lawn of the Student Union. Bikes by Cannondale, Giant, Scott and more will be available. Prices start at $195. For more information, call 545–3437.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientations are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. The room will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253– 0874.

Discussion group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. Call 253–3795 for more information.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday in September there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East ST. in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle Monday, Sept. 9, through Friday, Sept. 13, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. Information about preventing theft and bike identification will be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. – midnight. Dance to a variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. Call 584–8167 for more information.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Cappella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. at the Campus Center. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call (617) 641–2305.

Volunteer recruitment — The Boltwood Project, a community service project at UMass, is seeking 200–300 student volunteers to work in one of approximately 23 different groups in the Valley. Participating in Boltwood allows University and Five College students the opportunity to earn one or two credits while volunteering. Interested students need to attend one of three recruitment nights in the Campus Center Auditorium on Sept. 9 – 11 from 6:30–8:30 p.m.

MATTHEW J. SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN

Corporate Playground...

Cassandra Legualt (Apparel Marketing, Class of '98) scales a climbing wall as part of the Health–Fitness Fair taking place on the lawn between the Library and the Pond.

Get THE MESSAGE.

Your first month's FREE.

Finally, you can stop relying on other people for your phone messages. With Sprint Paging,SM you'll always get the message first. Sign up now, and get your first month of paging and three months of voice mail FREE. And if you get Sprint Residential Service, you'll get your sixth month of paging FREE, too. Add that to a simple, flat monthly rate with NO hidden costs and a high-quality Motorola® pager, and you're not only getting your messages, you're getting one great deal.

Call 1-800-825-8573

Sprint.

www.sprint.com (look for College)
Limited-time offer.

© 1996 Sprint Communications Company L.P.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Leaving the Scene
Sept. 5
A vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle in parking lot 47.
Sept. 7
A headlight was broken on a vehicle in parking lot 65.

Alarm — Fire Trouble
Sept. 6
A loose smoke detector was repaired in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Animal Complaint
Sept. 6
A dog in a car with no windows open in parking lot 32 was reported.

Annoying Behavior
Sept. 7
North Pleasant Street was reported littered with trash cans.
Sept. 8
A Resident Assistant of Pierpont Residence Hall reported being harassed by individuals.

Annoying Telephone Calls
Sept. 6
Children were playing with the phone in North Village.
Sept. 8
A resident of Patterson Residence Hall reported receiving threatening telephone calls.
A John Adams Residence Hall resident received harassing calls.
A Dickinson Residence Hall Resident received a threatening call.

Assault & Battery
Sept. 8
Five males in Kennedy Residence Hall seeking retribution for an alleged earlier assault in Amherst were reported. The Amherst Police Department sent an officer.

Assist Citizen
Sept. 5
A student reported his wallet stolen from Pierpont Residence Hall.

An individual with a key stuck in the vehicle's ignition was referred to Amherst Towing.
Sept. 7
The owner of a vehicle in parking lot 11 was notified of lights left on.
The owner of a vehicle in parking lot 11 with a dead battery was assisted.
Sept. 8
Several individuals were reported stuck in an elevator in Washington Residence Hall. The elevator technician was en route.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Sept. 6
A vehicle in parking lot 29 had a window broken; one speaker was stolen, the other speakers were ruined.
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 49.

Disabled Motor Vehicle
Sept. 5
A disabled vehicle blocking the roadway on Stockbridge Road was reported; the owner arranged for a tow.

Disturbance
Sept. 7
A fight in progress on Sunset Avenue was reported to the Amherst Police Department.
There was a report of beer bottles being broken on the Southwest Residential Area Mall.
A fight in progress was reported on University Drive. Neil M. Harris, 21, of 351 Park St., Brookline, was arrested for malicious destruction of property exceeding $250.
Sept. 8
A fight in progress was reported in Gorman Residence Hall. Individuals were gone upon arrival.

Drug Law Offenses
Sept. 5
The odor of marijuana was reported in Coolidge Residence Hall.
Sept. 6
The odor of marijuana was reported in John Adams Residence Hall.
Sept. 7
A resident of McNamara Residence Hall reported receiving an envelope containing marijuana slipped under the door.
A drug bong was confiscated from an individual on University Drive.
The odor of marijuana was reported in Kennedy Residence Hall.
Sept. 8
The odor of marijuana was reported in Washington Residence Hall.
The odor of marijuana was reported in Gorman Residence Hall.
The odor of marijuana was reported in Leach Residence Hall.

Health/Safety Hazard
Sept. 5
The odor of smoke was reported in Dickinson Hall.
Sept. 6
An alarm in Marcus Hall was accidentally activated.
Sept. 8
A burning odor was reported in McNamara Residence Hall; it was unfounded.

Larceny
Sept. 5
A theft of posters and cassette tapes from the Student Union Ballroom was reported.
A radio was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 44.
A backpack was stolen from Whitmore Administration Building.
Sept. 6
A terminal adapter unit was reported stolen from a bag in the University Store.
A mirror was stolen from Mary Lyon Residence Hall.
Sept. 8
Items were taken from a room in Brooks Residence Hall.
Laundry previously reported stolen was found in John Adams Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations
Sept. 5
Alcohol was confiscated from underage individuals in parking lot 50.
Sept. 6
Alcohol was confiscated from an underage individual in Cance Residence Hall.
Alcohol was confiscated from an underage individual in parking lot 49.
Sept. 7
Alcohol was confiscated from underage individuals in parking lot 33.
Sept. 8
Alcohol was confiscated from underage individuals in parking lot 22.

Medical Emergency
Sept. 6
An individual in Brown Residence Hall with an alcohol overdose was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Noise Complaint
Sept. 5
An individual complained of loud drumming in Clark Memorial Garden.
Sept. 6
A loud stereo was turned down in Gorman Residence Hall.
Sept. 7
Bongo playing on the steps of Brooks Residence Hall was reported.
There was a report of breaking glass at Hampden Dining Commons. Police were unable to locate.
A loud party was quieted in McNamara Residence Hall.

Parking Complaint
Sept. 5
A Parking Office tow was conducted in parking lot 63.
A vehicle was towed from Presidents Drive for parking violations.
Sept. 7
A vehicle was towed from Lewis Residence Hall.

Suspicious Vehicle
Sept. 5
A vehicle in parking lot 11 with a traffic barrier on its roof was removed.
Sept. 6
A citation was issued to the owner of a motorcycle who left his motor running, unattended, by Grayson Residence Hall.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Sept. 5
An intoxicated individual created a disturbance on Orchard Hill Drive.
Sept. 6
Parties were reported urinating in public in parking lot 50.
Housing staff of Wheeler Residence Hall was notified about an individual on the roof.
A loud explosion was reported on Chancellors Drive. An area search was negative.
There was a report of fireworks outside Kennedy and Coolidge Residence Halls. The area was quiet upon arrival.
Sept. 7
A Resident Assistant from Field Residence Hall reported having trouble convincing a non–resident to leave. The individual was gone upon arrival.
Two individuals in a minor altercation at the Mullins Center were reported; neither party wanted to press charges.
Sept. 8
Individuals were reportedly throwing objects at vehicles from Van Meter Residence Hall.
There was a pursuit and altercation with an officer in parking lot 71.
Individuals were reported camping out, waiting for morning ticket sales at the Mullins Center.
An underage individual was reported carrying a beer ball by Tobin Hall.
To individuals were reported sleeping in a vehicle in parking lot 32.

Traffic Stop
Sept. 6
A vehicle was stopped for a crosswalk violation on Campus Center Way.
Sept. 7
Robert L. Layton, 22, of 1232A Beacon St., Brookline, was arrested on Governors Drive for driving with a revoked license and for operating a motor vehicle not meeting safety standards.
Sept. 8
Ryan Gregory, 20, of 19 Briarwood Dr., Manchester, CT., was arrested for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, and reckless operation of a motor vehicle.

Vandalism
Sept. 5
A machine was vandalized in Butterfield Residence Hall.
Sept. 6
A window was broken in Moore Residence Hall.
A magazine was set on fire in a rest room in Crabtree Residence Hall.
An antenna was bent and windshield wipers were broken on a vehicle in parking lot 32.
Posters were strewn on the floor of Cashin Residence Hall.
Sept. 7
Graffiti on the stairwell walls of Field Residence Hall was reported.
Bad dents on a vehicle door in parking lot 22 were reported.
An object was thrown through a vehicle window on Eastman Lane.
A card access unit was damaged at Kennedy Residence Hall.
A card access unit was damaged at Coolidge Residence Hall.
A newspaper box was tampered with on Presidents Drive.

Warrant Service
Sept. 6
Keith N. Darrow, 20, of 217 Auburn Ave., Staten Island, NY, was arrested in Mackimmie Residence Hall for negligent operation of a motor vehicle.

Weapons Violations
Sept. 5
An individual wearing an illegal metal studded bracelet in the Textbook Annex was reported.

9¢ a minute FROM 9 P.M. to 9 A.M.

It pays to be a college student.

Sprint gives you long distance the way you want it—plain and simple. Just 9¢ a minute from 9 p.m. to 9 a.m., whether you use your Sprint FONCARD, call from your college residence or call collect. And we'll give you 30 free minutes just for signing up.
Pretty simple, huh?

9 cents. NO NONSENSE.

Call 1-800-795-1162

Sprint

Check us out on the Internet: www.sprint.com (look for College).

Certain restrictions apply. Standard surcharges apply to FONCARD and collect calls. The surcharge for station-to-station calls is $2.25. On some campuses you may not be able to get this service for on-campus housing 1+ dialing. A one-time credit of up to $4.60 will appear on your first full-month's invoice.
©1996 Sprint Communications Company, L.P.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief — Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager — G. Tony Morse Production Manager — Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager — Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
MarkMcGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliot News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Rob MacDonald Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegiate Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Attack of the 10–foot condoms

Mike Burke

These pests need to be exterminated. No, not those annoying flies who enjoy my food, but those damn corporate sponsors who insist on hounding me about a new credit card or car. Get off my campus. I have no interest in your special introductory rate that lasts 60 minutes, plus I can barely afford books, not a new car. Leave. Now.

Yesterday, the campus lawn was invaded by alien balloons taking the shape of a giant condom package and deodorant stick. Do we really need a Trojan packet taller than my house? I know Trojan offers good protection, but not that much protection.

But if safe sex isn't for you, hop on over to the AT&T booths that follow me around campus like a sick, lost dog. Get free stuff if you sign up for an AT&T card that doubles as a phone card and a credit card. What a concept! This way you can use your new credit card to pile up your phone debts. What a combination! Think of the hours of free phone sex— well, at least, free for 30 days until you get your bill which may easily be larger than Anna Nicole Smith's... well you get the picture.

Is kissing more your thing? Good because now with Pearl Drops toothpaste, your teeth can be whiter than ever. Plus I learned yesterday in Cooperate Fair 101 that now Pearl Drops has an improved taste. All right! Life is good.

These cooperate fairs are examples of UMass at its ultimate worst. Do we have to suffer this outright, disgusting form of commercialism in order to get a free stick of Arid XX deodorant, for that extra protection? I would rather have the entire campus smell like the Dead Mall, than see another 30 foot bottle of Lipton Iced Tea challenging the Tower Library for air space.

Fortunately the library will still be standing long after the Lipton Iced Tea has been deflated and transported to another innocent campus. Is education still this University's goal? Or are we stuck in a four year advertising campaign where we are nearly brainwashed (seeing 10 foot condoms early in the morning does strange things to the mind) into running up credit card bills so we can't even afford tuition.

So what happens now? I am assuming someone at this University makes a pretty penny off this operation but where does this money go? Hotels in New York City to watch our basketball team? New cars? Why not new books so students can learn the harmful results of rampant commercialism that plagues our nation as a whole, and more and more, the Pioneer Valley.

How soon will it be when a giant Wal–Mart hovers over Amherst much like the space–ships in Independence Day. Someday we may never see the sky because everyone will live inside Wal–Mart. It may happen.

Over the past year, several international and national chains have stormed the Valley. Take a ride down Route 9 and you will pass relatively new stores for Blockbuster Video, Chili's and Media Play— suddenly the road looks like every other highly commercialized two lane highway in Amerika.

These same chain stores are tearing apart the fabric that once made the Pioneer Valley a safe haven away from the greedy chains. Slowly, local businesses are falling under as the nationals take over business. Are the days of mom & pop stores over? Please say no.

Amherst and downtown Northampton haven't suffered greatly yet, but the wave may soon topple them too. Kudos to Antonio's for crushing McDonald's business in town. Ronald McDonald must feel pretty stupid when 30 people are waiting in line for a slice of goodness while McDonald's stays empty. Then again, he probably eats at Antonio's too.

And no, CVS isn't really your neighborhood drug store, though these days they are in every neighborhood. But don't worry, the money isn't staying in your neighborhood it's probably heading out to zip code 90210.

So what can we do about this tidal wave of commercialism? Boycott. Simple isn't it? Support local businesses, they need you a bit more than the Pepsi Cooperation or whoever else owns this pollutant mess that is spilling over the Valley.

Fortunately in the Valley there are scores of local restaurants and merchants who need your support so they can eat. They are just like you and me so please help them out.

Don't make the wrong choice— you may find yourself in a giant Wal–Mart filled with ten–foot condoms and deodorant sticks. And you thought the campus lawn looked bad yesterday...

Mike Burke is a Collegian Columnist.

Seeing beyond the accent

Seema Gargatirkar

We complain a lot about our professors.

It's a natural thing. We hate the way they grade, the way they teach and the way they dress. And if they can't speak good, clear English, it's just another thing to pick on.

Never mind that the professor standing up in the front of the room is erudite enough to deliver a lecture in a language that is not native to him, forget that this person is probably hailed as a genius in his own country. Instead, we focus on that imperfect English and never really take a moment to discover the person behind the voice.

In high school, my physics teacher was from Vietnam. His accent was as bad as his handwriting. But by the time I walked out of his classroom in the spring, I no longer wondered why someone whose English was so hard to understand was teaching an upper level physics class.

He knew we had difficulty understanding him, but instead of becoming aloof, he shared with us the cultures and experiences of his native country — eliciting a response from his students.

Every Friday, instead of conducting class, he talked to us about his experiences growing up in Vietnam during the war and its affect on his family — his father was dragged off to prison for supporting the Americans.

He talked about mined rice paddies. He talked about how his mother lost her job because she was a doctor. He talked about families being separated and homes being lost.

His stories about finally escaping from a detention camp and making his way to freedom through Cambodia and finally to Singapore were the stuff of war–time adventure novels.

Except this was real and the someone who had experienced this "adventure" was standing in front of us, writing Newton's equations on the board.

And he isn't the only one.

There was a woman working at the K–mart in my hometown. She had come from Bosnia six months ago after spending six months in a refugee camp. Despite the fact that she hardly knew any English, she had found herself a job and was making the best of being away from her home.

I have often wondered why people come to the United States. It can't be an easy choice to come to a country where you don't know the language. It's hardly a simple task to arrive in a country where the only recognizable symbols are Coca–Cola and McDonald's.

But thousands of people come every year. They cross the shark–infested waters between Florida and Cuba, they slip under the fences between Mexico and California.

And not once do we think about asking why they are here. We don't ask why they left their homes and families because we think we already know the answers.

It's because of the opportunities the United States offers. In terms of welfare, jobs and education, the United States comes out ahead of all other countries in the Western Hemisphere.

But it's the situations we don't think of. We don't consider Bosnians and Serbs trying to hold onto what is left of their lives. We hardly spare a thought for the Chinese dissident or the Cuban refugees looking for the chance to speak their minds.

It takes a special kind of courage to overcome personal misfortune and immigrate to a new country. It takes a lot more than learning to speak English flawlessly.

So the next time you hear a heavy accent, try not to tune it out. After all, if you listen carefully enough, you might learn something new.

Seema Gargatirkar is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Globe assault hits the mark

To the editor:

In my opinion, Mark McGrath (Globe, be not proud, 9/4/96) is right on target in his assessment of the Boston Globe's reason for publishing its editorial about the Project Pulse cheating survey.

A member of my staff and I spoke to several members of the press after we released the results of the survey. We tried to explain to each reporter that there really was no story here. College students cheat and they have been cheating at about the same rates for decades.

We carefully explained about cheating rates discovered at other institutions based on similar surveys, and we noted that the UMass rate actually seemed low compared with other institutions.

We provided information from several news stories and academic journal articles. Some reporters seemed interested while others certainly were not. The Globe reporter falls into the latter category. The reporter was not interested in making comparisons to other institutions.

Mark McGrath noted that if colleges in Boston had high cheating rates, the Globe would not be interested in pursuing a story. Well, in fact a 1993 Boston Herald story indicated that 83 percent of MIT students cheat. While I do not know if the Globe ignored the story then, it certainly was not interested in writing about it now within the context of the UMass figures.

Gary D. Malaney
Director
SARIS

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

I'm Back!

Tara MK Connelly

Many people are probably wondering why I am still writing for the Collegian after boldly announcing my departure from this hallowed office last May. Well, two words: French 240. In fact my foreign language requirement is the only thing standing between me and that diploma which my Mom can proudly frame and hang up in the living room.

It is the only thing that is keeping me from being an alumni and hounded by the Telefund for donations. It is the only thing keeping me from clocking in at four years with no loans (a collegiate feat that some find impossible, God bless scholarships). On the other hand, it is the only thing keeping me covered on my Mom's health insurance, the only thing that is keeping from bursting into the real world penniless and therefore not such a bad thing after all. Procrastination... it should be a major.

> "It's awful to be left behind, because everyone who already graduated will call you up and say, 'I've gotten interviews with X,Y and Z,' and you can say that you watched wannabe hippies dance by the campus pond during the Free Tibet concert."

Not that I did it intentionally. I was a real go–getter when I first arrived. I completed all my general education requirements by the end of the first semester of my sophomore year. I was taking courses for my major by the second semester of that same year and safely esconed in the journalism department my junior year. I anticipated graduating a semester early. I was doing sooo well— but...

Yes, but. But I am the type of person that has always had things come easy for them. You know, the person who could get A's if they applied themselves, but got B's because it required less effort. The person who could bang out a 12– page report the night before it was due and not break a sweat. The person who always managed to keep one foot out of it no matter what. Until now.

I just couldn't get French. It just took up too much time. I had those papers to do, the Collegian to work at and all my other classes. I'd spend from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in classes and then come down to the newsroom until 10 p.m. I didn't have the time or patience to study vocabulary, verb tenses and genders. I never wanted to go to France, never had a burning desire to be bilingual. I just really, really disliked it. And it showed. I either get it or don't give a— well, you know, about it.

I have no intention in staying any longer at the University of Massachusetts than necessary. The Valley has become a little too happy and frankly, I'd like to see a little more cynicism and un–PC behavior. My sarcastic nature needs to be fed and right now it's beginning to starve. But I can't leave unless I learn to parlez–vous with the best (or at least up to the intermediate level).

So all of you who think to blow off your general education requirements do it ASAP because once spring semester rolls around 100 level courses will be packed with seniors who just need one more 1 or SBD to march across the football stadium. Besides, seniors deserve to be able to start class at 11:30 a.m, it's only natural after having to put up with an 8 a.m. in Mahar back when first year students were freshmen and it was okay to rag on them without fear of a lawsuit.

It's awful to be left behind because everyone who already graduated will call you up and say, "I've gotten interviews with X,Y and Z," and you can say that you watched wannabe hippies dance by the campus pond during the Free Tibet concert. They can be racking in nine bucks an hour, while you're making five shelling out free advice in a college newspaper. You're stuck in limbo between not really being a student, but not really being able to commit to the real world. For lack of a better adjective — it really sucks.

So as I dodge another semester's worth of students (is it me or are their even more people milling around?), watch in amazement as members of the class of 2000 get their free goodie bags and navigate their way around the sea of tables in the Campus Concourse, do not be surprised to hear me mutter under my breath, "Je, tu, il, elle, nous..." cause come December I may not be ready to live in Paris, but I sure as hell will be ready for the real world.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

The return of Seuss... almost

Dan Levenson

Writing editorials for the Collegian is a lot like trying to balance a rabid raccoon on the end of your nose while serving steaming bowls of chili to an angry horde of water buffalos.

Sometimes you make it, and sometimes you don't.

Attending college, on the other hand is not unlike trying to chew the wings off 1,000 perturbed hornets while playing the soundtrack to The Goonies using a tin can and a straw.

Sometimes you make it, and sometimes you don't.

It's only been three days since we started classes, and already I can smell the smoke of burnout in the air. Well, maybe not burnout, and certainly not boredom. I have enough things to do to keep me quite busy for the next three years.

Maybe it's because things don't seem as exciting to me this year as they did last year. There just doesn't seem to be anything new. Maybe familiarity really does breed contempt. Not that I dislike UMass. In general I find it a pretty nifty place. For the most part I really like the people, and my classes aren't all that bad either.

It still feels like summer. Or spring. Or something in between. It's not fall yet. There aren't 459 feet of snow covering campus, so winter isn't here.

I find myself caught in some weird Collegian limbo.

There are many ducks, but only one swan.

There are many dining halls, but only one Campus Center.

I saw this episode of "COPS" where this dude drank a bucket of paint to get high.

The last few lines are fairly unrelated, except that they attempt to illustrate the reduced level of consciousness that I seem to find myself existing in on a regular basis.

At times I feel like I'm caught in some weird existential Dr. Seuss book. But maybe that's just me. "I will not go to class today, I will not go there anyway."

I do not like to go to sleep,
I do not like to go beep–beep.
I do not like to do my work,
my math professor is a jerk.
I do not take a math class now,
wow, wow, wow, wow, wow, wow.
UMass dining is a joke,
on their wretched gruel we choke.
Chewing bubble gum is cool,
as long as you don't start to drool.
Dave Matthews band really rocks,
the Clintons have a cat named Socks.
Bats can fly although they're mammals,
in Egypt people ride on camels.
Citrus fruits can prevent scurvy,
many roads at school are curvy.
If you'd like to leave a message, go ahead.
That last line wasn't very rhymy,
The bottom of a dumpster's grimy.
Seagulls like to steal your food,
they are very, very, rude.
If a Seagull steals your food,
tell him that you think he's rude.
The last four lines were about nifty seagulls,
don't be offended, owner of beagulls.
The good old Seuss would make up words,
like shertlut, herduif, getrerjords.
I know the song that gets on everybody's nerves. And so do all my friends. And we're going to sing it until they release every captive isopod being held in aquariums around the world.

An isopod is a primitive little life form, found in various places. I don't know if any are really being held in aquariums in the world, but if they are, they should be released.

I don't think I'm conscious, but my eyes are open.

Goodnight.

Dan Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

Do you have opinions? Would you like to write for the Collegian? A meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office.

Arts & Living

Astromen blast off in Pearl St.

COURTESY CHRIS TOLIVER

The galaxy's finest, Man...or Astro–man blew away Pearl Street with their intergalactic space rockers.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

MAN...OR ASTRO–MAN?
Pearl Street
Sept. 8

NORTHAMPTON — Lightning, Theremins, spacesuits, sci–fi flicks — it was all here as Man...or Astro–man, the prototype space alien band blasted into Pearl Street, Sunday night with an hour long crazy set of intense surf punk.

Dressed in vintage spacesuits, Coco the Electronic Monkey Wizard and Dexter X boarded the stage while their bandmates Birdstuff and Starcrunch dressed down in more traditional "earthly" clothes.

But the audience was all set for the ride as soon as the lights dimmed and the Astromen made their entrance to the sounds of sampled sci–fi soundbytes.

Much of the evening's set comprised of punked–up instrumental rockers that would have made Dick Dale proud. The band claimed their vocals on the instrumental tunes registered on a frequency that we, earthlings, can't comprehend. Later in the set, Man...or Astro–man? sang, in English, on a couple tracks including "U is for Uranus."

Throughout the show, the intensity was on high as the band jumped, and tripped, all over the stage. The guitarist, Starcrunch, on one of his many moments of craziness, actually fell into the crowd. While on the dance floor, a backpack caught onto his guitar. Moments later, in a search for potential bombs, Starcrunch investigated the earthling's bag. No bombs were found.

Coco led the band switching from bass to homemade instruments when not flirting with the crowd. Near the end of the set Coco played with his Theremin — an antique electric instrument he recently adopted.

On stage, the band reconstructed parts of their research laboratory, crowded with old television sets tubes and lightning makers. Old sci–fi flicks were screened on a white backdrop set up behind Birdstuff, the drummer.

While Man...or Astro–man? may sound like a novelty to the uninitiated, they are far from a joke. As a band they are a tight unit that jams fluidly together although at times their songs sound familiar. At their best, Man...or Astro–man can not be beat for enjoyment or energy, they are simply a terrific band— even If they weren't from a distant land and dressed in space costumes.

As expected, the crowd danced throughout the hour long set, even though the club was absolutely packed to the max. With barely enough breathing room, the club's temperature rose and rose but the crowd and band never let up. It was pure fun for all.

The Henchmen, from Michigan, opened with a thrilling set of garage punk rockabilly.

Pumpkins pump Civic Center

Rob Stevens
Collegian Staff

SMASHING PUMPKINS
Providence Civic Center
Sept. 8

PROVIDENCE — The Smashing Pumpkins' sold–out show Sunday night at the Providence Civic Center swung through the spectrum of emotions and left many glorious memories. To get fans pumped the concert began with a pre– show build up as the P.A. system pumped out the instrumental title track to their current album Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness.

The Pumpkins, lead by their crazy space–suited leader Billy Corgan, walked out on stage to thousands of adoring fans who were screaming and raising their fists. Just seconds into the first song "Zero," the Pumpkins were caught in the midst of yet another scary and potential concert–ending situation — the latest of a series of tragic events that has plagued the band this summer.

The Pumpkins are back on tour following the drug related death of their road keyboardist, Jonathon Melvoin, and subsequent firing of drummer Jimmy Chamberlain for his involvement in the incident.

Earlier in the summer the band became the focus of the media's attention after a teenage fan died in the middle of a mosh pit at a show in Ireland.

Sunday night's show began as a potentially life threatening display of public disobedience that almost ended the show. The energy of the music combined with the band's "Lollapallooza moshing" image caused an instant uproar by Providence Pumpkinheads.

Before the show began, the floor of the Civic Center was lined with portable chairs, but as soon as the Pumpkins began "Zero," people who had seats stood up and put their chairs over their heads passing each and every chair back or to the side of the floor. From the side of the floor, the chairs looked like a bunch of crowd surfers.

Corgan and guitarist James Iha stopped the show right away and asked for the lights to be turned on, Corgan exclaimed, "It's time for you losers to forget about the whole Pearl Jam/MTV thing, that's old, this is 1996."

Amazingly, it took only about two minutes for all of the people on the floor to safely pass back every single chair and dump them into appropriate heaps of useless seating apparatuses. Very quickly all the chairs were passed and the Pumpkins started their set for the second time a rock 'n' roll show of humongous power.

The band pulled out all favorites from their latest heavy–metalish album, including "Bullet with Butterfly Wings," "Where Boys Fear to Tread" and "Tonight, Tonight." Although the crowd obviously favored, and looked forward to, the more mosh friendly songs, they were also delighted by the Pumpkins' sensitive and warm side. "1979" and "Disarm" featured Corgan on acoustic guitar, enchanting and silently encouraging all those rock wannabees to sing along in chorus.

Turn to Pumpkins page8

William Burroughs keeps beat going

By Panagiotis Gianopoulos
Collegian Correspondent

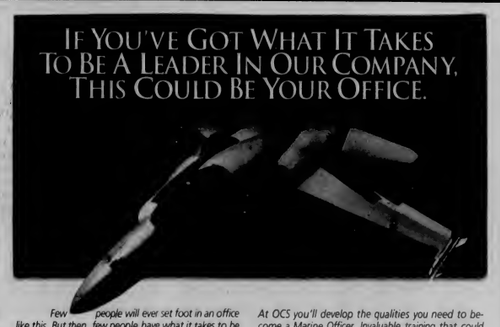
WILLIAM BURROUGHS
My Education: A Book of Dreams
Penguin Books

William Burroughs stands in a hallway, unable to pass because a six–foot snarling rabbit is blocking the way. His pistol jams and his friend Ian turns into a cat and leaps out the window. Confused? This is only one of the many bizarre and confusing episodes recounted in Burroughs' latest book, My Education: A Book of Dreams.

If you haven't already guessed, My Education, is all about dreams. Imagine transcribing your dreams for 30 years in all their incoherence and then tacking them together into 200 pages. Now have someone else read them (Hint: they make very little sense).

It should be quickly noted that Burroughs still manages to shape his dreams into an entertaining and surprisingly affecting book. Using only bursts of simple language, Burroughs paints an eerie portrait of life while dreaming. The remarkably difficult task of describing a dream is smoothly accomplished again and again.

The key, it seems, is simplicity. With only a few, faint lyrical strokes, a phantom of an image has been created and the reader has entered Burroughs' mind. Burroughs thankfully eschews overdone attempts at fragmented language to elicit sensations of surrealism.



The events are surreal enough; he merely dabs out the scene and lets the reader experience it. Delivered subtly, the dreams initially feel as normal as yesterday's lunch and then it hits. A CIA man with a shrunken head? Breakfast on planet Venus with John Brady?

While My Education consists of disconnected

Turn to BOOKS, page8

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 / 3 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 • So. Amherst • 256-0080

IF YOU'VE GOT WHAT IT TAKES TO BE A LEADER IN OUR COMPANY, THIS COULD BE YOUR OFFICE.

Few people will ever set foot in an office like this. But then, few people have what it takes to be a Marine Officer. Officer Candidates School (OCS) is the first step towards preparing you for a future beyond anything you could imagine.

Marines — The Few. The Proud. The Marines.

At OCS you'll develop the qualities you need to become a Marine Officer. Invaluable training that could lead to an exciting career in aviation. If you've got what it takes to be a leader of Marines, you could get an office with a spectacular view.

MARINE OFFICER

Underclassmen Welcome!

- RESERVE A SPOT AT FLIGHT SCHOOL FOR YOURSELF AS EARLY AS YOUR FRESHMAN YEAR AT UMASS
- NO COMMITMENT UNTIL AFTER YOU GRADUATE
- FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE OF UP TO $ 4,050 UPON COMPLETION OF INITIAL TRAINING
- CANDIDATES IN THE AVIATION PROGRAM ARE ELIGIBLE FOR 25 HOURS OF FLIGHT LESSONS DURING THEIR SENIOR YEAR OF COLLEGE
- OVER 20 USMC OFFICER CAREER FIELDS TO CHOOSE FROM

REQUIREMENTS:

- ATTEND OFFICER CANDIDATE SCHOOL THIS SUMMER
- HAVE GOOD ACADEMIC CREDENTIALS AND BE IN TOP PHYSICAL CONDITION

If you are interested in learning about Marine Corps Officer Programs, see Captain Peters at the Newman Center, between 10 and 2 on Wednesday, 11 September, 1996 or

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL: 1-800-255-USMC

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES — Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles • Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus • Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS — Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step • Boxercise • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB — 460 WEST ST. — 50. AMHERST — 256-0080

RUSH
ΣΣΣ
for more info. call Jess at 549-9248

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Beauty Nail
A professional nail service using the highest quality products.
MANICURE & PEDICURE $25.00
Full Set of Nails $25 • Fills $15
Air Brush & Design . Gift Certificates Available
We guarantee all the work we do.
31 CAMPUS PLAZA • HADLEY (Behind Pizza Hut)
253-4756
OPEN MON.-SAT. 9:30 A.M.-8:30 P.M.

Emergency Medical Training
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Part Time / Evening
Classes start September 16, 1996
Call UMass Continuing education at 545-0474

The Road to building your resume...
Junior or Senior SOM preferred; all may apply
Applications available until September 13th
Any questions contact Alycia or Peter. 545-3500

The Collegian is Looking for a
Marketing Manager

Emmys

Emmys fail to excite

Ceremony offers no surprises, no glitches

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — To reverse the sort of comparison being made a month ago, "The 48th Annual Prime-Time Emmy Awards" was the Republican National Convention of awards telecasts.

That is. Sunday's Emmy show was sleek, fast-moving, mostly glitch-free, even more surprise-free, and timed down to the minute — some 180 of them.

The winners, uniformly gracious, got on and off with the split-second efficiency of — well, the speakers at the G.O.P. convention.

For their part, the awards presenters dutifully read what was written for them and made it work. (Although the scripted banter between "NYPD Blue's" Dennis Franz and Jimmy Smits flopped so badly they couldn't help sharing a grin and a groan at the writers' folly. "We TOLD 'em," Franz reminded Smits.)

Aired live by ABC from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, the Emmy telecast sported a particularly handsome set — modern and majestic — complete with onstage orchestra.

There viewers saw their favorite stars behaving nicely, and found out who won. They were subjected to no song-and-dance numbers. No teeth-grinding comedy sketches. No interminable tributes.

The biggest gaffe was when presenter Christine Lahti mispronounced winner Greta Scacchi's name. (Hint: It's not "SKAT-chee.")

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Dennis Miller

And perhaps the evening's most brazen display was an unavoidable one: Emmy herself, that tacky trophy that host Paul Reiser accurately described as "a nickel-plated bird-woman holding up a whiffle ball."

Otherwise, under executive producer Dick Clark, the program was free of pretension and attitude. It was downright tasteful.

Also a mite bland?

Maybe what was missing was what made the Republican Convention crackle: a Colin Powell or Elizabeth Dole sort of interlude. (Even Oprah Winfrey, on-hand as an Emmy assistant host, didn't do it "Oprah-style" as Liddy Dole did in San Diego.)

A lump-in-the-throat finish would have found Angela Lansbury, at long last, winning Best Actress Emmy for her final season of "Murder, She Wrote." But she didn't.

Nor did anything else happen to make the evening, and the show, an event.

More successful was a fancifully edited montage of actors' entrances and exits through decades of shows. As Reiser noted, "You've got to have a door."

As host, Reiser, star of NBC's sitcom "Mad About You," supplied the right touch of brisk impertinence. In his opening monologue, he cautioned that with his jokes, as with the evening's awards nominees, only one out of five would be a winner.

Of course, he had a far better average.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Tony Bennett

"Frasier," "ER," take home top honors

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — NBC's "Frasier" proved to be just what the doctor ordered as the "Cheers" spin-off landed its third consecutive Emmy for best TV comedy.

"Frasier" producer Peter Casey thanked the TV academy at Sunday's 48th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards for honoring the show about an egotistical psychiatrist able to solve everyone's problems but his own.

"More importantly, we feel it sends an important message to the pompous, the long-winded and the incessantly fussy of America. It says, 'Yeah, there's a place for you,'" he added.

There was, it seemed, a place for everyone at this year's awards. No one show dominated the program — not even the top-rated "ER." The NBC hit was named best drama but failed to capture a single performing award for its ensemble cast.

After several years of nominations, Julia Louis-Dreyfus and Helen Hunt won statues for their comedic roles.

"A lot of people say our show is about nothing, but of course it has been about plenty of something for me," said a tearful Louis-Dreyfus, named best supporting comedy actress for her role as Elaine on NBC's "Seinfeld" in her fifth bid.

Hunt was chosen best actress in a comedy for her role as young wife Jamie Buchman on the NBC series "Mad About You."

"I'd like to thank Paul Reiser, Paul Reiser, Paul Reiser, Paul Reiser, Paul Reiser," Hunt said of her co-star, who also hosted the awards ceremony.

John Lithgow took the best comedy actor award for role as his egotistical alien commander in NBC's "3rd Rock from the Sun," it was his second career Emmy.

Kathy Baker was named best dramatic actress for her role as physician Jill Brock in the now-cancelled "Picket Fences," while the best actor award in the category went to Dennis Franz of "NYPD Blue" for his portrayal of tough, vulnerable police detective Andy Sipowicz.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Itzhak Perlman

NBC led the networks with 20 Emmys, including nine awarded Sunday and 11 presented Saturday. HBO was second with a total of 14; ABC followed with 12, CBS with 11.

Ray Walston snared a supporting actor award for "Picket Fences," while Tyne Daly collected her fifth Emmy in 10 nominations, winning this time for her supporting role as Miss Alice in CBS' canceled school-teacher drama "Christy." Her previous Emmys were from the "Cagney & Lacey" police series.

"The Larry Sanders Show" won its first Emmy after 30 nominations as Rip Torn was honored as best supporting actor in a comedy series.

"ER" defeated a strong field for best drama series including "Chicago Hope," "Law & Order," "NYPD Blue" and "The X-Files."

"Oh boy, oh boy, oh boy," said producer John Wells.

Emmy awards offer a night of winners

Winners at the 48th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards:

DRAMA SERIES: "ER," NBC.
COMEDY SERIES: "Frasier," NBC.
MINISERIES: "Gulliver's Travels," NBC.
TELEVISION MOVIE: "Truman," HBO.
VARIETY, MUSIC OR COMEDY SPECIAL: "The Kennedy Center Honors," CBS.
VARIETY, MUSIC OR COMEDY SERIES: "Dennis Miller Live," HBO.
ACTOR, DRAMA SERIES: Dennis Franz, "NYPD Blue," ABC.
ACTRESS, DRAMA SERIES: Kathy Baker, "Picket Fences," CBS.
ACTOR, COMEDY SERIES: John Lithgow, "3rd Rock From the Sun," NBC.
ACTRESS, COMEDY SERIES: Helen Hunt, "Mad About You," NBC.
ACTOR, MINISERIES OR SPECIAL: Alan Rickman, "Rasputin," HBO.
ACTRESS, MINISERIES OR SPECIAL: Helen Mirren, "Prime Suspect: Scent of Darkness," PBS.
SUPPORTING ACTOR, DRAMA SERIES: Ray Walston, "Picket Fences," CBS.
SUPPORTING ACTRESS, DRAMA SERIES: Tyne Daly, "Christy," CBS.
SUPPORTING ACTOR, COMEDY SERIES: Rip Torn, "The Larry Sanders Show," HBO.
SUPPORTING ACTRESS, COMEDY SERIES: Julia Louis-Dreyfus, "Seinfeld," NBC.
SUPPORTING ACTOR, MINISERIES OR SPECIAL: Tom Hulce, "The Heidi Chronicles," TNT.
SUPPORTING ACTRESS, MINISERIES OR SPECIAL: Greta Scacchi, "Rasputin," HBO.
PRESIDENT'S AWARD: "Blacklist: Hollywood on Trial," AMC.

EARN A FREE TRIP!

Council Travel, the nation's student travel specialist, is looking for an outgoing and highly motivated person to distribute our Student Travels magazine, promotional flyers and other student discount information on campus at U Massachusetts, Amherst.

If you're not shy, have a few extra hours a week, and enjoy spreading the word about student discounts, contact us for more details!

The person hired for this position will be a representative of Council Travel in Amherst. Preference will be given to the individual available for the academic year and who has an active interest in marketing and working, studying, or traveling overseas.

To arrange for an interview, please contact Nicole at 256-1261, Monday through Friday, between 9:00-5:00. Ask about the Campus Rep program.

Council Travel
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002

L.B.G.A.
(Lesbian, Bi-Sexual, Gay, Alliance)
Weekly info socials every Tues. 7pm
Campus Center Rm. 803
Sponsored by:
The Grotto — Kitchen Now Open — Northampton's Own Gay Cafe, Bar & Dance Club — ★ GAY ★ LESBIAN ★ ★ BISEXUAL ★ FRIENDS ★ ALLIES ★ — 25 West St. Northampton 413-586-6900
for more info call 545-0154 or stop by our Student Union office
Look in the weeks ahead for the L.B.G.A.'s first dance at the Grotto.
Mon. Sept. 23rd

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 Student Special
Amherst Athletic Club Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0080

TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog – (413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
Drivers Wanted
for AM Paper Delivery
Must have car or access to car
Hours 7:45 - 10:15 a.m.
Please contact Rob McDonald or Alycia Hines @ 545-3500

Just a little further...
MATTHEW I. SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN
Bridgett Nowd (Wildlife Biology, Class of '97) struggles against the laws of physics to win a T-shirt.

Puerto Ricans prepare for Hortense

By James Anderson
Associated Press

PONCE, Puerto Rico — Islanders boarded up windows and lined up to buy water, then rushed to the beaches Monday to watch the sea, churned by the outer edge of a strengthening Hurricane Hortense.

The National Weather Service hurriedly issued a hurricane warning for Puerto Rico late Monday morning and authorities posted a hurricane watch for the Dominican Republic's south coast. Skies blackened throughout the day. Hundreds of tourist yachts, sailboats, house boats and government vessels sought shelter in mangrove swamps in bays of southwestern Puerto Rico.

From 100 miles off St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands, waves the height of a house crashed over the 15-foot pier where cruise ships anchor at Frederiksted. Winds howled and gusted near 70 mph, driving sheets of rain that covered roads with 4 feet of water and flooded homes.

Forecasters called Hortense, the eighth storm and third hurricane of the Atlantic season, volatile and dangerous. It comes on the heels of Hurricane Fran, which skirted the Caribbean before slamming into the eastern United States late last week, killing more than two dozen people.

Forecasters said there was a 6 percent chance the coast of Florida could feel the effects of Hurricane Hortense by Thursday morning.

"These storms are crazy. I pray it doesn't veer toward us," Jose Escobar said, perched on a ladder to board up the window of the store where he works in Ponce, a southern Puerto Rican city renowned for its Spanish colonial architecture.

Escobar hurried to finish work so he could go home to wait out the storm with his wife and five children.

At 5 p.m. EDT Monday, the center of Hortense was about 95 miles south-southeast of Ponce, the National Hurricane Center near Miami said.

Hortense was moving toward the west-northwest at 7 mph and was expected to gain in force Tuesday, it said.

Hortense grew to hurricane strength Monday and enlarged to a 470-mile-wide mass, with sustained winds near 80 mph in the center and weaker tropical storm-force winds toward the edge.

Hortense also changed direction, stalling south of St. Croix then drifting in a northwest direction that would bringhurricane-strength winds dangerously close to Puerto Rico, the hurricane center said.

Carmen Emilia Rodriguez, 69, was getting ready to evacuate her 84-year-old mother and a 91-year-old neighbor from their tiny beachfront homes. Already, waves were slapping the rocks 10 feet in front of the porch.

Search for Irish peace settlement resumes

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Politicians resumed their search for a Northern Ireland peace settlement today but bickered over a death threat hanging over the head of the province's most notorious pro-British militant.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, Protestant leader of the Democratic Unionist Party, formally demanded the expulsion of politicians linked with Northern Ireland's so-called "loyalist" paramilitary groups. He also refused to meet with them.

Negotiations aimed at finding a way to govern Northern Ireland began in June at Stormont, the center of British administration in suburban east Belfast. They involve eight local parties, the British and Irish governments and former U.S. Sen. George Mitchell as chairman.

The IRA-allied Sinn Fein party, which represents one-third of the north's Roman Catholics, is barred because the Irish Republican Army resumed bombings in February outside Northern Ireland. All talks participants have been required to give an oath endorsing six principles, penned by Mitchell, that bind them to use "exclusively peaceful and democratic means" — effectively, to renounce violence.

Loyalist commanders have maintained a 23-month-old cease-fire as the price for remaining in the negotiations that resumed today after a six-week break.

But last month they issued a death threat against two loyalist rebels who were demanding that they strike back against the IRA. Paisley's party last Wednesday publicly stood alongside one of the threatened men, 36-year-old Billy Wright, dubbed "King Rat" because of his vicious reputation in loyalist circles.

Paisley's deputy, Peter Robinson, said his party was defending Wright's "right to free speech" and added: "If you're going to have talks based upon democratic principles, then you can't go around threatening people with death."

Catholics and loyalist leaders say Paisley's party is itself violating the Mitchell principles by allying itself with a man widely blamed, though not convicted, for many killings of Catholics.

Mitchell, in consultation with the British and Irish governments, has the responsibility for barring any party because of its actions. Negotiators are expected to meet three days each week until December.

But public expectations are low. no new IRA cease-fire is in sight and Catholic-Protestant relations are at a low following a summer dominated by street clashes between Protestant marchers, Catholic protesters and police.

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL & PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION

FREE TRIAL CLASSES
MUSIC • ACTING • DANCE
SEPTEMBER 9-13
CALL: PAD (413) 545-0519 • 73 BARTLETT HALL • UMASS

Fall Bike Sale

MONGOOSE

	Was	Now
Treshold	$299.95	$259.95
Switchback	$329.95	$289.95
Sycamore	$369.95	$349.95
Hilltopper	$419.95	$389.95
Alta SX	$734.95	$599.95
IBOC O-GSX	$999.95	$899.95

KONA

	Was	Now
Hahanna	$469.95	$379.95
Fire Mountain	$529.95	$409.95
Lava Dome	$629.95	$539.95
CinderCone	$849.95	$625.95
Kilauea	$1049.95	$874.95
AA	$1249.95	$1074.95
Explosif	$1699.95	$1449.95
Kula	$1949.95	$1649.95

Bicycle World
Greenfield • 104 Federal Street • 774-3701
Amherst • 256-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St. (rear)
Our new location Northampton • 52 Masonic St. • 586-9100
Serving the Valley's Cyclist for Over 25 Years

■ baseball

continued from page 12

Speaking of mid-'80s Mets superstars with drug problems getting a second chance with the Yankees. How 'bout Darryl Strawberry? The Straw has been tattooing the ball since his call-up, and has yet to embarrass himself in left field.

The additions of Strawberry and Cecil Fielder give the Yankees serious power threats from both sides of the plate for the stretch run.

Speaking of the stretch. Hey Cecil, I thought pin stripes were supposed to make you look slimmer.

• Andruw Jones, an Atlanta rookie, looks to be the next stud to come out of the Braves phenomenal farm system.

As a matter of fact, he looks so good that after next season he may force Atlanta management to get rid of either Fred McGriff or Dave Justice. Both veterans will soon become very expensive, McGriff is getting old and Justice seems to injure himself every year.

If the Braves were to dump McGriff, they could move Ryan Klesko back to first base, the first position he switched to after being drafted as a pitcher, and Jones would be in left field. If Justice was to leave, Jones could roam the range in right for the Bravos.

Atlanta is in a win-win situation with Jones, they just have to keep in mind how they got the team to this level: by building from within and showing faith in young talent.

• Three thousand dollars. That's a good chunk of change for most drug-free college students. The Red Sox were so blinded by Kevin Mitchell's personality, I guess, that they signed on the dotted line a contract that allotted the Round Mound of Rehab $3000 per plate appearance.

Three grand for striking out. Three Gs for not even swinging the bat and taking a walk. Three thou every time he got hit in his meaty shoulder.

To further put his "earnings" in perspective, if Mitchell played a full season (assume about 650 plate appearances) he would make about two million per annum — isn't that the league minimum now-a-days?

I worked my butt off this summer, 40 hours a week on a construction site. I made about $2500 for about 400 hours of work. Real work. Actual physical labor. I wish I could hit home runs.

• Ozzie Smith, one of the greatest shortstops in major league history, is making his farewell tour around the NL with the surging St. Louis Cardinals just as three youngsters are starting to make their mark in the bigs at that same position.

The most prominent of whom is Seattle's Alex Rodriguez who has made himself a legitimate MVP candidate in the junior circuit. A-Rod leads the league in hitting and has developed good power hitting in front of Ken Griffey. He is a slick rangy shortstop who reminds most people of another great, Cal Ripken.

The young shortstop who most emulates Smith is the Mets' Rey Ordonez who makes the highlight reel at least once a night with his tremendous range and spectacular plays.

Ordonez, like the Wizard, is prone to prolonged batting slumps, but can ignite a rally with a big hit from the bottom of the lineup and can run.

Carving a niche all his own is the Yankees' rookie shortstop Derek Jeter. He is as steady as they come and is poised to be this summer's AL Rookie of the Year. Jeter can hit for average and fair power. He has good speed, sure hands and better-than-average range.

• Nomar Garciaparra. Need I say more?

Well, I will anyway.

Garciaparra is without a doubt the prize of a continually ascending Red Sox minor league system. More than that, the former Georgia Tech Yellow Jacket is maybe the best all around shortstop prospect to hit the majors since...well, he's better than Alex Rodriguez!

• One year to the day that Cal Ripken, Jr. immortalized himself as Major League Baseball's most durable player ever, baseball's most unassuming superstar ever joined the most exclusive of all statistical clubs.

Before him, only Hank Aaron and Willie Mays had managed to accomplish the feat that may best reflect the purity of a hitter's prowess.

Eddie Murray joins Aaron and Mays as the only three hitters in big league lore to record 3000 hits and 500 home runs in a career.

This from a switch-hitter who you never hear about; a player who has never won an MVP award, a batting crown or a home run title. This from a consummate teammate, friend, All-Star and all-around good guy.

This from maybe the greatest hitter of his era.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

■ books

continued from page 5

realms, they all originate in Burroughs' head. Consequently there are recurring themes and characters. A cast of old friends, people turning into cats, levitating, being unable to find breakfast and pistols that won't fire can be found every few pages.

Also, many of the dreams take place in the Land of the Dead, recognizable by its presence of dead people (naturally), as well as empty restaurants, turnstiles and assorted depressing urban architecture. Though these recurring themes never coalesce into the semblance of a plot, they serve as a rudimentary and reassuring set of symbols, like a few familiar colors in a chaotic painting.

Among the dreams surface occasional commentaries by an awake Burroughs, touching on painting, politics, narcotics and the people he has known. Burroughs makes the reader experience the past and present at the same with the repetition of images and looping dreams.

Incredibly, by the end of the book, the dreams have been granted an engaging context. They are an intimate passage into Burroughs' unconscious and with a bit of deciphering from Burroughs himself, My Education grows into a memoir of sorts.

Towards the end, there are moments when the dreams reveal pieces of his past, regrets, mistakes and bitter loss. These pared down honest reflections take a long time to arrive, but when they do, they justify every random three sentence blurb it took to get there. A-

Borque familiar face in Bruins' camp

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

WILMINGTON — There are 33 players in the Boston Bruins training camp who weren't with the team last year — and one who seems to have been around forever.

Ray Bourque is back for his 18th NHL season. Still healthy at age 35, he remains one of the league's best defensemen and has no timetable for retirement.

"The fire's still there and I still enjoy playing the game and physically I feel good," he said Monday. "As long as those things continue, I think I'll do well."

The Bruins captain has seen dozens of teammates come and go since joining the team in 1979.

Last Thursday, he watched with regret as Cam Neely, after 10 seasons with Boston, tearfully announced his retirement because of a degenerative hip condition.

"It's not a surprise to anybody, but it's a sad day when one of your good friends and a great teammate isn't going to be around anymore," Bourque said last Thursday when the high-scoring Neely departed.

Neely was plagued by injuries for most of his last five seasons. Bourque has been much luckier.

The most games he missed in any season was 20 in 1988-89 when he had a knee injury. Last season, for the first time in his career, he played all his team's games.

He was chosen a first-team all-star for the 12th time last season, matching Gordie Howe's NHL record, and has been either a first- or second-team all-star 17 times, the only player in NHL history to achieve that in all his seasons. He has won five Norris Trophies as the league's best defenseman.

Barring injury, Bourque should become the Bruins' leading scorer before the midpoint of the season; he trails Johnny Bucyk's total of 1,339 points by only 26. And Bucyk played 1,436 games for Boston compared to Bourque's 1,228.

"It's a young man's game, but mentally I still think as a young man," Bourque said. "I feel I'm very fortunate. I played with quite a few guys now that have had to end their careers because of injuries and I've been very blessed and very fortunate to stay healthy."

Bourque averages 30 to 35 minutes of ice time for each 60-minute game. Last season, coach Steve Kasper indicated he'd like to cut down that time. It never happened.

"If I wouldn't play that amount of time, I don't think I'd be as effective," Bourque said. "It's tough sometimes when you get into a stretch where you're playing maybe 34, 35 or 33 minutes a game, but that doesn't happen all that often."

As the Bruins' best defenseman, he plays on power plays and kills penalties, boosting his ice time. But he stays in excellent shape, even in the offseason.

"I think they're going to cut down my minutes when I'm not doing as well or I slow down," Bourque said. "I feel great physically. I'm ready to go again."

Despite his individual achievements, he's never won a Stanley Cup.

"People aren't expecting much from this team, and I like that position where you're an underdog and you have to overachieve," Bourque said.

He expects at least two more chances to win the Stanley Cup. He'll be 37 when his contract expires after the 1997-98 season. And after that?

"If I feel healthy and still enjoy myself and am still effective, I'm going to keep playing," Bourque said. "How many years? It depends on how things are going."

■ Pumpkins

continued from page 5

A special treat, "Siva," the only song played off of their debut album Gish, reminded the audience of the band's innocent youth and impact on today's music.

After playing a long set of songs including the hit singles "Today" and "Cherub Rock" the Pumpkins returned for three encores totaling seven songs.

The encore, "Tales of a Scorched Earth," represented much of their song style throughout the night — reminiscent to the band's style on Siamese Dream. After explosively starting each song, the band often found its way into spacey jams filled with psychedelic images and drowned-out distortion.

Throughout these experimental portions, Corgan ruled the stage, pumping his fist in the air shouting and screaming lyrics of dark poetry before building the song back into its triumphantly raging score. Also during the encores, the Pumpkins featured two new songs, which followed this truly artistic pattern and rocked the house, giving the audience members yet another reason to cheer.

Overall, this was one of the most impressive concerts that the New England area has seen in a long time, a definitive smash o' pumpkin rage.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139
4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

I got mine at Zanna!

Black zip jacket

Gap X jeans

Steve Madden oxfords

ZANNA
downtown
Amherst

Everything.
- Complete multimedia computer customized for students
- Campus Z-Station® features:
  - Powerful Intel® Pentium® processor
  - Large capacity hard drive
  - Plenty of memory to run today's hottest applications
  - Plug & Play into your campus network with a high-speed modem
- Desktop Systems Include Microsoft® Natural® Keyboard and Microsoft Mouse
- Loaded with Microsoft software for study and fun
  - Microsoft Office for Windows 95 with Word, Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Microsoft Access, Schedule+, Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, Microsoft Internet Assistants
  - Microsoft Windows 95 with Microsoft Internet Explorer 2.0
  - Microsoft Plus!
  - Games for Windows 95
  - Norton AntiVirus and more
- Hewlett Packard Color DeskJet available
- Ask about Microsoft Programmer's Dream Pack

Processor	Pentium 100 MHz	Pentium 133 MHz	Pentium 166 MHz
Hard drive	1.2GB	1.6GB	2.1GB
Monitor	14" (13.2" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)
Price	$1799	$2199	$2499
with LAN card	$1899*	$2299	$2599

Experience Campus Z-Station.
The University Store
413-545-2619

Z STATION
http://www.zds.com
education@zds.com

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Sweet Potato Fries $2.50
Lite Potato Skins $2.50
Fried Cheese Onion Ring $2.98
Watch the World Go By From Our Greenhouse!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

FOOTWEAR DEN
~ Sizes ~
Men's: 6-18
Women's: 5-12
Brand Name Athletic and Casual Footwear
Specializing in Running Shoes
CLOSEOUT PRICES
321 Main Street, Amherst • Down the street from Amherst Police Department

ROAD CLOSED
DETOUR
Not to us!
We're going straight ahead for treatments and cures for 40 neuromuscular diseases.
MDA
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717
People help MDA... because MDA helps people.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Kickin' It

Senior midfielder Joe Jacobson travels with the UMass men's soccer squad into Central Mass. for a match against Holy Cross

■ pay 'em

continued from page 12

in college athletics is a necessary evil. Having our huge tournaments and high caliber competitions beamed into your living room costs lots of money. At the same time there are people who know how to work the system and can make considerable money from it. Enter agents.

If collegiate players knew they would be getting some kind of compensation from their school after graduation, would they be as likely to wine and dine with illegal agents? I don't think so.

Again, I'm not implying that players take illegal gifts and cash because they don't have time to hold down a part time job. However, if they knew that they would receive something from the school in the way of compensation, they could keep temptation at bay. At the same time, the NCAA only meets once a year and tends to be very reactionary. Rules won't necessarily be passed until something has already gone wrong.

Some of this can fall on coaches as well. Look at the recent "Bozeman Incident" on the west coast. I'm not implying that Bozeman was driven to corruption to field a competitive squad. But with a squad of wealthy alums and some shady middlemen, an obsessive coach (like Bozeman) can scare up a few grand to pass on to a recruit and ice the deal.

Take a look at the schools and areas from which many of these athletes are coming. A lot of these guys are not graduating from the best school systems with the best education money can buy. To some, it is more the dream of playing in the NBA than the college degree that has led them to the NCAA. This isn't the most moral and wholesome outlook, but it's true. When someone puts a set of car keys in their face or a wad of cash in their pocket, it's hard to resist temptation.

The bottom line is, most Division I college athletes are shooting for the pros and in many respects the NCAA has become a minor league for the NBA and the NFL. Many of the top athletes are looking to go pro before they are looking for a career, and thus they get caught up in a system. Why wait to cash in when they can score now? Until the schools realize that they have a responsibility to give their players some of their profit, the whole messy circle will continue.

I am not implying that there are not some coaches out there who work hard to do their job as legally as possible (read: John Thompson). However, the problem remains and will remain until something is done.

Chris Stamm is a Collegian columnist.

■ just play

continued from page 12

basketball game). If I could get my tuition bill paid off doing back-flips in the nude on the Mullins Center floor before a cast of thousands, I would, but... for the sake of artistic license, do not quote me on that one.

My friend has said that with this whole debacle, concerning the presence of shady agents and dodgy alums, the compensation policy would eliminate most, if not all, of their influence. Sorry, once again, agents will always be quite shady, and overzealous alums will always be quite dodgy. The NCAA can not enact enough rules to quiet people whose main motivations are: to further use and abuse their prospective client, with no regard for their university; and, to further use and abuse their school's prospective superstar, and in this case, with too much regard for their university.

But hey, wait a second, the way that this compensation thing has been put forth is that only the big money sports would be included. How about the other sports? Would only the big money sports get the benefits of the television dollars, the local, national and possible international marketing income, etc.? I do not think so.

I have covered some teams on this campus that put as much, if not more, effort into their respective sports as the more "popular" sports, with a fraction of the recognition from the student body, athletic department and, yes, the media.

There are athletes that compete on Garber, Totman and Lorden Fields that experience the same problems that we all possess (see beginning of article), and I do not see them complaining. I do not want to hear that they do not make the university money, they just "make" the university because they fight for the maroon and white for the sake of pride alone.

Never mind all this unprofitable pride stuff, the legal ramifications are immense. The NCAA is already a part of big business, and with the decision to pay athletes, you might as well make it into a professional league. Just take a look at the respective financial problems of the major professional sports over the past few years, and ponder that.

The money that the University makes should be put where we all benefit, the University. We are the ones that built the Mullins Center, not John Calipari. And also, have you ever eaten the DC food before? I have, once... once.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

The Collegian is like Brussels Sprouts... You just have to read it.

Fix in the mix between Tyson-Seldon?

By John Nelson
Associated Press

The crowd screamed "Fix!" and that was OK. Under the circumstances, what could you expect them to scream? "We want our money back?" They know that won't fly in Vegas.

But when Jim Gray, Bobby Czyz and Steve Albert, the three announcers doing the Mike Tyson-Bruce Seldon fight on pay-per-view Saturday night, bought into the hysteria, that was inexcusable. Gray was the worst, and although he should have known better, he apparently couldn't resist the flow of emotion from the fans. And Czyz? He's a good one to talk. He's under investigation for quitting a fight.

His house better not have many windows in it.

Tyson stopped Seldon 109 seconds into their fight on King Vision-SET, Showtime's pay-per-view arm. Most of the viewers who plunked down $39.95 for the show knew what they were getting — a short fight.

But when Gray came out to interview Seldon afterward, he looked stunned — like a blue-haired old lady had just clocked him with a roll of nickels for moving in on her slot machine.

Gray stuck his chin out defiantly and asked Seldon: "OK, what happened?" He looked like a guy who had money on the loser. Seldon said he wanted to win, and Gray interrupted: "There would be those who would question that. The whole audience is yelling 'Fix!' It didn't look like you were hurt that badly." Again, Seldon tried to explain, and Gray burst in: "You seem all right now and you were just knocked out a few seconds ago. You seem all right now!"

Seldon again pleaded his case. "I'm a professional fighter," he said. "I had the heavyweight title," he said. "I went against the baddest man on the planet," he said.

Unable to brow-beat a confession from Seldon, Gray tried referee Richard Steele, who had just rescued a rubbery-legged Seldon from sure disaster. No confession there, either.

If he wanted to do a full reporting job, maybe Gray should have explained that fighters who get knocked out early quite often recover quickly because they haven't taken much punishment. Maybe he could have explained that when a punch spins a fighter's head around like the kid in The Exorcist, they often go down and stay down. Instead, Gray took the cheap way out.

At that point, Czyz turns to Albert and says, "I know he has a bad chin and he probably didn't want to take a beating. I don't think he was hurt as bad as all the staggering and wobbling he did."

Now, there's some expert testimony. Czyz is under investigation by the New York State Athletic Commission after quitting a fight against Evander Holyfield last May 10 under mysterious circumstances, claiming Holyfield had rubbed a foreign substance into his eyes.

At least Seldon admitted he got beat up.

"I think the screaming fans have a legitimate gripe," Albert said. "There are those who are displeased and some will feel there's something amiss, something awry."

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

GRANTS FOR ART
Call the UMass Arts Council today to learn more about grants to UMass organizations for dance, music, theater, visual arts, film and other art related events on campus.
UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
545-0202

CAPTAIN VIDEO
549-6016
19 MONTAGUE ROAD NORTH AMHERST
BETWEEN SUPER 10 PLAZA & CUMBERLAND FARMS
OPEN MON-THURS 10AM-9PM FRI. SAT 10AM-11PM SUN 12-9PM
2 MOVIES for 3$
ONE COUPON PER DAY PER CUSTOMER
CANNOT BE COMBINED WITH OTHER OFFERS & ONLY $3.00 THEREAFTER

COMPUTER FAIR MULLINS CENTER SEPT 14 10AM-3:30PM
Tri-State Fairs: Original Area Shows since 1987
Buy at wholesale prices directly at the show from nearly 50 independent competing companies under one roof. From full systems to shareware, it's all here
Located on the campus of UMass. Rte 9 onto Rte 116N at Staples taking first exit, turn right
This is a discount ticket. General admission is $7.00 each. Clip or photocopy this ad and save $2.00 ea
Our dealers feature the IBM/PC marketplace. Join us four times a year. Kids under 10 free with parent
Don't over sleep, one day show only!
ONE MONTH FREE INTERNET AT THIS SHOW FROM TIAC
Try Tri State Fairs Computer Shows

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES
Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles
Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus
Tectrix • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS
Hi/Low • Reebok Bench Step
Bowerzies • Yoga • Area's Largest Aerobics Space • Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST 80. AMHERST 256-0080

The Boltwood Project
Recruitment Nights
Attend Only One
Monday, September 9 or
Tuesday, September 10 or
Wednesday, September 11
6:30-8:30 pm in the Campus Center Auditorium
Recruiting University and Five College Students interested in earning up to two credits while providing community service to the Amherst area
For More Information call 545-6753

• Haircutting
• Hair Color
• Permanent Waving
• Tanning
• Extensive Professional Products Available
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526
189 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

Sampras defeats Chang, Graf stuffs Seles again

By Bob Greene
Associated Press

NEW YORK — When the 137 mph serves had disappeared at the far end of the court, the rackets packed away, the year's final Grand Slam tournament a two-week memory and the National Tennis Center awash in rain, the champions reigned — again.

Pete Sampras survived, not only the firepower from across the net, but a gut-wrenching quarterfinal in which he was barely able to walk off the court a winner.

Steffi Graf, on the other hand, thrived, showing once again that despite the convoluted computer rankings there's really only one No. 1 in the women's game.

Sampras counts Grand Slam tournament titles as the measure of his success. The U.S. Open triumph was his only major one of 1996, but the eighth of his career and fourth at the National Tennis Center.

"This definitely saved my year," he said.

He is now in elite company, tied with Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl for major titles and only three behind the Open era record of 11 by Bjorn Borg. The all-time mark is 12 by Roy Emerson.

John McEnroe also has won the U.S. Open four times, one less than Connors.

"These past two weeks I have played my share of great tennis and poor tennis," Sampras said Sunday after brushing aside Michael Chang in the title match 6-1, 6-4, 7-6 (7-3). "I got through the [Alex] Corretja match and I never thought I would be here as a winner. But I fought hard and played the best match of the tournament today against Michael, so it really saves my year. It really does.

"It wasn't a bad year, but this will definitely make the rest of the '96 season very enjoyable to play."

To become the first American to successfully defend his U.S. Open crown since Connors in 1983, Sampras was forced to go five sets against Jiri Novak of the Czech Republic, ward off the laser serves of Australia's Mark Philippoussis and Croatia's Goran Ivanisevic as well as survive — there's no other word for it — his five-setter against Corretja.

"I never thought I'd be here as a winner," Sampras said of his newest title. "This is the most difficult [championship] I ever won. The ranking was up for grabs, but the title is so much more important than the ranking. I wanted the title."

Part of the reason was the Corretja match in which he vomited on the court and seemed at times unable to continue, only to pull it out when the Spaniard double-faulted on match point.

Then there was the loss of his close friend and coach, Tim Gullikson, who died in May from brain cancer.

"I was thinking about him all day and all during the match and things he told me to do on the court," said Sampras, who looked skyward after his win over Chang. "I still feel his spirit, and even though he is not with us, he is still very much in my heart, and I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for his help."

Any one of several players — Sampras, Chang, Thomas Muster, Chang, Yevgeny Kafelnikov and Ivanisevic — could conceivably have taken over the No. 1 ranking by winning the U.S. Open. Sampras put all that nonsense to rest.

Likewise with Graf, who is co-ranked No. 1 with Monica Seles, this year's Australian Open champion. And like Sampras, Graf has enough emotional problems to be considered beatable.

She admits her off-court problems are affecting her. Her jailed father Peter is on trial in Germany for evading taxes on $28 million of her income. She remains under investigation.

"It was really, really difficult to play this tournament," said Graf, who beat Seles 7-5, 6-4 in Sunday's final. "I could actually have taken over the No. 1 ranking by winning the U.S. Open. Sampras put all that nonsense to rest.

But that hasn't stopped Graf's hurried pace toward being the best ever to play the sport. It was her third Grand Slam tournament title of 1996, her sixth consecutive Grand Slam tournament win, and her 21st Grand Slam tournament crown. Graf trails only Margaret Smith Court, who has 24 major singles titles.

"Steffi is clearly No. 1," Seles said. "Everybody can see that."

Parcells takes heat for Pats slow start

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FOXBORO — There was a time when a handshake with Marv Levy was cause for celebration for Bill Parcells. There was a time when Parcells would walk off the field drenched with Gatorade, instead of just all wet.

But the two Super Bowl victories — including the one over Levy's Bills — are now long in the past. And with the New England Patriots off to an 0-2 start after a 6-10 record last year, people are beginning to wonder whether coaching is part of their problem. Parcells took several risks in Sunday's 17-10 loss in the pouring rain at Buffalo, most of which were unsuccessful. Each failure could also be attributed to a player's mistake, of course, but whether Parcells fulfilled the coach's duty of putting his players in position to win is the question of the week.

"You second-guess yourself. You think about calls you made, especially when they don't work," he said Monday when asked to grade himself and his coaches. "You think about all those things. No doubt about it. Probably more than you know.

"[But] don't try to get me to say, 'Well, I coached great, but we lost,' if that's what you're trying to get me to say. So, I'm not saying that."

Bad read again, coach. Few at the press conference thought the coaches were being dragged down by the team, and not the other way around.

For example:

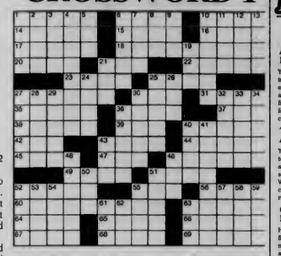
With three minutes left and the game tied 10-10, Parcells accepted a holding penalty when declining it might have forced Buffalo to punt from the New England 42. After a delay of game penalty (because the Bills correctly read the Patriots blitz and needed to call an audible), Jim Kelly hit Quinn Early on a slant route to turn a third-and-23 into a 63-yard touchdown.

Parcells said he called the blitz because he knew the Bills would try the slant route. And Ricky Reynolds was in position to tackle Early for a harmless short gain, but didn't.

"We knew that he was going to run the play that he ran," Parcells said. "We should have made that play."

On the final play of the game, with New England facing a third-and-goal with no timeouts and four seconds left, Parcells called a draw to David Meggett. His reason: passing had already failed twice. Also, Meggett created a passing threat and kept Buffalo honest.

But the line missed a block and Phil Hansen stopped Meggett at the 2 as the clock ran out.



"If I had it to do over again I'd do the same exact thing," Parcells said. "That play should have scored. That play should have scored...I thought it was our best shot. That play should have scored."

A fake field-goal attempt was read perfectly by the Bills. "That's a good call by them, though. That's a guessing game on both sides," Parcells said.

Levy had lost three straight to Parcells, plus the biggest game the two ever faced off in, the 1991 Super Bowl. The Giants' victory on Scott Norwood's missed field goal elevated Parcells towards the realm of coaching genius while saddling Levy with the loser label.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0060

CROSSWORD 1

ACROSS

1. Under
6. Cats' feet
10. Baseball hit out of play
14. "___ a Piano" (Z wds.)
15. Has debts
16. Ingrid's role in Casablanca
17. Wafted
18. Feigned
20. Soothsayer
21. Skeleton, for one
22. Dated
23. Misrepresents
25. Brunch or lunch
27. Elliptical
30. Egg ___ yung
31. Lila in DeMille film
35. By hook or by ___
36. Author Silitoe
37. Genetic initials
38. Vats
39. ___ City (Houston film)
40. Glockenspiels
42. Ho's guitar, for short
43. Members of the pine family
44. Eighteome
45. Take heart
47. Fury
49. Kitchen tools
49. Grade
51. On which "du jour" is found
52. Held title
55. Sticker
56. Brood
60. Geometric measures
63. "That girl" who married Phil
64. Tarzan portrayer Lincoln
65. "Wall Street ___"
66. Pointless
67. English money: abbr.
68. No ifs, ___ or buts
69. Cartography collection

DOWN

1. Parts of overalls
2. Author Wiesel
3. Mineral vein
4. Disregard
5. Unite
6. Leo and Pious
7. Wrong
8. Like Willie Winkie
9. Jet-setting transport
10. Ending
11. Poet Sharon
12. Exploits
13. Do dock work
19. Clean air gp.
21. Bear barrel
24. Readies a printing press
25. Encircling trenches
26. Vast age
27. Befall
28. Truck stop?
29. Misplaces
30. Warning light
32. Babbits
33. Sunrise
34. Braid coverings
36. Burning
38. Area above the flank
41. Junk-mail addressee
43. ___ to be tied
46. Oscillation
48. Cookbook item: abbr
50. Lemon refresher
51. Prepares to paint windows
52. Poetic works
53. Droop
54. Appellative
55. Talking horse (2 wds.)
57. Ph.D. postulant's exam
58. Arm bone
59. Little piggies
61. Airline letters
62. Baird's time
63. Alice star

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
You're running on adrenalin and pure instinct. Work off some of your excess energy by exercising or debating with a friend. Just make sure it stays friendly and not too competitive. Look for new challenges in the days to come.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
You're sensitive this week, especially to distractions. Do what you can to avoid excessive noise, but don't be surprised if it's everywhere you turn. When asking for something, make it clear exactly what you want, or you risk a painful misunderstanding.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Head outdoors to enjoy a taste of the first fall weather. It will refresh your mind. A friend may need a little extra attention and understanding. Be sure that your own mixed feelings don't get in the way.

CANCER
June 23-July 22
A hectic pace and tons of loose ends keep you hopping throughout the week. Toward the weekend, wind down with a trusted friend and a favorite movie. Focus on improving your diet to help manage stress. Some extra vegetables could be just the thing to help you feel better.

LEO
July 23-August 23
If you're feeling as though you're stuck in a rut, try something new. Start to exercise, change your routine—expect the unexpected, and you'll feel the difference immediately. You will hear news from a distant friend or relative.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
You're feeling centrary this week, so use it to your advantage. Thinking about something from a different or unusual angle could pay big dividends—you might just have a burst of genius. Keep a low profile if you're anticipating a big change.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
The change of seasons could be making you feel a bit melancholy. Take to the outdoors to perk up your mood a bit. Whatever you do, don't take your moods out on someone close to you. That person could be feeling a bit fragile, and you don't want to hurt any feelings.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Don't be afraid to tackle the big problems this week—you're chock-full of energy and enthusiasm. On the home front, stick to more routine pleasures to put a mate or loved one at ease. Too much change could be making that person unhappy.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
If you're feeling overloaded, try delegating some of your responsibilities. Don't be surprised if others are as busy as you are, however. Instead of working harder, try working smarter. At home, a new development brings happiness.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Work is the name of the game this week. Focus on your long term goals while you're in the office, but keep your work behind when you step out the door. After all, too much work and not enough play could mean burnout and boredom.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Pay your dues early in the week and then just sit back and enjoy life. Take to the outdoors with your family or a close friend. Collect a few leaves to bring back as a reminder that there's more to life than just work.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
An investment you made awhile ago is beginning to pay off. It's exciting, but don't get rash—just continue on the path you've chosen. If you're feeling bored, consider taking a class. Learning to dance or cook, or even draw, could be just the thing.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Performing Arts Division offers Group and Private Instruction in music, theater and dance. Registration for Group Instruction runs Sept. 3-15, 1996. Private Instruction is on-going. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMASS, 413-545-0519, for info.

UMASS Women's Ice Hockey Team is looking for new recruits. Come to opening meeting Sept. 12 at 6 p.m. outside the Blue Wall. All levels welcome. For more info call Kary - 546-9171.

Asterisus University Women: Come visit Alpha Chi Omega Open Rush. Sept. 9 at 7:00, Sept. 10 at 6:30, and Sept. 11 at 7:00. Call Sam at 549-8459 for info.

Come meet the sisters of CHI OMEGA at our Open House on Sept. 8 at 1:30, Sept. 9 at 5:30 and our Barbeque on Sept. 10 at 5:30. Call Heather for more information at 549-4742.

Want to start your own fraternity? Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to recolonize our chapter. If interested call Bret Hrbek at 317-334-1898 ext. 214.

All University woman invited to attend Sigma Kaps Open Rush. Thurs 9/5 5-7 pm Sun 9/8 6-8 pm Tues 9/10 5-7 pm Thurs 9/12 6-8 pm. Please call Beth for more info. 256-6987. Located 15 Allen St. (Behind Hillel)

SIGMA DELTA TAU welcomes you back!! We invite you to our house for Open Rush Sept. 5 and 10, 8:30-8:30 and Sept. 11 7-9. Any questions Call Lori 549-8573. Located on 409 N. Pleasant.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Buick Century SW Good condition. $1,000 BO. Contact David 549-8273.

'86 Ford Escort Runs good, tires in good condition, new starter, very little rust. $800 call Bryan 586-0363.

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK, 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done. $2900 OBO. Call 549-7286.

'83 MITSUBISHI MIRAGE 40 miles. $2500 or best offer. 367-0384.

1985 Dodge Aries Wagon $550- runs well. Call Jen @ 549-4138.

EMPLOYMENT

INTERNS WANTED (http://www.takeme.com) Need creative, innovative individuals. Graphic Gurus, Inspired Writers, Human Net Bowsers. For quick cash - weekly scholarships.

EMPLOYMENT

Child Care Thurs 2:30-9:00 p.m. Northampton area. Car needed. $8.00. Call Joan 584-8086.

Part-Time Jobs for the environment. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434.

Largest Student Travel Planner on East Coast looking for Campus Reps to promote Kodak Spring Break Trips. "Guaranteed" lowest package prices and best incentives. You handle the sales we handle the bookkeeping. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre, Orlando & Key West. Earn BIG $$$ and/or FREE TRIP(S). GREAT FOR RESUME!!! Call 1-800-222-4432.

NOW HIRING! COFFEE SHOP AND HATCH Now have positions available working during lunch Mon-Fri. Come down and see us or call 545-0016 or 545-2587.

PART TIME JOBS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434.

New Hiring part-time telemarketers. Morning, afternoon and evening hours available. Earn $6.57 per hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777.

School Bus Driver 10 hours a week, afternoon, $10.00/hour with free health club benefits. Must have a Class 2 DPU license. 586-0633. Call or apply in person. Kid Sport, Rte. 9, Hadley.

Want the toughest job you'll ever love?? People is a student-run business is seeking highly motivated undergraduate work-study and non-work-study students for long term commitment. Learn to co-manage a small business, gain invaluable leadership skills, and have a blast! Applications available at the Center for Student Businesses Student Union, Room 408, or the Market. EOE.

Counter/Kitchen Help 25 Hr/Week. Must be able to work late nights and weekends. Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst.

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710.

Now Hiring Experienced Wait Staff Driver and Hostess. Apply with in only: Kai Chi Restaurant.

EMPLOYMENT

CAREGIVER WITH EARLY CHILDHOOD Experience for two and three year old Monday, Tuesday, or Friday 8-5 car required, references required. 253-2237.

Looking for a fun, responsible companion with own transportation for our 13 year old son. Some afternoons and overnights in our home in Leverett. Call 548-9057.

PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANT For evenings, overnights, and weekends. For male quad. $7.85 per hour. $15.70 for overnight. 6-0666.

RECEPTIONIST: MULLINS CENTER. M-Th 1:30-5:00 pm. F 10:30am-5:00pm. telephone experience required. some clerical. $5.25/hr. MULLINS CENTER 2nd floor to apply.

PAINTERS NEEDED- Now hiring painters for the greater Amherst area. Hiring quick and reliable painters. Experience preferred, but not required. Starts at $7/hr., plus bonuses. Part-time or Full-time. Contact Dan Wolman at Student Painters, 1-800-829-4777.

Cruise Ships Hiring- Earn up to $70,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015.

National Parks Hiring- Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50018.

Tropical Resorts Hiring- Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012.

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014.

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015.

Drivers wanted to deliver AM papers. Must be available 7:45-10:15am. MUST HAVE A CAR. Contact Alycia or Rob at 545-3500.

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted Skiers and Snowboarders. Want to ski or snowboard for free and gain sales experience? Write and tell me why. Send letter and resume to: Kevin Moran Stratton Mt RR1 Box 145 Stratton Mt. VT 05155.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742.

FOR SALE

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned. $1,000.00 (413) 253-5383.

Computer, Compaq 486, 8 RAM, 210HD, Software, $750 or B.O. 367-9874 or 253-2822.

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200.00. 586-548-9728.

LAPTOP COMPUTER. IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HD/ with case and extras/ $1100/OBO. Please contact Josh at 256-8966.

BOOKCASES Unfinished pine-24"x36"x5"- 3 shelves- $45.00 + tax- 536-1944.

DAKOTA: Beautiful Husky/Sheperd/Retriever mix. 2 yrs of age, outdoor dog, needs lots of exercise, well-behaved, voice trained, fantastic personality, playful, sweet, good-natured, great in strange environment. Loves swimming, frisbee, other dogs, outstanding around small children. $150 neg. only to good home owner. Leaving the country. Call Tara @ 256-6788.

Trek Multitrack 720 15 in. frame, $250 or BO. Call 253-1602.

Bar size pool table by United. Perfect condition. Includes everything! Interested? Call Scott and Dom @ 256-1088.

Waterbed, Queen Size, semi-waveless, includes headboard with mirror, side-mount padding, 2 heaters, drain/fill kit $150 or BO. Futon couch, twin mattress, metal frame with wood cross supports. $75 or BO. 253-5350. Dave.

FOUND

Pair of glasses in brown leather case in front of Barnard on 9/5. Call The Collegian at 5-3500.

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

Dive Key Largo Earn 2 credits Dec. 28-Jan. 3. 545-2338 or 800-332-0922.

Earn 2 credits learning to scuba dive. Mon., Tues., Wed., or Thurs. 7-10 pm. Call 545-2338 or 800-262-0877.

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed for dark, post-alternative pop/rock. We have EP and Boston gigs. If you are serious and can chill or rock out call Phil 549-5836.

Blues Jam Tues. 8:00 pm. Emerson 112. Check it out!

Guitar Classes start 9/10. Rentals available. First week free. 10 wks / $40.00. ITUG PAD 545-0519.

MISCELLANEOUS

Let your voice be heard! WMUA news is looking for anchors, reporters, producers and more for daily newscasts. No experience is needed. All majors welcome. Stop by our offices at 105 Campus Center or call 545-2876 and ask for Alexandra.

PERSONALS

Choices Not Chances Free contraception education every Mon. and Thurs. 3-4:30 and Tues. and Wed. 7-8:30 in Rm 302 UHS. Men and Women welcome. For more information call Health Education Office 577-5181.

28th Apt is ___

ROOM FOR RENT

Sunderland HW floors, wash/dry, porch, garage. 315+ BEAUTIFUL SETTING!! QUIET! 665-4396.

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083.

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97- Sell trips, earn cash, and go free. STS is hiring Campus Reps/ Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida. Call 800-648-4849 for more information on joining America's #1 Student Tour Operator.

WANTED

Sell me your purple lot sticker. Call Greg w/price 6-7196.

Rates

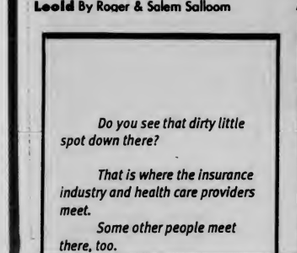
$2.00 minimum/day
Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day
NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

University® By Frank Cho



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Always Wanted one of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Close to Home By John McPherson

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Day

"I'm for abolishing and doing away with redundancy."

–J. Curtis McKay, Wisconsin State Elections Board

Yesterday's Crossword Answers

B	E	L	O	W		P	A	W	S		F	O	U	L
I	L	O	V	E		O	W	E	S		I	L	S	A
B	I	D	E	D		P	R	E	T	E	N	D	E	D
S	E	E	R		K	E	Y			P	A	S	S	E
			L	I	E	S		M	E	A	L
O	B	L	O	N	G		F	O	O		E	P	I	C
C	R	O	O	K		A	L	A	N			R	N	A
C	A	S	K	S		F	A	T		L	O	A	F	S
U	K	E			F	I	R	S		O	C	T	E	T
R	E	S	T		I	R	E		R	I	C	E	R	S
			R	A	T	E		M	E	N	U
O	W	N	E	D			M	A	C		P	O	U	T
D	I	A	M	E	T	E	R	S		M	A	R	L	O
E	L	M	O		W	E	E	K		I	N	A	N	E
S	T	E	R		A	N	D	S		A	T	L	A	S

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Mike Burke
Copy Editor.....Mark McGrath
Photo Technician.....Matthew Simoneau
Production Supervisor.....Brian Inocencio
Production.....Tony Morse, Rob Snow, Thang Vo

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll; Hungarian Noodle Bake; Tacos; Veggie Tacos
DINNER: Mandarin Chicken; Meat Loaf; Ratatouille; Veal Parmesian

Hampden

LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll; Grilled Chicken Sand.; Tacos
DINNER: Mandarin Chicken; Meat Loaf (Not many choices, huh?)

Worcester

LUNCH: Tacos; Ziti/ Italian Sausage Sauce; Veggie Tacos
DINNER: Mandarin Chicken; Garbanzo Beans; Pastabilities; Ravioli Alfredo

Berkshire

LUNCH: Tacos; Broccoli & Cauliflower; Ziti & Sausage; Veggie Taco
DINNER: Mandarin Chicken; Meat Loaf; Pastabilities; Ravioli Alfredo

Sports

Offense is strong, but UM polo loses two of three

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

It would seem logical that in a weekend when your top scorer netted 15 goals, and a two-point goal to boot, that your team would win at least a majority of the games it played.

Well, Brian Stahl couldn't carry the whole load for the UMass water polo squad — getting ejected in the loss to George Washington didn't help — and the Minutemen dropped two of three matches at the season-opening Navy Invitational.

"This is a team that is learning to play together, whereas the other teams are putting a big bull's eye on our back," coach Russ Yarworth said. "We're the biggest game of the year for [most teams]."

The Minutemen started the weekend off right by mauling Richmond, 17–8 in a game dominated by the offensive performance of Stahl and fellow soph Gabriel Marrero.

Stahl tacked eight scores (six goals, one 2–pt. goal) on the board in the contest while Marrero found the back of the net five times.

"I think if Brian plays maturely he'll do well," Yarworth said. "But, he can't major [foul] out of any more games like he did against GW."

Junior Marc Staudenbauer, who Yarworth needs to step into more of a leadership role, tallied six points in the match, scoring a pair of his own and dishing out four assists. Ron Gonen, one of two seniors on the UMass squad, notched three points (one goal, two assists) in the convincing Minuteman victory.

UMass kept the momentum rolling into their next match against the Midshipmen of Navy who previous to the tournament were ranked 14th in the country — just one below the Minutemen's national ranking.

Massachusetts jumped out to a 2–0 advantage at the end of the first quarter playing aggressive defense, but found itself knotted at four after two periods.

The two eastern polo powers traded goals in the third, but things fell apart for the Minutemen in the final frame as their lack of conditioning compared to that of Navy made the difference.

After allowing four goals in the first three periods, the UMass defense caved in and Paul Engin's net was bombarded by an all-out Navy attack. The Midshipmen tallied six goals in the fourth quarter to four Massachusetts goals giving Navy a 10–8 victory.

Stahl again paced the Minutemen, scoring five goals while newcomer Adrian Roman notched a two-pointer and an assist.

Engin held his ground making nine saves despite taking the tough loss.

"Paul played the way we need him to play this season," Yarworth said.

In a game that would eventually go to overtime, the Minutemen came out flat against the Colonials, falling behind 3–1 after one quarter and never really recovering against a lesser opponent losing 16–14.

Despite Stahl's ejection, he paced UMass with four goals in the game, but the Minuteman attack was not slowed thanks to Staudenbauer and freshmen Rich Slingluff.

Staudenbauer scored two goals and handed out four assists tallying 13 points in the three–game set. Slingluff scored the first three goals of his young career in the loss but was one of few newcomers to emerge as well as Yarworth had hoped.

"I'm still waiting for some of our new players to develop," Yarworth said. "Some of them need to step up real quick so we have a bench."

Marrero continued his steady play over the weekend, finding the back of the net twice and dishing out three assists in the GW game.

Engin was not as solid in the final contest of the weekend blocking just five of 21 Colonial shots.

The Minutemen don't have long to recover as the low–flying Boston College Eagles sputter into town to contest the Minutemen at Amherst College on Wednesday night.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Senior driver Marc Staudenbauer played well, but he couldn't keep the Minutemen's heads above water as they lost two out of three this past weekend.

Crusaders up next for UMass

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

A win is a win. This was the case last Saturday for the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team.

Although the team was outshot 21–5 by Boston University in their last game, they came out with a 1–0 victory.

Hopefully, a victory over Holy Cross today will be a little easier to come by.

Despite the poor offensive output by the Minutemen, there were some bright spots in their last game. Goalie Tim Pearson played extremely well, turning away 11 shots, earning a shutout in his collegiate debut. The defense showed an ability to bend, but not break, as it allowed numerous shots, but came up with crucial stops against serious attacks late in the game.

Next up for the No. 17 nationally ranked squad is The College of the Holy Cross in Worcester. It is a non–conference game, but is still important early in the season as the Minutemen look for an identity.

UMass needs to be more aggressive on offense. This responsibility falls to junior forward Mike Butler and senior forward Dave Siljanovski. The two did connect on the only goal in Saturday's contest, however they still need to become more active for the team to be successful.

Along with an increased offensive output, the defense needs to tighten up as well. Even though BU could not find the net, if the D continues to allow so many attempts on their young goalies someone will.

UMass is at its best when they are playing their game, and controlling both sides of the ball. Patient ball movement, with quick strikes to the net is key for the Minutemen, as well as more focused play by the midfielders.

The Crusaders are looking to get off to a strong start in their season opener, after posting a 9–7–1 record last year.

Their top two goal scorers graduated, as did their starting goalie. Although they lost the spiritual core of their team, they still have a talented group of youngsters.

One player to keep an eye on is senior captain Jake McDowell. He is the most proficient scorer of the returning players, and could cause plenty of damage if ignored.

Last season they were outshot and outscored by their opponents; they are not exactly an offensive powerhouse. They are more of a grind–it–out, physical team that likes to slow down the pace of the game. Many of their victories were by one–goal margins.

The Cross is also a young, hungry team that plays with a great deal of energy, The kind of team that hopes to catch its opponents by surprise, and steal games.

This could be a get–healthy game for UMass, as they have the potential to exploit a less powerful opponent. If the Minutemen play within themselves, Holy Cross should not pose much of a problem at all.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Mike Butler, a junior forward for the Minutemen, leads UMass to Worcester to face the Crusaders of Holy Cross.

We all knew the Sox were good?

FRED HURLBRINK JR. — Baseball

Go Sox!

Yeah, we knew it all along. I was behind 'em the whole way. I never doubted for a second. I told you so.

Shut up!

Be a fan or don't. I'm sick of hearing, "They @*#!in' suck" all summer and then watch the same people scramble to get tickets or share their theories on how they knew the Sox were going to turn it around.

At any rate, the Bostons are in the thick of the Wild Card hunt, and are actually close enough to consider themselves contenders in the American League East.

It will take an optimum performance from Roger Clemens in almost every start the rest of the way and continued steady play from sparkplugs Darren Bragg and Jeff Frye — two mid–season pick–ups that are making G.M. Dan Duquette look really good.

Add into the mix Mo Vaughn's MVP–caliber season, a magically rejuvenated Mike Greenwell and speculation of a September return by Jose Canseco. Those sucky Red Sox are about the last team I'd want to play right now.

• Don't even try to tell me that the new football seats in Oakland's Alameda County Coliseum aren't helping the A's just a little bit in their all–out blitz on season home run records.

Sure, Mark McGwire can get his anywhere, but Scott Brosius? Jason Giambi? Even Terry Steinbach has cleared the 30 dinger plateau.

The new boxes in straight away center field block out just about any wind coming in from the bay. It's not too hard to hit home runs in dead air. Look at Vinny Castilla.

• Thanks for the prank calls after Dwight Gooden's no– hitter at the end of last semester. I really appreciated them.

I still don't think he deserves a second chance, but I do respect his determination and the fact that he's making the most of his opportunity.

In contrast, if you want to be honest about things, Doc's numbers this season pale in comparison to the standard he set for himself in the mid–'80s with the Mets.

Turn to BASEBALL page 8

College athletes deserve a stipend

FACE OFF with Chris Stamm

Dollars and sense.

A simple bottom line that comes to the mind of almost every college student. Whether it's in reference to scraping up enough cash to pay next month's rent, or the anxious calculations of how much (or how little) that first post–graduation job is going to pay.

Well, what if your first job comes while you're still in college? In addition to taking classes, you are part of a multi–million dollar money making operation, through which, at the end of the day, your cut is zero.

Granted, this is an oversimplification, yet it is not unlike what is taking place in the realm of major collegiate athletics. With television contracts, sneaker deals, and tournaments with revenues in the millions, the players who sustain this system are getting the short end of the stick. Not to jump too far on the Dickie V. bandwagon, but I think big time college athletes should get a cut of what their school makes off of them. That is to say: Pay them.

Many people argue that athletes already get full scholarships, clothes via team endorsements, and money for books. This isn't enough.

Take a trip to our very own University Store. In the section full of UMass hoop gear, notice the rack packed with team jerseys. I'll wager to bet that in the last year, the best selling jersey number was 21. Why?

Because scores of kids dreamed of dunking on Tim Duncan, making it to the NBA, and owning expensive yet cheesy necklaces (I said it once and I'll say it again, Et tu Marcus?). Anyway, did Mr. Camby receive any profit from the sale of jerseys bearing his number? Pop your favorite college basketball hoop game into your Sega or Nintendo system and check out the No. 21 center for UMass. The likeness to Camby is uncanny, and again, people are making profit off a collegiate athlete's likeness.

Would Michael Jordan allow Nike to use his slam–dunking silhouette to sell shoes for free?

People have to realize that all the money floating around in college athletics is a necessary evil. Having our huge

Turn to PAY 'EM, page 9

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Former Minuteman Marcus Camby is just one of many big names in the middle of NCAA controversies.

Scholarships enough for NCAA athletes

FACE OFF with Jorma Kansanen

Sense and Sensibility.

That philosophy is what I have had to live by in my three– plus years in this academic institution concerning my finances. It is common sense that has allowed me to get by on a shoestring budget, with my grade point average still relatively intact. Talk to me about that one after this semester.

We, as a collective student body, all have to deal with the problems of financial aid, on both personal and academic levels. So, that is why I have a problem with the payment of student–athletes for their services... but, let me explain.

For a student like myself that has had to, in the past, work two paying jobs and one un–paying job (what you are now reading) while still trying to make a vain attempt to handle a full–time workload, and graduate on time, I can not buy... sorry, maybe that is the wrong word... I can not agree to the argument that these athletes are in such a dire need for cash and compensation.

Excuse me, is that a full scholarship that you have been given?

Let me say something in pure economic terms (and yes, you can quote me on this): I will be paying my tuition bill until I retire, or at least, until my future wife and kids move out of the playing card shack we will be living in.

Yes, the marketing and competitive phenomenon that is the NCAA sports juggernaut is a million, if not billion, dollar operation, and has been accomplished by taking advantage of its PTPers.

Yes, these athletes that we wait in line for, in zero degree weather sometimes to possibly cheer our euphorically intense brains out, are representatives of your state university. No matter if they are big or tall, male or female, they all deserve to be singled out and praised for their hard work done in the colors of the maroon and white.

But, hey, they get scholarships... I can not help but Harper, I mean, harp on that fact (if you do not know who Harper Williams is, you should not be going to a UMass

Turn to JUST PLAY, page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 6 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, September 11, 1996

Field Hockey hits the road

Kyle Rothenberger and the field hockey team travel to Boston College tonight at 7:30 p.m. (See Sports, page 10).

"It's the end of the world as we know it."

R.E.M. released their new album Monday night, mixing the best of previous works. Check out the Collegian's review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

U.N. approves Nuclear Test Ban

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to endorse a global treaty that would ban all nuclear test blasts. President Clinton called the vote a "step toward lifting the cloud of nuclear fear."

The endorsement opens the door for the treaty to be signed by U.N. member states, although it must overcome strong opposition from India if it is ever to take effect.

"We are taking the next crucial step toward lifting the dark cloud of nuclear fear that has hung over the world for 50 years now," Clinton said from Kansas City after the 158–3 vote.

"With this treaty, we are on the verge of realizing a decades–old dream that no nuclear weapons will be detonated anywhere on the face of the earth," said Clinton, who is expected to sign the pact when he visits New York for the General Assembly in two weeks.

NATION

Paying off balances could result in fees

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

NEW YORK (AP) — Credit card customers who pay off their balances in full may soon discover that their conscientiousness has a price.

Credit card companies — losing revenue from deadbeats — are looking for new ways to make money, and one is by charging fees to those who avoid interest charges by paying in full or keeping their cards in sock drawers for emergencies.

About 20 percent of GE Capital Corp.'s GE Rewards MasterCard holders fit that description. GE Capital informed those cardholders last week that it would begin charging them $25 per year if they don't carry a balance, even if they don't use the card at all.

GE Capital is the first major card issuer to assess such a fee.

But other credit card issuers have found other ways to collect more money from cardholders.

For example, AT&T in the past year started allowing less time to pay late bills before imposing a $15 fee. AT&T had waited 10 days to charge the fee, but now gives customers as little as one day.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 60	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

UMass in top five for voter registration

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association's (SGA) voter registration campaign scored a huge success by placing in the top five voter registration events on the MTV and Rock–the–Vote's Choose–or–Lose bus tour yesterday.

The SGA campaign, with the help of MassPIRG, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), campus fraternities and sororities, MTV and Rock–the–Vote, registered 1054 student voters.

The number of registrants ranks third behind Syracuse University and Michigan State University, which holds the record of 1300 registrants in one day.

"I think that it is a good event to help raise awareness on voting," said Pat Keating, senior communications disorders major. "I hope that it helps the student body to take the right of voting more seriously and exercise it in the November elections."

According to Jason Vecchio, student coordinator of SCERA, over 70 volunteer canvassers were placed at various buildings across campus from the Whitmore Administration Building to outside the Student Union Building.

"We owe the volunteers quite a debt of gratitude, they really worked hard," said Vecchio.

According to Student Trustee Sean Carter, the number of registrants for the day was affected by the work of resident assistants who distributed voter registration cards last week.

"I think that it is a great way to start off the year for MassPIRG, SCERA and SGA," said Melanie Undem, campus organizer of MassPIRG at UMass.

MassPIRG provided more than a 100 people for the registration event.

Many who participated in the registration drive were first time registrants.

Frank Staples, an African–American graduate student of education who is a first time registrant said, "If I am not registered to vote then I am a part of the problem, not the solution.

"I have to think about people who struggle to vote. I need to think about my ancestors who paved the way for education and the right to vote," said Staples, who attended the Million Man March last year in Washington D.C.

This election year, a major directive of Rock–the–Vote is to increase voter turnout in Latino and African–American communities across the country.

Recently, the bus went to East Los Angeles to register people from Latino communities.

According to Jaime E. Uzeta, field coordinator of Rock–the–Vote, there is always a sense of distrust in minority communities towards voting.

In 1992, 18 percent of Latinos and 37 percent of African–Americans from the ages of 18 to 24 voted. That statistic is lower than the 45 percent among white voters in the same age group, said Uzeta.

In response, Rock–the–Vote has tried to develop programs to increase the participation of minorities in the voting process.

Luis Quiranna, co–chairman of the Asian, Latino, African–American, Native–American (ALANA) Caucus of the SGA Student Senate, said that minorities, specifically Latinos and African–Americans, should register to vote as independents because the two parties are not addressing the needs of minorities.

"The Republicans are not in touch with our needs and the Democrats take the [African–American and Latino] vote for granted," he said.

"It is about time people of color voice their opinions and get people to represent them [in government]," said Ann Marie Jimenez, senior communications major.

According to Vecchio, the campaign will focus on dormitories and classrooms around campus. The campaign will send students into classes for the next four weeks.

For next week, they have scheduled 45 visits to classrooms. "The faculty has been very supportive. They are enthused with the thought of students registering other students," Vecchio said.

Two protesters were present during the registration process, holding signs of "choose your own path and lose your corporate sponsor" and "stop the exploitation of America's youth."

The protesters, Chris Imhof and Will Watts, sophomore political science and sociology majors, respectively, said they were protesting the MTV corporate sponsorship of the event.

Imhof said, MTV is gearing the voter registration drive towards college students and not people in the inner cities like the homeless and the poor because college students are their target audiences.

According to Watts, the protest was not directed at Rock–the–Vote, but at MTV and its exploitation of youth.

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Trasi Sheard, a sophomore communications major checks out the Choose or Lose Computer Kiosk, yesterday afternoon in front of the Student Union.

Campus cops make own "Checkpoint Charlie"

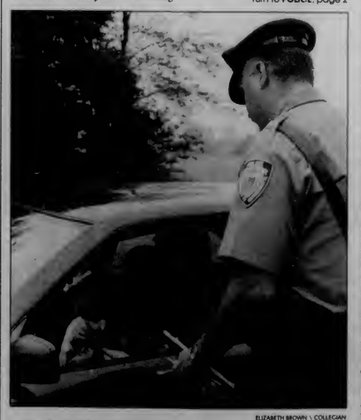
By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Department of Public Safety kicked off its "Back to School Safety Campaign" yesterday by educating drivers about seat belts and child passenger safety.

UMass police conducted a checkpoint from 7 a.m. – 10 a.m. on Stadium Road, near the Grass Roots Day Care Center, where they stopped drivers to check motor vehicles to ensure that all passengers were wearing seat belts and all children were buckled up or seated in a properly installed, appropriately–fitting car or booster seat.

Massachusetts General Law states that all drivers and passengers of private motor vehicles must wear safety belts and that children age 12 and under must be properly restrained in a car seat or safety belt when riding in a motor vehicle.

According to Deputy Police Chief Barbara O'Connor, many members of the UMass community are not familiar with Massachusetts seat belt and child safety laws because they are from different states.



"We also have a large population of graduate students and employees with children on campus," O'Connor said.

Yesterday's checkpoint involved officers informing drivers about the law and distributing information about the importance of buckling up to prevent serious injury in the event of a crash.

At future checkpoints, including one today at North Village Road, officers will issue citations to motorists in violation of seat belt and child safety restraint laws.

Police officers also spoke with chil–

Turn to POUCE, page 2

ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Mike Billiel, the coordinator of the Safe Road Child Passenger Safety Law check point, stops Terry O'Neill of Amherst and his son, Seamus, to inform them of the laws surrounding seat belts, yesterday morning.

Harvard professors hold forum at Smith; West & Gates discuss future of race

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — Gathering from far and wide and from all parts of the Valley, Media Relations at Smith College estimates that 2,400 people filled John M. Greene Hall to hear leading Afro–American scholars, Cornel West and Henry Louis Gates speak on issues of race.

Co–authors of their most recent book, The Future of the Race, West and Gates, both professors at Harvard University, spoke and answered questions from both the audience and moderator Ruth Simmons, president of Smith.

The speakers were asked by Simmons, the first female African–American president of an elite college, what they thought the African–American community needed to do for the next century.

Gates said he felt that the African–American community today is going through the best of times and the worst of times. He cited statistics that one in three black men in the United States are in prison, and that 45 percent of all black children are living at or below the poverty level.

Gates also added, "The new middle class, made possible through Affirmative Action has prospered and those who are not privileged have been cut off... we need to expand the size of the middle class."

See Related Story Page 2

West responded by saying there is a need for the community to be committed to a sense of self which is self–critical, has integrity and simultaneously allows compassion to flow. He said that it is only when this occurs that people can openly discuss race.

"This is not an issue of political correctness, it's an issue of human suffering... I don't know a black brother or sister who does not have white supremacy in them... the question is how do we talk about this to be empowered to resist racism? We have two elites running for president and they are not saying a word," West said.

Both speakers answered questions concerning the upcoming elections, which was also the theme of the discussion.

West said that the elections were symptomatic of deeper problems in the American culture and economy. He said that Americans live in an oligarchy economy where corporate American supports both candidates and ensures that its aims are always granted. He also said that America has to deal with its apathy, pressing the need to have public conversations about how these two candidates came about.

"We have a choice between a decent man, Dole, who is cold hearted, and Clinton who is an opportunist and is spineless... How is it that among the talent and intelligence of America that it can produce these two candidates?" said West.

West also quoted Tolstoy, "'So many people want to change the world, so few want to change themselves.'"

He said, "I am not one who supports the candidates, I support movements, the black movement, the gay and lesbian movements, the women's movement... and the question is how those candidates support each of these movements, without significant pressure on Clinton, he will do a spineless thing like signing the welfare bill."

West responded to the question by saying, "This current generation does not have the vital tradition of struggle that convinces them that the fire is worth sustaining."

He said that America is at a very icy moment in time, and encouraged young people to keep alive their traditions of compassion and sacrifices, and to remember that they come from a rich tradition of spirituality and struggle.

A man from the audience asked both speakers to speak on their perspectives of Louis Farrakhan.

Gates said that he was critical of Farrakhan, in public, and disagreed with him on certain issues, believing that he represented attitudes of homophobia, sexism and anti–Semitism.

Gates said he felt the problem with the Million Man March, while a great event, which only Farrakhan could have pulled off, was that, "The atoner did not atone."

He said, "He [Farrakhan] should have atoned for his homophobia, sexism and anti–Semitism... if he changes and undergoes a change like Malcolm X did, he will be great; if he fails he will be just a demigod."

West responded to the topic of Farrakhan by putting the Nation of Islam into a historical perspective. He said that Farrukhan is part of a 200–year long tradition in the United States; a tradition of black nationalism. West referred to Alexis de Touqueville's words that democracy is a tyranny of the majority over a minority. He said that if significant numbers of black people are not convinced that they are a part of the United States, they become pessimistic and begin to look to their own community.

He said he believes that Farrakhan's appeal lies in the fact that black men and women are attracted to him because he is free in his mind and soul to say whatever he wants.

"He has freedom from the inside... like the admiration many have of black musicians and artists, they are free to blow anything they want, to sing anything they want. He [Farrakhan] is free to solicit direct confrontation from the powers that be," West said.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Sept. 11

Community — The Student Alliance for Israel and Zionists for Action will hold "Ice Cream Israel" at 6:15 p.m. at Hillel House.

Meeting — The UMass Italian Club will hold an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. in the 3rd floor lounge of Herter Hall. All are welcome.

Meeting — Alphi Phi Omega, a national coed service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting from 7 to 8 p.m. in Field Classroom. All are welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 804. People are encouraged to come to read, listen or simply enjoy the company. Free coffee will be served and new members are welcome.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold its first meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 904. All are welcome.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Meditation — An introduction to yoga and meditation practices will be the first in a weekly series of meetings taught by yogi monks Dada Krishnananda and Didi Anandanirupama. The event starts at 8 p.m. in the 2nd floor lounge of Butterfield. For more information call Alex at 253-6341.

Meeting — Alphi Phi Omega, a national coed service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting from 7 to 8 p.m. in Crabtree Classroom. All are welcome.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall room 301.

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hijras in India," an all-male religious sect that is considered an alternative third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, begins at 11:30 a.m. and is free.

Sports — All players interested in "Zoo Disc" Ultimate are invited to a meeting at 6 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. No experience is required. For more information, call Todd at 549-1016.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, praying, teaching, and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House, and liberal/egalitarian services will be held at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Seminar — The UMass Polymer Science and Engineering Department will have Dr. Joseph Davidovits deliver a lecture entitled, "Aluminosicilate Polymers for Ultra-High Temperatur Structural Applications" at 3:35 p.m. in Conte Center Room A11.

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. Students are advised to bring water and a snack. For more information, call 546-2771 or 546-1318.

Auditions — Tryouts for Neil Simon's "Rumors" will be held at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 12 and Friday, Sept. 13, and on Satursay, Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. Callbacks will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15. Special arrangements can be made for religious conflicts. For more information, call the UMass Theatre Guild at 545-0415 or visit the office at 423 Student Union.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen- dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538-9717.

Sale — The UMass Ski Club will hold a mountain bike sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday on the lawn of the Student Union. Bikes by Cannondale, Giant, Scott and more will be available. Prices start at $195. For more information, call 545-3437.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253-5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256-8482 or Laili at 253-0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253-3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. through Friday, Sept. 13. Information about theft prevention and bike identification will also be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety fo music in a smoke and alcohol-free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584-8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536-3072 or Karen at 259-1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. at the Campus Center. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call (617) 641-2303.

police

continued from page 1

dren at the Grass Roots Day Care Center yesterday about the importance of seat belts and distributed key chains, stickers and toy badges as part of the program.

According to police department statistics, seat belts and properly worn and adjusted child restraints are 71 percent effective in preventing deaths and 67 percent effective in preventing injury. Out of all professionals, doctors are listened to 6 percent, parents nine percent and police officers 48 percent of the time when distributing advice on seat belt safety.

UMass police received a mini-grant through Safe Roads, a western Massachusetts traffic safety program designed to help small communities address traffic safety concerns. Safe Roads also loaned visual display radar equipment to the UMass police.

UMass police officers will also receive roll call training, awareness of laws and fines and enforcement information as part of the program, O'Connor said.

"We want to educate the public through enforcement of seat belt and child safety laws," O'Connor said. "Hopefully, our end goal of making the campus safer will be achieved."

Audience seeks reassurance, not talk

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

The theme presented by President Ruth Simmons for Monday night's dialogue between Cornel West and Henry Louis Gates was the 1996 elections and how to improve the conditions for African-Americans in the United States.

After West and Gates addressed Simmon's questions, the audience presented their own questions, ranging from the leadership of Minister Louis Farrakhan of the Nation of Islam, inner city violence and broader questions of spirituality and hope.

While the theme of the dialogue was supposed to be race and the elections, the predominantly white audience seemed to be primarily concerned with how racism and race relations effect their lives as white Americans, and not how it effects people of color.

A white audience member challenged West on his embracing Farrakhan after the Million Man March. She said that, as a Jew, she did not understand how West could embrace Farrakhan, because he was "anti-Semitic."

West responded that although he and Farrakhan have disagreements, the embrace did not necessarily mean that he embraced all of Farrakhan's ideas.

"It means we have a relationship... in that speech he made at the Million Man March, I didn't hear certain things, I didn't hear any xenophobia, and it was a great moment."

Gates added that the only way Farrakhan can change is because of people like Cornel West. "It won't happen from the outside, and it won't happen from the Jewish community," said Gates.

The woman seemed to remain unsatisfied with the answer.

Another white woman from the audience shared her experience of being held at gun point by two black men in Los Angeles. She said that during the time she was assaulted, the men looked at her with no remorse whatsoever.

She said that "the two black gentlemen" were looking at her in the same way that West and Gates were looking at her; treating her just as white America has been treating African-Americans their whole lives. She asked West and Gates to address the violence which occurs in the African American community.

West responded by stating that over 85 percent of the victims of such violent acts are poor people. He explained that the fear she-experienced is felt by poor people and people of color every minute of the day.

These questions seemed to reflect an attitude which showed little regard for actual conditions of people of color and poor people, instead they appeared to be self-absorbed and trite. They were concerned with how Farrakhan is seen by some to be "anti-Semitic," and not why Farrakhan is seen as a leader in the African-American community. They were concerned with how white Americans experience fear of being assaulted in the inner city and not of how people of color are far more likely to be victims of such crimes, as West pointed out.

In contrast, President Simmons attempted to discuss concrete and real issues such as how to improve conditions for the African-American community and how the elections effect African-Americans.

Finally, a third white audience member commented that she felt the room was filled with spirituality, and that everyone could leave the room and "kick ass." The predominately white audience cheered, and some gave her a standing ovation as West got up to hug her.

In the end, it was hard to avoid the conclusion that most in the audience were looking for expressions of reassurance from the two Black scholars, rather than a serious dialogue regarding race issues in the United States.

Free the Press — write for Collegian news.

The Collegian news desk is still looking for new writers. Experience, nor a major in journalism is required. Those interested must attend an orientation meeting, Fri. Sept. 13 at 2 p.m. in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center (basement). If you are unable to make this meeting at the given time, please contact Michael Elliott in the office or at 545-1762.

Thank you to all those who have already contacted us about writing.

Correction

In the Sept. 10 issue, Alpha Phi Omega, a co-ed national service fraternity, was misidentified as the Alpha Pi Omega, a service fraternity. The Collegian regrets the error.

"Hell No!" ELIZABETH BROWN \ COLLEGIAN

Matt Leonard, a sophomore comparative literature major, protests against MTV's Choose or Lose bus, yesterday in front of the Student Union.

Clinton starts campaign trail with welfare reform

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Saying jobs are crucial to making welfare reform succeed, President Clinton urged states today to ensure that private companies will hire those eliminated from public assistance rolls.

Clinton told a gathering of Southern governors that he had gladly granted their wish for converting federal welfare programs to block grants and now they had a responsibility to use the money to supplement wages paid by private employers.

"You asked for this, and now you got it," Clinton said while cautioning. "There is not enough money around to create enough public jobs to solve this welfare problem."

"We need to break this responsibility down to think about how we can make it a good deal for the business community ... so we don't wind up with a bunch of nightmares saying, 'We passed all these tough laws and now here are all these people in the street with no right to get any help.'"

Upon arriving in Kansas City to launch a four-state campaign trip, Clinton met with six single mothers who have made the transition from welfare to work. He embraced a program that converts public assistance money into paying jobs as an example of how states can follow up the welfare legislation he signed last month.

Under the Kansas City program, a public-private partnership called the Local Investment Commission funnels federal welfare and food stamp money to an agency that uses the money to give employers wage supplements of $500 a month for each former welfare recipient they hire. The new employee continues to receive health-care and day-care benefits for four years.

Clinton said it was "absolutely imperative that every state do what has been done here."

Missouri is one of 12 states that use public assistance money to supplement wages. Clinton said programs structured this way will encourage private employers to deliver enough jobs for the new welfare law to succeed. "I believe the business community's response will be overwhelming," he said.

In his speech accepting the Democratic presidential nomination last month, Clinton said Americans have a moral obligation to ensure there are jobs available to people who must leave the welfare rolls under the new law.

The president has been widely criticized — especially by liberal Democrats — for signing the welfare legislation, which replaces the current Aid to Families with Dependent Children program with block grants to states. It also caps lifetime welfare benefits at five years and ends benefits after two years for adults who do not go to work.

He has sought to smooth over differences among Democrats by pledging to repair the worrisome aspects of the law if elected to a second term. He also has claimed that, in signing the law, he removed the issue as a target of election-year attacks by Republicans.

Kansas City was the first stop on Clinton's three-day swing through Missouri, Colorado, Arizona and California. During the trip, he will return to the idea-a-day campaign strategy that he employed during his four-day train ride to the Democratic National Convention.

Wednesday, the president plans to offer ideas on improving drug treatment, especially for prison inmates, and on Thursday he will focus on education, press secretary Mike McCurry said.

MATTHEW SIMONEAU \ COLLEGIAN

On the left, Tommy Brooks, a sophomore sociology major, battles against Rob Levesque, a sophomore school of management major, at the Health-Fitness fair on Monday.

Regrettably, all sections are full this semester for

Remedial

Thermodynamics

Luckily, you can still sign up for all this great stuff from AT&T.

Surviving in college is tough enough, right? That's why we've designed a package to make things easier. Choose AT&T and look at all you can get:

AT&T True Reach® Savings
Save 25% on every kind of U.S. call on your AT&T phone bill when you spend just $25 a month.[1]

AT&T True Rewards®
Get savings at Sam Goody/Musicland, TCBY "Treats" and BLOCKBUSTER VIDEO with the Member Benefit Card.

AT&T Universal MasterCard®
A credit, cash and calling card that brings you discounts on USAir. And no annual fee–ever.[2]

AT&T WorldNet℠ Service
Get 5 free hours of Internet access every month just for having AT&T long distance.[3]

To sign up, look for us on campus or call
1 800 654-0471

AT&T
Your True Choice

http://www.att.com/college

Discounts off AT&T basic rates. Refers to AT&T home or AT&T calling card accounts. Subject to billing availability. Certain exclusions apply. [2]Subject to credit approval. Valid for 1yr. Must sign up in 1996 and use service at least 1 hr./mo. $2.50/hr. for additional hrs. or $19.95 for unlimited usage. Customers pay separate telephone charges to reach the service. ©1996 AT&T

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Position Vacant Systems Manager
Sumanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mike McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Michael Elliott News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor Position Vacant Librarian
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor David Quist Webmaster

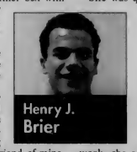
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial



The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A taste of corporate America

"Be my guest and have a seat," she invited with a charming smile, as I noted her Hispanic dialect. She was pointing to the brass and padded elevated chair with the raised platforms where one places the soles of their shoes.

It was midday this past July, near the Old City Hall in Boston. The colorful tie I was wearing included a hue that blended perfectly into my light-blue 100-percent cotton and freshly-starched oxford.

That shirt was neatly tucked into my off-white pants with the razor-sharp pleats. My black leather belt with the silver buckle not only firmly kept my pants and shirt as is, but additionally, matched my black socks with the little designs.

Henry J. Brier

My socks, beneath my cuffed pants, were only visible while I strode alongside the rest of the metropolitan Boston work-force who dresses similarly — but not the same.

The summer before the finale of my undergraduate career formally introduced me to executive America. The lifestyle is drastically different as compared to anything else in which I have partaken during my undergraduate years. I agree with a friend of mine, from Amherst, who recently remarked: "It's a different world."

Such previously illustrated attire may seem descriptive of conformity; however, this is not the case. There are numerous ways of distinguishing oneself, but expounding this is not my responsibility. Experiential learning is vital.

Minutes before I accepted the invitation to temporarily relax, I was enjoying my lunchbreak with a brisk trot through Faneuil Hall Marketplace. It was then that I again noticed that my otherwise intact professional appearance contained a flaw that I meant to correct earlier that morning.

My black wingtips, which matched my belt and socks, were scuffed.

First appearance is key. Those who do not press their shirts and pants protrude in an outlandish light. More respect and credence is granted to those who dress accordingly.

Once one begins wearing and matching ties, the endless array of designs becomes amazingly noticeable, as does the style in which others match their ties. Also, once one consistently dresses in such a manner, an increased respect is lent to the lifestyle.

"I'm a part of corporate America," I said to the woman sitting on my left during the morning commute to Boston. "Someone else should be shining my shoes."

So there I was, sitting upon my elevated bench and ready to be treated like royalty for the next few minutes. I did not want my shoes glossed or shiny, but I wanted them solid looking, free of the blemish that was irritating me. Also I was missing was my crown and scepter.

"Brazil," Maria answered in response to my asking, as she rubbed her cloth in the tin of black polish.

She was quite the conversationalist, and I found impressive her consummate knowledge of four languages. Portuguese was her native tongue, and she grew up also speaking Spanish. In school, she studied English and French, the former of which was enhanced because she had been in the States for the past year.

Needless to say, quite a talented woman.

While she gladly polished my shoes, effectively putting the final touch on my appearance, she told me about how much she enjoyed being in America. She missed her native Rio de Janiero, but through her work, she also enjoyed meeting and speaking with accountants, businessmen, lawyers and the like.

This whole episode consumed no more than seven or eight minutes of my lunchbreak. Ours was a give-and-take business relationship. She provides the service, and in return, I pay her the flat rate, plus a couple dollars tip.

It is as easy as that.

Plus, I liked and appreciated her performance, so not only could I be a return customer, but also I passed on the good word.

Who would have known that I'd find myself under such conditions?

I was between semesters at a school where the only people who consistently get decked out are the faculty. This is especially the University's brass, with all due respect to the esteemed professors. Ever seen any administrators gallivanting in sandals or sneakers?

Sometimes an occasional student is spotted on campus, making his or her way to an interview or a career fair or another important meeting.

Keep an eye out for such figures. Their presence on this campus will draw an increased respect from some.

But only if their shirt and tie blend.

Henry J. Brier is a Collegian columnist.

The blame game

It's that time of year again, the time when the politicians try to blame each other for all of society's ills. Voters are becoming fed up with it. Nonetheless politicians continue to conduct smear campaigns.

Good examples include the Senate race between Gov. William Weld (R-Mass.) and Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.). Some of their advertisements attack each other's records in an extremely malicious manner. Both negatively ask what the other has done for the Commonwealth. Obviously they will not provide positive answers, but these commercials are tiresome. A few of their advertisements actually discuss what they have done without a word about their opponent, but these commercials are far and few between.

Matthew Wurtzel

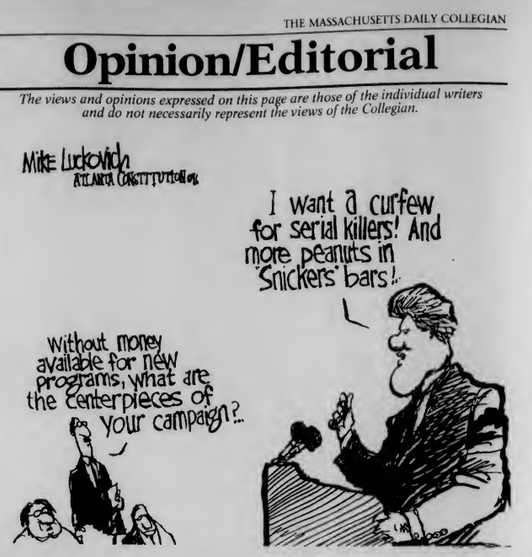
Worse than the smear commercials is the rhetoric of political speeches that pervade other campaigns. The most visible campaign of the year, the presidential election, is actually the worse.

Bob Dole basically blames President Clinton for a myriad of problems which he didn't create. The best example of such accusations is Dole's speech at the Republican National Convention.

Dole talked about the problems that plague our nation, and some fictitious problems too. He claims Clinton is solely responsible for the decay of the American education system. However, he conveniently ignores the truth. In the excesses of the 1980s — somewhere he'd like to return us — he allowed massive wasteful spending on pork barrel projects such as defense rather than education.

This was a common practice on the part of both Republicans like Dole and Democrats as well. Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) and the late Les Aspen, Clinton's first defense secretary and a former Senator, "never saw a weapons system they didn't like."

Needed reforms and money for education on the national level were overlooked in the 1980s when Clinton was a young governor in Arkansas. Basically, he had no control over national policy. However, Dole was up on Capitol Hill where he had the ability to influence overall education spending and reform programs. A quick glance at Dole's record will reveal he didn't support such programs.



Another common theme that Dole uses to attack Clinton is drug use. Clinton is not responsible for the increase in the use of drugs, but Dole once again forgets about this. Drug use in America is like a roller coaster rising and falling, sometimes moving fast and other times slowly rising. The problem dates back well before Clinton's administration, and probably could be traced further than the Lyndon Johnson administration. Clinton grew up with this problem like most Boomers and Generation X-ers. Unlike Dole.

Congress is just as much at fault for this problem as the President. However, Senator Dole never assisted Clinton in this fight. He cut spending last year on drug abuse programs in the name of deficit reduction. How many pork barrel projects like defense contracts and farm subsidies did he save at the expense of the lost lives of innocent children who became hooked on illegal substances like heroin?

As Dole paints a picture of a decaying America, where Clinton is the devil that created it all, he is sadly mistaken. Although there is a problem with drug use, our education system is improving and our economy is booming. Unemployment last month fell to 5.1-percent, a seven year low, and wages are on the rise, according to Labor Department figures released last week. Economists are saying more jobs are available than there are skilled people to fill them.

People are tired of hearing negative rhetoric, but politicians never learn. Dole, Weld and Kerry are not the only candidates espousing such trash, no one can forget the presence of H. Ross Perot. Two months lie ahead before election day, so the end of the blame game is still not in sight.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Oogy, look what I've become

Jeremy Hurewitz

When I was a kid, I went to sleep-away camp for five summers. For four of those five summers I had a bunkmate we called Oogy.

Oogy was smaller than all of us. He was short, pudgy and very ugly with a huge forehead and giant lips and freckles. He got the name Oogy from one of our counselors who said he looked like a puppet he used to watch on television named Oogy.

Oogy was extremely smart, but in the absent-minded professor tradition. He'd make some nerdy comment, tinged with brilliance and we'd all be left scratching our heads. Then Oogy would turn around and walk right into a wall and we'd all laugh at him.

We tortured Oogy. We'd tie him to trees and poke him with sticks. Once, I put gum in his ear. We'd hold him down and take turns filling our mouths with water and pretend to vomit on him.

We played deranged games with Oogy. One such game was called "The Question Game." We would ask him a question like, "What's the serial number on this box of fruit loops?" or "What's my grandmothers maiden name?" Of course he never gave the right answer and we kept inventing elaborate new ways to torture Oogy, like putting tons of hair spray and gel into his hair until his head was like a helmet. When these tortures were over and Oogy wanted to question us we just bifled him on the forehead, laughed and walked away.

Sometimes he'd have breakdowns. I remember coming into the bunk one sunny afternoon and Oogy was crying quietly to himself. I held him in my arms, like a big brother, and he told me he had a nightmare that the entire world was piled on top of him and he couldn't get out. After these instances we'd vow not to hurt Oogy but a week later someone would yell "Pig-pile on Oogy!" and we'd all pile on top of him until he turned blue and passed out.

Oogy didn't come back my last summer. My most vivid memory of that summer was at the end when all my peers vowed not to come back the next year and went over and raided the girls side the last night. I thought I might want to come back the next summer, so I stayed back and wussed out.

Looking back on this, and early high school, I seemed like a good young Republican: torturing the weak while maintaining proper social norms. I had short hair, good grades and I played basketball and baseball.

At 16, I lost my virginity and started getting high often. I quit sports, played my guitar more often and starting reading guys like Kurt Vonnegut and Tom Robbins.

Now I'm in college. I get drunk, wake up late in the afternoon with a black eye (sometimes) and an aching head (often), and miss classes. I go to parties, suck down nitrous balloons, fish out, get laughed at, get up and walk over to girls I barely know and say things like, "So, am I making you breakfast tomorrow or are we going out?," get slapped and laugh.

I dress like a pimp in my long, burgundy, leather trench coat and take ecstasy and go to disco parties. I've been arrested twice and my hair has caught on fire numerous times. I keep with base women because its easier to handle when they leave (and they always do). I have insomnia and I take pills to go to sleep.

Oogy, I heard you're going to the University of Michigan. Maybe you'll become a judge like your old man. Wouldn't it be poetic justice if one day I was standing in front of you in a court of law? Give it to me Oogy, I only want what I deserve.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a UMass student.

Close your eyes, open your mind

Alyson Harrison

Midnight... 12:03 a.m.... tossing, turning. 12:07 a.m... twisting, tossing, turning. 12:12 a.m... I flip my warm pillow over to the cold side and lay my head back down. 12:16 a.m... Kicking the comforter off my legs, I squirm to find the remote. Power On. Click, Click, Click. Dave Letterman's voice drones on. "Our next guest with us tonight has a new movie out titled..."

It's hot. I'm exhausted and irritated that I'm unable to fall asleep. 12:22 a.m... The red light from my alarm clock shines brightly. 12:23 a.m... I want some hot tea. Maybe the warm, sweet, lemon taste on my lips will help comfort me to sleep. I fumble through my room. All of my mugs are dirty. I settle for one I used earlier for Kool-Aid.

As the water heats, I wonder how long it will be until I fall asleep tonight. 12:30 a.m... My tea is ready. I'm wide awake. Letterman's over and Gordon Elliot is making his way through the doors of his studio. I'm thinking to myself, warm milk. Nine out of ten doctors recommend drinking a glass of warm milk before bedtime. Milk contains tryptophan, a natural sleeping pill. I thank that one doctor who probably hates milk like I do. I'll drink my tea and eat my cookies. You can have your milk.

Slipping into my head is yet another expert opinion. Experts say that a 20 to 30 minute cardiovascular workout at least three to five days a week helps maintain a healthy sleeping pattern. Exercise! You'd think walking 2-4 miles a day is good enough for the experts. My legs feel like jello. Healthy? No doubt. But my exhaustion isn't helping my sleeping pattern.

12:41 a.m... My lips are still warm from my tea, which is gone. I lie back down in bed and flip my pillow over once more. 12:43 a.m... I wanted to be asleep 43 minutes ago.

What do I have to do tomorrow? Classes, banking, mailing letters, laundry, dishes— the list never ends. I bore myself to sleep, stressed and overtired.

So, when you can't sleep, what do you do?

Well, because humans are not always open to expert advice, I decided to think of some of my own sleeping aids.

First, everyone has to have that one friend who never shuts up. He or she loves to bore you with details about their latest love affair. It's not the nicest idea, but dial your motormouth friend, lay your head on your pillow with the receiver to one ear. Within moments, you'll realize you're getting sleepy, very sleepy.

Second, it's common knowledge that if you can't fall asleep within 20 minutes or so, you're probably not tired. So get up! Visit a friend. Listen to some music. Take a long, hot shower. Watch a movie. These last moments should be relaxing and rewarding after a long, hard day of work.

Third, avoid interesting material. Don't struggle to stay awake to find out if he marries her of if your favorite super hero saves the day. Rather, pull out your Organic Chemistry book or your dusty collection of Shakespeare's works. The sandman is bound to come.

Lastly, go to bed with an open mind. Forget the troubling issues and focus on more positive thoughts. Let this be your time to fantasize. Set your mind to thinking up a few sexy scenarios. Good Night and Sweet Dreams...

Alyson Harrison is a UMass student.

BE HEARD!

There was a little boy named Jamieson, and Jamieson had something to say. Unfortunately, Jamieson was a very shy little boy. He just couldn't muster up the courage to write a letter to the editor in the Collegian. Poor little Jamieson's head exploded. The moral of this story: Write a letter to the editor, and see if your internal cranial pressure can't be relieved.

Letters should be under 400 words, and should be submitted with a name, place of residence and phone number for verification purposes. Have a nice day!

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

It is common knowledge that people with similar interests stand to gain by uniting and working together as a team, so that each person can benefit from the momentum of the unified force toward a common objective, achieving far more than could be accomplished alone.

But what is truly remarkable is the protection which such unity affords each member in a crisis. When an established social machine fails, the problem may be pinpointed to a particular part, thus allowing the fault to be localized, the losses to be minimized and the true nature and purpose of the whole to remain obscure, especially when the fault is more closely connected to that purpose than its members would like to admit. In other words, it enables a member to suddenly become an individual when the time comes to point toward any wrong doing.

When planning a social gathering, if the most important issues pertaining to its success are the chick/guy ratio and the amount of alcohol to be made available, can anyone deny that each brother's hope in attending, if not his goal, is to get laid?

This is the real purpose of the frat machine, one such organization of people with a common interest, and it performs its functions very well. It hides its intent beneath a thick cloak of charity and apparently good intentions, all the while turning out a production line of violated women.

Last semester one such woman among the silent many spoke out, and a "policy" was adopted. But don't rejoice yet — the machine has merely adapted. You see, it thrives on naivety and conformity. The defective part was really not defective at all. He just got told on.

Monday, the Collegian reported Fabio Pari-di-Monriva, vice president of Zeta-Psi as having said, "We're being punished for one person's actions... I didn't do it. My brothers didn't do it. The Greek community didn't do it."

Amazing, isn't it? He needs not lose that line on his resume. He just has to continue making his personal "too small to catch any blame" contribution to the whole environment, and someday the machine might reward him with that chance encounter with that pretty little underage freshwoman holding a wild berry wine cooler.

If his remarks aren't enough to truly enlighten you, I suppose you will have to wait until something happens again, and is reported. Then you will understand. Right?

Benjamin Johnson
Northampton

Arts & Living

R.E.M. latest release solidifies band's rep

By Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

R.E.M.
New Adventures in Hi Fi
Warner Bros.

Believe the hype. Believe the multi-million dollar contract. Believe every scrap of major label promotion. R.E.M. has solidified its place in music history by accomplishing everything that can be expected of great artists — a body of work that is nearly flawless in integrity, execution and imagination. The latest album, New Adventures in Hi Fi, more than lives up to that reputation.

Recorded in a piece-meal fashion (studios, sound checks and even some live performances) the album has a warm, handmade quality. Instrumentation is sparse, but carefully woven together to create a lush envelope of sound. Touring band members Scott Mcaughey and Nathan December join R.E.M. on most songs, allowing for the diversity of sound demonstrated in these mostly small group recordings. In many ways the sound is reminiscent of Automatic for the People — the same southern gothic folk quality that gave Automatic its dark undertones and intimacy, only coupled with the vitriolic spark of Monster style guitar. Hi Fi stands as a true testament to the diversity of the band and to its singular vision.

The first track, "How the West was Won and Where it Got Us," sets the uneasy tone of the album. It's a dark and spooky ballad, laced with a ringing piano part and a hissing synthesizer. R.E.M. and producer Scott Litt have created such intricate soundscapes for every song. Bozoukis, Mellotrons, Autoharps and many other exotic sounds are used to startling effect. R.E.M. has mastered the art of the understated performance — a single ringing guitar note, a careful three note organ part, etc. All of these delicately arranged parts flow around each other in an almost fluid display of tasteful and imaginative production. Listening to R.E.M. is akin to watching a master painter at work — every color seems to fall into place like magic, and every brush stroke captures the essence of the subject, suggesting things above and beyond the surface reality of the subject. Also like a master painter, R.E.M. has left plenty of room for sponteneity and "happy accident."

Turn to R.E.M., page 6

R.E.M. new release lives up to its rumors.
COURTESY STEVE COLLETTI

White Zombie & Sublime sink on latest albums

Zombie's collection of quirky remixes don't measure up to original successes

WHITE ZOMBIE
Supersexy Swingin' Sounds
Geffen Records

It is probably a fair assumption that bands who release an album of remixes have lost their ability to write original songs. Only seldom does this style work, and only if an artist adds something interesting to the newer version, assuming the originals are decent in the first place. On Supersexy Swingin' Sounds, the latest offering from rockers White Zombie, the album merely recapitulates their older songs into a plethora of synthesized, repetitive beats.

Somehow the ambient trance rhythms don't mesh well with the devil praising lyrics of White Zombie. The heavy, electric guitar sound, coupled with Rob Zombie's unintelligible mumblings gave the band its edge. After all, "More Human than Human," is a catchy song. However, there is nothing catchy about this album.

With this flaccid attempt to enter a realm in which they can't compete, White Zombie fails flat. They should regroup their talents and write more songs like, "Super-Charger Heaven" instead of patronizing their fans and feeding them regurgitated garbage. C- (Lisa M. Oliveri)

SUBLIME
Sublime
MCA Records

Don't believe the hype! This CD is generic garbage that the major labels are trying to pass off as the ultimate combination of ska and punk.

First of all the punk part is a little misleading as only three songs, "Same In The End," "Seed" and "Paddle Out" incorporate punk. The problem with these songs is that they were already written by NOFX. The rest of the songs are a decent combination of reggae and rather bland ska, however all the songs sound the same and the tempo never shifts. Furthermore, the songs "Garden Grove" and "What I Got" border very closely to Grateful Dead-like music.

The lyrics on this album go beyond ridiculous and are downright awful. On "April 29, 1992" the lead singer raps about how the best part of the L.A. Riots was all the free loot he stole. "Wrong Way" depicts how the lead singer can't help himself from turning girls into sex objects. The rest of the songs are equally nauseating.

Don't waste your time on this band when there are a ton of good ska bands like Voodoo Glow Skulls, Slackers, Toasters, Hepcat or the Stubborn All-Stars out there. F (Adam Dlugacz)

Sublime crashes on its latest.
COURTESY JOHN DUNNE

MINDY MCCREADY
Ten Thousand Angels
BNA Records

Mindy McCready has all the talent of Faith Hill with the voice of an angel cleverly packaged into a beautiful gift for country music fans. It is nearly impossible to suppress a smile when listening to her debut album, Ten Thousand Angels, her soft soprano voice can make even the most Prozac addicted person happy, even if for a moment. McCready records with vibrant energy which radiates throughout the entire album.

McCready will be the voice of many line dancing females everywhere. Her first single, "Ten Thousand Angels," a women's plea to entities above to help her ward off an overzealous admirer, was the breakthrough hit for this southern belle. She followed with the still thriving single, "Guys Do It All The Time," a fun tune of a woman wanting to drink, gamble and watch sports.

The sultry voice of Lonestar's Richie McDonald is featured on the heartbreaking ballad, "Maybe He'll Notice Her Now." McCready belts out this decree of loneliness with all the pain of a neglected lover, leaving the impression it hits close to her heart.

Ten Thousand Angels has the potential of becoming a staple in the record collection of any contemporary country music fan. If McCready's next album is as good as this debut album, her stardom is almost guaranteed. A- (L.M.O)

RED FIVE FLASH
Interscope

Wow! Every now and again major labels show that they have some sense and actually sign a good band that deserves it. Red Five sound like a combination of the Pixies, Hole, Belly and R.E.M. The two singers, Betty Carmellini and Jenni McElrath have two of the best voices in the business.

The lyrics mostly deal with relationships and are very insightful and hit home. The first song, "Space" sounds like something off the Pixies' Surfer Rosa album and completely rocks. The second song, "Gasoline" then plows into you with a driving, punkier sound that is truly powerful. The song "Shuffle" is a nice surprise as the lyrics urge the listeners to stop feeling sorry for themselves and get on with their lives, a refreshing change from the depressing lyrics most bands serve up. Finally, "Hold Me Down" is a beautiful, magnificent pop song that highlights the album.

Red Five keeps the album going at a fast pace — none of the songs are over three minutes and don't get bogged down or repetitive. Truly a great pop album. A (A.D.)

Turn to TRAX ON/TRAX OFF, page 6

Collegian Graphics

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
Drivers Wanted
for AM Paper Delivery
Must have car or access to car
Hours 7:45 - 10:15 a.m.
Please contact Rob McDonald or Alycia Hines @ 545-3500

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops —
affordable, fun, practical, including
Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program,
Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training,
Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog —
(413) 545-0107 or continued@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

Attention Umass
The best just got better!!

Wenesday thru Saturdays 8:00pm to 1:00am
MAIN ST. AMHERST
253-2899

Castaway Lounge
Routes 5 and 10. Whately, Massachusetts
Proudly Presents

BUSTY HEART
World's Largest Chest
Seen on TV • Sporting Events • Talk Shows
Photos always available
Sept. 12, 13 + 14 t h
THREE NIGHTS ONLY
Four Nightly Shows
5pm 8pm 10pm 12pm
Must Be 21 Years Old
CALL (413)665-8733 FOR MORE INFORMATION
Coming Soon: Amuteur Night
Beautiful Ladies Earn Big Money Apply in Person 2 Dance Floors 36 Dancers Per Week

Bringing fun back to hardcore

If you are one of those people who think that moshing started at Lollapalooza or that Pearl Jam invented stage diving or even that the moronic dance you do at all your mall-punk concerts is moshing — you are wrong.

Vinny Stigma, guitarist for Agnostic Front, first used the term "moshing" in the early '80s. Moshing was, and still is, a release of energy for people who did not fit into society. While moshing was violent, it was not a place to flex your muscles or prove your manhood. It's disgusting how the mainstream culture have corrupted such a pure thing.

Moshing or slam dancing has no place at a Screaming Trees or Neil Young concert. If you don't believe me, it was SSD, a hardcore band from the early '80s, who sang "Come into our pit and feel our might." Remember that next time you see Green Day.

The next part of this article is directed towards the hardcore kids. Recently I've noticed a disturbing trend at shows: kids are not dancing or sitting down. What is that about? I've been to shows where people have given me weird looks for dancing, like it's something I'm not supposed to do. Isn't part of the fun of shows going off in the pit with your friends in an environment that is safe and supportive? You have the right to stand still and not get hit, but there are plenty of places in a club to stand without interference.

Hardcore shows are supposed to be violent — It adds to the excitement. I'm not advocating brainless fighting or kickboxing, I just would like to see more energy at shows. One of the most beautiful thing about the old Sunday matinees at CBGB's was hundreds of kids stage diving, dancing and singing along in unity.

Didn't Project X sing "Dancefloor Justice?" What happened to Warzone's classic song "Dance or Die?" Let's make the scene fun again and more importantly, let's show all the poseurs that MTV doesn't own the pit — we do.

It's time to put away the fashion show, the worrying about what other people are going to think and have some fun. Like it says in the song, "We All Fall Down" by Sub-Zero: "Feel the vibes in the air. Swing your arms and move your feet and jump. Check in your problems at the door. Respect the scene, just use your head, just use your head. Don't try to hold them down. Let'em go and break their bones."

• In new record news, New York's Crown of Thornz released Mentally Vexed on Another Planet Records as a follow up to their excellent self-titled debut EP. Fans of Absolution, Burn and good hardcore in general should check this out. Revelation Records took a break from the world of major labels to bless us with some actual hardcore releases. Past Our Means is a new six-song EP from California's Ignite. Past Our Means continues their melodic posi-core in fine form. CIV released a new two song 7-inch. The first song "Social Climber" follows the trend of old school hardcore exhibited on Set Your Goals. "Sausages?" is super poppy, kind of like Hüsker Dü, but has a sad vibe that adds emotion to the song. The packaging is also excellent.

Circle Storm is a new band featuring ex-members of Chain Of Strength. While Circle Storm is a new band the two songs on the 7-inch were originally recorded in 1988. Fans of straight edge hardcore from that time should enjoy this.

• Besides the Mudball show at Pearl Street, the Red Door Theater in Feeding Hills on Sept. 15 is having a show with Fastbreak, Backlash, Gandium, Trial, Envy and Coldfront.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist

Unique journey explores pedophilia

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

A.M. HOMES
The End of Alice
Scribner Books

A.M. Homes is dangerous. Intelligent, witty and extremely poetic, but dangerous. Pedophilia, while it may be some people's fantasy, is not a freely discussed topic. Yet in her latest novel, The End of Alice, Homes forces her readers to ingest molestation as if it is the main course in a four star restaurant, neatly served on a silver platter.

There is not a touchy subject left out of The End of Alice. To most authors, the sheer thought of pedophilia is taboo enough. But Homes pushes the envelope as far as she can go. Homosexuality, incest, rape and murder are just a few of the issues she deals with deftly with in her fourth novel.

There are two main characters introduced to us, intermingled and intertwined so tightly together it seems as if they are experiencing a twisted, shared psychosis. First, the child molester, in jail for raping and killing young girls. He is haunted and at the same time excited by Alice — a college student who corresponds with him via mail. Their commonality — pedophilia. He is her mentor, the only person to whom she can share her macabre fantasies.

Later in the novel we meet the object of Alice's desires, a young teenager named Matt. She coerces him into tennis lessons as a prelude to their affair, wining and dining him. Alice gets him to want her as much as she wants him, even going to such extremes as eating his scabs (yes, scabs).

Homes' prose is beautiful and endearing, making the reader almost forget he is reading the words of a sexual predator. But be forewarned: The End of Alice is not for the weak at heart. It will not only make you question societal normalcy and conformity, but also test your stomach. Hardly a page is turned without one act of indecency being violated.

Deep psychological probes are Homes' forte. Her previous novel, In A Country of Mothers, examines the sometime detrimental effects of adoption. Here, she explores the inner psyche of a monster. It's hard to imagine a time when Homes' id did not work overtime.

The End of Alice is a unique journey down a dark, scary road and Homes' prolific thoughts accentuate her writing wonderfully. A definite must-read for lovers of great literature. B+

■ Trax On/Trax Off

continued from page 5

COURTESY CHRIS CUFFARO

White Zombie slips on Supersexy Swingin' Sounds.

THROWING MUSES
Limbo
Rykodisc

No, it's not another album of guitar-based alternative songs... oh wait, yes it is. Kristin Hersh has returned and she sounds better than usual though not much different. More fast-paced and driven than the previous album University, Limbo erupts with chubby bass lines and pointed guitar melodies for which Hersh and the whole incestuous Throwing Muses-Breeders-Belly family are known.

While the lyrics are, as usual, intriguing and quirky, they occasionally approach absurdity. Lines like, "I need a barnyard" could mean anything, so interpret what you'd like (be gentle). All respectful jabs aside, Limbo has some great songs, like the superlative title track, the fabulous "Tar Kissers," and the intoxicatively mellow, "Mr. Bones." With Limbo, Hersh has proven she's the big sister of alternative rock she always thought she was. A- (Panagiotis Gianopoulos)

STEVE WYNN
Melting in the Dark
Zero Hour

Back in the '80s, Steve Wynn was in a band called The Dream Syndicate — a Velvet Underground style unit that produced a handful of great albums, but failed, and still fails to get the credit they deserve. When Wynn went solo in the early '90s, the failure of many to recognize his fantastic wit, imagination, and melodic gift continued. Two wonderfully produced pop records and a spooky, dark acoustic record disappeared without a trace. If there is any justice at all, however, Wynn's latest, Melting in the Dark, will make its way to the top of everyone's year end top ten list.

Backed by indie rock heroes, Crone, in the final line-up performance, Wynn strips away the careful production of his first two records and rocks out with a blazing collection of songs that represent, in full, everything that's good about Wynn's music.

The first song, "Why" is a pounding mess of scratchy electric guitars and Wynn's sly, dry vocals. The entire album falls in line thereafter — solid grooves laced with thick, noisy guitars holding steady under the clever wordplay and catchy songcraft. The best songs on Melting recall the musicianship of Dream Syndicate, but with the maturity of Wynn's earlier solo albums.

It's a kick to dance to, sing along with, think about, and learn from — definitely a home run for Steve Wynn, and a real triumph in the hard-to triumph world of guitar, bass and drum rock. A (Bradley Skaught)

■ R.E.M.

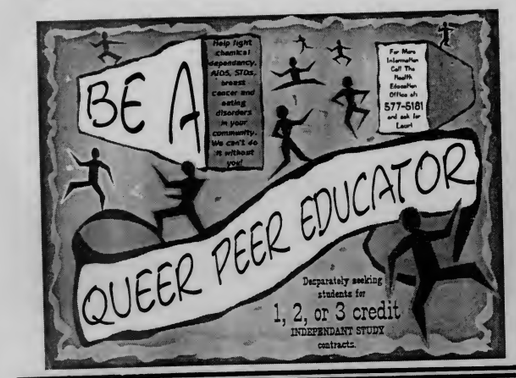
continued from page 5

Some of the live tracks, especially "Departure" and "Undertow," are filled with the freedom and space allowed in live performance. Guitarist Peter Buck tosses out ringing walls of distorted guitar while Michael Stipe dances about the melody on top. Drummer Bill Berry and bassist Mike Mills are at their very best all the way through — soulful and beautifully imaginative. The greatest surprise on Hi Fi might actually be that R.E.M. is an astonishing live band — playing off of each other with uncanny intuition and unity.



From the moody ballads to the volcanic electric rockers, R.E.M. has mastered their art, and Hi Fi is a nearly flawless document of that mastery. It is an impassioned, questioning work that is pushing at the very edges of pop music, but is also firmly rooted in pop's vocabulary. It may be a sweeping generalization, unsympathetic to the diversity of musical taste and criteria, but R.E.M. could very well be the greatest rock and roll band today — a band of unfailing imagination and consistency.

New Adventures in Hi Fi is another heartbreakingly beautiful masterpiece in a long line of heartbreakingly beautiful masterpieces — worth every million spent, and every soul touched. A+

CONSTRUCTION AHEAD

With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

The Road to building your resume...
Junior or Senior SOM preferred; all may apply
Applications available until September 13th
Any questions contact Alycia or Peter. 545-3500

The Collegian is Looking for a
Marketing Manager

RING DAY

Order your college ring NOW.
JOSTENS
AMERICA'S COLLEGE RING™
SAVE UP TO $120
Sept 9-13 10AM-4PM
$25.00 deposit
CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619
UNIVERSITY STORE
Meet with your Jostens representative for full details. See our complete ring selection on display in your college bookstore.

Is it Carter or Hearst? Bengals, fans confused

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Is Ki-Jana Carter still the Cincinnati Bengals' featured running back? Or has newcomer Garrison Hearst edged ahead of last year's top overall pick in the draft?

Neither running back knows what's going on. And based upon what the coachiug staff is saying, the Bengals aren't sure, either.

Two games into the season, Carter is still the starter, but now shares the job with Hearst.

Carter is confused and stunned by his sudden loss of status. Hearst is just trying to figure out what's going on.

Coach Dave Shula isn't offering any answers.

"We want to use both of them," Shula said. "We think they can both make plays. They both showed that at times Sunday."

Neither one performed very well during a 27-14 loss Sunday in San Diego. Carter started the game, carried six times for 14 yards in the first half and caught one pass for a 20-yard gain.

Carter jammed his left shoulder in the second half and got just one more carry, finishing with 13 yards on seven attempts. Hearst became the featured back in the second half, also carrying seven times overall for 16 yards.

After two games, Carter has 21 carries for 27 yards while Hearst has 23 yards on 10 attempts. Neither one has broken a run of more than nine yards.

Neither one knows where they stand in the coaching staff's eyes. The only thing Shula has said definitively this week is that Carter will start Sunday against the New Orleans Saints.

"As far as I know, I'm still going to be in the game," Hearst said. "I've just got to keep learning so I can get more chances in the game."

The Bengals stunned Carter and the rest of the team by claiming Hearst off waivers two days before the final preseason game. At the time, they said Hearst, who makes $2.1 million, would be an insurance policy in case Carter struggles.

It hasn't worked out that way. Hearst is sharing the job with Carter, who missed last season because of reconstructive knee surgery. Carter was taken aback when he sat out most of the second half last Sunday.

"I'm definitely frustrated about not getting the ball," Carter said. "I'm supposed to be the featured back. I was told I'd be carrying the ball at least 15 times. I don't know what the coaches were thinking.

"I don't know, maybe they're trying to weed me out. Maybe that's why they brought Garrison Hearst in here, to give him a chance."

Throughout the preseason, Shula expressed confidence in Carter. The first indication of concern came the day the Bengals claimed Hearst off waivers.

Shula said Monday that Carter has not approached him about his role. Players had the day off yesterday.

"He hasn't said anything to me," Shula said. "I anticipated this when Garrison Hearst came in here and before Garrison Hearst got here, that guys were not going to be happy about the number of opportunities they were getting.

"As a competitor, you respect it in them. But they've got to be able to handle it the right way. You just show up to work and do your job."

Shula saw good and bad in both running backs' performances Sunday.

"I thought Ki-Jana started well in the ballgame. We tossed the ball to him a few times early on and he made some nice runs," Shula said. "As the game went on, it didn't happen for the offense as an entire group, and he was part of that."

The biggest drawback to Hearst is his limited knowledge of the offense.

"Garrison is still learning the offense, and it shows on occasion out there," Shula said.

Cardinals on roll, blank San Fran 1–0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Things are going so well for St. Louis, even an injury to a front-line starting pitcher turns into a timely blessing in disguise.

Mark Petkovsek, replacing Alan Benes in the rotation, had his second strong start of the season against San Francisco, combining with four relievers on a five-hit, 1-0 shutout yesterday.

"We didn't slot him for the Giants," St. Louis manager Tony La Russa said. "He's only pitching because Alan Benes took a ball off the wrist. But it's not often you get a pitcher with his kind of versatility."

With their 10th win in 11 games, the Cardinals opened a three-game lead in the NL Central, their largest lead over Houston since July 21. The Astros were home against Philadelphia on yesterday.

The Giants have lost 10 of 11 games and five straight.

Petkovsek (11-2) is 3-0 in his five spot starts this season, including 2-0 with a 0.90 ERA against the Giants. In younger days, he says he might have yearned for more starting time. Now he's happy just helping out.

"That's why they send guys out to war when they're young, because they feel like they can conquer the world," Petkovsek said. "When you get a little older, you figure out you need help."

Ray Lankford hit a run-scoring double in the sixth inning to score the game's only run, and the Cardinals increased their NL Central lead to three games.

"It's been happening for us all year, but in the last two weeks is when it's really happened," said Dennis Eckersley, who got the last four outs for his 350th career save and 27th of the season. "It's like we're all thinking, 'Let's go. Let's kill those last 20 games.'"

Petkovsek, making his first start since May 12 and fifth of the season, gave up two hits and three walks in five shutout innings. Losing pitcher Kirk Rueter (5-7) pitched seven strong innings in his first start for the Giants, allowing one run on four hits. Reuter and Tim Scott were acquired from Montreal on July 30 in exchange for Mark Leiter.

"I just wanted to keep us in the game, and I did that," Rueter said. "For my future here, I think they're going to let me pitch. In Montreal, I might have come out of that game sooner."

Rueter took a one-hitter into the sixth inning, when Royce Clayton grounded a one-out single. Lankford followed with a drive to the left-field alley that eluded lunging left fielder Barry Bonds for a double, allowing Clayton to score and giving St. Louis a 1-0 lead.

Cardinals relievers worked out of jams to preserve the lead. Tony Fossas struck out Desi Wilson with runners on second and third in the sixth, while Rick Honeycutt got out of a two-on, one-out situation in the seventh.

Rueter's failure to lay down a bunt cost him. He bunted into a double play in the third with runners at first and second and no outs, then popped out to the catcher trying to bunt a runner to second in the fifth.

Notes: The Cardinals are a season-high 13 games over .500, the Giants a season-high 25 games under... After the trade, Rueter made one relief appearance for the Giants before making five starts at Phoenix (AAA) in August, going 1-2 with a 3.51 ERA... The Giants are 23-51 since June 21st... Of the Cardinals' 10 shutouts this season, six have been combined efforts.

■ hoop

continued from page 12

missible evidence in a courtroom hearing, because under California law it is illegal to secretly tape a conversation.

• Ronnie Fields, the highly touted prep star out of Chicago's Farragut Academy was denied admission to DePaul University because of academic standards.

Fields, who at one time considered following Farragut teammate Kevin Garnett to the NBA, signed a national letter of intent to play for DePaul, expecting to sit out the year on Prop 48.

DePaul's admissions department said it denied Fields' because he lacked the necessary qualifications. The admissions department looks at test scores, high school transcripts and extracurricular activities.

The 6-foot-4 guard underwent surgery Feb. 26 to repair three vertebrae after he broke his back in a automobile accident.

• The Arkansas Razorbacks are facing NCAA investigations, prompting the resignation of Kim Wood, the hoop team's academic coordinator.

Wood, the daughter of Arkansas Chancellor Dan Ferrier, admitted to typing correspondence course papers for suspended guard Jesse Pate. She said that she never did the assignments, she just typed them.

Typing the work violated an NCAA rule which prohibits extra benefits being given to athletes. The rule states that no employees or boosters of a school can give an athlete services or goods that are not available to the general student body.

The NCAA Infraction Committee could penalize the Razorbacks for Wood's actions, and there is a possibility that the penalties could be more severe because Wood lied about the papers when originally asked in June.

Afraid that she would jeopardize both her and Pate's positions, Wood denied typing Pate's papers when first asked about it.

Pate was taking two correspondence courses, for which Wood typed 20–25 lessons.

"He didn't know how to type, and I was happy to help him, even knowing it was against the rules," Wood said.

He didn't know how to type? Yeah, or read, or write or...

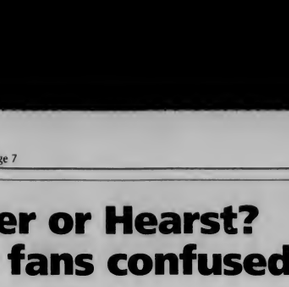
• Virginia point guard Harold Deane received two 30-day suspended jail sentences after he was involved in an incident outside a nightclub in April.

Deane was charged with trespassing and resisting arrest after a disruption broke out outside Fry's Spring Beach Club on April 13.

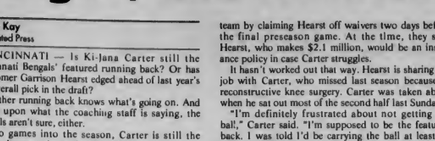
He left the Cavalier basketball team after his arrest, but is still on scholarship and could rejoin the team if administrators and coaches allow.

• Closer to home, the six Massachusetts basketball players whose grades were leaked to the media during the 1994–95 season settled their invasion of privacy case.

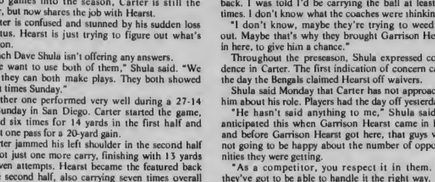
Marcus Camby, Donta Bright, Tyrone Weeks and Mike Williams, who were on academic probation, and Dane Dingle and Ted Cottrell, who were given academic warnings, each received $12,000 in the settlement, for a total of $72,000.



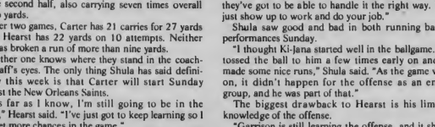
The Minutemen lodged a complaint with the Massachusetts attorney general's office in December 1995.



Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

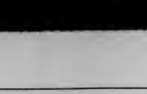


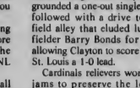
Collegian Graphics...we take a lickin' but keep on tickin'



YOU GOTTA GET THE LATEST FIRST. AND FOR LESS!

MUSIC
Check out the store for additional savings during our Best Fest Sale!





Sale ends September 19, 1996
MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MORE CHOICE. LESS PRICE. EVERY DAY.
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410
Shaw's Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777
Manchester Mall, Manchester, (860) 648-5871
STORE HOURS ENFIELD: MON-SAT: 8AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-7PM
ALL OTHER STORES: MON-SAT: 10AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-6PM

the UMass Mountain Bike Sale

September 11-13, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Student Union Lawn

ACADIA BIKE Great Deals on ACADIA BIKE
Used Mountain Bikes from:

GIANT
SCOTT

presented by UMASS SKI CLUB

Free Bike Registration!!
434 Student Union
545-3437

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Performing Arts Division offers Group and Private Instruction in music, theater and dance. Registration for Group Instruction runs Sept. 3-15, 1996. Private Instruction is on-going. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall. UMASS. 413-545-0518, for info.

UMASS Women's Ice Hockey Team is looking for new recruits! Come to open-ing meeting Sept. 12 at 6 p.m. outside the Blue Wall. All levels welcome. For more info call Kara 548-9171.

Afternoon University Women: Come visit Alpha Chi Omega Open Rush: Sept. 6 at 7:00, Sept. 10 at 6:30, and Sept. 11 at 7:00. Call Sam at 549-8458 for info.

Come meet the sisters of CHI OMEGA at our Open House on Sept. 8 at 1:30, Sept. 9 at 5:30 and our Barbeque on Sept. 10 at 5:30. Call Heather for more information at 549-4742.

Want to start your own fraternity? Zeta Beta Tau is looking for men to recolonize our chapter. If interested call Bret Hirbel at 317-334-1898 ext. 214.

All University woman invited to attend Sigma Kapa Open Rush: Thurs. 9/5 5-7 pm. Sun. 9/8 6-8 pm. Tues. 9/10 5-7 pm. Thurs. 9/12 6-8 pm. Please call Beth for more info. 256-6867. Located 19 Allen St. (Behind Hillel).

AUTO FOR SALE

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK. 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up, work just done. $7900 OBO. Call 549-7286.

EMPLOYMENT

Child Care Thurs. 2:30-9:00 p.m. Northampton area. Car needed. $6.00. Call Joan 584-8086.

Part-Time Jobs for the environment! Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmosphere. Call Alex at 256-6434.

NOW HIRING! COFFEE SHOP AND HATCH! Now have positions available working during lunch Mon-Fri. Come down and see us or call 545-0016 or 545-2567.

PART TIME JOBS FOR THE ENVIRON-MENT. Earn $60-$80 per day working to prevent toxics with MASSPIRG. Flexible schedule for students. Fun, casual atmo-sphere. Call Alex at 256-6434.

Now Hiring part-time telemarketers. Morning, afternoon and evening hours available. Earn $6-$7 per hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777.

Want the toughest job you'll ever love?? People's a student-run business is seek-ng highly motivated undergraduate work-study and non-work-study students for long term commitment. Learn to co-man-age a small business, gain invaluable leadership skills, and have a blast! Applications available at the Center for Student Businesses, Student Union, Room 408, or the Market. EOE.

Counter/Kitchen Help: 25 Hr/Week. Must be able to work late nights and week-ends. Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst!

Spring Break!!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710.

Now Hiring Experienced Wait Staff, Driver and Hostess. Apply with in only. Kai Chi Restaurant.

Looking for a fun, responsible companion with own transportation for our 13 year old son. Some afternoons and overnights in our home in Leverett. Call 548-9057.

PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANT. For evenings, overnights, and weekends. For male quad. $7.85 per hour. $15.70 for overnight. 6-0666.

PAINTERS NEEDED: Now hiring painters for the greater Amherst area. Hiring quick and reliable painters. Experience pre-ferred, but not required. Starts at $7/hr. plus bonuses. Part-time or Full-time. Contact Dan Wolman at Student Painters, 1-800-829-4777.

Cruise Ships Hiring. Earn up to $20,000+/month. World travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. neces-sary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015.

National Parks Hiring. Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016.

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students need not apply. Entry level and career positions avail-able worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012.

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now avail-able. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014.

International Employment. Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversa-tional english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015.

Drivers Wanted. For The Optimist. One day a week, good pay! Call 586-7070 Ext. 27.

Cider Jack needs friendly outgoing people for promotions at local retailers. Flexible hours. Please call Lara Minucci to set up an interview. 617-928-0048 Ext. 107.

Attention Skiers and Boarders. Entry level positions into the ski industry with skiing benefits. Make up to $1000/month. Part-time enthusiastic individuals please call Ski Card International 1-800-333-2SKI.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363.

Computer, Compaq 486, 8 RAM, 210HD, Software, $750 or B.O. 367-9874 or 253-2622.

Futon, Double. Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 OBO 548-9728.

LAPTOP COMPUTER: IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HD/ with case and extras/ $1100/OBO. Please contact Josh at 256-8986.

BOOKCASES. Unfinished pine. 24"x36"x9". 3 shelves. $48.00 + tax. 536-1944.

Sega Saturn w/ 2 controllers and Ultimate Mortal Kombat 3. $180.00. Call 546-5727.

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCCESS.ORG. Free business edu-cation from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

LOST

Sunglasses. Prescription. Oakley w/ case. Call 549-3950.

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed for dark, post-alternative pop/rock. We have EP and Boston gigs. If you are serious and can chill or rock out call Phil 549-5835.

MISCELLANEOUS

Let your voice be heard! WMUA news is looking for anchors, reporters, producers and more for daily newscasts. No experi-ence is needed. All majors welcome. Stop by our offices at 105 Campus Center or call 545-2676 and ask for Alexandra.

VISA/MASTERCARD GUARANTEED. Bad credit. No credit. No problem. Call 1-800-354-1580 (24 hours).

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Screem Savers 549-0083.

TRAVEL

One Way Ticket Hartford to San Francisco Sept. 21. Make Only $150 OBO 548-8546.

FREE TRIPS & CASH!!! Find out how hun-dreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also avail-able. Call now! Take a break. Student Travel (800)95-Break.

WANTED

I need Matthews tix for Oct. 6 @ Mullins. I will pay or trade. I have MSG tix for Oct. 4. Call Craig 253-3336.

WORTH THE RIDE

2BR Apt. in Sunderland. HW floors, wash/dry, porch, garage. 315+. BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4394.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities	Musicians
Announcemens	Miscellaneous
Apartment For Rent	Motorcycles
Auto For Sale	Personals
Employment	Room For Rent
Entertainment	Room Wanted
For Sale	Roommate Wanted
Found (2 days Free)	Services
Happy Birthday	Summer Sublet
Houses For Rent	To Sublet
Instruction	Travel
Lost	Transportation
	Wanted to Rent
	Wanted

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

PSYCHIC READINGS
Palm ★ Astrology ★ Tarot Cards
Crystal ★ Psychometry ★ Spiritual Readings
Readings by Vandela
Are you worried about:
Love ★ Marriage ★ Health ★ Business ★ Money
Do you need help with family problems?
ADVICE FOR ALL PROBLEMS
20 DAMON ROAD NORTHAMPTON, MA
390 MAIN STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA
FOR LOVE OFFERING BY PHONE
(413) 585-1601

EARN A FREE TRIP!
Council Travel, the nation's student travel specialist, is looking for an outgoing and highly motivated person to distribute our Student Travels magazine, promotional flyers and other student discount information on campus at U Massachusetts, Amherst.
If you're not shy, have a few extra hours a week, and enjoy spreading the word about student discounts, contact us for more details!
The person hired for this position will be a representative of Council Travel in Amherst. Preference will be given to the individual avail-able for the academic year and who has an active interest in marketing and working, studying, or traveling overseas.
To arrange for an interview, please contact Nicole at 256-1261, Monday through Friday, between 9:00-5:00. Ask about the Campus Rep program.
Council Travel
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid Officials Needed For Flag Football, Softball, Soccer, & Ice Hockey
Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 18, 19, 20
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 19, 23, 24
Ice Hockey - Sept. 25
Call for times & locations
Still Time To Enter Flag Football, Soccer, & Softball
More Info In 215 Boyden, 5-2693/5-0022
on the web: http://www.umass.edu.80/umim/

The Boltwood Project
Recruitment Nights
Attend Only One
Monday, September 9 or
Tuesday, September 10 or
Wednesday, September 11
6:30-8:30 pm in the Campus Center Auditorium
Recruiting University and Five College Students interested in earning up to two credits while providing community service to the Amherst area
For More Information call 545-6753

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

I got mine at Zanna!

Black zip jacket

Gun X jeans

Steve Madden oxfords
ZANNA downtown Amherst

Harpoon Night

TIME OUT
Giving away glasses, T-Shirts, hats and free Antonios Pizza!
Wednesday night starting at 9:30 and going till close.

COMPUTER FAIR MULLINS CENTER SEPT 14 10AM-3:30PM
Tri-State Fairs: Original Area Shows since 1987
Buy at wholesale prices directly at the show from nearly 50 independent competing companies under one roof. From full systems to shareware, it's all here
Located on the campus of UMass. Rte 9 onto Rte 116N at Staples taking first exit, turn right
This is a discount ticket. General admission is $7.00 each. Clip or photocopy this ad and save $2.00 ea
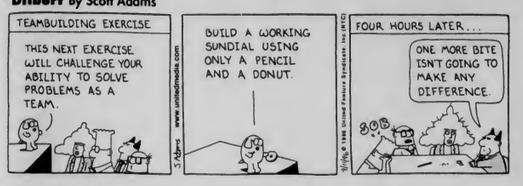
Our dealers feature the IBM/PC marketplace. Join us four times a year. Kids under 10 free with parent
Don't over sleep, one day show only!
ONE MONTH FREE INTERNET AT THIS SHOW FROM TIAC



Frumpy The Clown By Judd Winik

Frumpy The Clown By Judd Winik

Dilbert By Scott Adams

University By Frank Cho

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Always wanted one of those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I was at the check out counter at the Supermarket yesterday. There was a guy who looked exactly like me. I was afraid to talk to him because I realized he might be me. I turned away for a minute and he vanished.

I couldn't believe there was another me.

I thought I was special. My parents lied. Now, finally.... I know.

I wonder if they lied about anything else... or..... even exaggerated? I'll bet there's a couple of other things.

I knew I resented them for a reason.

I'm not going shopping anymore.

Hear Say By Emile Yang

Close to Home By John McPherson

Using stimulus/response, the Nelsons hoped to discourage Jeremy from engaging in dangerous activities as a teen-ager.

Daily Horoscope

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Sharp reflexes and quick responses keep you out of hot water—most of the time. This week could be different, so try to avoid high-risk situations. Facing up to your fears makes it easier to overcome them. If it's too scary, ask a sweetheart to help.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Head for the outdoors this week. Financial worries start to ease up later in the week. You could even receive an unexpected windfall. Put it to work for your future. Settle a controversial issue at home before you meet with any outside interference.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Resist the temptation to do something reckless. Ordinarily it would be OK, but this week there are other consid-erations. Stick close to home and focus on getting your chores done. A group of friends offers a shake-up of your usual weekend routine.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
If an antagonistic relationship seems to be deteriorating, take a few steps back. It's better than the alternative, which is to perch up after a blowout. You'll beat the odds later this week, so be prepared to set the part of the gracious winner.

LEO
July 23-August 23
The tides are shifting in favor you throughout the week so put off decisions until later. A meeting may not be the best place to voice your opinions. Put together a list of changes you think are important, and then bring them up later, in private.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Work in such a happy medium with a difficult person. The payoff could be bigger than you think. Pay close attention to deadlines—something could be creeping up on you. You'll be especially energetic in the mornings this week.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
The nights are right for you this week. Do your greatest thinking late in the day, or even better, in the evenings. Inconsistence in your everyday routine are a refreshing alternative to the daily rut. Use all your charms to excite a demanding person.

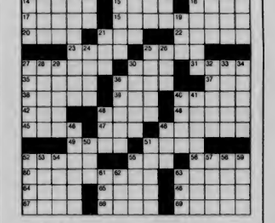
SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Sketch out a plan of attack early this week to solve a nagging problem. Make the big moves first, and then refine your approach as the week moves to a close. A romantic evening gives you a new outlook on life.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
An unexpected gift cheers you up early in the week. Trying times are almost over for a while. Save some money so you can splurge later. You deserve a celebration. Invite someone special to share it with you, and you could learn something of value.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Short-tempered coworkers are your main obstacles early in the week. Placate them with a mixture of good humor and tolerance, and you'll go far. Later this week, try something different for recreation. Take a lesson, or read a how-to book—then go for it!

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Pour all your attention and energies into a big problem. Don't expect anything of others that you wouldn't do yourself. Leading by example is the best way for you to get things accomplished. Stand up to an intim-idating person and you'll earn respect.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
You might feel caught in the middle this week, and the worst part will be that you can understand both sides of the argument. Don't take sides—instead, take a mediating role, and you'll come out on top. At home, an intimate relationship takes an unexpected turn.



For Entertainment Purposes Only

Quote of the Day

"Baseball is 90 percent mental. The other half is physical."

–Yogi Berra

ACROSS
1. Under
5. Cats' feet
10. Baseball hit out of play
14. "___ if Piano" (2 wds.)
15. Has debts
16. Ingrid's role in Casablanca
17. Wished
18. Feigned
20. Soothsayer
21. Skeleton, for one
22. Dated
23. Manoeuvrers
25. Brunch or lunch
27. Elliptical
30. Fuji ___ yung
31. Like a DeMille film
35. By hook or by ___
36. Author Silfstone
37. Genetic initials
38. Vets
39. ___ City (Houston film)
40. Goldilocks
42. Hick guitar, for short
43. Members of the pine family
44. Eighteome
46. Take ten
47. Fury
48. Kitchen tools
49. Grade
51. On which "du pour" is found
52. Head title
56. Slicker
58. Brood
60. Geometric measures
63. "That girl" who married Phil
64. Tarzan portrayer Lincoln
66. "Wall Street ___"
68. Pointless
67. English money: abbr.
68. No fib ___ or bulls
69. Cartography collection

DOWN
1. Parts of overalls
2. Author Wiesel
3. Mineral vein
4. Disregard
5. Untie
6. Leo and Picus
7. Wrong
8. Lika Willie Winkle
9. Jet-setting transport
10. Ending
11. Fred Sharon
12. Exploits
13. Do dock work
19. Clean air gp.
21. Beer barrel
24. Readies a printing press
25. Encircling trenches
28. Vast age
27. Befall
28. Truck stop?
29. Mesplaces
30. Warning light
32. Rebbie
33. Sunrise
34. Break coverings
36. Burning
40. Area above the flank
41. Junk-mail addressee
43. ___ to be tied
46. Oscillation
48. Cookbook item: abbr.
50. Lemon refresher
51. Prepares to paint windows
52. Poetic works
53. Droop
54. Appellative
55. Talking horse (2 wds.)
57. Ph.D. postulant's exam
58. Arm bone
59. Little piggies
61. Airline letters
62. Baird's time
63. Alice star

Yesterday's Crossword Answers

B	E	L	O	W		P	A	W	S		F	O	U	L
I	L	O	V	E		O	W	E	S		I	L	S	A
B	I	D	E	O		P	R	E	T	E	N	O	E	D
S	E	E	R		K	E	Y			P	A	S	S	E
			L	I	E	S		M	E	A	L
O	B	L	O	N	G		F	O	O		E	P	I	C
C	R	O	O	K		A	L	A	N			R	N	A
C	A	S	K	S		F	A	T		L	O	A	F	S
U	K	E			F	I	R	S		O	C	T	E	T
R	E	S	T		I	R	E		R	I	C	E	R	S
		R	A	T	E		M	E	N	U
O	W	N	E	D			M	A	C		P	O	U	T
D	I	A	M	E	T	E	R	S		M	A	R	L	O
E	L	M	O		W	E	E	K		I	N	A	N	E
S	T	E	R		A	N	D	S		A	T	L	A	S

Today's Staff

Tara MK Connelly
Night Editor

Lisa Oliveri
Copy Editor

Elizabeth Brown
Photo Technicial

David Voldan
Production Supervior

Kelvin L. Torres
Tracey Morin
Brian D. Inocencio
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Grilled Chicken
Hot Corned Beef on Rye
Ravioli / Tomato Sauce
Vegan Ravioli

DINNER
Pork Chops and Stuffing
Turkey Divan
Vegetarian Pocket
Qtr. Pounder Burger

Hampden

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Pork Chops &Stuffing
Turkey Divan

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Chicken
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce
Ratatouille

DINNER
Pork Chops & Stuffing
Tempeh Stir Fry
Pastabilities
Tri-Colored Tortellini

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Chicken
Fettuccini/Tomato Sauce
Ratatouille

DINNER
Pork Chops & Stuffing
Turkey Divan
Tempeh Stir Fry
Pastabilities

Sports

UMass looks to remain undefeated

By Jen Ryder
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team hits the road again to face the Eagles of Boston College tonight at 7:30 pm. The Minutewomen, 2–0, are trying for their third win in a row. In addition to their two regular season wins, the team defeated the University of Toronto 4–0 in an exhibition game last Wednesday at Springfield College.

Going into tonight's contest, the University of Massachusetts is 14–0 against Boston College, having never lost to the Eagles in the series which dates back to 1982.

Massachusetts coach Pam Hixon will find a familiar face on the BC bench during tonight's contest. Tara Jelley, who played for Hixon at UMass, is in her first year as an assistant coach with the Eagles.

"It's interesting because I was also coached by [UMass assistant] Amy [Robertson] and I played with [UMass assistant] Ainslee [Press] at UMass," Jelley said. "I know what UMass is all about. Coach Hixon instills pride and tradition in her players, which will be a threat."

The defense and solid play of senior goalie Hilary Rose is one of the reasons the Minutewomen are enjoying their early success. In her last game, against New Hampshire, Rose recorded her 27th career shutout, and did not face a shot on goal the entire game.

"She's the best there is," Jelley said of Rose. "We will have to put a lot of shots on goal."

For the second week in a row freshman Saskia Fuchs has been named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week. In last weekend's win, she assisted on the game winning goal.

Although the team is still adjusting to the no offsides rule, scoring has not been a problem. In both their games and their exhibition this season the Minutemen have scored four goals.

The scoring has been spread out among five players: senior Kyle Rothenberger (1), juniors Courtney MacLean (3) and Jen Guitzman (1), sophomore Erica Johnston (1) and Fuchs (2). Sophomore Kate Putnam leads the team with three assists, while Rothenberger and Fuchs each have two.

"[Rothenberger] is a hard worker and great athlete, and she has the biggest heart. She is the leader on that team," Jelley added.

Boston College (0–2) and head coach Sherren Granese head into their home opener looking for their first win of the season. They have suffered losses to Michigan and Michigan State, being outscored 6–3 in the process.

Offensively for the Eagles the three goals have been scored by three different players: Andrea Durko, Joy Ramsbotham and Ann Marie Ambros. Nicki Novocin, Michelle LaBonge, Marion Fitzgerald and Durko all have recorded one assist each.

The team has given up 16 penalty corners so far this season, while they have only had six. The UMass defense has faced five penalty corners, and the Minutewomen offense has played 10, converting on one.

Playing in the goal for the Eagles is Sarah Egnaczyk, who has played in both their games. She has given up six goals and recorded 30 saves.

The BC defense will have to find a way to stop the potent Massachusetts offense, especially in the second half, where UMass has scored six goals.

"Our team is young, very fast and has quality athletes," Jelley said.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior goalie Hilary Rose and the UMass field hockey team travel to Chestnut Hill to play Boston College tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Rhett demands raise; Patriots' fans are restless

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers are 0–2 after the first two weeks of National Football League action.

Okay, that's nothing unusual. The Bucs have been one of the worst franchises in the history of the NFL. The difference is this year could have been different.

With a new coach setting up an easier offense for third– year QB Trent Dilfer and RB Errict Rhett, they might have been able to move the ball. The only problem is Rhett has yet to show up to play.

After rushing for 2,218 yards and 18 touchdowns in his first two seasons, Rhett has yet to rush for a single yard this year. Instead, he has been holding out since the beginning of training camp as he tries to renegotiate his contract to earn more than the $300,000 he currently does.

On one hand, it's easy to see his point:

• Other running backs who have rushed for comparable yards tend to have contracts worth a million dollars or more.

• The Tampa Bay Bucs, especially if he leads them to victories and therefore larger crowds, make a lot more off Rhett than they pay him.

• In a sport and position where five years can be a full career, Rhett wants to make his money while he's still at a high level of play and can demand that much.

On the other hand, he's earning over $300,000. That's a hell of a lot of money. And considering it's for playing a game, it's hard to see where he's coming from. Far too many college grads will be lucky to make $40,000 in a boring full–time job. Does anyone really need $1 million anyway? Sure, it would be nice to have, but most people should be able to live quite nicely on just a few hundred thousand.

And for someone who's as concerned with money as Rhett seems to be, he should keep the date Nov. 5 in mind. If he hasn't signed a contract by then, he's done for the season.

Then there are players like Buffalo's all–pro DE Bruce Smith. He's also in a contract dispute with his team. The difference is (and Patriots fans are painfully aware of this) he's still playing on Sundays.

Yes, the situation is a little different. Smith is an eight– time Pro–Bowler who has helped lead the Bills to four Super Bowls. He plays for a team with a quality owner in Ralph Wilson, who he knows will take care of him. Rhett is a much younger player, who plays for a historically cheap, lousy team. He also already makes a lot of money, much closer to market value than Rhett does.

The major difference is Smith has too much respect for his team, the game, and the fans to sit on his couch on Sundays.

This attitude might be best summed up by Bills' LB Chris Spielman. As he puts it, the Bills aren't privileged to have him play for them, he's the one with the privilege of playing for them.

It's an attitude all athletes, not just football players, should remember. They get a lot of money to play a sport, gain thousands, and maybe millions of fans, and get more money and fame in television endorsements. It's hard to sympathize when they start quibbling over an extra million bucks.

***

First round draft pick Keyshawn Johnson got his first touchdown reception last Sunday. He then proceeded to hold a wild celebration for himself in the end zone. Compare that to Terry Glenn, who managed the same feat. He showed excitement at his accomplishment, but it was restrained, celebrating the TD, but not rubbing it into the other team's faces.

These "super–spikes" are becoming quite obnoxious. From San Francisco's Merton Hanks' epileptic seizures after every INT to Michael Irvin and Deion Sanders' dances, every one is nauseating. There's a difference between players celebrating a good play by simply spiking the ball, gesturing for a first down, or swinging their arms like they were hitting a baseball, and the elaborate routines players now do.

If it keeps up, the NFL could (and probably should) set up no taunting rules similar to what college football uses. There is a reason it's called the No Fun League, after all.

On the contrary, there's nothing classier than the Packers new tradition of jumping into fans arms after TDs. That's how players should celebrate.

***

Nothing's quite as amusing as listening to the fans of a losing team.

On the Patriots' internet discussion group, one fan blasted linebacker Chris Slade in terms unprintable in this paper, for his fumble after intercepting a Jim Kelly pass. Considering the Patriots picked off Kelly again just a few plays laster, it seems a bit foolish to get upset with Slade for putting the ball on the ground after he thought he was tackled on his first NFL interception.

Even better are the fans railing against QB Drew Bledsoe. One went so far as to suggest that Scott Zolak should be the starter, and that the team would have been in the playoffs last year if it had been Zo under the center.

Now, Zolak's a great backup, and could probably start for about eight teams in the NFL, but the Pats aren't one of them.

In reality, Pats fans should have been happy with last Sunday's game, despite losing. After the horrid performance on opening day against Miami last year, the team never recovered and played horribly throughout the season.

This year, the Pats seemed to regain their pre–season spirit when they played Buffalo after the horrid opening day performance against Miami. With the worst team in the NFL, Arizona, coming to Foxboro next week, the Pats should get their first win, and confidence they can use to springboard to a better season.

And from the Alanis Morrisette "Isn't It Ironic?" section: Former Patriots kicker Missin' Scott Sisson went three for three for the Vikings in their win over Atlanta. Current rookie kicker Adam Vinatieri went one for four in the Patriots seven–point loss. Anyone know how to say "Missin'" in Dutch?

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

Water polo set to host Eagles in home opener

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Every sports team can use a pick–me–up after losing two out of three games to open their season. Especially a season in which the team is defending a championship.

Tonight the water polo team will be looking for that pick–me–up as they play one of only four home matches this season at Amherst College's Alumni Gym pool.

And oh look, Boston College is in town.

The Minutemen, three–time defending Eastern Champions, have dominated the Eagles in water polo. The University of Massachusetts holds a 19–1 record all–time against their intra–state rivals. The Eagles were destroyed on their last trip to Amherst, falling to the Minutemen 20–6 in a complete mis–match.

Boston College is coached by ex–Minuteman G.T. Ladd, and assisted by last year's co–captain John Luviano, but UMass coach Russ Yarworth isn't going to cut his former pupils any slack.

"[In yesterday's practice] they really went at it. I was pretty pleased," Yarworth said. "We're just going to go out there and play our game."

In theory, Massachusetts' game consists of a powerful two–meter offense (Brian Stahl, Gabriel Marrero, Adrian Roman and J.C. Limardo) and an inexperienced but tenacious defense anchored by the veteran goal–keeping of Paul Engin.

The UMass squad left half of their game at home last weekend when they traveled to Annapolis, Md. for the Navy Invitational. Their expected high–powered offense (39 goals in three games) was there, but they forgot to pack the defense (34 goals allowed).

"I'm trying to get us to play the complete team game," Yarworth said. "[The team] knows that they have to come out to play every time now."

The BC squad will be out to play as they can't help but gear up for the biggest contest on their season schedule.

Last year the Eagles came to Amherst a young inexperienced team and left a young, discouraged inexperienced team after the Minutemen trounced them by a two touchdown margin.

Boston College returns most of their core from a year ago including a seasoned, young defense that will have trouble contending with the size and strength of the key Minuteman scorers down low.

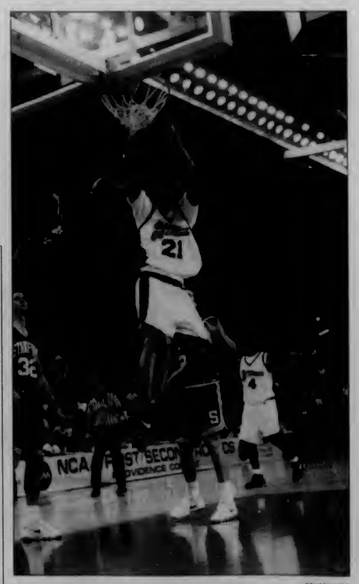
The Eagles don't have any scorers that can compare to the quartet that Yarworth employs at the two–meter position, so look for the Eagles to try and grind out a low–scoring affair.

After the Minutemen tangle with the Eagles, they will brave the streets of Brooklyn to compete in their first Eastern Water Polo Association tournament of the season. UMass will contest Lehman College, the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy and St. Francis College.

Amherst will host an EWPA league tournament on the Sept. 28 (Harvard, M.I.T. and Brown) finishing off all the home dates for the Minutemen in 1996.

From poolside... Last season the Minutemen outscored the Eagles 41–12 in their two meetings... Brian Stahl is on pace to score 105 goals in the regular season alone. If UMass gets as far as it did last year, he is on track to net 145 goals, which would easily eclipse the Minuteman all– time record... Ron Gonen has moved up to fifth place on the UMass career quarters played chart, passing Frankie Mariani. He is a mere 35 quarters behind record–holder Javier Gonzalez... Freshman Rich Slingluff has scored three goals and won nine swim–offs for the Minutemen already this season.

Marcus & Raptors ink 3–year contract



TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Raptors have come to terms with Marcus Camby, the second overall pick in this year's NBA draft.

Under the NBA's rookie salary cap, Camby will make a minimum of $2.028 million in the first year of a maximum three–year deal, after which he can become a free agent. His salary will increase to $2.5 million and $2.6 million in the second and third years, respectively.

Camby, the 1995–96 consensus college basketball player of the year, averaged 20.7 points, 8.0 rebounds and 3.8 blocks last season, while leading Massachusetts (35–2) to the NCAA Final Four.

"It's been a very productive summer," said Camby, who will likely play forward with the Raptors. "I've just been playing every day, working out and just trying to stay in shape."

The 6–foot–11 Camby, who left UMass after his junior season to enter the draft, admitted accepting gifts from potential agents while still in school.

COLLEGIAN FILE

1995 National Player of the Year Marcus Camby and the Toronto Raptors agreed to a deal worth $6.9 million over 3 years.

Bozeman resigns from Ca.; denies sexual allegations

Todd Bozeman

A quick look at some of the college hoop news that caught my eye over the summer:

• Todd Bozeman resigned as California's coach. The resignation came in the wake of allegations of sexual harassment from a former Cal student.

Suzanne Wilson, a 22–year–old first–year student at Hastings College of Law, accused Bozeman of threatening her and making repeated phone calls to her with "highly sexual connotations."

She filed for a restraining order, which was imposed late last month, on Aug. 14.

Bozeman has denied Wilson's allegations, turning the table on her, saying that it was she who was interested in starting a sexual relationship. He also said that he knew of "several basketball players" who had told him of their sexual relationships with Wilson.

The 32–year–old Bozeman has also accused Wilson of lying to him about her plans for $2,000 he loaned her to pay for law school.

She allegedly took the $2,000 and used it for an illegal 'gift club', and refused to pay Bozeman back in the six–week time frame the two had established. Bozeman said that he threatened to report her involvement in the club to the FBI if she didn't return the money.

But when it rains, it pours, Bozeman found out when he was accused of paying the family of a former player to influence the player's decision to attend Cal.

The San Francisco Chronicle printed a report stating that members of Jelani Gardner's family were paid $30,000 to influence Gardner's decision. Sports Illustrated reported the amount to be $15,000.

Bozeman also denied the recruiting violations, saying that his lawyer had forbidden him from making specific comments.

Cal could face serious sanctions from the NCAA, depending on the findings of current investigations.

Gardner, a 6–foot–6 guard, transferred to Pepperdine at the end of last season. He is hoping the NCAA will wave the mandatory one–year waiting period that all transfers face, if Cal is put on probation.

Tom Gardner, Jelani's father, brought the illegal recruiting inducement to the NCAA's attention after two years because he was unhappy about his son's playing time. He told the NCAA that he has a taped conversation in which Bozeman offered the elder Gardner the money.

The taped conversation would most likely not be per–

Turn to HOOP, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 7 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, September 12 , 1996

The Rhythms of Life

The Fine Arts Center gears up for an exciting, diverse semester of dance, music and more. Check out our coverage of the performances (See Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass grounds BC Eagles

Hilary Rose earned her second consecutive shutout in net for the Minutewomen as the field hockey team beat BC 2–0 (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Clinton warns Hussein against further threats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning Iraq that America is "not playing games," the Pentagon ordered a pair of B-52 bombers and eight radar-evading F-117 jets to the vicinity of the Persian Gulf yesterday to prepare for possible new hostilities.

Defense Secretary William Perry, using uncharacteristically harsh language to discuss an Iraqi attempt to fire on U.S. aircraft in the region, pledged a U.S. response to Saddam Hussein "disproportionate to the provocations which were made against us."

At a campaign rally in Arizona, President Clinton spoke in similar terms.

"We will do what we must to protect our people," Clinton said. "The determination of the United States to deal with the problem of Iraq should not be underestimated."

Later, after meeting with former Sen. Barry Goldwater in a Phoenix hospital, Clinton said his administration was determined "to manage the situation in an appropriate and disciplined way.

"I think it is important not to let the word war spiral out of hand," he told reporters.

NATION

Attorneys describe McVeigh as 'average'

DENVER (AP) — Attorneys for Oklahoma City bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh portrayed him yesterday as a Gulf War hero whose political attitudes are "hardly distinguishable from the average voter for Pat Buchanan."

In fact, if McVeigh is allowed a separate trial from co-defendant Terry Nichols, jurors will see him "as an extroverted, outgoing, intelligent, bright and engaging young man, though an all-American boy one," attorney Robert Nigh said. in court papers supporting motions for separate trials, Nigh said the differences between McVeigh and Nichols are stark.

"If Mr. McVeigh's character is not assessed independently of Mr. Nichols', he will be severely prejudiced," he said.

The weight of evidence is against Nichols, not McVeigh, Nigh said. Attorneys for Nichols are also arguing for a separate trial. McVeigh and Nichols face federal murder and conspiracy charges in the April 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Oklahoma City federal building that killed 168 people and injured more than 500. Prosecutors are seeking a single trial. U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch will rule on the request after a hearing Oct. 2. Aside from noting McVeigh's military accomplishments — which included being among the first wave of soldiers in the attack on Iraq — Nigh acknowledged his client was sharply critical of the federal raid on the Branch Davidian complex in Waco, Texas, and was concerned about the right to bear arms.

"However, these political attitudes are hardly distinguishable from the average voter from Pat Buchanan," Nigh argued.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 55	HIGH: 65 LOW: 55	HIGH: 75 LOW: 56

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword .....page 14
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 3
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 16

Kerry, Kennedy, Riley discuss education

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

In the midst of a heated electoral battle with Gov. William F. Weld, Democratic Sen. John Kerry, along with his colleague, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and the U.S. Department of Education (DoE) Secretary Richard Riley, spoke to newspaper editors from 11 Massachusetts colleges and universities yesterday — highlighting what they perceive to be a "Republican onslaught" on federal higher education programs.

The interview was conducted via phone conference from Kerry's Capitol Hill office.

A matter of priorities

"The federal commitment to education is under siege," said Kerry, who wasted little time in blasting his opposition.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sen. Ted Kennedy

Citing moderate Republicans who will leave the Senate after their terms expire this year, Kerry said he fears a more conservative majority may be prone to drastically reduce education expenditures.

"There is very little moderation left on the Republican side. Many have expressed the notion that higher education is expendable," Kerry said.

Riley agreed, criticizing recent Republican balanced budget proposals, which, according to DoE calculations, would cut $30 billion from higher education over seven years.

He continued by contrasting the GOP plan with that of President Bill Clinton, who has proposed a balanced budget within the same time span that would add $37 billion to education.

"The commitment of resources is a pretty good indication of the nation's priorities," added Kennedy. "We have no other higher priority; everything flows from [education.]"

Making few attempts to hide their partisan sentiment, the Senators both called for a Democratically controlled senate.

"Who wants to risk a Republican leadership in the country and the Senate," Kennedy asked.

Kerry commended his own record, portraying himself as a defender of higher education in the Senate.

He spoke about a successful amendment he authored, which restored $2.7 billion worth of potential cuts to last year's higher education appropriations bill. A more ambitious amendment failed the most recent time around due to insufficient Republican support, according to Kerry.

Kerry also attacked Weld's record on education, relaying students' concerns voiced to him at a recent visit to the University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth.

"Students tell me that just the tuition increases Gov. Weld has imposed have forced many students to leave," Kerry said.

Kennedy also took his swings at Weld, protesting his support for eliminating the DoE, characterizing it as "something I just can't understand."

Politics and financial aid

Of special concern to UMass–Amherst is the Federal direct loan program, which all three officials spoke on. In place for over a year on this campus, the program has been highly praised by students and administrators alike.

Direct lending, however, has mixed support in Washington and has barely survived several efforts to eliminate it out right, according to Kerry.

Under certain proposals, only five institutions in this state, out of a total of 47 which would qualify, could expect sufficient operational funds for the direct lending program, Kerry said.

Kennedy blamed Republicans for succumbing to banking industry pressure, which, according to his figures, stands to profit $11 billion a year through the older Guaranteed Student Loan program.

Advocates of the direct lending program say it saves students money and time by securing loans directly from their university, who in turn, receive their funds straight from the DoE. No intermediary financial institution participants in the exchange, which Kennedy said, would slow the process and drain student savings accounts.

"That money comes out of the pocketbooks of working families in Massachusetts and around the country," Kennedy said.

"Let's let the schools themselves make the judgement," he added, as to what program they will operate under.

Riley expressed concerns for diminishing grant dollars afforded to students from congressional appropriations.

The Pell Grant program, intended for students of high financial need, is "not funded near the level they should be," Riley said.

The same is true, he said, for federal work–study and Perkins Loans programs.

Fiscal realities or "flim–flam"

Long on criticisms, Kerry, Kennedy and Riley did offer general solutions to the rising costs of college education.

Riley spoke about the Clinton plan to make two years of college education universal by offering a $1500 credit to all students. This, he said, would cover the approximate cost of two years at a average community college.

In addition, Riley said Clinton will propose an allowable tax deduction of up to $10,000 to finance any level of college education.

According to Riley, a college graduate can expect their lifetime earnings to tally 75 percent more in comparison to someone who holds only a high school diploma.

"Knowledge is the key asset to the future," Riley said.

While both Riley and Kerry said that such a plan would cost the government $40 billion over seven years, it fits into an overall deficit reduction program.

Some students expressed doubts as to how realistic these expectations were.

Kerry said, "there is no flim–flam artistry to this," but did not elaborate any further.

Student might equals student dollars

Kerry became enthusiastic as he emphasized that students must participate in the political process, especially when programs, such as direct lending, are threatened.

"Students across the country need to be very, very vigilant," Kerry said.

Riley also praised students who travelled to Washington to flex their political muscles.

"I was so proud to see college students of America come to Washington [last spring, during the middle of budget negotiations] and let their feelings known," Riley said. "We need the energy of young people of being involved."

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sen. John Kerry

Gvm't officials resign over welfare bill

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's signing of the Republican welfare overhaul bill last month has now cost the Health and Human Services Department (HHS) three top officials, as two more quit in protest yesterday.

Peter Edelman is resigning as assistant secretary for planning and evaluation, and Mary Jo Bane is leaving as assistant secretary for the administration for children and family. Both will depart Sept. 28.

Last month, Wendell E. Primus resigned as the agency's deputy assistant secretary in the office of planning and evaluation. He prepared a study that said the welfare legislation would plunge one million more children into poverty.

Primus worked for Edelman, who is married to Marian Wright Edelman, director of the Children's Defense Fund. She is a longtime friend of the Clintons, but a sharp critic of the welfare law.

"I have devoted the last 30-plus years to doing whatever I could to help in reducing poverty in America," Peter Edelman wrote in a memo to colleagues yesterday. "I believe the recently enacted welfare bill goes in the opposite direction.

"It is now more urgent than ever that we find new approaches that simultaneously promote self-sufficiency and protect the most vulnerable in our society," wrote Edelman, who plans to return to the Georgetown University Law Center faculty.

Bane wrote in a separate memo: "My deep concerns about the welfare bill that the president signed on Aug. 22 have led me to conclude that I cannot continue to serve as assistant secretary." She plans to return to Boston.

HHS spokeswoman Melissa Skolfield declined to comment on the resignations. However, she said Jack Ebeler, the second in command for planning and evaluation, would replace Edelman. Named to succeed Bane was Olivia Golden, who worked directly under Bane and formerly was director of program and policies for the Children's Defense Fund.

Clinton, who had vowed in 1992 to "end welfare as we know it," vetoed two previous overhaul plans, saying they were too harsh on the nation's children. He signed the third, despite studies that indicated many more people would end up in poverty.

The welfare overhaul sets a federal lifetime limit of five years of welfare per family and requires able-bodied adults to work after two years, but allows exemptions for some recipients. It also gives the states block grants to run programs and lets them set many of the rules, allowing them to provide fewer years of assistance, for example.

Republicans said the law would reorder a confusing welfare system and free families from years of dependence on public assistance.

However, many Democrats criticized Clinton of election-year posturing in signing it, saying its provisions were too hard on children, that people would be left without support if the economy turned sour and that the law would push more people into poverty.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Aimee Gelinas, a natural resources alum, gives out information to interested students for the Audubon Society.

Students find trouble due to campus vendors

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

Like so many new students at the University of Massachusetts, Zoe Kamara, a political science major, remembers her freshman year when she signed on with one of the many credit card companies promoting their business on campus.

"The credit card I got I maxed out and owed hundreds of dollars," Kamara said.

Fortunately, she was able to pay the balance right away, but she is now very suspicious of companies trying to attract student business.

"I don't think they should be allowed on campus," Kamara said. "They just prey on new students who are really naive about situations like this."

Kamara is not alone in her opinions of the many businesses and vendors that are allowed onto the UMass campus.

John O'Donnell, a biology and chemistry major at UMass, maintains an anti–vendor feeling.

"Personally, it doesn't appeal to me because they're sort of intrusive," O'Donnell said. "[It's] intrusive because most people have a lot on their minds and aren't thinking if they can make credit card payments when they're approached. And they want you to make a decision on the spot."

Even one of the employees, Shah Anderson, at the Dad's table which sells the Boston Globe and the New York Times in the Campus Center Concourse does not fully support businesses on campus.

"For the most part they offer a service, but at the same time they're still charging. It's like a double edged sword," said Anderson, who is also an African–American studies major at UMass.

"We offer the paper at a discounted rate for students because they need it for classes and they don't have much cash," Anderson said.

Anderson also complained that there were vendors who are not licensed, but still sell their products on campus. These, said Anderson, were the people who exploited the students and "people like us have to deal with the negative image made by those who aren't legit."

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission (CC/SUC) decides who, and how long, a vendor is going to be allowed inside the Campus Center Concourse and certain allotted slots in the Student Union. They have been attempting to alleviate some of the problems and concerns of students.

Matthew Auger, chair of the CC/SUC, said that they strongly discourage "corporate vendors," with the exception of banks because of student need.

"I'm pretty certain you won't see them again this semester," said Auger, referring to the banks.

Auger explained that the only reason vendors selling products or services are active on campus is because of the time restraint. For instance, Dad's will have to be able to deliver their papers on time, and students will want to open bank accounts at the start of the semester.

"We try to keep the first two weeks reserved for informational distribution and student organizations," said Auger.

The CC/SUC also give very little, and specified, times to credit card vendors "in an effort to restrict students getting into trouble," said Auger.

To benefit the school even further, the CC/SUC strongly encourage vendors to have student organization sponsors. This relationship succeeded in raising "$2,500 last spring, and has raised as much as $4,000 in the past," according to Auger. If vendors do not, they could be subject to a steep charge that goes directly to the Campus Center building.

"We have some groups who don't want to follow the very simple protocol we require," said Auger, in reference to the unregistered vendors. Auger assures that these organizations are very swiftly dealt with and are not a huge concern.

Senate nominations still available

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Senatorial nominations for the undergraduate senate are being accepted by the Student Government Association (SGA) until 5 p.m. on Sept. 18.

"There are only about 40 nominations in presently, but we expect a flood at the end," said Pete Kilbourne, SGA secretary of Public Policy and Relations.

Candidates must collect 25 signatures from their residential building or comparable representation, such as the off- campus commuter area and ALANA (Asian, Latino, African, and Native American) Caucus appointees.

"The new senators offer a fresh perspective on the University," said Kilbourne.

"I want to add to the diversity of political opinion within the SGA," said sophomore candidate Emilie Codega.

Codega added that, within the senate, she believes women's rights need to represent the entire spectrum of opinions of all women on campus.

If elected, she will represent the Central Residential Area, at-large.

Each dormitory on campus has at least one senatorial position while more populated dorms have two. Besides the dormitories, senators also represent the off-campus commuter area, Area Government appointees and ALANA Caucus appointees.

As defined by chapter one, section one of the SGA bylaws, "Senate seats shall be apportioned by the Senate among several constituencies, defined here as either Electoral District, Caucus appointment or Area Government appointment."

"New senators discover things that we have not seen," said Kilbourne. "After all, we have been here for a while."

The new senators will be responsible for many aspects of campus governance, including the review and recommendation process for the Student Activities Fee, enacting, amending or repealing the bylaws of the SGA Constitution and recommending the Student Activities Trust Fund operating budget.

Also, the new senators shall gain the power to "promote the general welfare and interests of the undergraduate student body by making recommendations on policies and procedures," according to the bylaws.

Senatorial elections will be held on Sept. 25th. Voting takes place in all the dining commons for on-campus students, in the Campus Center for off-campus students and in the Newman Center for Hillel and Greek Area residents.

"Every now and then a new senator comes along, takes control and does an awesome job," said Kilbourne.

Students interested in running for a seat in the Undergraduate Senate can obtain nomination papers in the SGA office, 420 Student Union Building during regular business hours.

Correction

The article "Audience seeks reassurance, not talk" in yesterday's paper was a news analysis. The Collegian regrets the errors.

Notice: The positions of Staff Artist and Systems Manager have been filled.

Applications for the two remaining positions,
Assistant to the Managing Editor and Librarian, are due on Friday, Sept. 13.
Leave all applications at the Collegian in the mailbox of Chris Conner, Managing Editor.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Make way for the ducklings...

Two-year-old Maya Berkman, of Amherst, takes some time out from her busy schedule to play with the ducks by the campus pond.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11p.m. tel: 549-2692
Shop Scott's & Save Lotts! THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
Bud Ice 30 pks. $15.49 +dep.
Bass Ale bottles $10.99 +dep.
Bud & Bud Light 1/2 kegs $39.99 +dep.
Milwaukee's Best Reg & Light 30 pks. $9.99 +dep.
Miller Genuine Draft Reg & Light 24 -12 oz. bots. $9.99 +dep.
Check Out Our Other In Store Specials!
Hornsby's Cider 6 pks. $4.99 +dep.
Gordon's Vodka 1.75 liter $11.49
Bacardi Limon 750ml $8.99
Cuervo Gold Tequila 750ml $11.99
Andrea Champagne 3 for 8.99
Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Auburn Drive University Drive Route 9 SCOTTS Victory Market

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Plan now for next summer...
SEASONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM
This 285-hour program qualifies graduates for a federal Level II law enforcement commission, needed for a position as a seasonal law enforcement officer in national parks, or other environmental agencies.
The program includes instruction in (among other topics):
• Law Enforcement Techniques • Firearms Training • Detention and Arrest
• Defensive Tactics • Crime Scene Management • Search and Seizure
• Accident Investigation • Federal Law and the U.S. Code • Patrol Procedures
• Defensive Driving
Nov. 2, 1996-March 22, 1997. Weekdays during Wintersession and Spring break, plus 7 Weekends
Registration deadline/confirmation: October 18, 1996
Registration Materials and More Information are available from:
Division of Continuing Education, (413) 545-2484.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

YOU'RE LOOKIN' AT THE RIGHT PLACE FOR PLENTY OF GREAT DEALS
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Budweiser. REG-LIGHT-ICE CASE OF 3-12 PK. BOTTLES $13.49 + DEP
12 PACK KEYSTONE LT. 30-12 OZ. CANS $10.49 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK REG. & LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $13.99 + DEP
NATURAL LIGHT & ICE CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $8.99 + DEP
RED HOOK ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
BLUE MOON ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
EVERYDAY LOW PRICE
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, LITE, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE, MICH, MICH LT, AMBER BOCK $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
TURNING LEAF CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, FUME BLANC, WHITE ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $4.99
ALMADEN 5 LT. BAG-IN-A-BOX CHABLIS, BLUSH, BURGUNDY, RHINE, GOLDEN, WHT GRENACHE $5 LT. SALE 7.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $5.49
FETZER EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750 ML. $6.99
MANISCHEWITZ ALL FLAVORS 1.5L $5.49
GLEN ELLEN CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $7.99
ANDRE CHAMPAGNE ALL FLAVORS! 750 ML $2.99
GORDONS VODKA 1.75L $10.99
BACARDI LIMON 750 ML $8.99
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH 1.75 LT $13.49
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75 LT $14.99
GIRO TEQUILA SILVER & GOLD 1.0 LT $6.99
TANQUERAY GIN 750 ML $12.49
JÄGERMEISTER 750 ML $13.99
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/12/96 THRU WEDS. 9/18/96
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Discover THE FINEST SINCE 1976
Handmade diamond engagement rings & featuring ideal cut
Lazare Diamonds®
Setting the standard for ...BRILLIANCE™
Full in-house repair service. We buy diamonds & gold. Free ear piercing with purchase of studs.
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Beauty Nail
A professional nail service using the highest quality products.
MANICURE & PEDICURE $25.00
Full Set of Nails '25 • Fills '15
Air Brush & Design . Gift Certificates Available
We guarantee all the work we do.
31 CAMPUS PLAZA • HADLEY (Behind Pizza Hut)
253-4756
OPEN MON.-SAT. 9:30 A.M.-8:30 P.M.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

Sept. 9
Two vehicles were involved in an accident at Hasbrouck Laboratory. The Amherst Police Department was notified. The cars were towed.

Sept. 10
There was an accident with property damaged in parking lot 50. Henry R. Fenton, 21, of 102 Walnut St., Somerville, was arrested for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, giving a false name to a police officer and malicious destruction of property exceeding $250.

There was a two vehicle accident on Fearing Street. The Amherst Police Department was advised.

Alarm — Fire Trouble

Sept. 10
A defective alarm was reported in Hamlin Residence Hall.

Animal Complaint

Sept. 9
A bleeding swan in the Campus Pond was reported. Environmental Health and Services was notified.

Disturbance

Sept. 10
There was a roommate argument in Pierpont Residence Hall. Housing staff was called to resolve the problem.

Hazardous Materials/Spills

Sept. 10
There was a gas leak reported on North Pleasant Street. There was no emergency situation. Plumbers handled the problem.

Larceny

Sept. 9
There were three reports of bookbags being stolen at the Textbook Annex.

A briefcase, wallet and checkbook were reported stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.

A laptop computer was reported stolen from Coolidge Residence Hall.

Lost/Found Property

Sept. 9
Two bookbags found at the Textbook Annex were turned in to the police.

Sept. 10
Property found on Orchard Hill Drive was turned in to the police. The owner was notified.

Noise Complaint

Sept. 9
A vehicle with a loud stereo was reported in parking lot 65.

Suspicious Vehicle

Sept. 9
A vehicle on University Drive with three people sleeping in it was reported.

An individual was found asleep in a vehicle in parking lot 33.

Free the Press — write for Collegian news.

The Collegian news desk is still looking for new writers. Neither experience, nor a major in journalism are required. Those interested must attend an orientation meeting Friday, Sept. 13 at 2 p.m. in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center Basement. If you are unable to make this meeting at the given time, please contact Michael Elliott in the office or at 545-1762.

Thank you to all those who have already contacted us about writing.

Need a computer? or need to up grade the one you have?...
WE BEAT ANY PRICE BY AT LEAST 5%
Internet service, web page space, system support, up grades, training, suplies and equipment. 12 years of expirence, student employer,Technical Support 24 hours a day. 253-4640
SBT
Shore Break Tech.
http://www.shorebreak.com

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Sept. 12

Meditation — An introduction to yoga and meditation practices will be the first in a weekly series of meetings taught by yogi monks Dada Krishnananda and Didi Anandanirupama. The event starts at 8 p.m. in the 2nd floor lounge of Butterfield. For more information call Alex at 253-6341.

Meeting — Alphi Phi Omega, a national coed service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting from 7 to 8 p.m. in Crabtree Classroom. All are welcome.

Meeting — The French and Italian Department will hold their first informational meeting for their program abroad in Siena, Italy at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall room 301.

Lecture — Serena Nanda, professor and chair of anthropology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY, will be speaking on "Hirjas in India," an all-male religious sect that is considered an alternative third gender in India. The event, sponsored by the Stonewall Center, begins at 11:30 a.m. and is free.

Sports — All players interested in "Zoo Disc" Ultimate are invited to a meeting at 6 p.m., in the Cape Cod Lounge. No experience is required. For more information, call Todd at 549-1016.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, praying, teaching, and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House, and liberal/egalitarian services will be held at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Seminar — The UMass Polymer Science and Engineering Department will have Dr. Joseph Davidovits deliver a lecture entitled, "Aluminosilicate Polymers for Ultra-High Temperature Structural Applications" at 3:35 p.m. in Cone Center Room A11.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. at Hillel House, and liberal/egalitarian services will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Notices

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. Students are advised to bring water and a snack. For more information, call 546-2771 or 546-1318.

Employment — The Student Government Association is looking to fill the position of Inventory Control Officer (SGA Auditor). Requirements for the position include: heading the Student Activities Inventory Task Force; maintaining the inventory database; organizing auditory records for the $4 million SATF; and spot-checking agencies and RSOs for inventory. The position is open to both work study and non-work study students, and students may pick their own hours. The position must be filled immediately. If interested, call Jeff Coker at 545-0341.

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church's annual tag sale will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 14, and from noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 15. Food and drink will be available in addition to the wide array of sale items. All are welcome.

Auditions — Tryouts for Neil Simon's "Rumors" will be held at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 12 and Friday, Sept. 13, and on Saturday, Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. Callbacks will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15. Special arrangements can be made for religious conflicts. For more information, call the UMass Theatre Guild at 545- 0415 or visit the office at 423 Student Union.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen- dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538-9717.

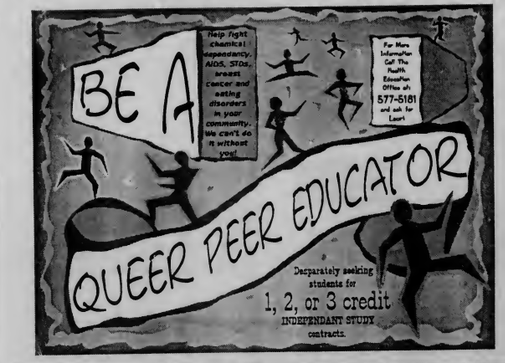
Sale — The UMass Ski Club will hold a mountain bike sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday on the lawn of the Student Union. Bikes by Cannondale, Giant, Scott and more will be available. Prices start at $195. For more information, call 545-3437.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253-5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256-8482 or Laili at 253-0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253-3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will be free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.



Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. through Friday, Sept. 13. Information about theft prevention and bike identification will also be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol-free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584-8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536-3072 or Karen at 259-1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. at the Campus Center. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call (617) 641- 2303.

Seven O's
THE NEW YORK CENTERFOLDS All Male Review
Wednesday, September 18th, 1996
8:00 pm
$10.00 or $8.00 w/ Student ID
EVERY THURSDAY DJ
EVERY FRIDAY & SATURDAY LIVE MUSIC
EVERY SUNDAY OPEN MIC
SEVEN G'S
ROUTE 116 IN SUNDERLAND
5 Miles N. of UMASS exit
665-8788

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY

Stress Management Group—
In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress.
Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

TUESDAY

Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women—
This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings.
Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m.

Letting Go and Moving On—
This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group.
Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families—
This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central.
Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

THURSDAY

Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group—
Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m.

Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff—
This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity.
Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Position Vacant Systems Manager
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mike McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Jamie Stinheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Michael Elliott News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor Position Vacant Librarian
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Rock the vote, sock MTV

They came. We saw. We kissed their ass.

The infamous "Choose or Lose" bus (catchy, huh?) came a' rollin' into campus the other day, wrapped up in the flag, only wanting to do good, only wanting to help.

Yeah, right. But, if it happens to help sell an extra few thousand records for an artist whose label plays ball with MTV at the same time, well, what's the harm?

The entire project started off with good intentions. Rock the Vote is a valuable and worthwhile organization, and normally, I'd be all for anything that encourages registration and increases turnout, but MTV? I don't really think that their intentions are purely selfless. Did anyone else notice the giant condom looming in the background beyond the bus? I think we're getting screwed.

MTV is an organization who prides itself on its "counterculture" and "subversive" image, while playing it so safe it's almost impossible to distinguish it from its supposedly "older" and "squarer" counterpart, VH-1.

Here's a channel that routinely censors itself and its programs (Beavis and Butthead, any number of videos with blurred-out images), promotes misogyny and juvenility (Singled Out, any Spring break nonsense, Buzzkill) and routinely mocks and exploits people of color on shows like "The Grind" by placing a dumber-than-a-bucket-of- hammers-white-guy in the role of ringleader to a group of mostly African-American and Latino kids in sports bras and Speedos. This is the network that's suddenly concerned with politics and minority voter registration?

They even insisted of making a game out of it. Ranking the total numbers of new voters, as if it's a big contest or something. I would have been more impressed if we had higher totals of registered voters before the damn bus even showed up.

The visit wasn't totally without merit — there was information to be had, if you could brave the gauntlet of radio station weasels (who have been big supporters of voter registration and political involvement thus far) and the bizarre association of music videos with politics.

"Um, oh, yeah, the new Dave Matthews video. Um, yeah he's like political and stuff, um... he likes animals or something, right? Uh, can I have a sticker?"

The whole spectacle reeked of rampant narcissism. Everyone rushing to the bus hoping to be caught by a camera lying on its side, having a three second soundbite shot from 14 different angles on six different types of film, complete with zoom shots and a soundtrack layered with an Afghan Whigs riff.

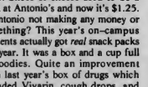
"Hey I want to be on TV! Where's Tabitha? Where's Chuck D.? Hey, where's that ugly guy who's in that band that had that song that time that was kind of O.K.?"

There was a time when MTV cared even less about politics than they do now. Until someone (probably an intern) did some math and figured out that almost all new voters, by default, fall into the cherished 18-34 year old demographic group and faster than you can say, "target audience," MTV was on the campaign trail.

What may be forgotten is that people were able to register to vote pretty easily long before there was basic cable. Every fall, there are tables set up right in the course; it takes five minutes and you don't even have to listen to anything by Hootie and the Blowfish or risk being seen in the same vicinity as Simon Rex.

You can do this on your own. You don't need some pic- eyed piper in a satin baseball jacket leaving you a trail to the voting booth laden with baubles and merchandise. Make some phone calls, join a campaign, log onto a web site — there are any number of non-partisan and partisan sites chock full of information and each site will probably lead you to more. Call Project Vote Smart, voice your concerns, write letters, ask questions. But don't show up to some pseudo-rally in order to win a free CD or to rub elbows with that other Kennedy; do it because you care.

On a positive note, Rock the Vote did tally up 1,054 new registrees. Let's see if when November comes we chalk up 1,054 new votes.



Bob Dunn is a Collegian Columnist.

Turning back pages

This is my senior year, and I have been a faithful Collegian Columnist since my freshman year. My face just beams with pride whenever I say that.

From the bottom of this aging heart, I must express that I really enjoy writing columns. The Collegian is a great college newspaper. I really mean that. I've been around long enough to see it win all these great awards. It ain't braggin' if you've done it. By the way, is the Collegian an it, a her, or a him? Let's take a poll.

The part of being a columnist that I without a doubt love the most is the people I get to meet. Whether I wanted to meet these people or not, I love it just the same. It's great getting responses and it's the negative ones that make life a little more exciting.

I just can't help smiling inside whenever people say to me, "Don't write any stupid columns because I haven't read anything good lately." The raw truth came out. I actually don't really try to write stupid columns. I don't really know about the other columnists, I can't speak for everybody. Nonetheless, it's hard to come up with columns sometimes. Believe me, I've stayed up late, scratched around newspapers for ideas, begged friends and strangers for ideas, threw chairs through my window, meditated underwater and bounced tennis balls against my wall just to get column ideas that wouldn't be stupid.

This summer I finally put together something called a portfolio. I dragged my ass to Kinko's and photocopied all my columns and assembled them together. I can't deal with my portfolio, especially the columns from my freshman year. When I read it, I burst into cringes and I grit my teeth out of disbelief of some of my publications. For the most part though, I just smile. Only two people on the face of the earth have read my portfolio — fortunately.

Although I've covered many topics and issues throughout the course of my tenure, I feel like there's more to write about. But the ironic part comes when it's the day before my deadline and I feel like I've exhausted all my ideas. Then chair throwing comes in.

One idea that has been floating around my head is how things have changed around here since '93. First of all, the Collegian has never been this big. It (or is it she?) used to be tabloid size and only about 12 pages. Now it's "like 80 pages" as a friend of mine said.

The Bluewall Cafe used to be a dump. The Tower library, oh excuse me, the W. E. B. Du Bois Library, became a phallic, sexist symbol a couple of years ago. The cash registers in the Campus Center Store used to be big, heavy calculators. The parking lots were lettered instead of colored. This "un-PC" move by the university shocked me. Men's basketball games used to be played in a cage. UMass used to have a president named Hooker, now it's a Bulger. UMass students also used to have two different student I. D. numbers which created mass confusion. No pun intended there. Slices of cheese used to be a buck at Antonio's and now it's $1.25. Is Antonio not making any money or something? This year's on-campus residents actually got real snack packs this year. It was a box and a cup full of goodies. Quite an improvement from last year's box of drugs which included Vivarin, cough drops, and painkillers.

Then there are the dining commons. They have really impressed me. They're now open 12 straight hours and they've added Stone Willy's Pizza as a daily option. My question is, who is Stone Willy? Does he have any relation to Free Willy? The Stone Willy Pizza display looks like something stolen out of Boston University. The next thing you know, UMass students can finally use their meal plan on other options (like Taco Bell, Newman Center and Antonio's) besides the DC like most schools.

I'm looking forward to living it up this year. I've cranked out columns since UMass' stone ages. I'm on my final wind of ideas and I can't think of how to conclude this column. So I'll end with this: sign up for credit cards at Stone Willy and take the free stuff.

David Chan is a Collegian Columnist.

If King were alive today

For the trumpet shall sound,and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.
I Corinthians 15:52

April 4, 1968. Memphis, Tenn. A stout, 39-year-old man steps out onto the balcony of a modest hotel. He is in good spirits. Dressed in a suit and tie, he's preparing to go out later that evening. He calls out to one of his colleagues in the parking lot below.

Martin F. Jones

"Jesse," he said. "I want you to go to dinner with us this evening. And you be sure to dress up a little tonight, OK Jesse? No blue jeans, all right?"

And without warning, a bullet tore into the right side of his face with such force that it drove him violently backward. He grasped for his throat, crumpling to the balcony floor with his feet protruding through the bottom rail.

Below, his assistants shouted, "Take cover!" and fell to the pavement or hid behind a car. Abernathy, who'd heard a "pop" like a firecracker, ran out onto the balcony and saw Martin Luther King lying diagonally there, his hands rigid at his throat. "Oh my God," Abernathy cried. "Martin's been shot."

Parts of this passage was taken in part from Stephen B. Oats' Let the Trumpet sound; The Life of Martin Luther King Jr. This powerful biography of the most important social activist of our time conjures up many sentiments: courage, vision, triumph, adversity, despair, and above all, hope.

Twenty-eight years after his assassination on that fateful evening in Memphis, Tenn., Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. remains the most famous and beloved of martyrs who gave his life for the cause of peace, freedom, and justice. He was indeed a drum major for justice, a tireless servant who advocated on behalf of all oppressed people everywhere.

For his people, the African-Americans, King was a powerful symbol of hope, giving a beautifully affirming resonance to the song "We shall overcome." He was their leader, their champion, their inspiration, their deliverer. For them, the loss of King hit the hardest of all.

I am, however, somewhat personally exempt from this tragic experience. My brother Malcolm and I were both born in the summer of 1969, over a year after King's death. For us, King is more a famous historical figure than a former leader to whom many people felt the same closeness as a family member.

For those who had the privilege to occupy the same plane of existence with him while he was alive, the loss surely remains as painful as ever. For those of us born after April 4, 1968, there is a feeling of being disconnected from something very special, as we continue to wander through life, searching for something comparable to fill that void.

Today in 1996, we may want to ask ourselves: what if Martin Luther King Jr. were still alive today? What would the world be like? Would it be any different? And if so, how?

If King were alive today, what would the social canvas of the nation look like? No doubt, there would not have been a Reagan Revolution or a Gingrich Revolt if King were still alive. America would be leaps and bounds ahead of such ultra-conservative dogma. What would King have to say about Clinton's signing of the GOP welfare bill? Most likely, he would have condemned the act as a cowardly capitulation of principle while pandering to the anger of an increasing racially and class stratified society. Perhaps instead, a President Jesse Jackson would have signed a universal health care bill, akin to the one that Clinton abandoned in congress for political expediency.

King, at the age of 67, probably would not have ever run for president himself, but would have remained a dedicated and powerful activist with supreme courage and conviction, always keeping the faith of the people and constantly showing them the light at the end the tunnel.

During the recent GOP National convention, House Speaker Newt Gingrich was compelled to publicly acclaim the late Dr. King in one of his speeches. I have also seen copies of letters which he, along with former president George Bush, have sent to King's widow, Coretta Scott to wish her a happy Martin Luther King Jr. Day. As it turns out, such support for the late civil rights leader has become a convenient shield for the likes of Bush and Gingrich who have successfully collaborated with Clinton and Ronald Reagan to destroy Martin's dream of a nation of liberty and justice for all, and not only for a privileged few.

Would King have supported the Persian Gulf War? What would he have to say about Bush's Panamanian massacre? Would he condemn the inhuman sanctions against the Iraqi people? How would he respond to Clinton's recent military strike in the region? The answer is clear and without question.

What would King have to say about our decaying cities and the drug epidemic that is claiming the lives of thousands of young people, mostly black and Latino? How would he feel about the half-a-million black and Latino men in prison, (about 50 percent of the total)? And what of America's racist death penalty? Would he have generated adequate support to free Mumia Abu-Jamal? You'd better believe he would.

These are all very important questions to ponder while offering ourselves a comprehensive self-evaluation of our society. But the most important question of all is what King would have to say about those of us who have stood by idly for all these years and done nothing to address these serious issues facing America and the world-at-large.

During the 1960s people risked more than a week of class or work to stand up for the national liberation struggle which was taking place. They dropped out of college and left promising careers to answer the call to arms. They marched against the sting of fire hoses and the vicious attacks of police dogs. Many were beaten beyond recognition. Others, most notably Martin Luther King Jr., Medger Evers and Malcolm X, gave their very lives to the struggle.

It is in all reality a futile exercise to speculate on how King and others would have made a difference had they lived. The fact remains; they have now made a permanent transition into the hereafter. They accomplished tremendous things while they walked on this earth, more than could ever have been expected from any of them. In their absence, however, far too many of us continue to pitifully cower in the face of a ruthless onslaught against all that they lived for and died to achieve. The question now is: what are we going to do?

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian Columnist.

You need not apply

Call me a sadistic necrophiliac with a equine-centric bestial fetish if you must, but I'm going to beat the hell out of a dead horse.

C. Taylor Conner

By now most people have already heard or read about the Project Pulse study which indicated that UMass students have less than admirable morals when it comes to cheating.

And, as many students may have read in Mark McGrath's column last week, the Boston Globe decided summarily to enlighten the populous of New England with these embarrassing statistics.

However, unlike my colleague, I don't believe the Globe should be made the scapegoat of our own faults, no matter how much we'd like to see their de facto endorsement deal with Boston College cease.

Rather, I say we cast our eyes upon ourselves — let us find a student or students within our own hallowed walls with whom no BC, Globe or any other institution of higher learning can compete.

It is thus that I present the "C. Taylor Conner Search For Perfection Scholarship."

The rules are as such:

1. The student must be a full-time UMass student, and must have a GPA at or above 3.5.

2. The student must have never cheated on or with anything in his/her life. This includes tests, quizzes, papers, labs, significant others, taxes, the significant others of good friends, pinball, the significant others of bad friends, Uno, the significant others of relatives, etc.

3. The student must have chosen UMass over all other schools when selecting a college. Extra points for having rejected BC.

4. The student must be a virgin, and must never have masturbated. A handwriting expert will be brought in to read each and every application, and that person will know what you've done. And how much of it, too.

5. The student must have never bought anything sold or bought, processed anything bought or sold, sold anything bought or processed, processed anything processed or processed, or bought, sold or processed crack.

6. Just a reminder — the handwriting expert will know.

7. The student must call his/her parents every day. Requests for money must be limited to every 2.3 calls.

8. The student must never have sampled or attempted to sample any sort of alcohol or drug. This effectively eliminates the Southwest and Central Residential Areas — prepare to pee in a cup on command if you live in either area and still want to apply. And don't bother with Golden Seal.

9. I'm serious about the handwriting expert — he can tell just by the way you write your name.

10. The student must not have seen any films starring Chris O'Donnell, noted BC grad and pretty boy.

11. The student must have never used any sort of profane language in his/her life. The handwriting expert will not know whether or not you've sworn before, but if you say you've just been to Whitmore, don't bother applying.

12. The student must never have referred to me by my full first name. Failure to comply will result in disqualification and a pimp slap.

Well, there you have the rules.

In case you were wondering, the prize is a $25 scholarship funded entirely by yours truly. If the phrase "Drop in the bucket" springs to mind, please remember I am a college student as well.

This column is in no way a ruse of some sort. I will interview folks who want a piece of the action.

If you feel as though you may be a qualified applicant for this scholarship, send your application by Oct. 4 to the following address:

C. Taylor Conner Scholarship
c/o Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center Basement
Amherst, MA 01003

Let the games begin!

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian Columnist.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday, September 12, 1996

Weekend Edition • Volume CVI Issue 7

No more baggy t-shirts, guys

Lauren Lobik

The fall season is here and so are the new fashions. Women's wear can be seen in fashion magazines, department stores and on the runways of Europe. Everything's retro, but what about the men? They always seem to be left in the dust.

No matter what market or book store you enter, the shoppers are always bombarded by a wide array of women's fashion magazines. Try to find a men's magazine and you're sure to be there for awhile. Maybe it's because men do not jump at the chance to investigate the latest styles or maybe it's also because men normally don't spend a lot of money on clothes. Anyway you put it, men's fashion is important too.

Looking around campus, the last thing on the minds of the Generation-X males is "the latest look." It must have been the frayed jeans and oversized T-shirts that gave it away. The look screams "comfortable!" There's nothing wrong about being comfortable, but guys, sooner or later you are going to have to dress up. If that occasion comes more sooner than later, here are some basic essentials men need for back-to-school.

According to this month's issue of "Details" magazine, there are 10 essentials that men must have for the fall of '96. The first two items are the suit jacket and pants. It is not the same old suit anymore. The word of the day for this one is tailored, tailored, tailored. No more boxed shoulders or pleated pants. Tailored, pin-stripe suits made of wool are the way to go. They aren't just blue and gray anymore either. The color for this season is camel.

Remember the camel hair sport coats your father wore? They're back and have touched the likes of knits, suede and corduroy. All of these versions can be seen throughout September's issue of "Ebony Man." The third essential is the raincoat, but for some reason, I don't believe this would be a big hit on campus.

Underwear and jeans are the next two essentials. Pair a cotton-nylon tank top with boot-cut jeans and throw over the ensemble a stretch, cotton dress shirt (essential six) and you have achieved the look. The next is a crewneck or V-neck wool sweater. This would look best in a shocking

Turn to FASHION, page 7

FAC does something wacky

Seema Gangatirkar

Looking for something to do this semester?

There shouldn't be any problem finding something fun to do on campus, especially with the Fine Arts Center (FAC) gearing up for their new season, "The Rhythms of Life."

With performers like the wildly popular percussion group STOMP and a group of Tibetan monks appearing at the FAC in October, there is plenty to see and hear for everyone.

"It's a classical music series, it's a world music series, it's jazz, it's Broadway," said programming director Joyce Smar.

In addition to live performances, the FAC also runs several galleries on campus, Off-Center series and New WORLD Theater.

Each program has its own personality. The Off-Center series tends to focus more on the off-beat, postmodern dance scene while New WORLD Theater hosts programs by artists of color.

"What we are doing is adding excitement; we're adding quality while also adding meaning," Smar said. "That's what makes it so exciting."

When it comes to finding the perfect words to describe the 1996-97 season at the Fine Arts Center, some that immediately come to mind are energy, vitality, sound and color.

The FAC starts off its season with a bang on Oct. 19 with three different acts performing in the Concert Hall in one week.

"We call it our 'Opening Festival,'" marketing director Shawn Farley said.

The week's activities begin with Cleo Laine, the only singer to receive Grammy nominations in the Female Classical, Jazz and Popular categories. STOMP follows with a two-night performance and the week closes out with Call and Response: Dance and Music Traditions of the African Diaspora.

Putting together a calendar that appeals to the diverse tastes of both the community and student population would be daunting for most people. But Smar, in her first season at the FAC, created a program that "makes a lot of sense."

"We bring the best companies that we can," Smar said.

One of the more intriguing performing troupes appearing at the FAC is Andes Manta, a group which performs the music of the Andes on more than 35 traditional instruments. The FAC is also pleased to present two symphony orchestras — the Minnesota Orchestra and the Czech Philharmonic.

Smar attempts to find groups which will appeal to the student population. One of those groups is the Meridian Arts Ensemble. The Meridian Arts Ensemble is a brass quintet that not only takes a classical approach but also performs music by Frank Zappa, Captain Beefheart and Milton Babbit.

Smar also looks to see which performers have or have not been here.

"For example, Philodanco is a really high energy, exciting dance company that has never been here," Smar said.

Philodanco, the Philadelphia Dance Company, mixes more traditional dance styles with modern and contemporary innovations. The group will be here in November.

Another group making its first appearance at the Concert Hall is STOMP. The percussion group utilizes (among other things) 20 brooms, 40 gallons of water, five editions of the Sunday New York Times and 30 pounds of sand.

"I was very surprised to find out that STOMP had never been on this campus," Smar said. "So we worked very hard to make that happen. I think it's very much worth it."

The students are obviously excited about the upcoming STOMP performance. Tickets for the show are selling fast.

"It's the buy of the decade," Smar said, noting that tickets for STOMP usually go for $35, but students can purchase any seat in the house for just $5.

The group has been growing in popularity in the last few years, showing up on the 68th Annual Academy Awards," "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" and "Oprah."

Farley said that the publicity generated by those appearances have really helped the FAC out when it came to promoting the event.

"It helps us because people see them and particularly students have seen them," Farley said.

With all the events happening in the Valley, any extra publicity helps the FAC to attract audiences.

"There's a lot of competition," Farley said.

Patrons receive a preview in the spring and in the fall — about 25,000 brochures are sent out to the general public. Support from area newspapers also help spread the word.

"You try to market as best you can," Farley said. "You do the best you can to educate the public."

One of the marketing strategies — the $5 ticket for Five- College students — has paid off. Smar mentioned that student attendance has risen 93 percent since the policy was implemented last fall.

"Live performances have an excitement and interaction that you can't get from a movie screen," Smar said, while noting that FAC ticket prices are comparable to the movies.

"Give us a try," Smar said.

"Come and experience the rhythms of life."

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff writer.

Layout & Design by G. Tony Morse & Seema Gangatirkar • Photos courtesy Fine Arts Center

Mellencamps' latest not so Lucky

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

JOHN MELLENCAMP
Mr. Happy Go Lucky
Mercury Records

John Mellencamp sure doesn't sound like he used to. Gone are the days of bluesy tunes like "Jack and Diane" or "Hurts So Good." Now he seems more comfortable with quirky dance rhythms rather than his former swarthy guitar riffs.

On his latest release, Mr. Happy Go Lucky, Mellencamp explores various genres of music, and surprisingly, it works. He blends acoustic rock, ethnic dance beats and country into an eclectic and satisfying CD.

Mellencamp has been performing and recording music for more than two decades, recording his first album in 1976. Through the years he experimented with many different styles of music, each time finding a niche and acquiring new fans. Now, a more mature Mellencamp returns to present a collection of new songs.

While some border on great, none of them actually get to that point. On "The Full Catastrophe," Mellencamp utilizes a funky accompanying violin, but the lyrics are too disjointed and self-deprecative and take away the songs merit. It winds up sounding more like a rejected Garth Brooks song than a Mellencamp original.

One especially catchy tune is "Emotional Love," written by his band member, Toby Myers. With lyrics such as, "Crossing oceans above/Sally in the roses/What she knows is/Such emotional love," and interesting background chanting, "Emotional Love" is a funky, off-beat love song.

The remaining collection of tunes on Mr. Happy Go Lucky were all written or co-written by Mellencamp. Most of the music demonstrates his musical ability, but the lyrics are way too digestible.

Though the albums has its faults, it actually measures up to his recent successes. The music is vibrant and demonstrates a broader scope of Mellencamp's song writing talents. It's always interesting when an artist takes the initiative to experiment with various ethnic overtones, and Mellencamp has more than proved his willingness to utilize this form.

Back in the days when he was John Cougar, his music was more meaty. Granted "Jack and Diane" was a cheesy love song, it was also the anthem of teenagers lovers throughout the '80s. But this CD lacks anything of that stature.

Mr. Happy Go Lucky certainly won't go down as being the best of Mellencamp's projects, but for a pleasant afternoon listening experience, this is the CD for you. B–

COURTESY MERCURY RECORDS

A Cougar-less John Mellencamp is a happy and lucky guy on his latest record.

Diversity attacks back with 311

By Rob Stevens
Collegian Staff

COURTESY CAPITOL RECORDS

From ska to funk and from rap to reggae, 311 mixes all types of music into their sound. They recently landed a spot on MTV's buzz bin with their smash hit "Down," placing them at the forefront of up-and-coming alternative acts — largely because their band reaches out to a vast musical audience as diverse as their sound.

Tomorrow night, 311 bring their act to the Mullins Center for their only New England appearance on the current tour.

In 1993, 311 made their debut mark with an album simply called Music. Though it received little commercial success, the album established 311 as a credible alternative act while attracting a devoted fan base.

Since their emergence onto the rock scene, they have repeatedly experimented all over the musical horizon, diversifying both their sound and audience attraction. Hailing from Omaha, Neb., the band worked hard to prove the state housed more the just powerhouse college football teams.

The band's earlier influences include Bob Marley and the Clash along with more recent influences such as the Beastie Boys and Bad Brains. Though difficult to pinpoint, their sound features grinding guitar chords, funk metal bass and rhythms combined with a one-two punch of rapping and singing.

Although 311 concentrates on the genres of ska, funk and rock, their 311 is in the house — the Mullins Center, that is, on Friday night.

fan base has grown rapidly following exposure on several alternative tours. The band was a member of the H.O.R.D.E. tour with Blues Traveler and also on selected dates of this summer's Warped tour which featured No Doubt and Spearhead. They also proved they were a viable force in the rap world when they opened for Cypress Hill.

If their previous concert showings are any indication, be sure to expect a fun, hard and entertaining show.

Show up early to catch the opening acts, the Deftones (see article) and the Urge.

311, the Deftones and the Urge perform at the Mullins Center Friday at 7:30 p.m. Call 545-0505 for more information.

Sacramento's Deftones assaults Mullins

By Ray Keenan
Collegian Correspondent

While there are a few "hotbed" music scenes today that everyone is aware of — New York, Seattle, L.A. — few music fans think of Sacramento as the next big scene. But over the past four years, the capital of California has shaped up to create a hard-hitting scene of their own. The first band to dent the mainstream so far, the Deftones, opens for 311 tomorrow night at the Mullins Center.

The quartet, consisting of Chino Moreno on vocals, Stephan Carpenter on guitar, Abe Cunningham on bass and Chi Cheng on drums, have been friends since childhood. They have kept it together though their sudden popularity due to over a straight year of touring clubs, dives and most recently, arenas.

Their continuous travelling as an opening act on tours such as White Zombie, Pantera, the 1996 Warped Tour and currently 311, has helped the band build a name for themselves. The band's debut, Adrenaline, on Madonna's label Maverick, which features such songs as "Nosebleed," "Root" and the relentless "7 Words," overflows with pain, aggression and passion.

Even though Moreno can screech and howl with the best of them, he also has the ability to slow it down ever so softly and melodically show his spirit and passion in each song. It is, in fact, the band's specialty — the careful attention to dynamics and arrangements that make every song distinct and arresting. It is an impressive display of diversity and talent from a new band.

Listening to their album is not enough to really understand the Deftones. The band's tremendous live energy overcomes you with Moreno's unrelinquishing stage presence. Whether it's Carpenter's outstanding guitar showmanship or Moreno's love of diving into the crowd while allowing fans to sing along with them, the Deftones live will not soon be forgotten. Their performance laced with energy and attitude should showcase the many faces and sounds of the Deftones.

See campus computer store for details.

Buy an IBM PC 340 or 350 desktop computer and an IBM Multimedia Kit. And you'll get a CD software package that includes Windows 95, Lotus SmartSuite, Netscape Navigator, World Book Multimedia Encyclopedia and the Infopedia collection of essential reference software.

Buy a ThinkPad and you'll get Windows 95 and Lotus SmartSuite. You can also take advantage of special student, faculty and staff financing. Just call 1-800-4 IBM-LOAN for information. Hurry, visit your campus computer store today. After all, no one looks good in a checkered apron.

IBM.

IBM and ThinkPad are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. Windows is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation. Other company, product or service names may be trademarks or service marks of others. © 1996 IBM Corp. All rights reserved.

EL ACUÑA
Bar & Grill

Now Open SIX Nights a Week
'Till 1 AM!

Saddle seats

$3.75 Mega Margaritas

Behind Antonio's

$2.00 16oz Drafts
Full Menu untill 11 pm,
Appetizers until we close

Come check out the fiesta that's right down your alley!

41 Boltwood Walk / Amherst (Behind Antonios)
413-253-4040
Tues. – Sun. 11:30 a.m. – 1 a.m.

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring, "Genuine Draft" bots $9.49 case

Busch & Busch Light
$11.79 30/PK.

"The 6/PK. Bonanza"!
Catamount - Porter, Wheat, Gold, Pale Ale, & "Octoberfest"!
Oregon - Nut Brown, Honey Red, Blackberry, IPA & "Rasberry"!
Long Shots - Pale Ale, Blk Lager & "Hazelnut Brown"!
Brooklyn - Lager & The Famous "Nut Brown Ale"!
Smuttynose - Shool Pale Ale, & "Old Brown Dog Ale"!
Mix/Match "two" 6/PKs . . . $9.95

Catamount Amber $16.99 case
J.J. Wainwright's Blk. & Tan $3.99 6/Pk.
Hornsby's Cider $4.79 6 Pk.
Absolute Vodka 80° $20.49 1.75 liter

All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Mangold's debut film examines rural USA

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

HEAVY
Directed By James Mangold
With Pruitt Taylor Vince, Liv Tyler, Shelly Winters
Playing at Pleasant St. Theatre

Celebrated at this year's Sundance Film Festival, Heavy is a disturbing look about the life and dreams of an obese, anti-social "mother's boy" in rural New York.

Victor (Pruitt Taylor Vince) longs for a change from his life as a cook in his mother's diner. Victor's mother Dolly (Shelly Winters), is the sweetest woman in the world and would do anything for her son, so long as he doesn't abandon her.

Newly hired waitress Calli (Liv Tyler) needs to sort out her life after having trouble in college and settles down in town with her folk-rock boyfriend (played by Lemonhead and alterna-hunk Evan Dando). Calli is stuck with no real direction in her life and her boyfriend only seems to bring her down even further.

Victor puts Calli up on a pedestal hoping that she is the change he's been waiting for. But Victor is unable to express himself, stuck with an attitude of self-loathing. He wants to talk to Calli but is so afraid of humiliation that he stays within the security of his thoughts.

James Mangold makes an impressive debut with his engaging direction. He uses deep images full of Ansel Adams type tones that carry the mood.

Vince is superb as Victor. Though most of his performance is wordless, his expressions let you feel his pain. Tyler is captivating as she continues to prove herself more than just a pretty face. Deborah Harry is great in a supporting role as the haggard waitress that can no longer rest on the laurels of her beauty.

Mangold keeps Heavy entertaining all the while without completely sulking into depression overload. But that's not to say that Heavy isn't a downer — there's nothing "feel good" here, but it is a powerful look at the emotions of humanity. A–

COURTESY THE NIELDS

Northampton's next big thing performs on Saturday at Look Park — guranteed fun for all.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Liv Tyler

Northampton's Nields headlines Look Park

By Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

Did you ever have a hard time finding music the whole family could enjoy? Has your roommate ever asked you to "turn that crap off?" Perhaps you should round up the family (and the roommate) and checkout The Nields at Look Park in Northampton Sept. 14.

"There is no stereotypical Nields fan," said Nerissa Nields, primary songwriter and occasional lead singer for the Pioneer Valley based band. "Our fans tend to listen to all sorts of things. All ages are equally represented. Male, female, etc."

Indeed, there is something for everyone to enjoy in The Nields' music — gorgeous harmonies, an air-tight rhythm section, some noisy guitar, and the kind of lyrics that say the things you always wished you could. This diversity of sound and style might make The Nields a difficult band to categorize, but The Nields wouldn't have it any other way.

"Almost all of the great bands I love are hard to categorized," Nields said.

Hard to categorize or not, The Nields put on an indisputably amazing live show — a live show that is a special treat here in the band's hometown. It doesn't hurt that The Nields are playing in support of a solid new album, Gotta Get Over Greta — an album that solidifies on record what the full electric line-up had been doing live for a year or so previous.

The album before, Bob on the Ceiling, was, according to Nields, "A kind of foreshadowing of Greta. Dave Hower played drums on the album as a favor. Everything just fell together after that. It's like magic — the Field of Dreams idea — 'If you build it, they will come.'"

The growth in the band is obvious when comparing the two records, and there's no question that next one will be even stronger.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shelley Winters

"I want to continue writing songs as quirky and original [as the ones on Greta.] Great songs — songs that could become part of the vocabulary," Nields said

Sept. 14th at Look Park is a great chance to see first hand just how far they have come and, perhaps, where they are going.

"We could have some new songs together by then," Nields said.

New songs or not, a Nields show is an event not to be missed — a rare chance to catch one of the area's best bands on their way to bigger and better things.

The Nields perform Saturday, Sept. 14, with Jane Siberry and the Amy Fairchild Band at Look Park in Northampton.

■ fashion

continued from page 5

shade of red, or a neutral black. Now comes a T-shirt. Yes, the trusty old friend is part of the latest fashions, but appearing in a different form. Sorry guys, it is anything but oversized. The version is tight and fitted. The final two "must haves" are a toss up between a sleek, leather racing jacket or a polyester-nylon parka.

So, there they are, the 10 basic clothing essentials for men this fall. These choices dominated the fall clothing lines displayed by every designer from Ralph Lauren to Donna Karan. Have no fear because these looks can be found in a wide variety of stores and price ranges. The most reasonable prices can be found at such stores as American Eagle, Structure and The Gap. Guys, you don't have to throw away your favorite jeans and T-shirts, but why not try something new on for size?

Lauren Lobik is a Collegian Correspondent

The Collegian just Knows

The Arts & Living page needs writers to cover jazz, classical, theater, dance, television and art galleries. If you are well knowledgeable in these fields please come down and write for us today. Ask for Mike or call 545-1361. Thanks.

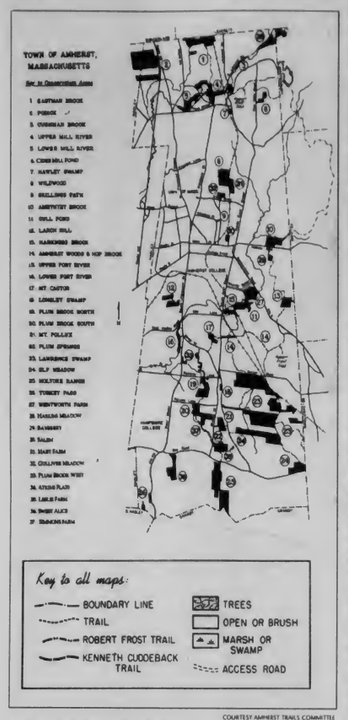
Aerobic Instructor Training & Certification
548-8807

HR Hoffman Recruiters
• Consulting • Biotechnology
• Accounting • Engineering
• Software Development • Investment Banking
• Internet Technology • Sales and Marketing

Attention Masters Candidates & Undergraduate SENIORS

Hoffman Recruiters is a career matching service which will give you exposure to multiple potential employers at no cost or obligation and with only one first-round interview.

★ Widen your job search to include companies which don't recruit at your school
★ Gain exposure to multiple companies with only one first-round interview
★ The half-hour interview will take place on your college campus
★ Your career preferences will be matched with all available positions
★ You decide which companies to pursue further
★ This is a FREE service for students
★ All sign-ups are done over the Internet for your convenience



http://www.HoffmanResources.com/recruit.html
Questions? Call us toll free at 1-888-5-RECRUIT

COUPON COUPON COUPON COUPON
CAPTAIN VIDEO
549-6016
19 MONTAGUE ROAD NORTH AMHERST
OPEN MON-THURS 10AM-9PM FRI, SAT 10AM-11PM, SUN 12-5PM
BETWEEN SUPERSKIN PIZZA & CINEMA GRILL
ONE COUPON PER ORDER
2 MOVIES for 3$
CANNOT BE COMBINED WITH OTHER OFFERS • ONLY 1 NEW RELEASE

WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES

Call Michelle @ 545-1851

COURTESY AMHERST TRAILS COMMITTEE

A key to conservation areas in Amherst.

Rain closes some trails, but biking still possible

Liz Anderson

Do you love the outdoors and are interested in getting more involved in the hidden woodlands and mountains of the Pioneer Valley? Do you find yourself looking at Amherst's beautiful surrounding mountain sides and wish you were hiking? Do you own a mountain bike and don't know where to ride except on campus or into Amherst?

Then read "Alfresco News," a weekly column that focuses on outdoor activities and environmental issues throughout the Pioneer Valley. Each week "Alfresco News" will focus on recreation and conservation parks, the people who are responsible for their preservation and the exciting sports the parks are open to.

• Be Aware, Bike With Care

Ahhh... fall is coming, the trees are beginning to turn, the days are becoming shorter and the weather is becoming a little bit crisper. Doesn't this time of year magnetically pull you into the woods? Don't you long for the solitude of trees, rocks and streams as the hustle and bustle of school gives you a slight headache at the bridge of your nose and eyes? What's a better time than now to release your tension and go trail blazing on your mountain bike? How many mountain bikers want to escape into the woods of Amherst, but don't know where to ride without being accused of ripping up the earth?

It is hard to miss the rolling mountain sides and spacious fields that surround the University of Massachusetts but it's even harder to find trails designated for mountain biking around campus. Unless you are a die hard biker, you have to do a little research before you take a ride into the woods or along the countryside of Amherst for a recreational spin.

Although Amherst may appear to have many areas of natural woodlands filled with miles of endless trails, this is not the case. Due to a very rainy summer and evidence of past mountain bike damage, the Amherst Conservation Commission has established strict mountain biking regulations.

The following conservation areas have been carefully marked and must be noted as off limits until the earth dries out: Katharine Cole, BayBerry, Larch Hill North, Cider Mill Pond, Plum Brook North and South, Mt. Caster, Hop Brook, Lawrence Swamp and Elf Meadow. Those areas have wet and delicate areas. Podick is only accessible to mountain bikers through the north loop and open fields. The bridge to Upper Miller River is closed as well as all of the trails at Lower Miller River due to heavy pedestrian use on flood plain soil.

Wet terrain is not the only reason biking is limited in Amherst's numerous conservation areas. Many conservation areas are active farms. Trails that run through these farms that are off limits to mountain bikers include Haskin Meadow and the Wentworth Farm.

After reading the above list you are probably wondering where biking is allowed in the Pioneer Valley. Do not despair, the valley has an array of trails tucked away higher up in the mountains. The Holyoke Range and the Robert Frost Trail are open to mountain biking. However, bikers do have to be careful and aware of steep, wet sections that are closed.

"The Robert Frost Trail has better water drainage and offers a variety of terrain," said Dom Turano, an employee at the UMass Bike Shop. "What it boils down to is mountain bikers must ride with care on the designated trails, or the town of Amherst will outlaw mountain biking all together."

Of course, one does not have to mountain bike through Amherst's woods and countryside on dirt trails thanks to the Norwottuck Rail Trail. Named after the Nonotuck Indians, the paved path is 8.5 miles long and links Northampton, Hadley and Amherst along the former Boston & Maine Railroad. Much of the trail passes through open farmland where it is easy to view the Holyoke Range to the south, as well as Mt. Toby and Mt. Sugarloaf to the north.

Since 1963, the Amherst Conservation Commission has assembled a town system of conservation areas that totals more than 1,326 acres as well as 51 acres of miscellaneous town land. For more information about mountain biking regulations call or write to:

Amherst Conservation Commission
Conservation Services
Town Hall
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-4045

Liz Anderson is a Collegian Staff member.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Groove is in the heart
Groovasaurus returns to the Iron Horse Music Hall for a night of intense jams and dancing. The show starts at 10 p.m.

FREE DAVE MATTHEWS TICKETS!
Well, not really but we have lots of photos of the band that you can look at for free. So come write for the Arts & Living page. Ask for Mike, Seema, Lisa, Jeremy or Bradley.
545-1361

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

"Sacred Music Sacred Dance" of the Festival of Tibet

Calendar of Events for the FAC

Milk of Amnesia
8 p.m., Friday, Sept. 20, Hampden Theatre
2 p.m. & 8 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 21, Hampden Theatre
Tickets: $8, $5
Single tickets for low income patrons are available by calling 545-1972.

H.I. Vato
8 p.m., Friday, Sept. 27, Hampden Theatre
2 p.m. & 8 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 28, Hampden Theatre
Tickets: $8, $5

Festival of Tibet
Oct. 1-6
3 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 6, Concert Hall
Tickets: $15, $5

Son-Corazon: Heartstrung: For Myrna Vazquez
8 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 5, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $8, $5

Cleo Laine & the John Dankworth Group
8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19, Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Tickets: $30, $25, $15, $10 & $5

STOMP
8 p.m. Tuesday Oct. 22 & Wednesday Oct. 23, Concert Hall.
Tickets: $35, $30, $25, $10 & $5

Call and Response: Dance and Music Traditions of the African Diaspora
8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24, Concert Hall
Tickets: $15, $10 & $5

Under Siege Stories
8 p.m., Friday, Oct. 25 and Saturday Oct. 26, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $8, $5

Meridian Arts Ensemble
8 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 30, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $20, $15, $8 & $5

Fusionworks and Freedman/Coleman Dance
8 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 31 & Friday, Nov. 1, Hampden Theatre
Tickets: $10, $5

Festival of Lights
2 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 2 Bowker Auditorium & Outdoor Gardens at Stockbridge Hall
Tickets: $7, $5

Lafayette String Quartet
3 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 3, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $20, $15, $8 & $5

Philadanco
8 p.m., Wednesday, Nov 6, Concert Hall
Tickets: $30, $25, $15, $10 & $5

Everett Dance Theatre
8 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 7 & Friday, Nov.8, Hampden Theatre
Tickets: $10, $5

Ades Manta
8 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 13, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $20, $15, $8 & $5

In Mixed Company
8 p.m., Friday, Nov. 15, Hampden Theatre
Tickets: $10, $5

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The Meridian Arts Ensemble prepares to take on Zappa and more as part of the Center Series.

R.A.W. ('Cause I'm a Woman) & Combination Skin
8 p.m., Nov. 15 & 16, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $6, $3.50

Czech Philharmonic Orchestra
8 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 20, Concert Hall
Tickets: $30, $25, $15, $10, $5

Red Fiery Summer

Daniel and the Lions
8 p.m., Friday, Dec. 6 & Saturday, Dec 7, Hampden Theatre
Tickets: $8, $5

For more information, contact the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-251 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Freedman/Coleman Dance

CONSTRUCTION AHEAD
With your help, MDA is building a tomorrow without neuromuscular diseases.
MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

Regrettably, all sections are full this semester for

Remedial

Thermodynamics

Discounts off AT&T basic rates. Refers to AT&T home or AT&T Calling Card accounts. Subject to billing availability. Certain exclusions apply. Subject to credit approval. Valid for 1yr. Must sign up in 1996, and use service at least 1 Hr. per Mo. for additional fees or $19.95 for unlimited usage. Customers pay separate telephone charges to reach the service. ©1996 AT&T

Luckily, you can still sign up for all this great stuff from AT&T.

Surviving in college is tough enough, right? That's why we've designed a package to make things easier. Choose AT&T and look at all you can get:

AT&T True Reach® Savings
Save 25% on every kind of U.S. call on your AT&T phone bill when you spend just $25 a month.[1]

AT&T True Rewards®
Get savings at Sam Goody/Musicland, TCBY "Treats" and BLOCKBUSTER VIDEO with the Member Benefit Card.

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
A credit, cash and calling card that brings you discounts on USAir. And no annual fee–ever.[2]

AT&T WorldNet℠ Service
Get 5 free hours of Internet access every month just for having AT&T long distance.[3]

To sign up, look for us on campus or call
1 800 654-0471

AT&T
Your True Choice

http://www.att.com/college

'Canes look to blow Rutgers away

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — While help has been the last thing Miami has ever needed against Rutgers, the Hurricanes can count on it tonight.

After scoring 82 points the first two games of the season, No. 10 Miami (2-0) will be able to put a little more juice in its offense by welcoming tailback Danyell Ferguson and wide receiver Yatil Green to the lineup in the nationally televised game. Ferguson, the Canes' leading rusher last season, and Green, the No. 2 receiver, were suspended for two games by the NCAA for accepting the use of a limousine for a night from a former Miami player.

"It's been a real long wait," said Ferguson, who gained 1,069 yards last season. "It was real tough, but I felt a little better because we won."

Miami coach Butch Davis has refused to say whether he'll start Ferguson and Green, but he really doesn't need them against Rutgers (1-1).

The Scarlet Knights are rebuilding under new coach Terry Shea and the only thing that is working now is the defense, which played well last week in a 10-6 loss to Navy.

Shea's offense has been pathetic, with three quarterbacks trying to make something happen. Mike Stephans, a senior walk-on whose only previous start for Rutgers was at third base for the baseball team, gets the nod this week.

"Obviously we would love to win," Stephans said. "You don't go out to play a game to try and look respectable. Nobody likes to get blown out. Nobody likes to lose. We want to go out and compete as best we can.

"If we come out a loser, then we come out a loser," he added. "As long as we play hard and play the game we're supposed to play, it should be a good game."

That hasn't been the case ever against Miami.

Rutgers has played the Hurricanes in each of the last three years and lost by margins of 31-17, 24-3 and 56-21.

The blowout coming last year when the Scarlet Knights were fielding a team players thought was capable of earning a bowl berth. Miami scored all its points in the first half, including 35 in the second quarter.

Miami's Ryan Clement made his first start in that game and completed 6 of 13 passes for 157 yards and three touchdowns, including a 46-yarder to Ferguson and a 28-yarder to Green. Ferguson also rushed for 93 yards and scored on a 1-yard run.

"I'm not concerned about starting," Ferguson said. "It's not whether you start, it's whether you finish. I didn't start against Rutgers last year and I think I had two touchdowns and 170 all-purpose yards."

Sophomore Dyral McMillan replaced Ferguson in wins over Memphis and the Citadel and rushed for 275 yards and two touchdowns. Miami will be facing a far different Rutgers defense this year. Coordinator Rod Sharpless has installed a system he used at Virginia Tech, one that puts eight defenders near the line trying to stop the run and put pressure on the quarterback with blitzes.

Patriot's LB Slade takes heat for fumble

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — It was a big play for Chris Slade — his first interception in four NFL seasons. The Patriots best defensive player fell to the ground, left the ball there and started celebrating.

One problem. The whistle hadn't blown.

Buffalo's John Fina fell on the unattended ball, and Slade headed to the sidelines where an unhappy coach Bill Parcells was waiting.

"He gave me a couple of looks," the linebacker said yesterday, "and some words, too."

New England ended up losing 17-10 last Sunday, and Slade's slipup might have deprived them of critical points. He intercepted Jim Kelly's pass on the Bills' second possession, but instead of giving his offense a first down at the Buffalo 26-yard line, he gave the Bills the ball.

Kelly threw another interception on the next possession, giving New England the ball at the Bills' 41, a loss of 15 yards from where Slade fell. That possession ended with Adam Vinatieri missing a 45-yard field goal attempt.

"It wasn't a mistake on my part after you looked at [the replay] six or seven times," Slade said of his fumble. "I want everybody to know that."

He caught the ball at the Buffalo 28, and Bills center Kent Hull tripped him. Slade stumbled for a few yards. As he was going down, he was pushed to the ground by a teammate.

Slade contends the tackle was made by Hull. The officials ruled he was downed by a teammate and the play was not over.

"I'm thinking, if I'm on the ground I must have got tackled by a Buffalo Bills player," Slade said. "I was just excited. I put the ball down. That was my first pick. I was hyped."

In 1993, Slade led all AFC rookies with nine sacks. In 1994, he led the Patriots in sacks for the second straight season. Last year, he was a Pro Bowl alternate.

That should have been enough to celebrate.

"I didn't mention it but I think the player knows" how he feels, Parcells said. "Any enthusiasm you show for a teammate I am all for. Anything you do to draw attention to yourself I am against... particularly if the ball's still alive."

Slade has been part of a defense that has played well despite opening the season with two losses. He said the switch from a 3-4 to a 4-3 defense hasn't been too difficult.

"We're making progress," he said. "It was very similar to the 3-4. The terminology was just a little different... You give up one of the outside guys in coverage, whereas you gain a pass rusher."

Slade figures he'll be learning as long as he stays in the NFL "not only in the games, but you can learn in practice."

He hopes to learn from his mistakes, like the interception that became a fumble.

"It's a lesson learned for all of us," Slade said. "It's the rules of the game. I didn't know them well enough and maybe I just got a little overexcited.

"Everybody's been getting on me about it. This is in good fun. You learn from your mistakes and you just keep going. At the end of the season, nobody will even remember. They'll just know I had an interception against Buffalo."

But has he really learned his lesson?

"If I get an interception this week I'm going to be just as excited as I was last week," he said. "You tell Bill that."

Testaverde tries to redeem inconsistencies; despite Steelers loss, QB starts season well

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

OWINGS MILLS, Md. — Vinny Testaverde talked confidently this summer about having his finest year in the NFL.

Coming into the 1996 season, Testaverde had 16 career 300-yard days and a 58 percent completion percentage. On the other hand, he had only two seasons in which he threw more touchdown passes than interceptions.

His career was comparable to a sailboat on choppy seas — up and down, up and down.

Things were supposed to be different this year. Playing in a new city under a new coach in a multi-faceted offense, Testaverde completed 27 of 39 passes in leading the Baltimore Ravens to victories in their first two preseason games.

"I'll be able to utilize my abilities more now than in any system I've been in," he said in August.

Testaverde is having a career year all right — quite similar to every one of the nine unfulfilled seasons that preceded this one. In the opener against Oakland, Testaverde ran for 42 yards and a touchdown and passed for 254 yards. He didn't throw an interception and was hailed as the hero of the Ravens' inaugural victory. Then came Game 2 Sunday against the Pittsburgh Steelers. Testaverde ran for a touchdown and threw for another. But his first pass of the game was intercepted and returned for a touchdown, and he later lost a fumble that Pittsburgh converted into seven points.

Fourteen points scored, 14 points given away. In the NFL, a quarterback who comes out even in the plus-minus category isn't going to win many games. It didn't happen Sunday, as the Steelers handed the Ravens a 31-17 defeat.

"There's still improvement that I have to make for us to continue to win on a consistent basis," Testaverde said yesterday. "But I feel like I've made a lot of progress to this point and that I'm on the right track to put our team in the playoffs."

Testaverde felt that way last season, too, but a string of ineffective performances caused former coach Bill Belichick to bench him in favor of Eric Zeier. This year, coach Ted Marchibroda virtually assured Testaverde that the job was his to keep, and for that Testaverde is quite thankful.

"It's comforting to know that you can have a bad game or two and still be back in there," Testaverde said. "Every quarterback goes through it, I don't care if you're Dan Marino or whoever. You're not going to play 16 great games."

Marchibroda, who coached such standouts as Sonny Jurgensen and Bert Jones, has never seen a quarterback who never threw an interception or never dropped the ball upon being hit by a charging lineman.

"He's going to throw some interceptions and he's going to fumble sometimes," Marchibroda said. "When you scramble, you're going to fumble."

It was the 46th career fumble for Testaverde, who makes no apologies for running out of the pocket rather than take a sack.

"The idea is to make something happen," he said. "Sometimes you score a touchdown or complete a big pass. Other times you might lose the ball."

This Sunday, Testaverde will attempt to rebound against the Houston Oilers. He threw two TD passes in the Cleveland Browns' 14-7 victory in Houston last year, then rode the bench in the rematch after being displaced by Zeier.

"Vinny has really matured as a quarterback," Houston coach Jeff Fisher said. "I was really surprised at the decision to replace him last year and go with the other guy. Vinny is accurate, mobile, has good vision and a strong arm. The games I've seen him play, I believe he has the ability to take his team to the playoffs."

It's only happened once before. Maybe this year things will be different.

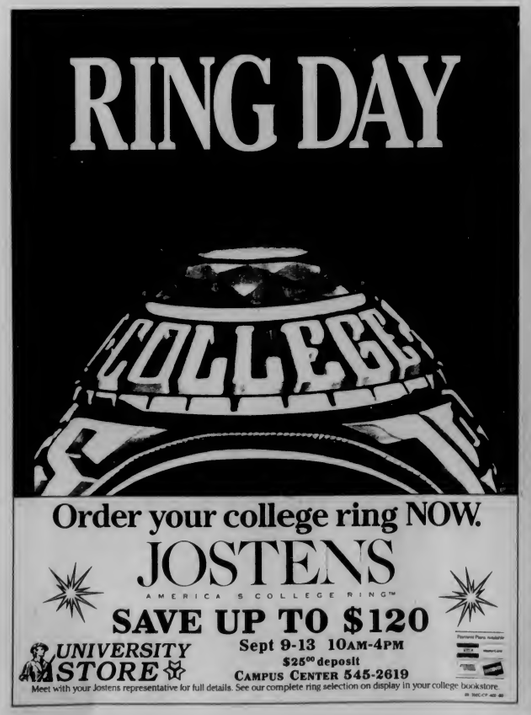
Razorbacks subject of investigation

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The daughter of the Arkansas chancellor has resigned as academic coordinator for Razorbacks basketball after admitting she knowingly violated an NCAA rule and lied about it to investigators, a newspaper reports.

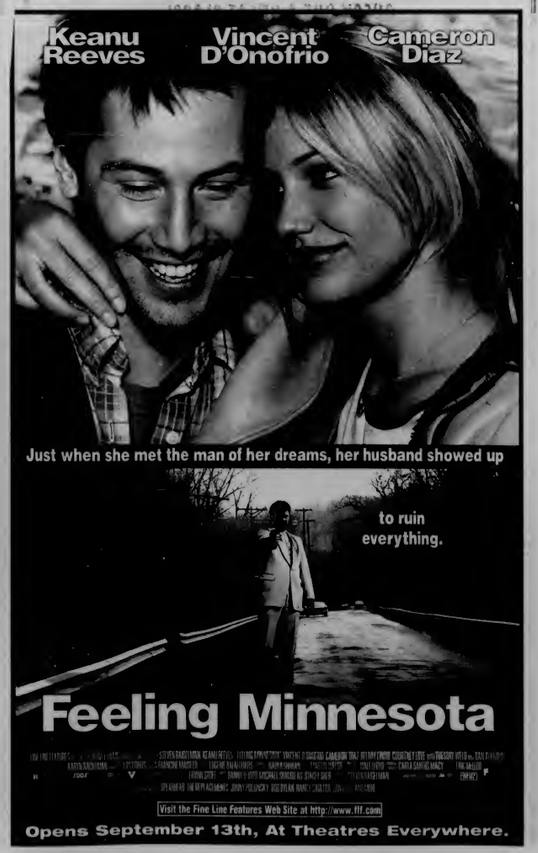
Kim Wood, daughter of Dan Ferritor, said Monday that she typed correspondence course papers for former Arkansas guard Jesse Pate. She said she never did Pate's lessons for him, only typed them. Her resignation was reported in a copyright story in yesterday's Arkansas Democrat-Gazette.

"Jesse had come to the university without a scholarship, without support, without help," Wood said in the article. "He didn't know how to type, and I was happy to help him, even knowing it was against the rules."

Typing the work violated the NCAA's rule on extra benefits. The NCAA could consider Wood's action a secondary violation. But Wood compounded the problem when she lied, said Robin Green, administrator for the NCAA Committee on Infractions.



When lying is discovered in an NCAA investigation, "usually... it is because there are other violations that are major in nature," Green said.



The NCAA uncovered Wood's violation during its continuing investigation of Arkansas' basketball program. The inquiry started after Pate and Sunday Adebayo, both transfers, were ruled ineligible in February. Arkansas allowed the two players to practice before properly certifying their junior college grades. The Infractions Committee could penalize the university for Wood's actions, Green said. The committee also could blacklist Wood from being hired at another NCAA member's athletic department. Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles said he didn't know why Wood resigned. He declined to comment when asked if he was aware she had typed the work and whether she had been asked to resign. Wood said she typed 20 of Pate's 25 lessons for two correspondence courses in her Walton Arena office last September and October. Pate would deliver handwritten notes to Wood and return later to pick up the typed version.

An NCAA investigator questioned Wood for an hour in June. The investigator accused Wood of typing Pate's papers and she denied the allegation.

"I think they're concerned I did Jesse's work for him, and I simply didn't," Wood said. "So there's no way I can prove that."

Using computer analysis, the NCAA compared papers typed by Wood and Pate and concluded there was a 90 percent chance that Pate's papers came from Wood's office printer.

■ Dion

continued from page 16

they limit my job to what I have to do, which is very nice.

"I just hope at those times when I do need to come through, I do it for them, and that I am always there for them."

For head coach Jim Rudy, he has been a fan since his first sight of Dion, and has noticed her solid, steady improvement over her first two years at UMass.

"When we first saw her, we felt she had good feet, hands and eyes," Rudy said. "She had a real good starting point technically, and that is the best starting point.

"She has made very good, logical progress, and I would say over two years she has let in very few soft goals. I could count that number on one hand, and really, it is less fingers than that."

Who's the Boss?

Unfortunately, in most parts of the world, even in soccer hotbeds, the sport is still considered a man's domain. Dion had to contend with that in her formative years, but not in such a morally intense manner. She had to let the boys know who was the keeper, and who was not.

"I just remember playing on this YMCA team in Texas with... boys," Dion said. "They all used to make fun of me because I would hang around the goal."

Besides that, serious soccer did not start for Dion until a unique coaching persona helped her in the final choice of soccer. Her family made the move to Atlanta, and when she was 12 years old she began to work with the coach of the Tophatters Soccer Club, Lawrence Vine. He had a drive and a love for the game, which had its influence on her and Tophatters and UMass teammate Rebecca Myers. The faith he had in her abilities, while among athletes that were older, stays with her to this day.

"[Vine] showed me that hard work ethic," Dion said. "And if you put your mind to it, and work your butt off that hopefully... eventually, you will get to the goal you want to get at.

"He was not only there for me as a soccer coach, but he was also there as a person for me, and I guess that is why I admire so much about him."

Rudy said, "Thanks to her connection with Vine, who really worked and pushed her hard, she made the picture of what proper goalkeeper skill looked like."

Since those teenage days, Dion and Myers have been close, and have become even closer since Dion's freshman year. Myers had some good leadership influences with her upperclassmen, and passed that on, helping Dion through both the geographic and emotional transition of college.

"My whole senior year before coming here, I was always talking to [Rebecca] on the phone," Dion said. "When I came here, I knew she was going to be there to help me with any problems, and it just made it that much easier, because she knew the other sophomores.

"I think with our team concept, we are so much more of a team than a lot of other schools I know, and it makes life a whole lot easier. You know you all are going to be together through thick and thin."

Walking in considerable footsteps

For Dion, she noticed the team concept in effect on her recruiting trip here to UMass, with the leadership of those seniors that helped lead the Minutewomen to the 1993 Final Four. But the clincher was Rudy, who is considered one of the best goalkeeping coaches in the country. His coaching has helped keepers like Skye Eddy and Briana Scurry, who was awarded the Missouri Athletic Club/Adidas National Goalkeeper of the Year Award in that 1993 season. Simply put, she wants just a little of that Rudy-kind of magic.

"It seems like every keeper he has worked with has become a better keeper," Dion said. "I can not tell you what it is that he teaches you. I can not go home and say that he has done this drill, and it makes me this much of a better keeper. He makes you think, and when you walk out onto the field, it is your game.

"He has done some amazing things, so I am hoping that some of it will rub off on me."

She does not need to hope that some of Rudy's expertise will rub off on her, it already has. Coming into this weekend's games against UC-Santa Barbara and St. Bonaventure, her consecutive start streak has now reached 29 matches. She has racked up almost 4,000 minutes in goal, while posting 17 shutouts and an anemic 0.72 GAA in her tenure at UMass.

All this has been accomplished while walking in the footsteps of the most recognized keeper in UMass history, Briana Scurry. At first, Dion felt some apprehension concerning the space left behind in net, but Rudy once again came through for his keeper.

"Coach did his best to make me realize that I had my own shoes to fill," Dion said. "The whole time that I was going through the recruiting process, he just kept telling me that you do not have to fill her shoes."

"You are going to come in and be your own person, and make your own shoeprints that someone else is going to feel like they have to fill. And they will not have to do that, either."

Dion has made her own spot in that keeper tradition, and it is still only her junior season. If Dion keeps up this pace, she will get the recognition she deserves, and the only lonely place she will have to worry about is at the top.

■ football

continued from page 16

over the starting duties. So far in his career, Catterton has passed for 360 yards on 34 for 94 passing and one TD, numbers that the junior quarterback will be looking to build up this season.

Catterton admits he's not the most vocal guy on the field but has his own way of getting the team going.

"When I'm on the field, I say what I have to say to get the stuff done," Catterton said. "I think that if I get too vocal or too loud a lot of the guys know that's not me, they know that's fake and they wouldn't respect that. I try to do everything I do in a positive way."

Catterton had a lot of goals for himself and the team as he took on this position at UMass, in trying to make this team the best possible.

"My goals coming here were to be the best player I could be, the best person for this team, and to do everything I could to help the team win," he said.

For the Minutemen, who are known for their ground game, it will be a tough task to change that right away, but Catterton feels confidence in that challenge and realizes that's what they need to do.

"I came here to throw the ball. Obviously we haven't passed much in the past, but I'm ready to see what I can do to get the air game going," he said.

Catterton also noted that an important aspect of his game is that he tries not to dwell on the past.

As Catterton relates, according to UMass QB coach Bob Colbert, "The only play is the next play, you have to go on with the next play, if you keep worrying about it, it's just going to mess everything else up."

I think execution is key, no mental mistakes, no penalties, no interceptions, no fumbles, we have to play solid football," Catterton said.

Catterton is also a player who is very agile and talented — a player who can run the option well, an excellent runner, and a person with an increased confidence to throw the ball. Catterton has also felt this team is one which can come together a lot more and build on having a great season.

"I think we all work great together," Catterton said. "The guys have got to know each other better. I feel a lot closer to my teammates, and it's a little more interesting this year the way we bond as a team, and it helps us out a lot more."

Anthony sees himself as a quiet person who just tries to do the right things, to be a good guy, and on the field, to help the team achieve success.

In talking about a Yankee Conference crown, Catterton feels this is a goal within his team's reach.

"We have a great team, we have great players, and we have a great coaching staff," Catterton said. "We have everything to do it with, we just got to get out there and do it, and I really feel confident that we have the ability to do it."

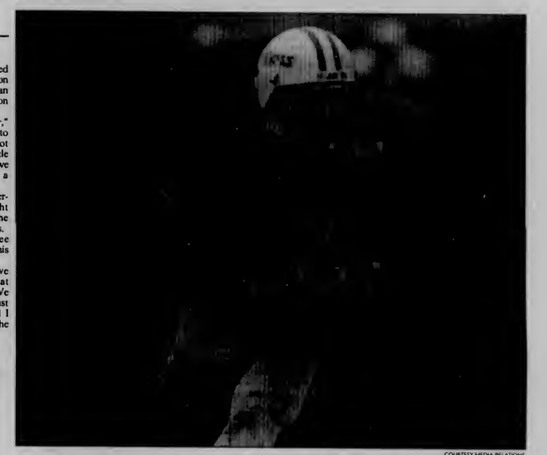
■ Big 10

continued from page 16

time.

Besides the Heels, there are a few more teams making significant progress. Arizona St., with All Pac-10 quarterback Jim Plummer, handled Washington over the weekend and find themselves at No. 20 going into their game with perennial powerhouse North Texas this Saturday. (Wasn't North Texas in Unnecessary Roughness?)

Iowa, with tailback extraordinaire Sedrick Shaw, survived a scare from the Arizona Wildcats in Iowa City Saturday before pulling it out, 21-20. In a conference with no real front-runner, the Hawkeyes could make inroads for the Big 10 title. BYU and LaVelle Edwards' air assault offense has cruised to a pair of victories early. Steve Sarkisian has passed for 10 touchdowns already, and it's not even fall yet. Sarkisian seems to be keeping up with the long line of standout BYU quarterbacks, and beating Texas A&M is still something to be proud of.



Declaration of the week — If Boston College covers the spread against Virgina Tech this weekend, (They're three point underdogs), I will strip down to nothing but a Speedo, a pair of cleats and a snorkel and run around campus singing the "Macarena." There is no way BC comes close to the Hokies on Saturday. Virginia Tech is a legitimate Top 20 team, and BC isn't. They're not even Top 50 material. This week Matt Hasselbeck gets the start, and even though he's got all the tools, he hasn't produced yet. If he does though, I ain't scared.

Booty Schwag of the week award — Coach Andy Talley of Villanova. After his Wildcats beat our beloved Minutemen on Saturday, Talley showed up to the press conference and lit a cigar, and then proceeded to rip Boston Globe writer Joe Burris for a perceived lack of positive press about Villanova in the Northeast and proclaim his quarterback Clint Park one of the best in America. Relax, coach. You had one good game. Kudos to UMass coach Mike Hodges and senior co-captains Mark Shalala and Kory Blackwell for their grace after a very disappointing loss.

Tonight's game — Miami at Rutgers

Don't bother with this one. Rutgers has lost their two best players, Ray Lucas and Marco Battaglia, and just doesn't have the tools to compete with the talent pool of the Hurricanes. My advice to you is to go uptown and get hammered, and if you miss any classes tomorrow, tell your professor I said it was okay. Just please, for God's sake, don't puke on yourself.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian Columnist

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior QB Anthony Catterton thinks strong team unity will help him to open up the UM passing game this season.

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!

GOTTA BE A PEER EDUCATOR

Peer Health Educators . . .
. . . learn about cool stuff
. . . teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
. . . give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
. . . enhance their own self-knowledge.
. . . make new friends.
. . . MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

PEER HEALTH EDUCAITON I & II
Public Health 213/214 or
Education 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester
Commitment Required
For more information & permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education, 577-5181.
Class will meet on Tuesdays & Thursdays from 9:30am -10:45
*NOTE: The class time in the course book is wrong.

DID YOU KNOW?
The University Health Services offers Contact Lenses!!!
With all these great features:
• Same day fitting or replacement in many cases
• Wide variety of lenses available (including disposables)
• Convenient On-Campus Location
• Free sample start-up solutions
• Contacts mailed FREE!*
*normal delivery
WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?
Call the Eye Care Services of the University Health Services.
577-5244

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

PSYCHIC READINGS
Palm ★ Astrology ★ Tarot Cards
Crystal ★ Psychometry ★ Spiritual Readings
Readings by Vandela
Are you worried about:
Love ★ Marriage ★ Health ★ Business ★ Money
Do you need help with family problems?
ADVICE FOR ALL PROBLEMS
79 DAMON ROAD NORTHAMPTON, MA
390 MAIN STREET NORTHAMPTON, MA
(413) 585-1601

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog –
(413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

Americans face Canada in World Cup

MONTREAL (AP) — The United States promised a better performance in tonight's Game 2 of the World Cup of Hockey championship series. It better since it's facing elimination.

"We just didn't play the way we did to get to this point in the tournament," U.S. defenseman Brian Leetch said yesterday referring to Canada's 4-3 victory a day earlier on a controversial overtime goal by Steve Yzerman in Philadelphia.

"Our big plus is our skating and we didn't skate," Leetch said. "I don't think it was their experience that made the difference. It was us making things difficult for ourselves."

Canada can win the tournament with a victory at a soldout Molson Centre in Game 2 of the best-of-3 final. Game 3, if necessary, would be played here Saturday night.

The Americans were unbeaten, including a 5-3 victory over Canada, and were the most impressive team going into the finals. But they were outplayed by the veteran Canadian squad, which patiently checked the Americans and used its deep bench to dominate most of the game, particularly the overtime. Canada outshot the U.S. team 7-1 in the 10-plus minutes of overtime.

The game ended when Yzerman's wrist shot aimed for the top corner was misplayed by goalie Mike Richter. On the play, it appeared Canada forward Rod Brind'Amour was offside.

The Americans took heart in knowing they had a good shot at winning the opening game and can still adjust their game to make better use of their relative youth and speed.

"Canada will play the same game because it was successful," U.S. coach Ron Wilson said. "They'll try to clog up the neutral zone.

"They showed us respect by doing that. That's why we've got to show more determination to get around the checking. Up to now, I don't think we received the respect we got in that game. The other games were more wide open."

But it was more than tactics that gave Canada the edge. For the first time since the tournament started, Canada got strong performances from nearly all of its top players, particularly Mark Messier and Eric Lindros.

The rest, such as Yzerman, Theo Fleury, Joe Sakic and Adam Graves, followed to give Canada its best game of the tournament. Matched man for man, Canada has a much stronger team in every area except defense.

"Our good players stepped it up a notch," Canada wing Vincent Damphousse said. "Everybody played great, everybody wanted to win. We didn't like the criticism we were getting all week."

Now, the Canadians, who went to a second overtime to beat Sweden 3-2 in the semifinals, want to wrap up the tournament so they can take a brief vacation before heading to their NHL training camps.

"We don't want to let it slip," Damphousse said. "You don't know what will happen if it goes to a third game. We've got a chance to end it and we want to take it."

Neither side held a full workout yesterday, but Canada defenseman Eric Desjardins, whose gaffe with seven seconds left in regulation gave the United States the tying goal, showed up to face the media.

Desjardins had tried to tuck the puck safely under goaltender Curtis Joseph's pads in the crease, but accidentally slid it into his own net.

"I was handcuffed and I didn't know where to put the puck," Desjardins said. "It was right on my blade and he was right there. I tried to give him the puck and it went right under his legs. It was a mistake."

Butler breaks hand, could end career

By John Nadel
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Having made a triumphant return from cancer surgery, Brett Butler — one of baseball's best bunters — broke his hand while bunting in what could have been the final at-bat of his career.

Without question, it was his last plate appearance of the regular season, although he said yesterday he hadn't decided on retirement and hopes to play in the postseason.

Butler broke the fifth metacarpal in his left hand in the fourth inning of a 5-4 victory by the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday night.

Butler appeared at a news conference yesterday wearing a short cast on his left wrist. A Dodgers official said Butler will wear the cast 2-3 weeks and will be examined in about three weeks by Dr. Norm Zemel, who confirmed the fracture earlier yesterday.

"[Zemel] said in three weeks I get my cast off. Miracles have happened before," an upbeat Butler said. "I didn't think it was broken initially; it's the same kind of injury I had in Cleveland in 1986. It was just one of those freak things.

"I'm going to go home for a few days, meet the club in Colorado or San Diego [next week.] I'm a part of this club, and I'm going to continue to be a part of this club."

Entering yesterday night's game against the Cincinnati Reds, the Dodgers had 18 games left in the regular season, which ends Sept. 29. If the cast remains for three weeks, that means it would be removed about Oct. 2, early in the divisional playoffs.

Butler, 39, recently told friends and several teammates he would retire at the end of the season. However, he said yesterday he wasn't going to think about that right now.

"It's not an absolute that I'm going to retire. I'll tell you that right now," Butler said. "We'll re-evaluate that over the winter."

Butler said he has always wanted to go out on his own terms and that obviously wouldn't be the case if his career is finished. Butler rejoined the Dodgers last Friday night following more than four months on the sidelines because of a cancerous tonsil.

"The positive thing out of breaking my hand is I'm still alive," he said. "The cancer, there was a question there."

Butler's wife, Eveline, said she felt bad.

"He worked long and hard to come back," she said. "And this was upsetting to my kids. I think they think Dad has been through enough. I couldn't believe it."

Eveline Butler said she was planning on going to the couple's Atlanta home yesterday, but now will leave with her husband today.

"He didn't have a choice," she said. "I told him he was going. We need to get out of town."

Dodgers manager Bill Russell said when he went out to look at Butler's hand Tuesday night it was "turning blue."

"He got hit pretty good," Russell said. "You knew it was bad. I knew he was going to come out once I saw it."

Russell thinks it's "highly unlikely" that Butler will play again this year.

"I would say at this point it's asking a lot of him to put him right back in the lineup because it's probably going to be in the playoffs or possibly in the World Series when he gets in there," Russell said. "It's going to be asking a lot of him to put him back in the lineup at that time. Again, I'm not saying it's not impossible. But I am saying it's highly unlikely."

Butler squared around to bunt and Giovanni Carrara's inside pitch hit him on his throwing hand. It was ruled a foul ball by plate umpire Bill Hohn because Butler's hand was on the bat when it was struck.

Reds outfielder Eric Davis, who was a teammate of Butler's with the Dodgers in 1992-93, cringed when he heard about the severity of the injury.

"He's been blessed that he's healthy now, and that's the key," Davis said. "He was able to overcome some tremendous odds, so the fact that he's only played in five games is not a negative thing.

MLB owners balk, as dispute unsettled

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Just because they're rich doesn't mean the baseball owners don't feel your pain. Unfortunately, they're not ready to do anything about it.

"I know the fans are tired of hearing about this," acting commissioner Bud Selig said yesterday.

He had just emerged from yet another meeting with executive council members to discuss yet another proposed labor agreement with the players. By all accounts, this one was no different from the dozens that had gone before it.

First the owners talked among themselves. Four and a half hours later, Selig used up 15 more minutes talking about what they talked about behind closed doors. If he can be believed, it wasn't much.

"If some people think it's going too slow, that's their opinion. But they don't have the facts," he said. "I do."

But what he still doesn't have is an agreement. And if history is any precedent, he won't have one for some time to come. In the meantime, baseball burns.

These owners are such a contentious bunch, they spend an hour before lunch arguing what to order and the hour after congratulating themselves for agreeing on anything at all. Next thing, the day is shot and everybody has to catch a plane. Though the rest of us long ago lost interest in the details of the dispute between the owners and players, suffice it to say a deal that would bring labor peace to the game until 2000 or 2001 is back on the table. Whatever else the meeting was supposed to be about, it was supposed to determine whether a faction led by Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf can muster the eight votes necessary to knock it off.

Reinsdorf rarely has a problem delivering. While he is no stranger to hyperbole — he once likened players' union chief Donald Fehr to cult leader Jim Jones — Reinsdorf rarely bluffs.

After the owners met "eyeball to eyeball" — a phrase management negotiator Randy Levine used — Selig said only that they were more united than when they began.

"But I won't kid you," he said. "There's still a huge difference of opinions."

Someone asked how big was the gap.

"I'm not going to get into that," Selig responded.

And with good reason. Reinsdorf has two very powerful and very public allies in Florida Marlins owner H. Wayne Huizenga and the Tribune Co. — which in addition to owning the Chicago Tribune also owns the Chicago Cubs — and as many as a dozen others quietly lined up behind them.

His side wants two things. Without them there is little chance of a deal. It does not want players credited for service time during the strike in cases where that time makes them eligible for free agency at the end of the season. And it wants the luxury tax already agreed to for the first three years of the deal to remain in effect through the last two.

Fehr and the union are likely to view further concessions as charitably as replacement players. And the players' incentive to settle is even less than for the owners; the only thing operating under the old deal costs them is a raise in the minimum salary. And almost nobody makes the minimum any more.

Without an agreement, a few things happen to baseball, and none of them are good. Levine probably walks, virtually ensuring no deal gets made until the 1997 season ends. Small-market clubs, some of which are getting killed at the gate, lose as much as $6 million each in revenue-sharing. A strike or a lockout becomes possible. It is important not to overstate the case. No one can say with any certainty what labor peace, or a commissioner for that matter, would do for the game. The NBA went an entire season without a current contract in force and nobody noticed. During the NFL owners' moving frenzy, Paul Tagliabue couldn't be found. For a while it seemed that league didn't have a commissioner, either. Pro football was barely bruised.

Baseball negotiations still creeping along

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Baseball's ruling executive council failed to make any major decisions when it met yesterday, leaving the impression that labor talks remain on hold — and interleague play, too.

"I won't kid you," acting commissioner Bud Selig said. "There's still a huge difference of opinions, and I don't want to minimize that. They were all articulated to the point where I felt we had a positive meeting."

Neither Selig nor Randy Levine, the owners' chief negotiator, publicly detailed the discussion during the 4 1/2-hour session. Levine said the council will meet again — either in person or by conference call.

Just 6 1/2 weeks remain until the start of the offseason — and free agent filings. Selig admitted the slow pace of labor talks may jeopardize interleague play, which is scheduled to start next year but awaits approval from the union.

"I hope not, but certainly that's one of our concerns," he said.

Levine was upbeat following the meeting, saying the discussions were positive and downplaying rumors that he might resign if a deal isn't reached soon.

"I'm still ready to dance," he joked.

Levine and union head Donald Fehr negotiated the basic outline of the deal from Aug. 9-11, but talks stalled when the owners' labor policy committee held a conference call the following day and some members objected to the terms Levine was negotiating. That committee met yesterday with the executive council, which runs the sport in the absence of a commissioner.

Levine gave a report of the history of the talks, the ramifications of a deal and the possible fallout of a breakdown in negotiations.

"The value of this meeting was eyeball-to-eyeball," Levine said. "There were a lot of misunderstandings, miscommunications. We've crossed huge gulfs, but there are huge issues open. We're going to continue to brief and educate people. A lot of people still are learning the possible components of the deal, what they are, the impact."

Selig said that because of baseball's labor history, he will continue at a deliberate pace, not wanting to rush negotiations.

"Often, labor agreements were completed and voted on, and within six months there was anger, misunderstanding, a lot of 'Why didn't you tell me this,'" he said.

"They," he said of the teams, "have the right to understand the deal, more importantly understand the ramifications of the deal."

Levine and Fehr agreed on a structure that calls for a luxury tax in 1997, 1988 and 1999, and no luxury tax in 2000. The chief remaining issues are:

- whether owners will give service credit for the 75 regular-season days wiped out by the strike to the 18 or 19 players who need it to become eligible for free agency this year;
- whether owners will allow players to have the option in the contract of a second tax-free year in 2000; and
- whether players will agree to the owners' proposal to have all salary arbitration cases decided by three-man panels rather than single arbitrators. The union has proposed having three-man panels decide half the cases each year or half the cases decided during the contract.

"I think there's a much better level of understanding," Selig said, "and when you have understanding that leads to consensus." Still, many are tired of the long debate.

"I think there's a sense of frustration here," said Atlanta Braves chairman Bill Bartholomay, a non-voting member of the council. "It's gone on for so long. It's almost like the Thirty Years War — even that came to an end. It's ridiculous. All other sports seemed to have solved their problems intelligently. Hopefully, the players' association and the owners can reach the same conclusion."

I got mine at Zanna!

Black zip jacket

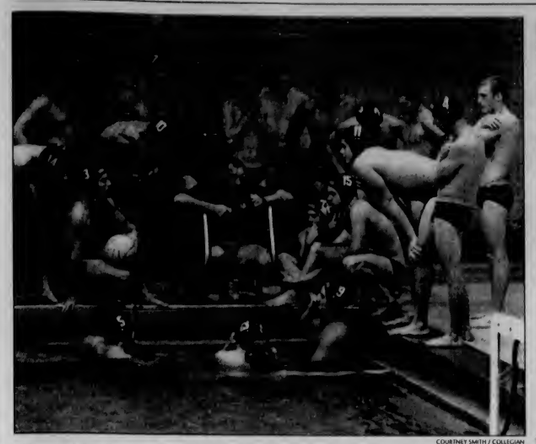
Gen X jeans

Steve Madden oxfords

ZAMM downtown Amherst

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday-Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS



NEW! BEER DISPLAY AREA ... WE NOW STOCK OVER 100% MORE ICE COLD MICROS & IMPORTS!

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.	HARPOON 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	FOSTERS 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	SARANAC 24-12 oz. Bott. $16.99 + dep.	BECKS 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.	J.W. Dundee 24-12 oz. Bott. $14.99 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. "30 pk" $11.99 + dep.	MGD&MGD LT 24-12 OZ Bar Bottles $9.99 +dep	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $9.99 + dep.	KEYSTONE LT. "30 pk" $10.99 + dep.	NATURAL LT 24-12 oz. cans $8.99 + dep.	HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.
SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.99 1.75L	GORDON'S GIN $11.99 1.75L	CANADIAN MIST $11.99 1.75L	CAPT. MORGAN SPICED RUM $15.99 1.75L	BEEFEATER GIN $19.99 1.75L	GORDON'S VODKA $10.49 1.75L
CANADIAN CLUB WHISKEY $15.99 1.75L	SEAGRAMS V.O. WHISKEY $15.99 1.75L	STOLICHNAYA VODKA $19.99 1.75L	KAHLUA $12.49 .750 ML	PEACHTREE $6.99 .750 ML	SOUTHERN COMFORT $7.99 .750 ML
BLOSSOM HILL CHARD. & CAB. $6.99 1.5L	"STONE CREEK" WINES $8.99 1.5L	R.H. PHILLIPS "NIGHT HARVEST WINES" $5.99 .750 ML	SANTA RITA MERLOT & CAB. $4.99 .750 ML	BEERBALLS $22.99 + dep.
M/D 20-20 $1.99 .750 ML	BOONES FARM $1.99 .750 ML	ANDREA CHAMPAGNES $2.99 .750 ML	CARLO ROSSI $6.99 4.0L	WE DELIVER 584-8174

KEG OF THE WEEK!
ICEHOUSE $38.99 + DEP.
"KEGS"
BUD, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, BUD LT, RED DOG, MICHELOB LT, LOWENBRAU DK., MICHELOB DK., LITE, LITE ICE... $39.99 +DEP.
NATURAL LT. NATURAL ICE $34.99 + DEP.

MICRO KEGS
SAM ADAMS $89.99
OREGON $89.99
SARANAC $89.99
J.W. DUNDEE $69.99
PLUS MANY MORE

ICE
10 LBS. $1.29
50 LBS. $5.99
100 LBS. $9.99
SALE GOOD THRU 9/19/96

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN
UMass coach Russ Yarworth and his water polo squad pounded Boston College 17-4 last night at Amherst College.

■ water polo

continued from page 16

well in extended minutes but were held scoreless by some good defense and some bad luck.

On two consecutive possessions, Mendez hit the goal post. After a tremendous save by Paul Engin, Mendez drove again, but this time he dished to sophomore Chad Filiault who beat Rea with a touch shot from two meters out.

Stahl notched his fourth goal of the half, and the Minutemen went into the break with the score, 9-2.

UMass's ace sniper recorded a natural hat trick in the third quarter giving him seven goals in the match and 22 on the young season.

"Brian had a bad game at Navy where he let his emotions get to him, but put that behind him and played capably tonight," Yarworth said.

Bill Hunter scored his first collegiate goal to account for the winning margin.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 16

goals, because opposing defense are not able to key in on just those two guys.

Butler, who notched two assists in the match, proved to be plenty dangerous pumping his career point total up to 50 with 18 goals and 14 assists.

"I don't think Holy Cross threatened us offensively," Koch said. "They certainly had some opportunities due to our mistakes, but for the most part, our defense was sound."

On the other side of the ball, freshmen goalkeeper Tim Pearson tallied two saves in the match after recording his second straight shutout.

Thus far in the season, the keeper position seems to be another key UMass strength. Pearson has filled in the shoes of last year's senior starting netminder Eric Gruber well, although he is in good company.

"I think the fact that will push Tim Pearson is the fact that [sophomore keeper] Jeff Jablonski is right there behind him," Koch said. "He can start for us too, and there's going to be a battle between them all season."

The Minutemen travel to the University of Maine on Saturday before making their home debut against New Hampshire on Sept. 18.

UM Zoo Disc ready to begin

The Zoo Disc Ultimate Frisbee team returns this year, inviting potential players, both new and old, to their general interest meeting.

Team member Andrew Wright encouraged both those who are seeking a competitive sport or just a opportunity to get in shape, to give Ultimate a try.

"Ultimate is a what-you-make-of-it kind of sport," said Wright. "You can come out and be real intense about it, or just have fun."

Junior Marlowe Knipes said a key advantage to the sport is its unique competitive structure; specifically, the lack of referees, even in championship tournaments.

"Glory is better than points; this game is not about demolishing the guy next to you," Knipes said. "If you hated sports in high school, but wanted to play anyway, give this game a chance."

Zoo Disc will hold a orientation meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Both men and women, regardless of experience, are urged to attend.

— Michael Elliot

■ field hockey

continued from page 16

remaining to pad the UMass lead 2-0.

"Sharon is our utility player," Hixon said, "I think it's a great confidence boost for her to get a stat because she works so hard in practice."

With the 2-0 lead as a cushion, the Minutewomen were able to relax.

"Once we scored we started to relax and play a little freer," Hixon said. "We played well enough to win today and that's really important."

Fuchs agreed.

"In the first half we had some difficulties," she said. "In the second half we moved more in both directions and created some openings."

For UMass, Rose made 10 saves on the evening to earn her 28th career shutout, while BC goalie Sarah Egnaczyk stopped six shots.

Minutewomen Notes

Fuch's goal was her second game winner of the season... Rose's shutout was her second in a row... McClellan's assist was the first of her collegiate career... Last night's game marked senior Kyle Rothenberger's 64th consecutive start.

ATTENTION CLUB, CO—REC, AND INTRAMURAL TEAMS:

We here at The Collegian sports desk are looking to inform the campus about some of UMass' less-publicized teams. That's why we've come up with a new column called "Sports Briefs." Send us a brief run-down of what your team has been up to and we'll let people know. The column will run each Thursday, so deadline is 12 p.m. Wednesday. You can drop off info in person (113 Campus Center Basement) or via fax (545-1592). This can only work with your help. Call Sports Editors Chris or Casey at 535-0719 with any questions.

PLANNING TO OBSERVE
ROSH HASHANAH AND YOM KIPPUR?

Students planning to be absent from class due to religious observance must notify their instructors at least one week in advance. In the event of a dispute between a student and a faculty member, either party should contact the Department Head or the Ombuds Office at 545-0867.*

Taken from the Major Days of Religious Observance 1996/97 Calender

DON'T LOOK!
THE DAILY COLLEGIAN IS RIGHT BEHIND YOU!

Amber Waves
FAR EAST
Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries
63 Main St.
253-9200
MID EAST
Arabian delights
salads & sandwiches
31 Boltwood Walk
253-9299
OCMP Delivery Express

what's in a Z

Everything.

- Complete multimedia computer customized for students
- Campus Z-Station® features:
  - Powerful Intel® Pentium® processor
  - Large capacity hard drive
  - Plenty of memory to run today's hottest applications
  - Plug & Play into your campus network with a high-speed modem
- Desktop Systems include Microsoft® Natural® Keyboard and Microsoft Mouse
- Loaded with Microsoft software for study and fun
  - Microsoft Office for Windows 95 with Word, Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Microsoft Access, Scheduler+, Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, Microsoft Internet Assistants
  - Microsoft Windows 95 with Microsoft Internet Explorer 2.0
  - Microsoft Plus!
  - Games for Windows 95
  - Norton AntiVirus and more
- Hewlett Packard Color Deskjet available
- Ask about Microsoft Programmer's Dream Pack

Processor	Pentium 100 MHz	Pentium 133 MHz	Pentium 166 MHz
Hard drive	1.2GB	1.6GB	2.1GB
Monitor	14" (13.2" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)
Price	$1799	$2199	$2499
with LAN card	$1899*	$2299	$2599

Experience Campus Z-Station.

The University Store
413-545-2619

http://www.zds.com
education@zds.com

HEY YOU! READ IT!
FIND WHAT YOU NEED FOR THOSE LONELY NIGHTS IN THE COLLEGIAN!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Performing Arts Division offers Group and Private instruction in music, theater and dance. Registration for Group Instruction runs Sept. 3-15, 1996. Private Instruction is on-going. PAD is located on 73 Bartlett Hall. UMASS, 413-545-0519, for info.

UMASS Women's Ice Hockey Team is looking for new recruits. Come to opening meeting Sept. 12 at 6 p.m outside the Blue Wall. All levels welcome. For more info, call Kara 548-9171

All University women invited to attend Sigma Kappa Open Rush. Thurs. 9/5 5-7 pm. Sun. 9/8 6-8 pm. Tues. 9/10 5-7 pm. Thurs 9/12 6-8 pm. Please call Beth for more info. 256-6887. Located 19 Allen St. (Behind Hillel)

CHINESE FOOD Kai Chi delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

AUTO FOR SALE

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK; 79,000 mi. very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done. $2900 OBO. Call 549-7286

1978 FORD LTD $550 or 247-9456

1983 Olds, Delta 83 for sale. New tires, rotors, wheels. Panasonic Stereo System, $750 Call 253-7258

VW Golf '89 Good condition 82,000 mi. $3200 Call Chrissi Mon-Fri 8-4 545-3202

EMPLOYMENT

Now Hiring part-time telemarketers. Morning, afternoon and evening hours available. Earn $6-$7 per hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring. Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext C50015

National Parks Hiring. Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring. Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50017

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment - Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call (206-971-3570 Ext J50015

Drivers Wanted For The Optimist. One day a week, good pay! Call 586-7070 Ext 27

Cider Jack needs friendly outgoing people for promotions at local resellers. Flexible hours. Please call Lara Minacci to set up an interview. 617-926-0048 Ext 107

Attention Skiers and Boarders. Entry level positions into the ski industry with skiing benefits. Make up to $1000/month. Part-time enthusiastic individuals please call: Ski Card International 1-800-333-2581

CRIMINAL JUSTICE MAJORS Security officers needed for Springfield. Applicants must have a clean police record, and pass drug screening. Interested applicants call (860)560-7777

Need Some Extra Cash, but don't have time for a steady job? Sign up to work Family Day, Saturday, September 28. Applications can be picked up at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall. For more info contact Jenn Bennett at 545-2317

Free T-shirt - $1,000 Credit card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities and groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1,000 by earning a whopping $5.00/Visa application. Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext 65. Qualified callers receive free T-shirt

Wanted Skiers and Snowboarders. Want to ski or snowboard for free and gain sales exp? Write and tell me why. Send letter and resume to Kevin Moran Stratton Mt. RR1 Box 145 Stratton Mt, VT 05155

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

PINBALL MACHINE Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

Futon, Double Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 OBO 548-9728

LAPTOP COMPUTER: IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HDD with case and extras/ $1100/OBO. Please contact Josh at 256-8966

BOOKCASES Unfinished pine 24"x36"x9". 3 shelves- $48.00 + tax- 536-1944

Sega Saturn w/ 2 controllers and Ultimate Mortal Kombat 3 $180.00 Call 546-5727

Stereo Systems and components, used/reconditioned. Large selection, honest advice, warranty, great prices. We buy audio, video, DJ, musical equipment. Stereo and Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market. Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call Amherst, 256-0941

Bunnies!!! All colors, mini tops 367-8105

Futon, double, with frame and cover $150 b.o. Waterbed, queen, semi-waveless with headboard $150 b.o. 253-5750

Rossignol Skiboots Mens size 12 (29.5) new. B.O. Call 1413637-2282

SALE Dorm Fridge $125, Word Processor $100. Call 546-1578.

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Good running condition. Best offer Call 545-3087 or 634-5732

INSTRUCTION

WWW SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

LOST

Sunglasses: Prescription, Oakley w/ case. Call 549-3950

MUSICIANS

Female singer to join/start Folk/Funk alternative band. Interested call 549-4723

Drummer Needed For dark pop/rock band. Call Phil 549-5836

MISCELLANEOUS

Let your voice be heard! WMUA news is looking for anchors, reporters, producers and more for daily newscasts. No experience is needed. All majors welcome. Stop by our offices at 105 Campus Center or call 545-2876 and ask for Alexandra

VISA/MASTERCARD GUARANTEED Bad credit. No credit. No problem. Call 1-800-354-1580 (24 hours)

ROOM FOR RENT

In Large House minutes to campus. Space enough for two. Call Kevin 549-0957

Northampton- Roomate needed in great downtown two bedroom apt. Own bedroom/bathroom, shared living room and kitchen. Seeking responsible male or female. Call 586-8314

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906

SERVICES

One Way Ticket Hartford to San Francisco Sept. 21 Male Only. $150/OBO 549-8546

FREE TRIPS & CASH!!! Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take a break. Student Travel (800)95-Break

Spring Break '97 Sell trips, earn cash and go free. STS is hiring Campus Reps/Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida. Call (800)648-4849 for information on joining America's #1 Student Tour Operator

WANTED

I need Matthews tix for Oct. 6 @ Mullins. I will pay or trade. I have MSG to for Oct. 4. Call Craig 253-3306

WORTH THE RIDE

2BR Apt. in Sunderland. HW floors, wood/dry, porch, garage. 315+ BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4394

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Update your skills to be sure you remain on the cutting edge at work. On the home front, be sure that you're being totally honest with a mate or close friend. Avoid telling that person what you think he/she wants to hear.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Get some basic chores out of the way before letting your hair down. If you've been mulling over a big decision for awhile, now is the time to take the plunge. Discuss the change and then make a choice. Nothing ventured, nothing gained.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

This is good time to start something new, like a business or a relationship. If you're having problems at home, sit down and have a frank discussion. It might be as simple as a couple of crossed wires, or it could be more serious. Find out as soon as possible.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

Planning for the future helps you come up with some new and exciting possibilities. Try brainstorming so you know you're not missing anything. Don't be surprised if plans you made a while ago are scrapped for something entirely different.

LEO
July 23-August 23

An unplanned getaway drops your stress level. It's about time—you've been stewing quite a bit lately. When you return, take a deep breath and then plunge into your routine again. You'll be surprised at what the change in perspective can do for you.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

This is a lucky week for you, so don't hesitate—grab things by the horns and go for it! Being flexible pays off later in the week, as you have the opportunity to better yourself by learning a new skill. Come to a friend's rescue this weekend.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

Your bargain-finding radar is working perfectly this week, so it's a good time to go shopping. Be sure to establish your budget before you leave, however, or you could pay a heavy price later. Focus on reducing your debt load later in the week.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

If you're feeling hounded, try to find a place where you can be left alone. Shut your door, put up a Do Not Disturb sign—do whatever it takes. Follow your instincts when it comes to advancing a personal relationship. Slow and steady does the trick.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

You're in rare form lately—it's a good time to plan a party. Put together an unusual mix of friends and then expect the unexpected. Don't worry about going over budget either. Just put your creativity to the test and see what you can come up with.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

An fall arrives in earnest, your romantic nature is in full blossom. Give yourself a long rein and prepare to sweep your sweetheart off his/her feet. The outdoors is calling—a picnic might be nice. Later in the week, turn your attention to a problem at work.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18

When it comes to getting day-to-day chores done, a computer can help, but if you rely on it too heavily, you could be bound for trouble in the long run. If you're making plans for the future, think big. You may not make it, but you'll know you tried.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

You can count on most of your friends this week to help you manage a crisis. If one or two people are missing unexpectedly, wait awhile and then check up on them. They could be in need of a little assistance themselves —and you're just the one to help.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD 2

ACROSS

1. The ___ in the Crown
6. Relatives
9. Russian river
13. Author Rogers St. Johns
14. Rummage
16. Beatles' meter maid
17. Bogarde et al.
18. Golden Rule preposition
19. J. Edgar's boys
20. French growing season
21. Debilitates
23. Ukraine seaport
25. Mona ___
26. Scottish group
27. Knaves
30. Easily snapped
33. Portents
34. Lying flat
35. Grunt
37. Zest
38. ___ My Way
39. Mythical monster
40. That girl
41. In need of brushing up
42. Get gussied up
43. Upswings
45. Artichoke cores
46. Holbein or Arp
47. On an even ___
48. ___ down (topsy-turvy)
51. Venture
52. Mas' partners
55. Croissant, e.g.
56. Cheer on the team
58. ___ Gay
60. Motown's genre
61. Lace place
62. Lease again
63. Infantry
64. Approvals
65. Monica of tennis

DOWN

1. Green gem
2. Revise a manuscript
3. When We ___ Very Young (Milne)
4. Sambur
5. Highland gals
6. Goodman's drummer in '35
7. Charged particles
8. Screw-loose fixer
9. Compelling
10. Wheel parts
11. Actor Roscoe
12. Turner of films
15. Leather ornamentation
22. Silly person
24. Junior Romeo's rite of passage
25. Human bellows
28. Deteriorates
28. Nebraska city
29. Chromosome cargo
30. Londoners, informally
31. German pistol
32. White-plumed bird
34. Appointments
36. Coop creatures
38. Cannon operators
39. Spoken
41. Review
42. Those who can't resist a look
44. Frigid
45. ___ is Cockeyed Wonder"
47. Toys with tails
48. Twinkling bear
49. "Our first duty is not to be ___" (Shaw)
50. Run-down area
51. European crow
52. Census
53. Skipper's word
54. Coll. entrance tests
57. Exclamation
59. Rosead: ___ Arnold, ___ Barr

SOME THINGS ARE MEANT TO BE CLOSED
YOUR MIND ISN'T ONE OF THEM.
For decades, MDA has shown how vulnerable people with disabilities are in society. We believe talent, ability and desire are more important than strength of a person's muscles. The one barrier these people can't overcome is a closed mind. Keep yours open.
1-800-572-1717 MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

Furniture Sale & Collection
North Congregational Church
and Tag Sale
Cushman Hill Children's Center
Saturday September 14
Rain or Shine • 9 am-2 pm
on the Amherst Common
• Bring your used furniture to the common to be recycled •
• Buy used furniture at very low prices •
• Clothing, toys, household items & much more •
For information Call 549-5568
Pickup/Delivery service available (within Amherst) for a fee of $5/item
"Take it or leave it" area
Largest recycling event of its kind in the area.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid Officials Needed For Flag Football, Softball, Soccer, & Ice Hockey
Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 18, 19, 20
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 19, 23, 24
Ice Hockey - Sept. 25
Call for times & locations
Still Time To Enter Flag Football, Soccer, & Softball
More Info In 215 Boyden, 5-2693/5-0022, on the web: http://www.umass.edu.80/umim/

COMPUTER FAIR MULLINS CENTER SEPT 14 10AM-3:30PM
Tri-State Fairs: Original Area Shows since 1987
Buy at wholesale prices directly at the show from nearly 50 independent competing companies under one roof. From full systems to shareware, it's all here
Located on the campus of UMass. Rte 9 onto Rte 116N at Staples taking first exit, turn right
This is a discount ticket. General admission is $7.00 each. Clip or photocopy this ad and save $2.00 ea
Our dealers feature the IBM/PC marketplace. Join us four times a year. Kids under 10 free with parent
Don't over sleep, one day show only!
ONE MONTH FREE INTERNET AT THIS SHOW FROM TIAC

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
Indoor Tennis & Basketball
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Carehouse Road
Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center
• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green •
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
Join now for our $15 winter semester special ($159) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

Fall Bike Sale

MONGOOSE

	Was	Now
Treshold	$299.95	$259.95
Switchback	$329.95	$289.95
Sycamore	$369.95	$349.95
Hilltopper	$419.95	$389.95
Alta SX	$734.95	$599.95
IBOC O-GSX	$999.95	$899.95

KONA

	Was	Now
Hahanna	$469.95	$379.95
Fire Mountain	$529.95	$409.95
Lava Dome	$629.95	$539.95
CinderCone	$849.95	$625.95
Kilauea	$1049.95	$874.95
AA	$1249.95	$1074.95
Explosif	$1699.95	$1449.95
Kula	$1949.95	$1649.95

Bicycle World
Rob Raymondi's Rob's Trail
GreenRidge: 104 Federal Street • 774-3701
Amherst • 253-7252 • 63 South Pleasant St. (rear)
Our new location: Northampton • 53 Masonic St. • 585-9100
Serving the Valley's Cyclist for Over 25 Years

Dilbert By Scott Adams

University² By Frank Cho

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

ROBOTMAN ® By Jim Meddick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winck

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

Sometimes I feel depressed, but I really love my tropical fish. I give them a few rules before I put 'em in the tank....

no biting
no chasing other fish
take your turn on the food

And no matter how bad you feel... no jumping out because... believe it or not...
" that's not water on the other side of the glass."

Then I give them their names and they're off to their new life.

Always wanted one of those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Close to Home By John McPherson

Always a practical joker, Carl tosses an old rib bone onto the floor at the height of his chiropractic session.

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Morning

"Stop plate tectonics"

–seen on T-shirt

Quote of the Afternoon

"Take me drunk, I'm home"

–seen on T-shirt

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Courteny Smith
Photo Technician

Marc Dionne
Production Supervisor

Joylyn Lombard, Jack Myers
Josh Sylvester
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Breaded Chicken Tenders
Cheese Pizza	Savory Beef Strudel
Falafel Pocket Sandwich	Mexican Veg. Stew
	Pastabilities

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Breaded Chicken
Grilled Chicken Sandwich	Tenders
Barbecued Beef on a Bun	Savory Beef Strudel

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Hot Turkey Sandwich	Breaded Chicken
Ritoni w/Meat Sauce	Tenders
Lentil Chili	Mexican Veg. Stew
	Pastabilities

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hot Turkey Sandwich	Brd. Chicken Tenders
Ritoni w/Meat Sauce	Mexican Veg. Stew
Lentil Chili	Pastabilities
Pizza	Savory Beef Strudel

Sports

Field hockey earns second shutout

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

CHESTNUT HILL — The Massachusetts field hockey team scored a pair of second half goals to secure a 2–0 win over Boston College last night at Alumni Stadium.

After BC played them to a scoreless tie at half time, the Minutewomen produced two goals within six minutes of each other to defeat the Eagles. Freshman Saskia Fuchs notched the game-winning goal while junior Sharon Hughes added an insurance goal to power UMass. The victory, which continues a 14-year dominance of the Eagles brings Massachusetts' record to 3-0, while BC falls to 0-3.

Massachusetts	2
Boston College	0

"BC played us really tough, they didn't give us any space to move," UMass coach Pam Hixon said.

With the bouncy stadium turf leading to free hits in both directions, neither team was able to take command of the game in the first half. The UMass defense, which played strongly last week against New Hampshire, deflected a number of hits by the Eagles towards the circle.

BC was able to put together a serious scoring opportunity with 9:57 remaining before intermission. Junior Gabrielle Bieg worked past the UMass defense to face goalie Hilary Rose but Bieg couldn't convert, sending the ball wide to Rose's right.

The Eagles also threatened when they were awarded a penalty corner with 6:21 to go in the half, but they failed to score when the shot went wide to the short side.

Boston College stormed out of the gates in the second half forcing a penalty corner approximately four minutes into the period. Rose blocked the initial shot, but a scramble in front of the UMass net ensued when BC tried to send home the rebound.

With players from both teams practically on top of Rose as she tried to protect the ball, the Eagles managed a shot but the ball went wide to the right of the cage.

Less than three minutes later, UMass put together an attack in front of the BC goal with the Minutewomen being awarded a penalty corner with 28:22 remaining in the game.

Off the corner's rebound, two-time Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week Fuchs connected to put UMass on the board 1–0. Katherine McClellan was awarded the assist on the eventual game winner.

"[Saskia] is a really good team player, but at the same time she accepts her responsibility as a center forward to score the goals," Hixon said.

That was not all for Massachusetts, as Hughes tallied her first goal of the season with 21:31

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 13

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior Sharon Hughes earned her first goal of the season as UMass beat Boston College 2–0.

Water polo sinks BC, Yarworth & Co. 2–2

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

This game was a classic case of: "It wasn't as close as it sounds."

Last night at Amherst College's Alumni Gymnasium, the UMass water polo squad defeated — annihilated, actually — Boston College, 17–4, to even up their season record at 2–2.

The Minutemen went into the game looking to put together a complete performance on both sides of the ball. UMass coach Russ Yarworth was pleased with the caliber of play he saw from his defending Eastern Championship club.

Massachusetts	17
Boston College	4

"It's always good to see the team take advantage of a winning opportunity," he said. "I got them jacked up to play defense."

The Minutemen put up a solid defensive front in the first quarter, hardly allowing a dangerous shot on goal and allowing only one score in the period. The UMass defense held BC (0–1) in check with an intense, aggressive smothering style of defense that led to numerous Eagle turnovers.

Most of those Eagle giveaways led to Minuteman goals.

With the score 1–0 on the strength of a Brian Stahl tally, Aldo Roman made a brilliant steal and an outlet pass on the money to senior captain Ron Gonen. After he got position, Gonen dished across the pool to Marc Staudenbauer who found the back of the net to give Massachusetts a two goal advantage.

Less than two minutes later in the first quarter, Roman was rewarded for his tenacious defensive effort. Gonen took the ball quickly up the right side and found Roman set in the middle of the pool. The Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, native unleashed a vicious blast past a helpless Tom Rea in the BC net.

Another Roman takeaway led to Staudenbauer's second score of the quarter and a whopping 6–0 first quarter Minuteman lead.

Staudenbauer's two goals give him 15 points in just four games this season after having scored 50 points in 35 games last season.

"I'm looking for Marc to be a leader in the pool," Yarworth said of Staudenbauer. "He really knows the game as well as anyone. He's got a personality that lends itself to leadership, and if the stats come, that's great too."

Gonen, the anointed team leader by virtue of his captainship, handed out four assists (two to Stahl) in the game extending his career UMass record, that he set in just three seasons, to 120.

Neither Gonen, nor the rest of the starting seven, saw much playing time as the Minutemen jumped out to a steep 7–1 first quarter lead.

Carlos Mendez and Jake Howard, a pair of players that illustrate the depth of the UMass bench, played

Turn to WATER POLO, page 13

Men's soccer blanks Holy Cross

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team (2–0) offers this correction to an age old sports metaphor: "Some times you win, sometimes you lose, and sometimes you win big."

Massachusetts	5
Holy Cross	0

Coming on the heels of a mediocre 1–0 win over New England powerhouse Boston University, the Minutemen looked to re-tune their engines in Tuesday's match up against Holy Cross. After being out-shot by the Terriers 21– 5 over the weekend, No. 18 UMass exacted revenge by drubbing the Crusaders 5-0 on Hart Field in Worcester.

What made the difference?

"I don't think it had anything to do with what I said," said UMass coach Sam Koch, "I think it had to do with the opponent and playing on grass. The ball movement was much better, the work off the ball was better, which created opportunities for us to finish."

Talk about mixing it up. Five different Minutemen notched goals in the match, outshooting the Cross 13–2.

Just over 17 minutes into the match, sophomore midfielder Rob Cairo was first to light up the score board, finishing off a feed from junior forward Mike Butler 10 yards out. That was the only offensive damage the Minutemen would muster in the first half of play.

In the second half, senior midfielder Tashi Tshering sparked a scoring frenzy when he earned his first career goal driving home a loose ball in the box 51 minutes into the game.

Three more Minutemen would go on to score in the squad's second straight shutout of the season. In the 66th minute, Butler found sophomore midfielder Mark Saad for the third goal. Two minutes later, the UMass offense struck again via All-America candidate Dave Siljanovski tallying an unassisted goal. Sophomore midfielder Jake Brodsky placed the final nail in the Crusaders' coffin hammering home a second for freshman forward Eric Rabinovitz.

This is characteristic of the Minuteman offense as Koch describes, "If you look at the way the team has been in the last two years, everybody scores. We don't go to one particular player and expect him to put the ball in the back of the net for us.

"We certainly have two great goals scorers in Dave Siljanovski and Mike Butler, but, there has always been four other players who have scored six or eight goals during the season and that's what makes us so dangerous," he said.

Koch added that Butler and Siljanovski, in fact, become more dangerous when more people score

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 13

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Shut out city Senior defenseman Joe Jacobson played solid D on two counts as UMass kicked off the season with two shutouts.

Dion stands alone in Minutewomen goal

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Whether it is the game of soccer, lacrosse, ice or field hockey, the goalkeeper position can be a lonely place. It is the last to be recognized when a team wins, and the first to be put on the stand when a team loses.

For the No. 8 nationally ranked University of Massachusetts women's soccer team (3–0), junior keeper Danielle Dion has to had to face this complex. The dimensions of a soccer net (8' x 24') can be daunting even for the imposing stature of a 5'9, two-time All-Atlantic 10 first team selection.

It can be a lonely place, as there are times when you sit and watch the action for most of the game, but then have to instantaneously switch into high gear, as 11 opponents rush the box wanting to make you look like a fool. Concentration is the key for Dion, but at very few times, she is only human.

"I just try to follow the ball, wherever it is, at any point of time on the field," Dion said, with a smirk. "Actually, a little funny story, I found myself drifting a little bit this weekend when we played SMU, and I caught myself one time.

"The concentration level you have has to rise, because if you are not concentrating, you never know when the ball will be in front of you."

It definitely helps when you have a first rate defense in front of you, as Dion has combined with the likes of junior Erica Iverson, sophomore Amanda Thompson and senior Erin Lynch to be one of the top back lines in the East.

"You could not ask for anything more," Dion said. "I have had the most incredible defense in front of me, and

Turn to Dion, page 11

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Danielle Dion embarks on her third year in the net for UMass and has excelled in the "lonely" position.

UMass QB seeks to instill air offense

By Mike Carey
Collegian Staff

Being a quarterback requires a lot of effort, leadership, and talent. It's a position with high prestige and responsibility. The Massachusetts football team knew they had found a player who could fit the bill when they selected Anthony Catterton to be the quarterback to lead the Minutemen this season.

In a year where the Minutemen are in desperate need to balance the attack on the offensive side of the ball — having just lost the top rusher in UMass history — many people are looking to Catterton to reenact the UMass passing game. A large responsibility for the Orlando, Fla. native, in playing a position that many people criticize depending on performance. However, Catterton isn't trying to let any of that get to him.

"People are going to say what they want to say," Catterton said. "I learned a long time ago, at this position, you either get all the glory or take all the rap, so I really don't pay attention to that. I just try to do the best I can, and give all I can give."

Catterton began his career about 12 years ago in Florida, and by the end of his career at Boone High School he had

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Anthony Catterton

passed for 4,521 yards and 33 TDs, and rushed for 1,507 yards and 19 TDs. In 1993 he was the only quarterback in central Florida to pass for over 300 yards in back-to-back games. An honorable mention as a senior, named to the Orlando Sentinel All-Central Florida and All-District first team. Catterton was recruited by both Florida and Florida St, although he mentioned that his size was a factor and hurt him in playing for such schools.

"I like the responsibility of leading a bunch of guys," Catterton said. "It's just a position I grew up playing, and I feel comfortable with. I don't feel that [my size] is a disadvantage. I feel I can run pretty good, so it compensates for not having the height."

So what brings a guy from Florida up to the University of Massachusetts?

"I enjoyed the company here," Catterton said. "The guys are great, I felt real comfortable with the them, and I liked the campus. I have family that live within four hour ranges of here, and I always have somebody coming to my games. I been down south my whole life, in Florida or Georgia, so it was a chance to get away and I really liked the coaches in the program."

Catterton played in three games in 1994 and played in nine games in 1995, making seven starts after taking

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

Big 10 one big flop; Tarheels can play

Luke Meredith on College Football

Not so long ago, the Big 10 was considered the elite conference in the nation. Year in and year out, they produced more NFL prospects than any other conference, and top to bottom the level of play was superior to that of anyone in America. So what the hell happened?

This past weekend served notice to the nation that the Big Ten is not what it was. With the rise of the SEC and the formation of the Big 12, the Big 10 wasn't expected to rule the football world, but nobody thought they'd disappear either.

Nebraska served up the first blow, pounding Michigan St. 55–14. Now, the Spartans are a decent Big 10 program, and they destroyed Purdue 52–14 two weeks ago. I understand that Nebraska is unreal, but when a mid-level Big 10 team loses to anyone by 41 points, out of conference, there is cause for concern.

But the dookie hit the fan Saturday afternoon when Southern Cal destroyed Illinois 55–3. A program known for its defense, the Illini were stymied by a team that returns only one offensive starter from last year's Rose Bowl champions. Even media sweethearts Northwestern, last year's Cindarella, was beaten by Wake Forest in a 28–27 thriller. Northwestern's loss doesn't really concern me; they're decent, but not great. However, even decent teams shouldn't have trouble with the Demon Deacons.

I know it's not even mid-September and there's still a lot of football to be played, but this is not a recent trend. The Big 10 has had trouble out of conference for years, and unless they get themselves together, they'll find themselves on the outside looking in as college football expands and progresses.

• Do Believe the hype —— Congratulations, Chapel Hill, sounds like you've got yourselves a football team. North Carolina proved that their season-opening 45–0 humiliation of Clemson was no fluke Saturday night. They went up to the Carrier Dome and ignored all the pre-season hype about the supposed greatness of Syracuse and their All-American quarterback Donovan McNabb, thumping the Orangemen 27–10. They came out fired up, storming to a 17–0 halftime lead. 'Cuse is no pushover, however, and made a run to cut the lead to seven in the third quarter. But, like all good teams, the Tarheels were patient. They waited for their opportunity, and when it came they pounced. The ability to win on the road when the home team has momentum is the sign of a football team that's going somewhere. Syracuse dropped from No. 9 to 24 in this week's AP poll, and if UNC can get past Florida State in the ACC, there just might be Sugar in their stockings come bowl selection

Turn to BIG 10, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 8 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, September 13, 1996

Bring the jazz

J.J. Johnson storms into Northampton with two shows on Sunday. Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Minutewomen shoot down Hawks

Caroline Steele and the UMass women's tennis team opened their season with a win yesterday, defeating the Hartford Hawks, 6–1 (See Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Iraqi missiles fired to "make statement"

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq and the United States moved closer to a showdown Thursday, with more U.S. firepower sent to the Persian Gulf, Iraq claiming missile attacks on American jets and both countries spitting harsh rhetoric.

After almost two weeks of conflict, each side seemed willing to raise the stakes but neither looked prepared to make a decisive move.

Iraq said it fired missiles at U.S. warplanes over a no-fly zone for a second straight day Thursday, hours after accusing Kuwait of an "act of war" for agreeing to open its airfields to American jets.

Pentagon officials confirmed that Iraq fired three surface-to-air missiles Thursday, but said they were aimed at an area near the southern "no-fly" zone where allied aircraft were not flying.

"We had nothing in the area. Clearly he released them only to make a statement," a military official said on condition of anonymity. "There were no (radar) tracks," indicating guidance systems were not left on long enough to direct the missiles to an intended target. "It took a hard search to find them."

NATION

Florida State U. ranks as no. 1 party school

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Go, Seminoles! Florida State University is No. 1 — in partying.

FSU was named the top-ranked party school nationwide in the latest Princeton Review's "Advantage Guide to the Best 310 Colleges."

It dethroned three-time champion University of Rhode Island, which banned alcohol on campus last year. George Washington University in Washington was No. 2 and arch-rival University of Florida came in third.

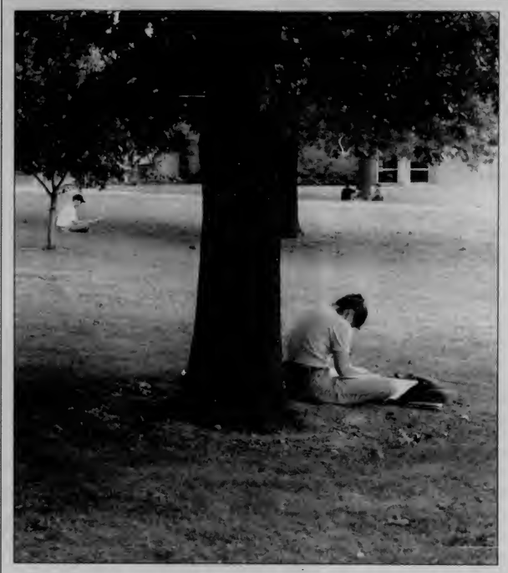
"Oh that's good," said Tom Guillot, a 22-year-old junior at

FSU. "We beat 'em again. We beat 'em in everything."

Florida State was ranked fourth in partying in the guide's first edition 1993, and then came in second three years in a row behind Rhode Island. This is the first year it's in first place.

So, does that mean the Seminoles are last in academics?

"If you read the whole thing, it's really not all bad," said FSU President Sandy D'Alemberte, noting the nice things the guide says about the friendly atmosphere, good climate and "bargain-basement" tuition.



The Princeton Review, the New Jersey-based company that provides test preparation classes and is not affiliated with Princeton University, publishes the annual guide to colleges for high school seniors. Its party-school ranking was based on a survey of 56,000 students at the 310 colleges listed.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 70	HIGH: 70	HIGH: 60
LOW: 65	LOW: 60	LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

COURTNEY SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

September days...

Senior Kari Olsen was among many found studying amidst the trees on campus yesterday.

Lack of bicycle racks causes safety problems

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

The lack of bicycle racks on the University of Massachusetts campus has become an increasingly annoying and potentially dangerous problem, according to students and the Division of Environmental Health and Safety (EH&S).

Because there is a shortage of bike racks on campus, students seeking places to park their bikes have obstructed and cluttered entrances to campus buildings. The blocked entrances could cause problems for students trying to exit the buildings.

Amber Conboy, an engineering major, has been forced to seek out alternative fixtures to secure her bike.

"All day today, I've chained my bike to trees and railings," said Conboy. "I have yet to chain my bike to a rack because there is no room."

Conboy is aware that the railings are for the handicapped to use, or in case of fire, and she makes an effort to lock her bike in alternative locations.

"I never chain my bike on railings where people might really need to use it for the stairs," said Conboy. "I try to stay in areas where my bike wouldn't actually impair someone from using it."

Conboy keeps to trees and fences that appear to "serve no other purpose than as an ornament."

However, EH&S has "received an increased number of complaints this semester of bicycles blocking handicap ramps, stairways and doors," according to a press release.

Jay Tainter, an English major, who uses the rails on stairways and ramps understands that they are needed, but sees no other option.

"I'm sure that it causes problems for people who need to use the handrails," said Tainter. "But I need to use them too because there are no bike racks."

Gary Stokarski, Fire and Safety Officer, said that EH&S has been aware of the problem for five years and has been trying to resolve the problem for an equal length of time.

"Our office has tried to seek funding for more bike racks, but has not been too successful," said Stokarski.

Stokarski explained that EH&S will attempt to solve the problem by continuing to seek grants and funding through every possible means.

In the meantime, "We do have the avenue of education," said Stokarski.

EH&S has posted warnings around campus in an attempt to persuade students to avoid using handrails according to Stokarski.

"Emergency evacuation from a building would be difficult, if not impossible, in some situations because of the bicycles," said Mears.

Mears would like students "to be mindful of others when parking their bicycles."

Stokarski also mentioned that students should keep safety in mind, particularly in the winter when people will rely heavily upon the rails to avoid slipping down stairs.

Even though the Division of EH&S would like to educate students and allow them to use their own judgement, they have gone as far as removing bicycles according to Stokarski.

"If they are repeat offenders or there is a specific complaint from someone with mobility impairment, the bike will be removed," said Stokarski. "It also depends on the seriousness of the situation."

He also stressed to students the importance of registering their bikes, because EH&S may try and locate the owner of a bike before it is removed.

Festivities for Jewish New Year scheduled

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

For Jews at the University of Massachusetts, and all over the world, the holiday season has arrived.

Sundown tonight marks the beginning of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, and one of the most important holidays in the Jewish faith. It is followed by Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, which begins at sundown on Sept. 22.

There are a number of options for Jews at UMass who are looking to celebrate the beginning of 5757, the year on the Jewish calendar.

Chabad is offering an orthodox service at their house on North Hadley Road. Services begin at 7 p.m. tonight. Tomorrow, services begin at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., and on Sunday they begin at 10 a.m. with the Shofar blowing at 12:30 p.m.

The Shofar is a ritual horn made out of a ram's horn which is blown only on Rosh Hashana to signal the beginning of the New Year.

The Jewish Community of Amherst is holding members- only services at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. tonight and 9:30 a.m. tomorrow. They are also holding a children's service open to the general public at 2:45 p.m. tomorrow at the Jewish Community of Amherst.

Hillel is offering two services this year — a "liberal/egalitarian" one in the Student Union Ballroom — and a traditional one in the Hillel House.

Friday evening services will begin at 6 p.m. at both places. Morning services on Saturday and Sunday will begin at 9 a.m. in the Hillel House and 10 a.m. in the Student Union. Both Saturday evening services begin at 7 p.m.

According to Louisa Shein, who will be the cantor for the liberal service, it will be led by both men and women.

"We'll be doing, you know, most of the service in Hebrew and also some English readings," she said. "It hopes to be a lot of singing and a nice Rosh Hashana service."

The traditional service, led by Rabbi Carl Woolf, will will be completely in Hebrew.

Shein, who is also Hillel's vice-president of Cultural and Religious Affairs, said Hillel is doing two services to give more options to the "diverse Jewish body" on campus.

"Last year, we sometimes had one service and sometimes we had two," she said. "We sent out a questionnaire... and it became very clear that people were happier when there were more options. So this year, we decided to have two services for everything."

Students who have to miss class for either High Holiday should inform their instructors a week ahead of time. Anyone having a problem with a professor should contact the head of the department of the Ombuds Office.

75th annual Big E boasts full schedule

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Celebrating its 75th anniversary, the Big E will begin today and continue until Sept. 29 in West Springfield.

The Big E is well-known for its free entertainment. This year's schedule of events promises to be "full of amazing events and one-of-a-kind exhibits, a variety of tempting culinary delights and a host of live entertainment," according to Communications Manager Catherine Pappas.

The following is list of highlights for this year's Big E.

At 9:30 p.m. on opening night, Fleet Bank will sponsor a fireworks display to kick off the festivities.

A longstanding tradition, the Big E Circus can be seen under the Big Top daily, free of charge, at 1 p.m., 4 p.m. and 7 p.m.

The "Diamond Jubilee" exhibit, sponsored by Honnouth Jewelers and Milk Promotion Services Inc., is located in the New England Center. It will host 75 years of fair memorabilia celebrating the Eastern States Exposition.

Winn's Thrill Show will excite audiences as they balance on 70 foot high sway poles and ride motorcycles on an inclined wire.

On opening day, a member of the group will perform a "skywalk" from the Brooks Building to the Coliseum at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. The Winn Show performance will take place daily at 12:30 p.m., 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the Mallary Plaza.

The Big E Grande Parade sponsored by Stop & Shop will march off at 5 p.m. daily. The Budweiser Clydesdales, the famous eight-horse group, will also appear daily in the parade.

As a special guest appearance, the University of Massachusetts Minuteman Marching Band will perform in the parade on Sept. 19.

Amusement park rides for all ages will also be part of the entertainment. A Pay-One-Price ride discount for $12 is good for one day Monday through Thursday on the Magic Midway.

Other points of interest for fair-goers are Ice Sculpting demonstrations, an antique car display, Italian Pavilion, Storrowtown Village Museum, Commerford's Petting Zoo, the Avenue of States and U.S. amateur ballroom dancers.

The main stage, which features different types of free entertainment, will offer many singers and groups.

David Hasselhoff, actor and producer from Baywatch, will sing a collection of songs on Sept. 14 at 8 p.m.

Grammy nominated singer Billy Ray Cyrus will sing on Sept. 15 at 8 p.m.

At 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m., from Sept. 16–20, fans of the Supremes can relive their music and style as they perform.

In addition to these acts, scheduled to appear are: Connie Smith, the Bethany Assembly of God Choir and Orchestra, Cottonwood, Emilio, Pedragons, Kathy Mattea, Tom Hambridge, Trisha Yearwood, Peter Noone, The Chiffons, Peaches & Herbs, Tracy Lawrence and La Bouche.

Big E employees are not sure what to expect for attendance numbers, but last year they hosted 1.1 million people, said Pappas.

"We are expecting at least that many this year, especially for our 75th anniversary," she said.

Gates will open daily at 8 a.m. Most buildings and exhibits are open from 10 a.m.–10 p.m. The Avenue of States hours are 10 a.m. – 9 p.m. and the Storrowtown Village Museum hours are 10 a.m. – 9 p.m.

The Pioneer Valley Transit Authority will provide daily bus service from the I-91 parking lot in downtown Springfield to the Big E and from select hotels and motels along Route 5 in West Springfield. Additional weekend shuttle service will be available from Enfiled Square, the Holyoke and Fairfield Malls, Westfield and West Springfield.

Services will also be provided to the Big E by Peter Pan throughout New England.

Admission Prices for the Big E are $10 for adults on weekends, $8 Monday–Thursday. Children ages 6–12 are $6 and children 5 and under are free.

Two day passes, which are good for any two days of the fair are $16. For more information and schedules, call 1–800–343–9999.

COURTNEY SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

Wheeee.....

Sophomore Rob Luhrs takes time out from his busy schedule to play a quick round of frisbee

Korean flooding causes famine

By Sang-Hun Choe
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea— Famine is biting ever harder into North Korea, with children and the elderly especially threatened and the government reducing food rations still further.

Aid experts say North Korea will need substantial food aid again next year and possibly for much longer.

South Korean officials said Thursday that North Korea's food crisis won't ease unless the communist nation fundamentally changes its economic policies. They said massive floods the past two years merely aggravated a chronic problem.

After floods destroyed thousands of acres of North Korean farmland last year, the reclusive nation sought international help for the first time to feed its 24 million people. More flooding this summer worsened the problem.

Experts say that North Korea's crops were hurt by terraced farms, made on slopes of hills throughout the country. Topsoil washed downhill by rains buried vast rice paddies below. U.N. officials operating out of North Korea reported that much of the flood-stricken farmland remains buried because the country has no fuel to run bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

Kim Hyong-ki, a senior official in South Korea's Unification Ministry, reported to parliament this week that the North needs 4.9 million tons of food to maintain the minimum acceptable ration this year, but harvested only 3.4 million tons last fall.

As a result, U.N. agencies say North Korea has reduced food rations to less than half of what is considered an acceptable minimum and introduced potatoes to the country's rice-based diet.

Still, food rations have been cut for many adults to only 7 ounces a day of cereal as the North diverted dwindling food stock to feed children suffering malnutrition and rickets, the agencies said.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Sept. 13

Religious — The Alliance Christian Fellowship Time Out will have its first weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the Info Desk for the room number. Sharing, praying, teaching, and contemporary worship music will be involved.

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House, and liberal/egalitarian services will be held at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Seminar — The UMass Polymer Science and Engineering Department will have Dr. Joseph Davidovits deliver a lecture entitled, "Aluminosilicate Polymers for Ultra-High Temperature Structural Applications," at 3:35 p.m. in Conte Center Room A11.

Party — The Asian-American Student Association will host a party from 9 p.m. – 1 a.m. on the 10th floor of the Campus Center. Admission is free with two friends accompanying. For more information, call the office at 545-0189.

Saturday, Sept. 14

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana services will be held at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. at Hillel House, and liberal/egalitarian services will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Concert — Tully Craft, the Crabs, Bunnygrunt and the Mitchells play live at the Butterfield Basement at 9 p.m. Tickets are $3 for UMass students and $4 for all others. Call Mike at 665-7243 for more information.

Sunday, Sept. 15

Auditions — The UMass Dance Team will hold auditions at 2 p.m. on the 19th floor of John Adams Residence Hall in Southwest. For more information, call Kellie at 256-8742 and Janine at 549-4394.

Auditions — Tryouts for UMass' comedy improv group, Mission Improvable, will be held at 7 p.m. at the Campus Center room 174. For more information, call Walter at 546-0115.

Dance — An Argentine Tango Workshop, instructed by Daniel Trenner and Florencia Taccetti, will be taught in two sections: Basic I at 4:45 p.m. and Basic II at 6 p.m, both at the Florence Community Center on 140 Pine St. in Florence. The cost is $20 for one or $30 for both workshops. Contact Jacqueline Maidana at 584-7099 to register. Trenner and Taccetti will also be performing at 8 p.m. at Club Metro on 492 Pleasant St. in Northampton. For information, call 582-9898.

Religious — Traditional Rosh Hashana will be held in Hillel House at 9 a.m. and liberal/egalitarian services will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 10 a.m.

Outdoors — The United Christian Foundation Student Fellowship invites anyone interested to go on a hike to Mt. Skinner to meet at Folsom House on 367 N. Pleasant St. at 1 p.m. All are welcome. For more information, call Kent at 549-3501 or Yuland at 546-3659.

Monday, Sept. 16

Travel — An organizational meeting for the 1997 UMass program abroad in Siena will be held this evening in 301 Herter Hall. For the meeting time or more information, call Professor Elizabeth Mazzocco at 545-3453.

Notices

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. For more information, call 546-2771 or 546-1318.

Tag sale — The North Hadley Congregational Church's annual tag sale will be held from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 14, and from noon – 4 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 15. Food and drink will be available in addition to the wide array of sale items. All are welcome.

Auditions — Tryouts for Neil Simon's "Rumors" will be held at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 12 and Friday, Sept. 13, and on Saturday, Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Campus Center. Callbacks will be held on Sunday, Sept. 15. Special arrangements can be made for religious conflicts. For more information, call the UMass Theatre Guild at 545-0415 or visit the office at 423 Student Union.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen-dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538-9717.

Sale — The UMass Ski Club will hold a mountain bike sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday on the lawn of the Student Union. Bikes by Cannondale, Giant, Scott and more will be available. Prices start at $195. For more information, call 545-3437.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 – 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253-5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1-2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256-8482 or Laili at 253-0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 – 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253-3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month with free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Bicycle registration — The UMass Department of Public Safety and Alpha Phi Omega will conduct bicycle registration at the Student Union Circle from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. through Friday, Sept. 13. Information about theft prevention and bike identification will also be available.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. – midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol-free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584-8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536-3072 or Karen at 259-1646.

MASSPIRG releases report detailing chemical toxicity, related problems

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

A new report released by the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) and Greater Boston Physicians for Social Responsibility outlines potential problems and solutions for issues dealing with toxic chemicals.

The report states that over 2.1 billion pounds of chemicals linked to reproductive problems in people were used between 1990 and 1994.

There are over 70,000 synthetic chemicals and metals used commercially across the country. The health effects stemming from the use of the majority of chemicals is unknown, according to MASSPIRG.

Michelle Markesteijn from the MASSPIRG campaign office covering Western Massachusetts said that the group plans to take a number of actions to alert the public about the dangers of chemicals used in everyday household products.

Letter writing campaigns and petitions are all planned. MASSPIRG also plans to go door to door to talk to people about toxic chemicals and what they can do to help protect themselves and their communities from the chemicals.

The issue will also be discussed on radio talk shows. It's something that the group feels is vitally important.

"This is a student and community issue," Markesteijn said. "We're changing the way we think about toxins in our lives and the power we have over them."

They are also pushing for legislation that would, among other things, require manufacturers to test the chemicals they use for safety and to label these products accordingly.

"Our big push and what we're campaigning for is labels," Markesteijn said. "Our children and our grandchildren are being affected by household products that we think are safe."

The report has generated national interest from coast to coast.

"We've had calls from New Mexico to Maine," said Markesteijn.

Industries using the most known or suspected reproductive toxins in Massachusetts include those involved in the production of plastics, chemicals, paints, adhesives and photographic equipment and supplies.

COURTNEY SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

Up, up and away...

Sophomore Kyle Burchesky demonstrates his take-off with the UMass Hang Gliding Club on campus Wednesday.

SGA plans info-social for students

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) will be holding an info-social on Monday at 5 p.m. in room 420 of the Student Union Building.

"Students can come to the info-social and learn anything to do with the SGA," said SGA Secretary of Public Policy and Relations Pete Kilbourne. "This is a good chance to learn more about us."

All of the SGA's executive officers will be present, including President Maurice Caston, Student Trustee Sean Carter and Senate Speaker Brian Tirrell.

"This is an ideal opportunity for the general public and prospective senators to meet with the executive officers of the SGA," said SGA Associate Speaker Nathan Peyton. "We want people to come to the social, ask questions and just get to know us."

"Some people wander around campus unsure of what is going on and how to create change," said Kilbourne. "They need some sort of initiative and that is why the info-social is so important."

Nomination forms and informative pamphlets about the Student Activities Trust Fund (SATF) and the SGA will be available.

"A lot of people express concerns and complain that nothing is being done around campus," said SGA Secretary of Finance Jeff Coker. "If these people want their concerns to be heard, they should come to the info-social; it is a good chance for them to get involved and meet their student representatives."

"A lot of change starts with the SGA," Coker added.

There will also be a presentation about the SGA.

"Basically, if people want to get involved with student government, they should come to the info-social," said Kilbourne.

"The atmosphere will be very informal," said Peyton. "Any questions that students want to ask will be answered."

Open house welcomes women

Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

The Everywoman's Center hosted an open house and reception Wednesday, Sept. 11 at Wilder Hall.

The director of the Everywoman's Center, Carol Wallace, said that "one of our primary objectives is to serve as a training site for students and volunteers."

The Everywoman's Center, which was founded in 1972, works to provide 24-hour comprehensive services to survivors of sexual assault, harassment and rape. Other services also include legal advocacy and support through legal proceedings to survivors of assault and an educator/advocate workshop program that works towards decreasing violence against women through education.

Topics include as rape awareness, battering or abuse in relationships, media images and how they effect women, pornography, sexual harassment, safety strategies and defining abuse and respect.

The Everywoman's Center also sponsors a Teen RAP program, available to the entire Hampshire County, in conjunction with the Men's Resource Center, which offers programs for schools and youth groups.

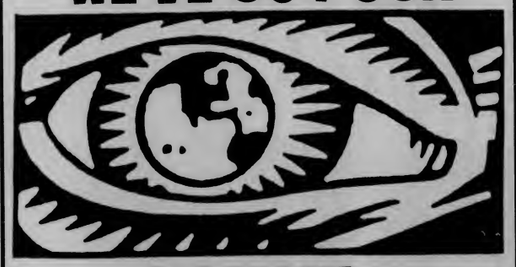
The Woman of Color Program works to improve the lives of women of color through advocacy and educational services. The program offers workshops, films, guest speakers, outreach work, resource materials and referrals.

The Everywoman's Center also provides volunteer opportunities to students and residents in the 20 towns and five colleges in Hampshire County.

According to Wallace, the volunteers "are not just answering phones." Students staff the 24-hour hotline and operate the resource and referral program.

"Students and volunteers for the most part provide services," said Wallace.

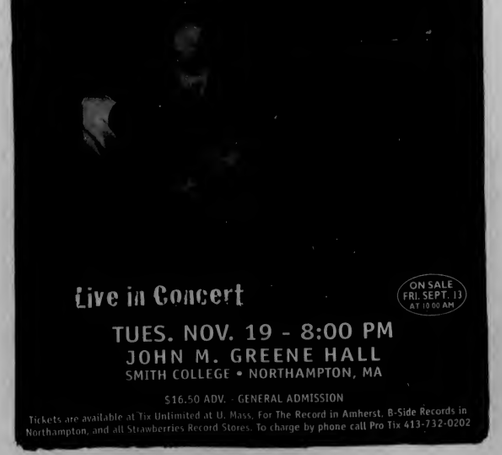
Benefits of volunteering at the Everywoman's Center include learning real skills, building your resume and the "opportunity to work in a multicultural setting with women from all over the world," said Wallace. "A student who works here will completely rethink her career plans because of her experience here."



COURTNEY SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

Lollipop, lollipop

Junior Will Hall and sophomore Melissa Parsons enjoy the women's tennis match with UHartford at Boyden courts yesterday.



BURN YOUR BRA!!!
WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES AND LET YOUR VOICE BE HEARD. COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN LOCATED IN THE BASEMENT OF THE CAMPUS CENTER AND ASK FOR MICHELLE HILLMAN OR CALL 545*1762.

FREE THE PRESS
WRITE FOR COLLEGIAN NEWS.
ALL POTENTIAL NEWS WRITERS: YOU MUST COME TO THE GENERAL INTEREST MEETING IN THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE THIS AFTERNOON AT 2 P.M., 113 CAMPUS CENTER (BASEMENT).
IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO MAKE THIS MEETING AT THE GIVEN TIME, PLEASE CONTACT MICHAEL ELLIOTT IN THE OFFICE OR AT 545*1762.
THANK YOU TO ALL THOSE WHO HAVE ALREADY CONTACTED US ABOUT WRITING.

CD$C is HIRING and WE'VE GOT OUR

ON YOU!
Campus Design & Copy (CD&C) IS HIRING AND WE'VE GOT OUR EYE ON YOU!
If you want to gain valuable business and communication skills, we've got a great opportunity for you. CD&C is a student-run business and we're currently looking to hire six sharp students to join our team. If you want a challenge and more than just a regular job, come in and pick up an application - WE DARE YA! CD&C is located in 403 Student Union; that's on the second floor, above the Credit Union. The application deadline is September 18.

NOBODY'S PERFECT
Come to UMass – Lincoln Campus Center Rm 165+169
Monday, Sept. 16th thru Friday, Sept. 20th
Ladies & Mens merchandise from Express-Limited-Structure-Aeropostale and other famous specialty stores & designer labels at 60%-80% OFF their original prices
KNIT TOPS 9.99-12.99 Comp. 24.00-49.00
JEANS Colors 9.99 or 2/15.00 Comp. 28.00-42.00 each — Blue & Black 12.99 or 2/20.00 Comp. 28.00-42.00 each
SWEATERS 6.99-19.99 Comp. 28.00-94.00
From "Limited" Stores Italian Knit group TOPS-SKIRTS-DRESSES 9.00 each or 2/15.00 Comp. 48.00-78.00
From Bloomingdales Ladies Mahogany JEWERLY BOXES 29.99 in their catalog for 250.00
Sale Hours Mon. – Thurs. 7am– 9pm
Fri. 7am – 6pm
Visa/AMEX/Disc./ATM Cards/Cash
Sorry–No Checks

Need a computer? or need to up grade the one you have?...
WE BEAT ANY PRICE BY AT LEAST 5%
Internet service, web page space, system support, up grades, training, suplies and equipment, 12 years of expirence, student employer, Technical Support 24 hours a day. 253-4640
Shore Break Tech.
http://www.shorebreak.com

ANI DIFRANCO

Live in Concert
ON SALE FRI. SEPT. 13 AT 10:00 AM
TUES. NOV. 19 - 8:00 PM
JOHN M. GREENE HALL
SMITH COLLEGE • NORTHAMPTON, MA
$16.50 ADV. GENERAL ADMISSION
Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited at U. Mass. For The Record in Amherst, B-Side Records in Northampton, and all Strawberries Record Stores. To charge by phone call Pro Tix 413-732-0202

PLANNING TO OBSERVE ROSH HASHANAH AND YOM KIPPUR?
Students planning to be absent from class due to religious observance must notify their instructors at least one week in advance. In the event of a dispute between a student and a faculty member, either party should contact the Department Head or the Ombuds Office at 545-0867.*
Taken from the Major Days of Religious Observance 1996/97 Calender

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog – (413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1582

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Surendra Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliot News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Notes from the Campus Center basement

Evan Young

Back again for another year, huh? Welcome to UMass, freshmen. Some tips, suggestions and observations: the sooner you discover the brain-cleansing effects of alcohol– and-other-drug abuse, the better. There's a pretty hip movie rental place down Route 9 before the bridge you should check out. The DC food sucks, the bathrooms in the dorms don't get cleaned on the weekends, library elevators make you dizzy and when credit card people give out free candy and other dumb stuff at the Campus Center, always give them the name and address of someone you don't like.

Although your classes may seem hard now and you think that your professors are giving you too much work, don't get bent out of shape; it doesn't get any easier. Freshman intro classes are a joke. The sooner you learn which homework to skim vs. which homework to skip, the better off you'll be. The only good thing about Sports Illustrated Campus Challenges are the free KitKats.

***

Well, as strange as it may sound, I lived on my own, in the real world, for an entire summer without once thinking about issues of social diversity, racism or political correctness. Is it possible, you ask? But how can anyone survive in our world without being socially aware?

I've been here all of four or five days and I've already been bombarded with mounds of PC rhetoric other related B.S. I wonder how I ever got by this summer without being made to feel guilty because of my socio-economic status.

***

With all the bazillions of dollars that get pumped into this school, wouldn't it be safe to assume that our University would have the money to lay down just a LITTLE BIT of EXTRA PARKING?!? How expensive is asphalt, white paint and a few big lights? Don't the people who fix the prices for parking stickers have consciences? What is the upkeep cost for pavement? Is it so high that they have to charge us every year for a new sticker? How is it possible that nothing but E-lot stickers are available? Have they ever tried walking through a sub-zero blizzard, uphill, for about a mile to get to class?

Parking on this campus, in a word, sucks.

***

So, according to some survey, about 60 percent of the students here at UMass cheat in one way or another on tests. Isn't it great to know that out of the 17,000 or so undergraduate students here, the study that arrived at that percentage consisted of not even 1 percent of the total student body? It's good that the views of so many students were used to make such a broad generalization about the poor moral quality of academia here at our school.

***

Go. Go U. Go UMass. Go UMass.

So, are they going to give the fans a little bit extra this basketball season? Isn't the "sixth man" entitled to a few perks too? Maybe a free diamond necklace here, a Mercedes or so there, a few multimillion dollar contracts...

Yunno, just to keep us cheering loud...

***

As an English major, I've ended up taking a lot of comparative literature classes here, as the two are somewhat related fields of study. You know, I have yet to come across a comlit professor or T.A. who seems to have all their marbles in one bag. Has anyone else noticed this rather strange phenomenon?

I don't mean this as a knock, though. I've had both good and bad comlit classes, just as I've had good and bad English classes. It's just that the comlit professors I've had have all been a little bit strange.

***

Speaking of phenomena, thank God I didn't waste my money on that movie this summer. John Travolta must have been acting in the truest sense of the word when he had to play the part of a super-genius.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

On a lost plane

Nicole Cournoyer

One by one, my senses woke and made me aware that I was "me."

I felt the pressure of the seat against me and the weight of the atmosphere on me. I smelled the musty scent of not– quite-fresh air in my nostrils and tasted the sweetness of saliva and acridness of bile in my mouth. I heard the humming of engines, the muffled blowing of a strong wind, and, when I opened my eyes, saw that I was strapped into the cockpit of an airplane, high above the ground, flying steadily toward I knew not where.

I was 8–years–old.

With no idea how I got there, I suddenly realized that I had to pilot this craft myself and had no clue how to do so. Buttons and levers everywhere. Lights blinking, confusing me. Something that looks vaguely like a steering wheel. I grabbed it and the plane shuddered violently. Oops. I probably should have left that alone. Well, it was too late now; I had disengaged the autopilot and was in full control.

I was about 13, I guess.

"Turbulent" could not describe the flight I found myself on. The plane shook and tossed me around its tiny cockpit, bruising me badly. Through it all, I clung desperately to the "wheel," trying to keep it steady. Just when I thought I was succeeding, gaining control, the plane would suddenly jump forward and dive so I'd have to use all my strength to pull back on the column in front of me.

I fought constantly with this one lever for years before I stabilized the plane enough to look around the cockpit for other controls. Searching frantically for an altitude meter, I needed to know how high I was, if I was dangerously close to the ground or a mountain. The windows did me no good. I was surrounded by an almost impenetrable fog most of the time and caught only quick, feeble glimpses of what I hoped might be clear skies. I had no idea where I was. I had no idea what kind of dangers lay ahead. I had no idea what to do.

15...16...17...

Just when I thought I was losing my mind, when the cockpit seemed to close in around me, it was all I could do to resist the temptation to thrust all of my weight forward onto the lever and nosedive into the ground or ocean, because at least then I'd be certain of something. The fog or clouds or whatever had cloaked the plane thinned just a bit. I still couldn't see very well, but a new hope, born out of pure desperation, emerged in my heart.

I slowly let the air flow out of my lungs, unsure of how long I'd been holding my breath.

So what if I don't know where I am? Wherever it is, it is better than smashing into the side of a mountain like a bug onto a windshield.

I looked around the cockpit again, more closely this time. Some buttons and switches and levers were labelled — I knew which ones were safe to touch and which ones were not. Others were labelled, but the labels meant nothing to me. Most of the gadgets around me were mysteries, and I was afraid to touch them.

Slowly, systematically, I started trying things out. First, I stuck to the controls I was sure were safe, and gradually I started taking risks. Some risks resulted in little mistakes (I put the landing gear down once), and some resulted in near disaster (I shut down my left engine accidently and had to fly for quite a while with only one until I figured out how to get it going again). But a few of the controls I took a chance on helped my situation immensely.

I was beginning to get acquainted with my airplane, familiarize myself with the cockpit, and the more I did so, the more in control I felt. Control is a wonderful thing for sanity.

I'm still flying my little airplane. No, I don't know why I'm here or how I got here or exactly where I am, but I'm learning to deal with those uncertainties — and I'm learning to fly. Someday, I may even get to where I'm going.

One thing I know for sure: I'm not the only one out here.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e– mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545–1491, and ask to speak to Mark McGrath.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Point made

Christopher Hasset

Imagine this — you are the leader of the most powerful nation on the planet. An enemy from your past rears his head once again with militarily aggressive acts. Now more then ever, you need the approval of your people. What do you do?

This is not the plot of the latest Piers Anthony novel. Bill Clinton had some tough decisions to make as Saddam Hussein violated post-Gulf War restrictions and launched the largest military action since. His decisions and actions have garnered overwhelming criticism and little praise.

What were the thought processes behind his decisions? He could not allow the military restrictions to be ignored because that would allow further aggression. However, because of the timing of his re-election campaign, his critics claim his military response is a display of strength to impress voters. I wonder what his critics would have said had he done nothing.

Some of the most vehement criticism I have seen has come from writers claiming Kurdish origins. Such criticism has accused Clinton of being a murderous, apathetic and cowardly imperialist who kills civilians to further his own aims in the Middle East. I find this ironic coming from the defender of a people whose political organizations turned on each other like a pack of jackals after the Gulf War ended.

Quite frankly, the greatest enemy of the Kurdish people are their own political leaders. The Kurdish people are indeed cursed with such men as Barzani and Talabani. Perhaps the lack of unity in the Kurdish political movement could use a little criticism.

So why did Clinton throw a bunch of missiles at Iraq? The answer is quite simple. Hussein's actions demanded some kind of response, something more than a nasty note from United States Embassy.

It is true, these events occurred close to his re–election. It is true, civilians died. However, Bill Clinton is not the one who amassed troops in violation of post–Gulf–War restrictions. And civilian casualties are aimed at being kept to a minimum. I doubt Hussein has similar policies.

So cheers to Bill Clinton. A response was required and he gave one. Once the response was heard, he stopped shouting. And despite accusations to the contrary, the White House is not taking sides in Kurdish civil disputes. His most recent actions in Iraq, like his actions during the past four years, serve to underscore exactly the kind of policies and actions you will be endorsing when you give him your vote this fall. Go Bill!

Christopher Hassett is a Collegian staff member.

A vote of no confidence

Daniel Bodah

This year, I've decided I'm going to throw my vote away. That's right, I'm just going to waste my one little ticket to speak in the monolithic circus that divides up all our political power—usually known as "democracy." But let me tell you, this is no rash decision. Oh no, I've got it all planned out. I just need a little help from you, loyal Collegian ed–op page readers.

Every four years it seems all my friends and I start wondering what to do, now that we're all full–grown, responsible adults, when the election comes up. One of the major problems always seems to be that none of us really thinks that the candidates are anything other than power– hungry liars. It's hard to feel good about voting for someone you know is going to spend four years in office embarrassing, annoying and angering you. But what can you do, right? I mean, democracy does depend on all of us joining together and speaking out for the government we want (even if the least of two evils), doesn't it?

I'll admit it — in 1992, I suppressed my mild case of nausea about the whole stinking deal and went down to a polling booth. I had decided that even some slimy, womanizing rich boy from Arkansas was better than Ol' "Oil–money" Bush. Frankly, the whole "New World Order" business was really creeping me out. And what hell, Clinton was telling me that he'd try to get us all free health care. I mean, if we have to have a government, they might as well take care of us instead of spending billions of dollars to bomb Arabs halfway across the globe.

One of the things that surprised me when I got to the polling booth was the huge number of options. I'd only really heard of the two major parties, the so–called Independent H. Ross Perot, and some vague rumors about Libertarians (not that I could have told you much about their ideas).

So here I was, all of a sudden in a little panic, looking at a bunch of parties I'd never expected to have the option of voting for. And somehow, I have the vague memory that there were a lot more things to vote for than just "President." In confusion I just pulled all the "Democrat" levers and left, wondering vaguely if this fulfilled my duty as a responsible member of a democracy.

Since then I've thought a lot about what happened. And I've decided that this time, I'm going to know what's going on when I'm in that booth. And if all of you out there care to, you can find out by reading this column in the period leading up to the election. I'll be doing a little investigating, and every time this column appears I'll tell you a little more about what's going to be in the booth and who the parties are and what they stand for. So you can see what you options are — and not just vote for one of the two main flavors.

However, I'm pretty sure no one I would want to vote for could actually win the election. It's my firm belief that control of this country is in the hands of the corporate powerhouses and they wouldn't let anyone who didn't have their best interests at heart win.

Although this might change in the course of my research, I'm planning to write in the one vote I can truly say I stand behind: No Confidence. No confidence in the political process as it stands in this country. No confidence that my vote has the ability to actually matter. No confidence in the so–called "democracy" I'm told we are part of. If that's how you feel as well, I suggest we unite. If enough people write in a vote of no confidence, we can hopefully get a discussion going on how to change things so that instead of voting for someone we don't hate, we can actually have a government that truly represents us.

Daniel Bodah is a UMass student.

Welcome to the rest of your life

Amy Lounsbury

The Real World. No, I'm not talking about seven strangers ... picked to live in a house... and have their lives taped... I'm talking about that big world outside of UMass. Over the past couple of years, I have noticed an increase in the number of "welcome to the real world" comments thrown my way. While I understand where these comments are coming from, they rest uneasily with me.

It is not fair to tell anyone that because he or she doesn't live out on their own, doesn't pay his or her own bills, that he or she is not living in the real world. Every moment of our lives is very real to each and every one of us. True, children are protected and supported by their parents for years. Most of us here still rely heavily on the security of Mom and Dad. But this is how our society works. This is real.

Imagine this scenario. Jane is a 40–year–old woman, happily married with three children. Both parents are still alive and she has a successful career and busy social life. Jane cannot recall a traumatic event in her life.

Then there is Michael. Michael is 10–years–old. He lost his father when he was only seven and his stepfather has abused him for the last two years. Michael has a hard time relating to peers and cannot remember a truly happy time in his life.

There is no question that Jane is living in the real world. There should be no question about Michael. No, Michael is not out working, not putting meals on the table. But his life cannot be discredited as anything but real. Unfortunately, this child has experienced far too many of the horrors of the world for such a young age. To tell this boy that he hasn't even reached the real world yet is to tell him that all the pain he has suffered is meaningless.

While I know that no one means any harm by saying "welcome to the real world," it's frustrating nonetheless. I live, and have always lived, in the real world. The real world of a child, the real world of a teenager and now the real world of the starving college student.

As I near graduation, I look forward to reaching the next stage of life, but don't expect to one day wake up and have everything turn into reality. I would not dismiss my childhood as pretend. It was the time in my life where my personality began to develop and I became who I am today. There is nothing more real to every individual than their own life experiences.

So next year when I must find a job, pay off student loans and pay rent, feel free to chuckle knowingly under your breath as you tell me, "welcome to the rest of your life!"

Amy Lounsbury is a UMass student

Arts & Living

Johnson swings to Noho Sunday

COURTESY THE JAZZ TIRE

J.J. Johnson brings his legendary trombone to the Iron Horse for two shows on Sunday night.

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

"I knew the trombone could be played in a different way [than in swing jazz], that someone would manage it one of these days — you're going to be the one," Dizzy Gillespie told a young J.J. Johnson in the 1940s.

The great trumpeter's prophecy was right on the mark. Johnson, who is playing a benefit sponsored by WFCR this Sunday night at the Iron Horse, single–handedly changed people's view of the trombone. Before Johnson, the instrument was just stuck in the middle row of a big band, with no room for personal exploration or improvisation. That all changed.

Charlie "Bird" Parker hit the scene in the 1940s and jazz musicians all over the United States adopted Bird's theories of improvisation and reduction in size of bands, allowing more space for individual expression in jazz. Johnson, as one of Parker's sidemen, inducted long, smoothly played fast lines into jazz — a concept even ska trombonists attempt to imitate.

Besides his fast playing, Johnson initiated a slow, pensive and mellow tone — a large change from the car–horn tone used by many trombone lineups in pre–1940s swing bands.

Johnson became one of the major names during the great era of modern jazz (1940s–1960s) teaming up with other demigods such as Miles Davis, Bud Powell, Sonny Rollins and Charlie Mingus... the list goes on and on.

Working with fellow trombonist Kai Winding together in 1954, Johnson honed his writing skills with classic compositions like "Enigma," "Kelo" and "Lament."

When jazz musicians were losing live work with the advent of rock–and–roll in the 1960s, Johnson decided to try his hand at composing for film and television. He became very successful in this field, with score credits for "The Mod Squad," Shaft and "The Six–Million Dollar Man" in addition to obscure films like Cleopatra Jones and Across 110th Street.

This Sunday, Johnson will bring his fabled history, his innovative ideas and surely many of his compositions to the locals and students of the Pioneer Valley in a rare show at the Iron Horse Music Hall.

J.J. Johnson performs at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton Sunday, Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. The show is a benefit for WFCR. Call the club at 584–0610 for more information.

New guitarist to hit Valley scene

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

With one of the best R&B albums of the year, Peace Beyond Passion, and a huge hit with John Mellencamp with the cover of Van Morrison's "Wild Night" a few years back, Me'Shell Ndegéocello has firmly planted her feet in the music world and it looks like she's here to stay. She's also here to play, with a show at Pearl Street tomorrow night.

Ndegéocello's (for the record, pronounced ne–day–gay–o– chello) voice is bold, and her bass–playing is fluid, rolling and downright funky. Her presence is looming enough that established rock acts like The Who invited her to be their opening act for recent stateside live performances of the album Quadrophenia. Guitarist and songwriter Pete Townshend personally congratulated her on her new album during those nights, calling Peace Beyond Passion, "flawless," which is a sentiment also shared by this writer. She also performed on the H.O.R.D.E. tour this past August.

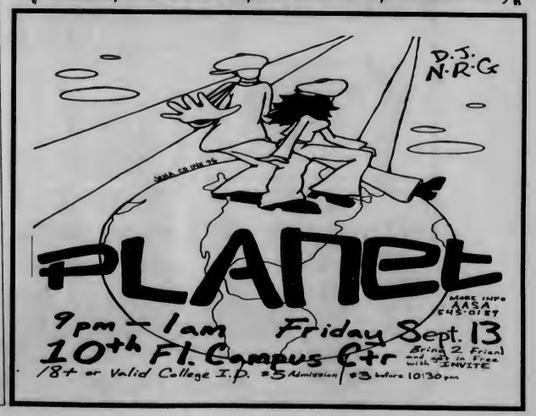
This breakthrough artist's voice combines hip–hop sensibilities as well as hints of 1970's Motown voice fluctuations. The lyrics are both sexually and socially conscious while remaining self–engrossed and searching — questioning existence and imminent death. The music swings many ways, but always grounds in raunchy funk, as well as soft and sensual live rhythm and blues.

Following her debut album, 1993's Plantation Lullabies, Ndegéocello told Vibe magazine, "[That album] was the view of a black woman. In Peace Beyond Passion, I'm trying to see myself as a person... I was angry. With this new one, I'm searching. I've obtained freedom. I realized it was mine to grab."

Her music echoes this sense of freedom with its various tones and sounds. The audience will get a chance to share that sense of freedom and see if any of the smooth, live R&B of her album will funnel into the show.

Me'Shell Ndegéocello performs at Pearl Street Saturday Sept. 14 at 7 p.m. The show is 18+. Tickets are $13.50 in advance and $15 at the door. Call the club at 584–7771 for more information.

COURTESY CRAMERCY PICTURES



A grade z sc–fi classic

The Pleasant Street Theater Video will present a special screening of Mystery Science Theater 3000 tonight and Saturday night at the Pleasant Street Theater at 11 p.m. Free popcorn will be available.

Seven O's
EVERY THURSDAY DJ
THE NEW YORK CENTERFOLDS All Male Review
EVERY FRIDAY & SATURDAY LIVE MUSIC
Wednesday, September 18th, 1996
8:00 pm
$10.00 or $8.00 w/ Student ID
EVERY SUNDAY OPEN MIC
SEVEN O'S
ROUTE 116 IN SUNDERLAND
5 Miles N. of UMASS exit
665-8788

PIKE
DO YOU MISS HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS?
DO YOU MISS REAL PARTIES?
ARE YOU TIRED OF BEING JUST ANOTHER NUMBER ON CAMPUS?
ARE YOU TIRED OF DOING THE SAME THING EVERY WEEKEND?
DO YOU MISS EATING GOOD FOOD?
JUST DO IT.
Open Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 to 9:00 P.M.
PLEASE CONTACT ERIC MICH 549-0676
ΠΚΑ
THE DECISION IS YOURS

EL ACUÑA
Bar & Grill
Now Open SIX Nights a Week
'Till 1 AM!
$3.75 Mega Margaritas
$2.00 16oz Drafts
Full Menu until 11 pm,
Appetizers until we close
Come check out the fiesta that's right down your alley!
Saddle seats
Behind Antonio's
41 Boltwood Walk / Amherst (Behind Antonios)
413-253-4040
Tues. – Sun. 11:30 a.m. – 1 a.m.

COURTESY FRANK OCKENFELS

Family fun for all

Jane Siberry will co-headline the Pioneer Valley Folk & Crafts Music Festival with the Nields this Saturday, Sept. 14 at 6:30 p.m. at the Pines Theater at Look Park, Northampton.

Top fashion designer quits ready–to–wear shows

By Suzy Patterson
Associated Press

PARIS — Increasingly fed up with the runway rat race, Yves Saint Laurent — the perennial king of Paris fashion — will abandon the big crunch of next month's spring ready-to-wear shows.

"Instead, we will show the Rive Gauche collection for about 10 journalists at our main headquarters on Avenue Marceau," St. Laurent Co. President Pierre Berge said in a telephone interview.

The presentation, during the runway shows that begin Oct. 7, 1996 will be an intimate moment for serious fashion-watchers, showing about 25 designs on a few top models, he said. There will be no music — thus completing the departure from the usual prét-a-porter production.

"Yves Saint Laurent will keep on with haute couture shows. They are attended by fewer people and are more manageable," Berge said.

But the decision to quit ready-to-wear shows is a somewhat avant-garde reaction to what's become in recent years an unruly circus, where showbiz reigns more than clothes. It harkens back to the early days of intimate shows where guests could nearly touch the clothes.

Saint-Laurent, 60, will attend the small showing to speak with the audience, in contrast to the silent appearance designers usually make.

Berge says he and Saint-Laurent are fed up with today's hysteria and hype.

"Don't forget, we started the whole luxury ready-to-wear movement exactly 30 years ago," said Berge, pointing out that in 1966, when the first Rive Gauche shop opened on the Rue de Tournon, most top couturiers did not yet deign to design and promote luxury ready-to-wear.

"Then I realized that there were other new, younger designers doing good ready-to-wear, and in 1973 we grouped them together in a Chambre Syndicale de Prét-a-Porter," he said.

President of this fashion governing body until 1993, Berge believes things have gone to pot in Paris's ready-to-wear format. As dozens of foreign designers have invaded the scene, the schedules are murderous. There are 10 or more shows a day, the timetables take observers way into the night and many designers cannot get their acts together on time. (Saint Laurent has not been among the tardy.)

The result is chaos, according to Berge.

"I don't mind having non-French people show in Paris, that's fine as long as they are talented, but many are not. There should be more selectivity," he said.

Yves Saint Laurent is not the first house to abandon the big runway shows attended nowadays by about 2,000 journalists, buyers and fashion groupies.

Pierre Cardin has not given a big show — haute couture or ready-to-wear — for years.

Karl Lagerfeld at Chanel has opted for intimate shows at the Ritz Hotel to display the haute couture collection.

Since the Louvre's Carrousel space — specifically created for fashion shows — opened three years ago, designers have been drifting away from the antiseptic but practical area in search of originality.

The house of Guy Laroche still is known for less expensive prét-a-porter, but they have not done shows for several years now.

Hanae Mori, the only Japanese designer to be admitted to the inner sanctum of Paris haute couture by its Chambre Syndicale, gave up ready-to-wear shows but continues to parade the haute couture.

Meanwhile, information from YSL and other designers will be available on the Internet and several television networks, ever more keen to photograph spectacles, if not clothes.

Two–CD set highlights unknown works of Britten's career

By Scott Bernard
Collegian Correspondent

SIMON RATTLE & CITY OF BIRMINGHAM SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Rattle Conducts Britten
EMI Classical

Benjamin Britten, one of the great composers of this century, was known mainly for his operas. Many of his great operas, among them Peter Grimes and Billy Budd, fall within a 21–year span between 1945 and 1966, which is generally considered the most fruitful time in his life. However, instead of taking the representative works of this period in Britten's life, Simon Rattle has chosen instead to cull together pieces both ambitious and novel from early and late in the composer's life.

What results is an abundant two-CD set which presents a lucid insight and background for the main works of Britten's musical career, as well as fitting epilogue. While none of these works is representative of Britten the composer, they provide proof that he did not appear out of nowhere; he had reached his musical maturity long before the debut of the opera, Peter Grimes.

There are several highlights in the set. There is a very Copeland–esque piece, "An American Overture" from 1942, written during the early years of World War II when Britten exiled himself to the United States because of his pacifistic views. Then there is "Ballad of Heroes, Op.14" from 1938, written for the British International Brigade fighting in the Spanish Civil War. Despite its overly political content, it bears a striking resemblance to 1962's "War Requiem, Op. 66" in its emotional intensity.

Also of note is the playful, "Diversions for Left Hand, Op. 21" (1940), and the late "Building of the House, Op.70" (1967), a very sophisticated work which occasionally slips into atonality, but still does not veer from Britten–esque style.

However the truly epochal work on these disks is the emotionally wrenching "Sinfonia da Requiem, Op. 20," written in 1940 and dedicated to Britten's deceased parents. The work, in its liturgical framework, represents both the inner turmoil that Britten felt over losing his parents and towards a world slowly slipping into war all about him. This is a turmoil which the devoutly pacifist Britten would not entirely resolve creatively until the "War Requiem" and perhaps he never resolved it personally.

Simon Rattle and the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra perform these works with intensity and grand gusto. Each — with the exception of "Sinfonia" — of these relatively unknown works has a distinct stamp for those listeners who do know Britten. It is not recommended as a starting place, but more of a reference for interested fans.

Men's tennis starts year with solid recruiting class

By Stephen Reich
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis program kicks off its season today at 3 p.m. at Upper Boyden Courts against Wesleyan.

UMass coach Judy Dixon is excited about this year's team, which features the best recruiting class in UMass history. Highly touted Bo Navarro of San Diego has already made his presence felt by establishing himself as the No. 1 singles player.

Sophomores Todd Chaney and Jason Blind will play second and third singles, followed by the team's captain, junior Alex Aler, who hails from Peru. Freshmen Mark Huckins and Rob Manchester, both from Massachusetts, round out the singles lineup.

With three of the top six players being freshmen, and two of the top six only sophomores, the tennis team is one of the youngest teams in the nation.

"We've added strength and depth to an already solid team which took second in the New Englands last year," Dixon said.

Navarro and Chaney will also play first doubles with Manchester and Blind filling in the second doubles slot.

The Minutemen have the strongest schedule they've ever had and will play the top quality programs of Army, Cornell, West Virginia and St. John's.

"This year is the year to take the next step, to jump into the upper echelon of the Atlantic 10," Dixon commented.

Dixon has high expectations for this year's squad.

"I expect the team to play very well, but there is still a question of how were going to perform under crunch time," Dixon said.

The Minutemen have a lot of talent, but the season will depend on how they react during crunch time. With matches from September until late April, Dixon hopes for the Minutemen to get out to a quick start. Dixon said that early season wins are essential for boosting the team's confidence.

After today's match, the men's team will have almost a full week to prepare for its next match, which is scheduled for next Wednesday.

■ volleyball

continued from page 10

"The chemistry of this year's team is great. Their work ethic is second to none," Kenny said.

Returning players include the experienced core of Nolan, Nash, Paciorek, sophomore Katie Pearce, and senior Susan Mago. The freshman additions of Amanda Flemming, Kari Hogancamp, Jill Meyers and Sarah Watters have nicely filled in holes left by a relatively low turnover rate between the 1995 and 1996 seasons.

In addition to All–Tournament, Paciorek was named Atlantic 10 Athlete of the Week and UMass Co–Athlete of the Week along with soccer player Rebecca Myers. Paciorek's near–flawless performance is of particular interest to Massachusetts fans, being the only local entry on a predominantly West Coast–recruited team. She hails from Sunderland, MA and attended Frontier Regional High School.

■ soccer

continued from page 10

year's team so far. We have dominated all three of our games, but we have not finished enough to be comfortable."

For California native and senior midfielder, Amy Powell, it is simple: payback time has come for that 1–0 loss.

"They beat us on their home field last time and now we would like to do it," Powell said.

Santa Barbara is going into its second season under head coach John Cossaboon, who Rudy has high regards for on both a professional and personal basis. They are friends, and used to be affiliated with each other on the regional staff of the United States Soccer Federation. Rudy does not underestimate his compatriot–at–arms and knows that his team will be prepared, in one way or another.

"He will come up with a scheme, but California players are unusual," Rudy said. "From game to game, or within a half, they can be totally on, then go totally off."

But in reference to his own California players (junior defender Erica Iverson and Powell), he said, "They are always on, and in fact, here the surf is always up."

Minutewoman Note: Along with Michelle Paciorek of the women's volleyball team, senior tri–captain Rebecca Myers was named WHMP UMass Co–Athlete of the Week. Myers scored both of the game winning goals in last weekend's wins over Georgia and SMU in the UMass/Reebok Classic.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

line."

"Then there are two freshmen, Eric Rabinowitz, and Jimmy Redmon who will play some more further down the line," Koch added.

One factor that has played an important role in the team's early season successes has been the overall conditioning of the players.

"I have been very pleased with the physical condition that the players reported in, it has been by far the best that I have seen," Koch said. "I think that everyone is on a mission as far as what we want to accomplish this season and I am certainly pleased about that," Koch said.

XC heads to Boston for opener

By Chris Krein
Collegian Correspondent

The 1996 Massachusetts men's cross country season will officially get underway tomorrow in Boston at Franklin Park at 10 a.m.

The team will face stiff competition from Northeastern and Iona, teams the Minutemen are very familiar with. The teams squared off in a nine team invitational last year and the Minutemen finished a respectable fifth.

Coach Ken O'Brien admits that Iona is definitely the team to beat this year.

"Iona should be cast as the favorite," O'Brien said. "Realistically, it will be a battle for second place."

Iona is returning its top five runners from last year, a season that ranked it in the top 20 in the nation. Northeastern is in the opposite situation as graduation exacted a heavy toll on their team.

Even though Iona presents a challenge, O'Brien remains confident and optimistic. The Minutemen return a solid, veteran group of runners, having lost only one top five runner to graduation. O'Brien will be relying heavily on Mike Maceiko, Ryan Carnara, Paul Blodorn and Walter Stock.

There is also a group behind them that O'Brien hopes may be the catalyst to a successful season.

"There is a group of runners behind the veterans that will hopefully break out of the supporting cast to pressure the front running group," he said. "Any time you put the heat on the top, it will make the team better as a whole."

Some of these newcomers are Brian Chabot, Ryan Fortune, freshman Sean Murphy and sophomore transfer Peter Gleason.

UMass is hoping to build on the successes of the 1995 campaign. After compiling a record of 6–4, the Minutemen went on to the first Atlantic 10 Championship in school history. They followed up by running to a solid fourth place finish at the New England Championships.

"Although we have been perennially a top team, it was the zenith of our season," O'Brien said of the two meets. He then went on to admit that the low point followed at the IC4A Championships, when the team finished a disappointing 23rd out of 68.

The emotional drain of pursuing and capturing the A–10 title, as well as the grind of a long season, did take it's toll.

"We did not hold together as well as I would have liked," O'Brien said. "We ran out of gas, which was more mental than anything else. I really believed that we should have had a top ten finish there."

However, O'Brien senses that this year the veteran runners will bring a mental toughness that was acquired with last year's experience and be able to impart this wisdom to the younger runners.

The meet will take place at Franklin Park in Boston, an internationally famous cross country course and one that the coach admits "may be one of the top five in the world." It was the site of the 1995 United States National Cross Country Championships in which some of the best runners in the world participated. It was also a previous site for the World Cross Country Championships.

"We are fortunate to live in New England and have the opportunity to run on this course three to four times in a season," O'Brien imparts with reverence.

"Cross country is an objective sport in the way you can compare your performance with the times of the best runners in the world. There are some kids on our team who are familiar with this course because they ran it in high school. For those running it the first time though, there will be some awe and mixed emotions."

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

goals and an assist, while freshman Sara Perilla has also netted two goals.

"They are a young team and they have a very fiery, feisty coach who is very attack–oriented, so I am anticipating a real high–energy, high–tempo competition," Hixon said.

"[Morgan]'s an excellent coach, she's tactically really good, she understands the game, and she herself is a real tough competitor. Teams kind of emulate their coaches and they definitely emulate her as being real aggressive. They go for every ball and don't hold anything back," she said.

Hixon said that she doesn't want her team to let thoughts of playing the other two schools interfere with Saturday's game.

"Our main goal is to play well in our first game, and then whoever we play next, so be it."

■ women's tennis

continued from page 10

do in the first match. I didn't expect quite such a strong start," UMass coach Judy Dixon said.

Dixon was wary about the team's success due to the loss of No. 1 singles player Ola Gerasimova because of NCAA clearinghouse issues.

"If I can add her back to the team, it'll be like placing the cherry on top of the ice cream," Dixon said of her missing player. "We're hoping to have her back by the Eastern Invitational at Princeton."

Even without Gerasimova, Dixon was happy with her team's effort.

"I'm pleased, not only with the results, but with how we played," Dixon said, re–emphasizing the strengths of the team, which brought about its success. "I asked them to control the ball and control the patterns on the court."

The team now consists mostly of juniors who have grown under Dixon's revival of a formerly defunct program. The level of control and maturity on the team allowed the Minutewomen to dictate the tempo in defeating Hartford.

"We came out really focused today. Everyone played hard, and worked the patterns," junior Caroline Steele said. Steele and her No.1 doubles partner, Marie–Christine Caron, displayed poise when they eradicated a 5–1 doubles deficit to come back and win 9–7.

Steele was excited with the prospects of the team.

"We're really close to each other and it makes it easier to win for each other. It's going to be a great season," Steele said.

Even though the season is new, the win is still a significant one for a program that is relatively young. Dixon's revival has the women's and men's program playing to a winning tune after only four years of existence.

Next week the Minutewomen will compete for the first time in the Eastern Intercollegiate Invitational at Princeton University in N.J.

"This is an important event for this program, with teams like Princeton participating against us in the tournament," Dixon said.

COMPUTER FAIR MULLINS CENTER SEPT 14 10AM-3:30PM
Tri-State Fairs: Original Area Shows since 1987
Buy at wholesale prices directly at the show from nearly 50 independent competing companies under one roof. From full systems to shareware, it's all here
Located on the campus of UMass. Rte 9 onto Rte 116N at Staples taking first exit, turn right
This is a discount ticket. General admission is $7.00 each. Clip or photocopy this ad and save $2.00 ea
Our dealers feature the IBM/PC marketplace. Join us four times a year. Kids under 10 free with parent
Don't over sleep, one day show only!
ONE MONTH FREE INTERNET AT THIS SHOW FROM TIAC

We Deliver! Kai Chi Chinese - American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
MT. FARMS MALL ROUTE 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Delivery: Sun.-Thurs. Noon-2 a.m. Fri. & Sat. noon-3 a.m.
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS 9 PM-Close • 7 Days a Week 31 SELECTIONS!
Ex: Pu Pu (for two) reg. 11.99 Now 5.99
No other promos apply EAT IN ONLY

classé café
We're not just for Breakfast anymore
BEER & BURGERS 'TILL 9 P.M.
Sunday Brunch 7-3
Mon-Sat 7-9 pm
READY IN MINUTES —AND SO THRIFTY
168 Pleasant Street Amherst - 253-2291

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

Over 30 Microbrews
Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

Microbrews
Harpoon IPA 12 Pack Bottles $4.99/six ale, I.P.A., Pilsner, Alt
New Amsterdam $4.99/six
Amber, Black & Tan, Ale, Blonde, IPA
Longshot $4.99/six
Pale Ale, Black Lager, Hazelnut Brown
Oregon Summer Gold $4.99/six
1/2 Keg Sam Adams Cherry Wheat $85.00

Beer Specials
Red Dog & Icehouse $8.99
18-Pack Cans
Coors extra gold $6.99
15-Pack Cans
Molson Golden $7.99
12-Pack bottles
Bud Dry $9.99
case bottles

Liquor Specials
Southern Comfort 750 ml $7.99
Kahlua 750 ml $12.99
Bacardi Limon 750 ml $8.99
Jack Daniels 750 ml $12.99
Jack Daniels Country Cocktails $3.99/4-pack

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers
Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

Muslim Students' Association
WELCOME RECEPTION
Room 101 Campus Center
Friday, September 13th
4:30pm, Refreshments Served
Jumaah Prayers
Every Friday, 1:00pm
Campus Center
msa
FOR FURTHER INFO, CONTACT
AMIN PLAISTED 253-3694
UTAMA ABDULWAHID 256-8482
msa

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Performing Arts Division offers Group and Private instruction in music, theater and dance. Registration for Group Instruction runs Sept. 3-15, 1996. Private Instruction is on-going. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall. UMASS, 413-545-0518, for info.

UMASS Women's Ice Hockey team is looking for new recruits. Come to opening meeting Sept. 12 at 6 p.m. outside the Blue Wall. All levels welcome. For more info call Kara- 548-9171.

All University women invited to attend Sigma Kappa Open Rush. Thurs. 9/5, 5-7 pm. Sun. 9/8 6-8 pm. Tues. 9/10 5-7 pm. Thurs. 9/12 6-8 pm. Please call Beth for more info. 256-6887. Located 19 Allen St. (Behind Hillel)

CHINESE FOOD Kai Chi delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2am, Friday and Saturday to 3am

AUTO FOR SALE

MAZDA '91 323 HATCHBACK. 78,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done, $2900 OBO. Call 549-7286

1978 FORD LTD $250 00 247-9456

1983 Olds, Delta 83 for sale. New tires, motors, wheels. Panasonic Stereo System, $750 Call 253-7258

VW Golf '88 Good condition 82,000 mi. $3200 Call Christa Mon -Fri. 8-4 545-5382

EMPLOYMENT

New Hiring part-time salemarketers. Morning, afternoon and evening hours available. Earn $6-$7 per hour plus bonuses. No sales. Will train. Contact Ms. Miranda 1-800-829-4777

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring: Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info. call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring: Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring: Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector. Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Drivers Wanted For The Optimist. One day a week, good pay! Call 586-7070 Ext. 23

Cider Jack needs friendly outgoing people for promotions at local resteraunts. Flexible hours. Please call Lara Minasco to set up an interview 617-926-0048 Ext. 107

Attention Skiers and Boarders. Entry level positions into the ski industry with skiing benefits. Make up to $1000/month. Part-time enthusiastic individuals please call Ski Card International 1-800-333-2581

CRIMINAL JUSTICE MAJORS Security officers needed for Springfield Applicants must have a clean police record, and pass drug screening. Interested applicants call (800)560-7777.

Need Some Extra Cash, but don't have time for a steady job? Sign up to work Family Day, Saturday, September 28. Applications can be picked up at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall. For more info contact Jenn Bennett at 545-2317

Free T-shirt + $1,000. Credit card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities and groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1,000 by earning a whopping $5.00/Visa application. Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65 Qualified callers receive free T-shirt

Wanted Skiers and Snowboarders Want to ski or snowboard for free and gain sales exp? Write and tell me why. Send letter and resume to Kevin Moran Stratton Mt. RR1 Box 145 Stratton Mt. VT 05155

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

PINBALL MACHINE Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover. $200.00 080 548-9728

LAPTOP COMPUTER IBM 701CS/486-75/8 RAM 540 MEG HD/ with case and extras/ $1100/OBO Please contact Josh at 256-8969.

BOOKCASES Unfinished pine- 24"-36" x9" - 3 shelves $48.00 + tax 536-1944

Sega Saturn w/ 2 controllers and Ultimate Mortal Kombat 3. $180.00 Call 546-3727

Stereo Systems and components, used/reconditioned. Large selection, honest advice, warranty, great prices. We buy audio, video, DJ, musical equipment. Stereo and Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call Amherst, 256-0941

Bureaus!!! All colors, mini logs 367-0105

Futon, double, with frame and cover $150 b.o. Waterbed, queen, semi-wave less with headboard $150 b.o. 253-5350

Rossignol Skiboots Mens size 12 (29.5) new. B.O. Call (413)637-2282

SALE Dorm Fridge $125, Word Processor $100. Call 546-1578.

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Good running condition. Best offer. Call 545-3007 or 634-5752

INSTRUCTION

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from Americas Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

LOST

Sunglasses: Prescription, Oakley w/ case. Call 549-3950

MUSICIANS

Female singer to join/start Folk/Funk alternative band. Interested call 549-4723

Drummer Needed for dark pop/rock band. Call Phil 549-5838

MISCELLANEOUS

Let your voice be heard! WMUA news is looking for anchors, reporters, producers and more for daily newscasts. No experience is needed. All majors welcome. Stop by our offices at 105 Campus Center or call 545-2876 and ask for Alexandra.

VISA/MASTERCARD GUARANTEED Bad credit. No credit. No problem. Call 1-800-356-1980 (24 hours)

ROOM FOR RENT

In Large House minutes to campus. Space enough for two. Call Kevin 549-0867

Northampton- Roommate needed in great downtown two bedroom apt. Own bedroom/bathroom, shared living room and kitchen. Seeking responsible male or female. Call 586-9284

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Screem Savers 549-0083

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

One Way Ticket Hartford to San Francisco Sept 21 Male Only. $150 OBO 549-8540

FREE TRIPS & CASH!!! Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take a break. Student Travel 800/95-Break

Spring Break '97 Sell trips, earn cash and go free. STS is hiring Campus Reps/Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida. Call (800)648-4849 for information on joining America's #1 Student Tour Operation

WANTED

I need Manheim tix for Oct 6 @ Mullins. I will pay or trade. I have MSG tix for Oct. 4. Call Craig 253-3328

WORTH THE RIDE

2BR Apt. in Sunderland HW floors, washer/dry, porch, garage. 315+ BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4366

Performing Arts Division offers Group and Private Instruction in music, theater and dance. Registration for Group Instruction runs Sept. 3-15, 1996. Private Instruction is on-going. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall. UMASS, 413-545-0518, for info.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Things could change quickly this week, so remain flexible and open to suggestions. With patience and dedication, a romantic commitment could deepen. Share your inner feelings to help someone understand your motivations better.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Look for a win-win solution to a thorny problem. You might not have to take a hard-line stance in order to get your way. Trust a loved one's advice when it comes to matters of the heart. Some news could change your life late in the week.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

If money is a concern, reevaluate your budget. You may find some luxuries you can live without. Work toward achieving a major goal this week. Your ability to see both sides of an issue will work in your favor when it comes to resolving a conflict.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

To avoid escalating an argument, learn patience. Try an old-fashioned family dinner to strengthen ties. Trouble in a relationship may not run deep, but you should still work to resolve your differences. Be sure to prepare before an important meeting.

LEO
July 23-August 23

Think and plan for the future this week. You're in a position to know what's best, so don't leave any possibility unexamined. It might be time for a career change, a move or a change in a relationship. Communication is the key to gaining insight.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

Focus in on the details in order to avoid simple mistakes. Watch yourself in traffic, or you could be on the receiving end of some unwanted attention. Drive defensively. To learn from someone's experiences, don't be afraid to ask difficult questions.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

Even if their reasoning seems shaky, consider a friend's past history before second-guessing a decision they've made. Set your goals early to be sure you don't miss a single opportunity. Outdoor activities this weekend refresh you for a difficult time ahead.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

Before writing a goal off as impossible, try thinking about the reasons why it hasn't already happened. You might gain some useful insights. Put your social life in high gear by planning a party. An unusual mix of guests could generate some real excitement.

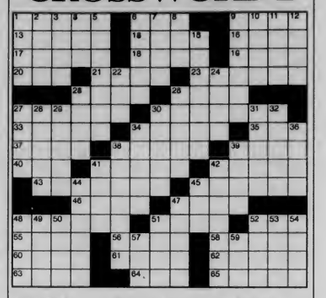
SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

Things may take longer than usual to finish this week. Build some extra time into your schedule, and you'll eliminate a major source of stress. A younger person could be feeling lonely. Try adding some quality time with them.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

If you're looking for good ideas, you'll have to sift through a few mediocre ones first. An old-fashioned brainstorm session will help. A blind date could lead to a relationship. If you're already attached, surprise your sweetie with a romantic evening.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18



Although it's tough, try to keep an open mind when having a discussion. If you don't listen, you'll miss out on an important idea. Focus on your family to build your strengths. A relative contacts you with a dilemma. Be prepared to make a tough decision.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

History is a fine teacher this week, so be on the lookout for situations with parallels in the past. An old friend offers a new take on romance. Be clear about what you want, and he or she will be equally open with you. Then, if it still feels right, go for it!

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD 2

ACROSS

1. The ___ in the Crown
6. Relatives
9. Russian river
13. Author Rogers St. Johns
14. Rummage
16. Beatles' meter maid
17. Bogarde et al.
18. Golden Rule preposition
19. J. Edgar's boys
20. French growing season
21. Debilitates
23. Ukraine seaport
25. Mona
26. Scottish group
27. Knaves
29. Easily snapped
33. Portents
34. Lying flat
35. Grunt
37. Zest
38. ___ My Way
39. Mythical monster
40. That girl
41. In need of brushing up
42. Get gussied up
43. Upswings
45. Artichoke cores
46. Holbein or Arp
47. On an even ___
48. ___ down (topsy-turvy)
51. Venture
52. Mes' partners
55. Croissant, e.g.
56. Cheer on the team
58. ___ Gay
60. Motown's genre
61. Lace place
62. Lease again
63. Intantry
64. Approvals
65. Monica of tennis

DOWN

1. Green gem
2. Revise a manuscript
3. When We ___ Very Young (Milne)
4. Sambur
5. Highland gals
6. Goodman's drummer in '35
7. Charged particles
8. Serious-loose fixer
9. Compelling
10. Wheel parts
11. Actor Roscoe
12. Turner of films
15. Leather ornamentation
22. Silly person
24. Junior Romeo's rite of passage
25. Human bellows
28. Henchman
27. Deteriorates
28. Nebraska city
29. Chromosome cargo
30. Londoners, informally
31. German pistol
32. White-plumed bird
34. Appointments
36. Coop creatures
38. Cannon operators
39. Spoken
41. Review
42. Those who can't resist a look
44. Frigid
45. "___ a Cockeyed Wonder"
47. Toys with tails
48. Twinkling bear
49. "Our first duty is not to be ___" (Shaw)
50. Run-down area
51. European crow
52. Census
53. Skipper's word
54. Coll. entrance tests
57. Exclamation
59. Roseanne Arnold, ___ Barr

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

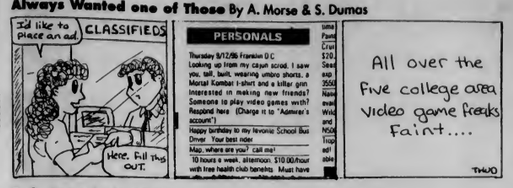
Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

UMass
INTRAMURAL SPORTS
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Flag Football (M/W/C) 9/17
Soccer (M/W) .....
Co-ed Softball .....
Ice Hockey (M/W) 9/18
Track & Cross Country 9/24
On the webhttp://www.umass.edu:80/umim
LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENS... BOYDEN 215
Don't Miss The ACTION
For entry forms
...info
...269



Excellent Business Experience
The UMass Student Federal Credit Union is looking for volunteer tellers.
Call 545-2800 or inquire within.
(Located in Student Union)

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL
Beauty Nail
A professional nail service using the highest quality products.
MANICURE & PEDICURE $25.00
Full Set of Nails $25 • Fills $15
Air Brush & Design . Gift Certificates Available
We guarantee all the work we do.
31 CAMPUS PLAZA • HADLEY (Behind Pizza Hut)
253-4756
OPEN MON.-SAT. 9:30 A.M.-8:30 P.M.

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Jim — Terri
Guys & Gals Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts Razor Cuts
Flat Tops Kid Cuts
Fades
Appointment Not Necessary
Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA (Next to Newbury Comics)
Hours: Mon – Wed, 8 – 5:15pm Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-2:45pm
Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini

September Sale Celebration
20% Savings on Food for Your Hair
Sept. 16th thru 21st
Save on...
Monday- with Paul Mitchell
Tuesday - with Aveda
Wednesday - with Biolage & American Crew
Thursday - with KMS
Friday - with Nexxus
Saturday - with American Crew & Hair Brushes
Regency Hairstylist
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9526

Always Wanted one of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Duh... By Maura and Micaela

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

Our teacher asked us to think very carefully and try to remember and write down the saddest moment of our lives and the happiest moment.

The saddest moment was when I fell down and knocked out one of my teeth.

The happiest moment was when my brother lost his tooth.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Close to Home By John McPherson

University² By Frank Cho

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

The Collegian is like Brussels Sprouts... You just have to read it.

Quote of the Day

"It's more than magnificent. It's mediocre!"

–Samuel Goldwyn

Top 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Reasons why there wasn't a top 10 last week

10. Let's just say that Commissioner Gordon has been a little trigger happy with the bat signal lately.
9. I've recently discovered masturbation.
8. I again realized that I still don't get paid for this.
7. I spend Monday through Thursday in the Textbook Annex.
6. Freak typing accident has filled me with a crippling fear of keyboards.
5. I thought one of them singing Bud Ice penguins was stalking me.
4. Two words: NyQuil and Sudafed.
3. I had a little "episode" with Chancellor Scott and $5,000 in unmarked bills.
2. Too busy enjoying the exciting new line-up of channels on HSCN.
1. I was caught smoking within 20 feet of the Campus Center.

Today's Staff

Laura Stock
Night Editor

Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor

Courtney Smith
Photo Technician

Tony Morse
Production Supervisor

Daniel Bodah
Matt McCarthy, Chris Brown
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Mesquite Chicken	Rotisserie Chicken
Hot Beef Sandwich	Stuffed Shells
Captain's Catch	Quarter Pound Burger
Sesame Roll	Qtr. Lb. Cheddar Burg.

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Rotisserie
Raditore (?)	Glazed Chicken
Tomato Sauce	Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Garden Vegan Burger

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on Roll	Glazed Chicken
Grilled Sneeze	Veggie Gumbo
Garden Vegan Burger	Stuffed Shells
	Half Time Deli

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on Roll	Pineapple Ham Steak
Krabby Cake Sandwich	Pastabilities
Raditore/Tomato Sauce	Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Garden Vegan Burger	Veggie Gumbo

Sports

Familiar foes face UMass women's soccer at home

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

This weekend at Richard F. Garber Field, the No. 8 Massachusetts women's soccer team (3–0) will open up its Atlantic 10 schedule against St. Bonaventure (3–1) on Sunday, with the University of California–Santa Barbara (1– 3) coming into town on Saturday. Both games will be at 1 p.m.

While on paper, the games may look like easy wins for the Minutewomen, but UMass coach Jim Rudy is more concerned than confident about this weekend.

"The interesting part is that I feel this is going to be two completely different sides and the styles will be totally different," Rudy said. "The California kids will play very skillfully and knock it around, while St. Bonnies will be a more direct team. Let's get it forward and let's go."

While coming off its best effort of the young season against Southern Methodist University last weekend, Rudy still feels the need for his team to evolve. He wants his team to get away from its recent Monty Python–ish style of passing, which means more than getting the ball in their teammates "general direction." Crisper and cleaner ball movement, not a quest for the Holy Grail, is what the coach will be looking for this weekend. " W e are going to have to get better at some things," Rudy said. "One, although our possession game is pretty good, we really need to clean up our skills. Technically, I was not real pleased, because we can be a lot more skillful than we were.

"We got things done because tactically we played right, but I would say that our receiving and passing was very ordinary."

St. Bonaventure is off to a fast start, even with its 3–0 loss to A–10 Championship finalists Xavier in its home opener. The Bonnies' first–year coach is no one new to UMass, as Kim LeMere was a former three–time All–American, but more specifically, an old nemesis when she played at Hartford, leading them to four consecutive NCAA Tournament appearances.

LeMere has some good players on her squad, with Jo Storme leading the team in scoring (10 points), after scoring two goals in a minute span this week in a 3–1 victory over the University at Buffalo.

"Last year, we played them in our first game and shut them down [in a 3–0 win]," Rudy said. "St. Bonaventure is off to their best start that I can recall there ever. [LeMere] went there and took on a St. Bonnies team that, heretofore, has not done a whole lot."

UC–Santa Barbara will be trying to improve on last season's less than impressive 6–12 record. But even their display of offensive ineptitude (only 23 goals in 18 matches) last year can be disguised in the fact that the Gauchos did win three out of their last four, and had a 6–5 record over their last 11 games.

Diminutive 5'1" sophomore forward Darcie Frounfelter (5 points) has led this year's team in scoring, with the remainder of the team's offensive punch lying somewhere lost in Bakersfield. Rudy might wish all California teams could be like the Gauchos, but through past experience, he is not taking this team lightly.

"Santa Barbara, even though they are coming in at 1–3, is a team that we can not take anything for granted," he said. "We faced them out there two years ago and their record was very weak and they pulled off the upset.

"They did what they had to do. They kept us at bay and we did not get our finishes in, sort of like this

Turn to SOCCER, page 7

Football tries for first win of season at HC

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Going into Saturday's contest with Holy Cross, the Massachusetts football team has something to prove, both to the other squads in the Yankee Conference and to itself. The Minutemen (0–1) face the Crusaders at 1 p.m. Saturday at Fitton Field in Worcester.

Last week's 50–14 rout at the hands of the Villanova Wildcats was something that, if taken the wrong way, could ruin a team's focus for an entire season. But if you ask UMass coach Mike Hodges, that isn't going to happen to his Minutemen.

"We've had a good week of practice," Hodges said. "The team that showed up last week was not the team that I saw practicing all summer.

"They have to focus more on their play and they know that. Last week the team was ready to play from an emotional standpoint, but the focus wasn't there."

Even with last week's loss etched into memory, it is seemingly possible for the Minutemen to overlook Holy Cross. UMass scored the last 120 points in the series, and have beaten the Crusaders four consecutive times. Last year the Minutemen routed Holy Cross 51–0 at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium, rushing for 414 yards and piling up 24 first downs in their biggest win in 32 years.

Holy Cross hopes for different results this year. Saturday's season opener for the Crusaders will mark the first appearance of new head coach Dan Allen. Allen left Boston University after six seasons to take the job in Worcester. He compiled a 36–33 mark in Boston and in 1993, won the Kodak/American Football Coaches Association NCAA Division 1–AA National Coach of the Year award. Allen led the Terriers to back to back playoff appearances in 1993 and 1994.

BU had a wide–open passing attack under Allen, but as far as Saturday goes, Allen's game plan remains somewhat of a mystery to Hodges.

"You never know what's going to happen when a team changes as much as Holy Cross has" Hodges said. "They have a new head coach, a new offense and it will be up to us to make adjustments on Saturday."

Holy Cross's vaunted new offense will be led by junior quarterback Brion Stapp. Last season, he started six games for the Crusaders, throwing for 1169 yards and five touchdowns.

Sophomore Dan Boland originally won the starting assignment against Massachusetts, but he suffered an elbow injury and will not play.

The Crusader backfield is led by J.R. Walz, the 1994 Patriot League Co–Rookie of the Year. Last year he rushed for 550 yards and three touchdowns, including a 172–yard effort in the season finale against Colgate. Other Holy Cross standouts include senior linebacker David Streeter, with 299 career tackles, and last season's two Patriot League receiving leaders, juniors Brian Hopkins and Jeff Laboranti.

For the Minutemen, this week will be the second try at a new, more open passing offense. Anthony Catterton threw for a career high 118 yards, going 9–for–17 with two interceptions. Hodges is confident that the Minutemen can establish a passing game.

"I think we proved last week that we can throw the football, but we can't have the dropped balls like we did at Villanova," Hodges said. "We need to find consistency in the passing game."

Hodges gave Catterton's performance mixed reviews.

"He made some mistakes, but he also made some nice plays," he said. "Of the two interceptions, only one was his fault. The challenge now is to find that consistency."

While Holy Cross will be playing their season opener, the Minutemen will have the advantage of having a game under their belts. They were rusty last week, and it showed. Villanova already had the chance to work out early–season kinks against Rutgers and came out sharp against the Minutemen. With a week of practice to work out their own kinks, UMass will look to come home to Amherst 1–1 Saturday night.

Injury Report: Senior free safety Brian Mooney is doubtful for Saturday due to a strained right hamstring... tailback Matt Jordan is questionable with a sore right hamstring... senior wideout Darryl Thomas is questionable with a case of turf toe.

Massachusetts Football

Frank Alessio

Saturday, September 14
1:00 p.m.
Fitton Field

J.R. Walz

UMass V S. Holy Cross

On the Air
1400 AM WHMP - Marc Vandermeer
91.1 FM WMUA -
Brad Davidson, John Patterson, Larry Harding

UMass looks to stay perfect at Maine

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

The undefeated, No. 18 nationally ranked Massachusetts men's soccer team hopes to continue its winning streak against the Maine on Saturday, at 11 a.m. in Orono.

Massachusetts is coming off of two encouraging victories over Boston University and Holy Cross. Up to this point in the season, the Minutemen have played well, but not to their full abilities.

"The potential that we have is tremendous and we have not yet tapped all of our resources," UMass coach Sam Koch said.

Beating Maine will not be an easy task as it fields its most competitive team in years.

"I honestly believe that on any given day we can beat anybody, however also on any given day we could lose to the Holy Crosses," Koch said. "Only time will tell.

"There are a number of things that we need to work on, but we are getting there. Yet we are 2-0 and you can't complain about that," Koch added.

On the offensive side of the ball, the scoring has come from familiar faces. Senior forward Dave Siljanovski has netted two goals in as many games, including the winner against Boston University. Junior forward Mike Butler has once again been the playmaker, as he notched two assists along with a goal. Butler's two assists pushed his career point total to 50 (18 goals, 14 assists).

Defensively, UMass has been strong as well. Senior defenseman Joe Jacobson has played solidly, marking the opposition's top scoring threats. Senior defenseman Dan Chagnon has performed well, especially around his own net.

One surprise has been the play of senior midfielder Tashi Shering. The Amherst native has earned his way into the starting lineup after solid outings.

"He did a super job against B.U.," Koch said. "In the Holy Cross game he was always in excellent coverage or helping someone out. He has done a lot of good things and he is a big reason why we are 2–0 so far."

Holding it all together defensively has been sophomore goalkeeper Tim Pearson. In his collegiate debut he recorded a shutout with 11 saves. Against Holy Cross he matched this feat, recording his second shut–out in as many games.

Another strength for UMass has been the overall team depth. On the bench the Minutemen have many capable replacements.

"On the bench we have a bunch of guys I know can play," Koch said. "Marc Saad had an outstanding goal against Holy Cross. Lee Marlow, Fabio Maniatty and Scott Regina all had good years last year and will definitely contribute down the

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mike Butler and the UMass men's soccer team travel to Orono this weekend to take on Maine.

James Madison up first for UMass in Hawkeye Invitational Tourney

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team travels to Iowa this weekend for a pair of games in the Hawkeye Invitational Tournament. The Minutewomen will face perennially tough James Madison Saturday at 1 p.m., while host Iowa will take on Saint Louis. The winners of the first day's games will square off at 1:30 p.m. on Sunday, with the first day's losers taking the field at 11:30 a.m.

"It's tournament format so winners will play winners and losers will play losers," UMass coach Pam Hixon said. "The most important thing is that we look at our first game with James Madison and not worry about who we're going to play next."

The Minutewomen (3–0) have produced an overall team effort thus far, spreading the scoring out between six players. Freshman Saskia Fuchs has netted three goals on the year, as has junior Courtney MacLean. Senior Kyle Rothenberger, juniors Sharon Hughes and Jen Gutzman and sophomore Erica Johnston have added one goal each.

While the play of the offense has put numbers on the board, it is the combined effort of the UMass defense that has kept opponents to only one goal in the team's three contests. Laura Phelan, Amy Ott, Melanie Gore and Jen Gutzman also worked to fend off any attack that New Hampshire could put together in UMass' second game, resulting in goalie Hilary Rose not having to face a shot.

"[The backs] work very well together," Hixon said. "Hilary gives the defense a lot of confidence, and Laura and Amy and Mel and Jen are all very smart, experienced players."

James Madison comes into Saturday's game with four contests under its belt and a 2–2 record, having beaten Miami of Ohio and Virginia Commonwealth. The Dukes lost to North Carolina in their season opener and to Wake Forest, the squad the Minutewomen beat 4–0 in their season opener.

JMU coach Christy Morgan's squad is led by freshman Julie Martinez, who has four goals and an assist on the season. Junior Diane Cegielski has turned into two

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

Minutewomen down Hartford

By Michael Nam
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's tennis team notched an impressive victory in its first game of the season yesterday defeating the University of Hartford, 6–1 at the Upper Boyden Courts.

The Minutewomen swept the doubles matches and lost only one singles match in a strong, controlled effort by the entire team.

"I never know how we're going to

Turn to WOMEN'S TENNIS, page 7

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Liz Durant and Noelle Orsini celebrate after a point in yesterday's women's tennis action. The Minutewomen beat Hartford, 6–1.

Minutewomen ready for UMass Classic

By Jeremy Adams
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team looks to make a good showing this weekend when they host the Reebok sponsored UMass Classic at the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Minutewoman will square off against Central Connecticut today at 2 p.m. and at 7 p.m. against Villanova. Tomorrow, they face Delaware and Seton Hall at 11:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. respectively.

Coach Bonnie Kenny's squad has posted an admirable 6–1 record while matching up with some challenging opponents as it prepares for the start of Atlantic–10 conference play.

The tournament will feature non–conference opponents from Central Connecticut State, Villanova, Delaware and Seton Hall. The Minutewomen previously hosted the UMass Invitational tournament at the end of August and went undefeated without losing so much as a game against teams like Tulane and Providence College.

In the past week, UMass participated in the Penn State Invitational, coming away with a 2–1 record. Both victories were 3–0 sweeps of University of Connecticut and Atlantic– 10 rival St. Bonaventure. The lone blemish to its record came at the hands of tournament host Penn State. The loss marked the end of an 18–game winning streak amassed through the Minutewomen's first six matches, their longest such streak since 1994, when they went 25 games before dropping one.

"We've come out a lot better than I expected. We're playing a very tough schedule to make sure we're ready for conference play," Kenny said.

The Minutewomen start their conference schedule on Friday, Sept. 20 when they travel to Kingston, R.I. to play the Rhode Island Rams in the opening match of the Rhode Island Classic.

UMass women's volleyball matches up well in the Atlantic 10.

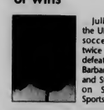
"In the A–10 Rhode Island and Dayton will be tough, but you can never count out Virginia Tech or George Washington. Duquesne and Temple will not be far behind. They've both come a long way," Kenny said.

Kenny attributes the early season success to the hard work and dedication of her returning upperclassmen and new players alike. Senior outside hitter Dionne Nash and junior middle blocker Michelle Paclorek earned All–Tournament honors for their efforts at the Penn State Invitational. The tandem hit 27 and 24 kills, respectively, and both contributed 19 digs and two aces.

Solid performances at the tournament were also turned in by additional Massachusetts players, including junior Lesley Nolan, who provided 32 kills and 28 momentum–saving digs.

Kenny openly praises her team's drive.

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 9 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, September 16, 1996

Maximum Van Dumb

Jean–Claude Van Damme falls sharply on latest action thriller, Maximum Risk. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

A weekend of wins

Julie Magid and the UMass women's soccer team won twice this weekend, defeating Cal–Santa Barbara on Saturday and St. Bonaventure on Sunday. (See Sports, page 10).

NATION

Kevorkian aide ailing, wants assisted suicide

FARMINGTON HILLS, Mich. (AP) — As Dr. Jack Kevorkian's assistant, Janet Good has counseled people with painful illnesses and watched as Kevorkian helped them take their own lives. Now she says her own battle with cancer will almost surely end in suicide — hopefully with Kevorkian at her side.

"I want to end my life gently, peacefully, painlessly — just like I've seen Dr. Kevorkian's patients die," Good said.

The 72–year–old woman was diagnosed more than a year ago with pancreatic cancer, and it has spread to her liver.

Good founded the Michigan chapter of the Hemlock Society, which supports doctor–assisted suicide. She has witnessed several Kevorkian–assisted suicides, including that of Janet Adkins of Portland, Ore., who in 1990 became the first known person to die with the doctor's help.

At least 40 people have died with Kevorkian's help. Because of their close friendship, Good said she is worried that Kevorkian will be reluctant to help her die.

"That's another reason why I'm planning on alternate ways" of dying, she said.

WORLD

Armenian returns to roots in chess tourney

YEREVAN, Armenia (AP) — The World Chess Olympiad opened Sunday with a record 209 teams from 127 countries as Armenians enthusiastically welcomed world champion Garry Kasparov as one of their own.

Kasparov, the world's highest–ranked player and champion of the Professional Chess Association, leads a Russian team that won the last Olympiad in Moscow two years ago and will contend for top honors again.

The 33–year–old Kasparov was born in Baku, capital of neighboring Azerbaijan, to an Armenian mother and a Jewish father. He later moved to Moscow.

His presence is a source of pride for Armenians: A crowd of 5,000 people attending Sunday night's ceremonial opening gave him a thunderous standing ovation.

"Honestly, many people were skeptical when Armenia expressed its readiness to host the Olympiad, and they were doubtful when they heard that everything was going ahead all right," Kasparov said. "I believe that today everybody was convinced that the potential of this country and its people has no real limits."

Georgia, China and Hungary, which finished first, second, and third, respectively, in the women's competition two years ago, are expected to contend for that title again.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Weds.
HIGH: 70 LOW: 55	HIGH: 68 LOW: 49	HIGH: 71 LOW: 59

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

SGA survey bolsters awareness in elections

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) voter registration campaign will distribute a survey on Wednesday to candidates running in the upcoming November elections.

The survey is an attempt by the SGA to gauge state and federal candidates' positions on UMass–related higher education issues.

"The survey is strong. It asks a lot of good questions," said Student Trustee Sean Carter. "(From the survey) we will be able to differentiate candidates' opinions on higher– education."

The results from the survey will be compiled into a report. According to Carter, about 150,000 copies of the report will be mailed to students, parents, alumni, faculty and University administrators.

Students will receive the report labelled with, "their address and each of the races in their district" to remind them of the election, Carter said.

The report will allow students to make a well informed decision in the upcoming elections, Carter added.

The SGA campaign is waiting for the approval of the survey by the Alumni Association to distribute the survey after the primaries on Tuesday, according to Carter.

A preliminary draft of the survey addresses various issues ranging from state Sen. Stanley Rosenberg's (D–Amherst) "Fair Share Funding" initiative to the Federal Direct Loan program.

The questions were formulated by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), the UMass Alumni Association, and the SGA.

The survey is a part of the SGA's voter education phase of their voter registration campaign begun on September 1.

According to Carter, the survey will be published on the forth–coming SGA World–Wide–Web page in the near future.

In other affairs, the SGA Undergraduate Student Senate will be closing nominations for the Fall Senate election on Wednesday, September 18 at 5:00 pm.

Scott looks to the future, plans for UMass growth

Editor's note: this article is the first in a four part series profiling key administrators and faculty at the University of Massachusetts

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott has a plan to fulfill a vision articulated for the University of Massachusetts: to be the best public higher education system in the United States by the year 2000.

Despite the immense criticisms and challenges that he has faced in his short tenure as Chancellor, Scott brings a diverse history of educational, administrative and human experience to his present position at UMass Amherst.

Humble beginnings

David K. Scott was born on the Orkney Islands off the coast of Scotland. He grew up on a small island only four miles long and two miles wide with a population of 100. Scott said the aurora borealis on winter nights and spectacular sea storms sparked his interest in physics.

Scott had to leave his home at the age of 10 to go to boarding school, a necessity to prepare him for a better education, he said.

He graduated from the University of Edinburgh with an undergraduate degree in physics. He engaged in research; focusing on Nuclear Physics at Oxford University in England and completed the Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1967 at Linacre College.

Scott then became a fellow at Balliol College, Oxford University, but promptly decided to move to Berkeley, to study at the University of California.

There, he pioneered research in high speed collisions of heavy nuclei to study extreme states in nuclear systems. He also spent time at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory as the Scientific Director of the Cyclotron Laboratory.

In 1979, Scott went to Michigan State University (MSU) as the John A. Hannah Distinguished Professor of Physics and Astronomy, and of Chemistry.

At MSU, Scott was offered his first experience with academic administration, where he served as Associate Provost, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at different times. Following a six year tenure, he left the Provost position to become the John A. Hannah Distinguished Professor of Learning, Science and Society at MSU. Scott said that this role allowed him to combine his 30 years of experience as a scientist and academic administrator.

Scott is a fellow of the American Physical Society. He has written nearly 200 papers on nuclear science and higher education, and has given 150 lectures in countries all over the world.

In July of 1993, Scott became the Chancellor of UMass.

A plan for the future

Presently, Scott is in the midst of implementing his Strategic Action plan.

"The advantage of Strategic Action is that we [UMass] now have a five–year plan," Scott said. "It also maps out how much we have to spend each year and this becomes a very helpful template for formulating our budget requests for each fiscal year. In all of its aspects, it serves as a very useful guide."

The plan addresses improving information technologies, capital outlay (for building renovations) and University advancement — extending to every facet of the University.

Scott said that this semester will be energetic and exciting, but also a tense time as UMass begins the implementation of the plan.

Academic Dishonesty: Solutions

Turn to SCOTT, page 2

NATHAN MARTIN/ COLLEGIAN

Chancellor David K. Scott

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

How's everybody feelin' tonight...

311 performed to a sold out crowd at the Mullins Center last Friday night.

25-year-old Tupac Shakur dies

Former pastor mourns; no arrests made in Las Vegas shooting

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Tupac Shakur, remembered by many as a violent rapper who died in the gangsta culture he glorified, was mourned at his boyhood church Sunday as the victim of a society that destroys black youth.

"He had the genes, he had the ability, could we have provided the society that would have made him blossom," the Rev. Herbert Daughtry said at The House of the Lord Pentecostal Church in Brooklyn.

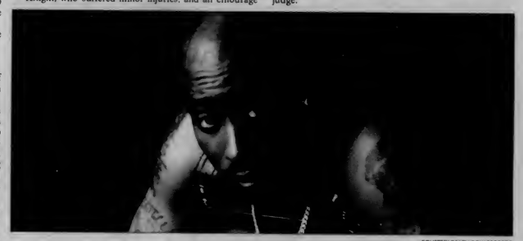
Two days after the 25-year-old Shakur died of gunshots wounds suffered in a drive-by shooting on a Las Vegas street, the pastor asked: "Who will weep for Tupac Shakur?"

"I will weep for Tupac," he replied.

Though he left Brooklyn in his teens, Shakur still is listed as a member of the congregation he joined when he was 15, with his mother and sister.

Shakur — who had served time for assault, weapons violations and sex abuse — was hit by four bullets Sept. 7 as he rode in a car driven by the head of his label, Death Row Records chief Marion "Suge" Knight.

Knight, who suffered minor injuries, and an entourage of at least 10 cars, including bodyguards, have failed to provide any suspects.



Los Angeles police told Newsweek magazine on condition of anonymity that the shooting of three Crips gang members in Compton, Calif., last week was in retaliation for the Shakur shooting. Other sources told the magazine more retribution was likely.

"Whoever did it is seriously in some t— because this isn't something Suge is going to just drop," a friend of Knight's said in the Sept. 23 issue. "You will start seeing Negroes drop real soon."

Despite the controversy and success of Shakur, anonymous music industry sources told Newsweek they believe Knight was the target. "The best way to get Suge is to mess with his money," said a source close to Death Row. "Tupac is his money."

In Brooklyn, Daughtry told about 150 people in the half-full church that Shakur's self-proclaimed ambition to be "a revolutionary" against injustice to blacks "was just as real as Martin's and Malcolm's," referring to Martin Luther King and Malcolm X.

"I know that there are those who say he went about it the wrong way," Daughtry added. "But it's not for me to judge.'

COURTESY DEATH ROW RECORDS

2-Pac

Translation Center to assist courts; broadening a bilingual legal system

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

The Translation Center at the University of Massachusetts will soon be offering Spanish lessons for court interpreters and all other court employees statewide — from judges and baliffs to prosecutors and police officers.

Massachusetts has the highest percentage in the nation of incoming immigrants who do not speak English, which puts a strain on a English–only legal system.

"Part of our mission is reaching out towards immigrants whose English may be shaky. Those immigrants may speak Spanish, Vietnamese, Cambodian, Polish or Haitian and these people need to access health care and education, as well as the justice system," said Professor Edwin Gentzler, the Translation Center's director.

The program, which is scheduled to begin in the Spring of 1997, will only be offered on campus for the first semester.

"As the program gets stronger, we will expand and have translators go out to different parts of the state, but for now, they [court employees] will have to come here," Gentzler said.

In order to become certified as a translator, people must take a certification test. The center will begin offering prep classes for these tests.

"Gradually, we are going to offer certification test training for Spanish, Russian, Portuguese, Vietnamese and Haitian. The best way to prepare for these tests is to practice," Gentzler said.

"We will offer this program to a gamut of people involved in law enforcement. If you can communicate where someone needs to be and how to fill out the forms, you can help people with their lives," he added.

UMass is the first university in the state to offer this program.

The first year of the program will is funded by a $72,000 grant from the state.

"I am very happy to have this grant has been provided to the program," Gentzler said. "It will provide job opportunities for many students, especially students with many ethnic backgrounds."

Gentzler said State Sen. Stanley Rosenberg (D–Amherst) and State Rep. Ellen Story (D–Amherst) have been very helpful facilitating committee meetings with the trial courts.

"They have been very supportive from the beginning," he said.

This current project is just one example of the many ways the Center has worked with the community.

Past activities have included working with student– translators for Bay–State Medical Center in Springfield, translating brochures on health issues such as asthma and diabetes for the Channing L. Bete Company of Deerfield, and more locally, translating poetry into Khmer and Spanish for the annual Book and Plow Festival in Amherst.

Over 250 translators in 50 languages provide their services at the Translation Center. These translators are professors, faculty spouses, professional staff, graduate students and some undergraduates.

The center was originally developed to serve the academic community of UMass. The center, however, has been able to broaden its mission to serve the business community as well.

"Language can enable you to build bridges and develop trust with your neighbor, or your community. It's amazing how even if you just learn a few words, that can build trust," Gentzler said.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Sept. 16

Informational Session — The Student Government Association will hold an informational session at 5 p.m. in the Student Government offices, 420 Student Union. Refreshments will be served.

Meeting — Amnesty International will have its first meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center in room 902. All are welcome to join.

Meeting — UVC-TV 19 is having it's first general body meeting for the semester at 7 p.m. in our studio at 216 Student Union Building. This meeting is open to new members and the curious. For more information, call 545- 1336.

Meeting — UMass Update will hold a news meeting at 8 p.m. in UVC-TV 19's studio for those interested in reporting, writing, and technical crew. No experience is necessary and new members are welcome. For more information, call UVC-TV 19 News Department at 545- 1336.

Meeting — Alpha Chi Omega, a natioanl co-ed service fraternity will be holding an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Snacks provided and all are welcome. For more information, call the office at 545-2068.

Travel — An organizational meeting for the 1997 UMass program abroad in Siena will be held this evening in 301 Herter Hall. For the meeting time or for more information, call Professor Elaixabeth Mazzocco at 545-3453.

Tour — A Winter Mission Tour, sponsored by the UMass Ski Club will be held on the Student Union Lawn 11a.m.–4p.m. Games, activities, movies, arcade, free give-aways, and more. Call 545-3437 for more information.

Tuesday, Sept. 17

Meeting — The Circle K Community Service Group will have a meeting in room 409 of the Student Union. Anyone Interested in volunteering time at a soup kitchen, tutoring, working in a shelter or being a Big Brother or Big Sister is invited.

Meeting — All interested candidates for the Stockbridge school basketball and golf teams should attend a meeting at the Mullins Center V.I.P. room at 4 p.m. If unable to attend, contact Jack Leaman in room 307 at the Mullins Center or call 545–1301.

Meeting — The Wildlife Society presents "Bats of Belize" with Jeff Corwin and free pizza at 5:30 p.m. in Holdsworth room 203.

Wednesday, Sept. 18

Meeting — Alpha Chi Omega, a national service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting at 7 p.m. on the 5th floor of Kennedy, in Southwest. Snacks provided, and all are welcome. For more information, call 545–2068.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 162. If interested in bringing a lecturer to campus, come to this meeting and find out more about DVP. Refreshments will be served. All are invited and encouraged to attend. For more information, call 545–0046.

Notices

Opening — The Sunderland Congregational Church, located at the corner of Rte's 47 and 116, has opened the Serendipity Shoppe in the church basement. It carries quality used clothes and accesories for all ages at thrift shop prices. All clothes are now on clearance and a sweater sale will run through October. Hours are Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a.m.–12 noon. We're on the UMass (Sunderland) bus route.

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. For more information, call 546–2771 or 546–1318.

Employment — The Student Government Association is looking to fill the position of Inventory Control Officer (SGA Auditor). Requirements for the position include: heading the Student Activities Inventory Task Force; maintaining the inventory database; organizing auditory records for the $4 million SATF; and spot-checking agencies and RSOs for inventory. The position is open to both work study and non-work study students, and students may pick their own hours. The position must be filled immediately. If interested, call Jeff Coker at 545–0341.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen– dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538–9717.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety fo music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536-3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Thursdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Campus Center, and from 2 to 3:30 p.m. at St. Bridget's Church Parish Hall, 2nd floor. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call Kim at 548–9902, Jennifer at 548– 9040 or Maryanne at 549–5957.

Scott

Continued from page 1

In response to the Project Pulse survey on academic dishonesty, Scott offered both questions and solutions.

"We have to step back and ask: 'Are we missing something in the whole educational process in terms of issues of values and standards?'," he asked.

He added, "I think that from the '60's onwards in universities, there was a revolution that really made us back away from some of the old ideas that you could really teach and impose standards and values.

"We now have more a relativism; some people even call it a type of moral nihilism. And maybe its a question of finding something between these two extremes because obviously neither of them are good.

"I believe that the tide is turning on this; the period that we have come through there has been a lot of cheating and dishonesty generally in society and in our universities. I remember a time when there was a tremendous emphasis on individual competition in order to get ahead at any cost.

"I really believe that there is a move back towards more caring and more responsibility to a society and a collective. There is more concern about caring in a collective sense rather than individual advancement."

The AAU and UMass

The American Association of Universities is an exclusive group of 60 public and private colleges and universities across the country, whose membership may soon include the Amherst campus.

"The 60 public and private schools in the AAU are considered the major research universities in the country," Scott said. "In an absolutely detached analysis, this campus is certainly close to being viable for being considered in that set."

Presently, the AAU is looking for a school in New England for AAU membership.

"It is important to be in that set because they constitute a very powerful force in Washington; they are very influential, I think, with the federal government in terms of setting policy and direction in higher education; they're important in Washington in terms of getting funds in support of research and therefore it's important politically, I think, to be member of that set," Scott said.

Of the 60 institutions, only 16 are historically Land Grant schools. The grants, conceived during the Civil War era, offered access to land and funds from the federal government in exchange for military involvement on campus. They have traditionally been the state institutions which have been the most accessible to students.

It is the intersection of AAU and Land Grant status which Chancellor Scott and Chairman of the Board of Trustees Robert Karam state as their goal.

Scott said, "These 16 schools constitute a very important set of universities that are in the forefront with important research discoveries, but are also in the forefront with regard to the applications of these discoveries to try and benefit society.

"The AAU\Land Grant Model is one of the implementation issues from the Strategic Action plan. We have designated people within the administration to coordinate the development of a plan as to what are the various kinds of things that we have to do to make membership in the AAU realistic."

Utilizing resources

Scott said that one of the best things about UMass is that it does amazing things with fewer resources, compared to similar universities.

"We are a University that is always breaking down barriers, between cultures, between disciplines and between the University and society," said Scott.

Scott also said that the international reputation of the faculty and the quality and loyalty of the faculty, staff and students to the University was impressive.

One of the most frustrating aspects of the University, Scott said, was the poor quality of the work environment for large numbers of faculty, staff and students.

Accordingly, much of the Strategic Action Plan is dedicated to improvements of campus facilities and grounds.

Striving for legacy

Although Scott is always the target of debate from all ends at the University, his colleagues nevertheless maintain a belief that he is the right person for the Chancellor's Office.

"David has a vision," Karam said. "And that vision will lead to results."

Provost Patricia Crosson said, "Chancellor Scott is completely dedicated on behalf of the Amherst campus. He is enormously committed and hard working."

With such pressures placed upon him and the system to excel, Scott said that often his greatest obstacle is himself.

"I have a tendency not to listen; some arrogance that I always know best, which is not always true," Scott said.

Equally as problematic, he said, are the personal strains placed upon by his busy schedule.

"The demands on my time lead to a fragmented existence and frustration that I can never give the quality and amount of time people deserve," Scott said.

Scott does not shy away from philosophical musings when asked about how he thinks he will be remembered.

"When I leave, I would like people to remember that I helped to build the foundation of a modern Land Grant research University, which reinvents the dream of the role and nature of teaching and learning, research and discovery, outreach and public service in the Kiowledge and Information Age, in the way that the original Land Grant model was invented for the Agrarian and Industrial Age," he said.

UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
TO FULL-TIME UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS

- STUDENT TICKET BOOKLETS FOR THE 1996 UMASS FOOTBALL SEASON ARE NOW AVAILABLE AT THE ATHLETIC BOX OFFICE LOCATED AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE. TICKET OFFICE HOURS ARE MONDAY-FRIDAY, 8:30AM-4:45PM.
- TICKET BOOKLETS MAY ALSO BE PICKED UP AT THE STUDENT ENTRANCE (EAST SIDE) PRIOR TO ALL HOME FOOTBALL GAMES.
- A VALID UMASS UNDERGRADUATE ID IS NEEDED TO PICK UP FOOTBALL TICKETS. (ONLY ONE BOOKLET PER STUDENT.)
- ACTIVITY CARD APPLICATIONS WILL BE MAILED OUT AROUND OCTOBER 1ST.

HELP SUPPORT UMASS FOOTBALL!!

TH

NOBODY'S PERFECT

Come to UMass – Lincoln Campus Center Rm 165+169
Monday, Sept. 16th thru Friday, Sept. 20th

Ladies & Mens merchandise from Express-Limited-Structure-Aeropostale and other famous specialty stores & designer labels at

60%-80% OFF
their original prices

KNIT TOPS 9.99-12.99 Comp. 24.00-49.00	JEANS Colors 9.99 or 2/15.00 Comp. 28.00-42.00 each	SWEATERS 6.99-19.99 Comp. 28.00-94.00
From "Limited" Stores Italian Knit group TOPS-SKIRTS-DRESSES 9.00 each or 2/15.00 Comp. 48.00-78.00	Blue & Black 12.99 or 2/20.00 Comp. 28.00-42.00 each	From Bloomingdales Ladies Mahogany JEWERLY BOXES 29.99 in their catalog for 250.00

Sale Hours Mon. – Thurs. 7am– 9pm
Fri. 7am – 6pm

Visa/AMEX/Disc./ATM Cards/Cash
Sorry–No Checks

BURN YOUR BRA!!!
WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES AND LET YOUR VOICE BE HEARD. COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN LOCATED IN THE BASEMENT OF THE CAMPUS CENTER AND ASK FOR MICHELLE HILLMAN OR CALL 545*1762.

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog –
(413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continning Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

Bosnia divided in first post–war elections

By George John
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — How fair? How flawed? Organizers of Bosnia's first post-war elections argue they were the best one could expect in a country crippled by war's divisions. Those who watched the voting say it was flawed to the point of making its results invalid.

There was broad relief Sunday, one day after the vote, that the national and regional elections were mostly peaceful. Turnout was estimated at between 60 percent and 70 percent in Bosnia's first post-war ballot, intended to start the long process of reconciliation between Muslim, Serb and Croat.

With glitches in free movement and confusion over where to vote and voters' registration lists, nobody was claiming that the elections were a model of democracy - particularly after campaigns full of rhetoric about letting the new government collapse and allowing Bosnia to split once and for all into one half controlled by Serbs and another by Muslims and Croats.

Beyond that, much was up for interpretation.

Representatives of international organizations most involved in Bosnia were upbeat. Under pressure to stage a success, they glossed over the difficulties of the voting and the months preceding it. Britain's Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Walker, ground troops commander in the NATO-led peace force, whose heavily armed presence was everywhere Saturday, said the vote was an indicator of a democracy being born.

Carl Bildt, the chief international monitor of Bosnia's peace, hailed the great dignity of election day. Robert Frowick, the chief election organizer, called the vote a basis to realize the promise of the Dayton peace accords.

On days preceding the vote, senior U.S. and international officials drew a line in the sand, saying Serb dreams of using the elections to prepare for secession were out of the question. What was left unsaid: Serb politicians campaigned for more than two months on a platform of splitting off the Serb half of Bosnia — something prohibited by the Dayton accords. Croat politicians also played the nationalist chord, as did Muslims to a smaller extent.

Their campaigns surely hardened Serb and Croat sentiment to secede and will cement ethnic divisions far beyond the elections. International officials in Bosnia thought 60,000 Muslims driven off by the Serbs would return to their former hometowns to vote. But only about a third did so.

Some were too scared, others too angry. Towns like Srebrenica were effectively placed off limits by organizers who feared confrontations. Other Muslims couldn't find polling stations — they existed only on paper or were created at the last minute.

Whatever the reason, the absence of Muslim voters in Serb-held lands further hardened Bosnia's ethnic divisions.

Organizational problems led to temporary shutdowns of some polling stations, hours-long lines at others and extended voting hours elsewhere.

The Muslims' ruling Party of Democratic Action demanded Saturday that the vote in the Serb half of Bosnia be annulled. President Alija Izetbegovic cited reports of serious irregularities. Bosnian Croats also filed complaints.

The European Union said that truncating the elections by indefinitely postponing municipal voting was a cause for concern. It also criticized the gross imbalance of voting practices in Serb-held areas near Gorazde, site of one of the war's most bitter Serb-Muslim fights, saying inadequate facilities for returning Muslim voters skewed the vote.

EU observer Doris Pack said registration mixups prevented some people from voting, and some polling stations were overburdened.

THANG VOI COLLEGIAN

White or wheat, that is the question!

Bridget Landon (right), a sophomore bio–chemistry major, and her friend, Suzan Dowden, from Newton, N.H., checks out bakery goods at the outdoor market at the Amherst town commons on Saturday morning.

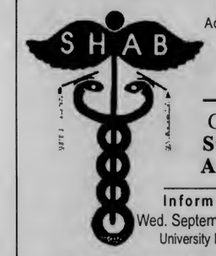
Interested in serving your community? The Jewish Affairs Editor position is vacant at the Collegian. This Diversity Desk needs your help to continue quality coverage of Jewish life at UMass and beyond. To get involved contact Chris Conner, Managing Editor, at 545-0719 or visit the Collegian office at 113 Campus Center Basement.

THANG VOI COLLEGIAN

Weighing around...

Dave Trott, of Granby, Massachusetts, brings his tomatoes and green peppers from Breezy Acres farm to the outdoor market on Saturday morning at the Amherst town commons.

Accepted at more schools than you were.

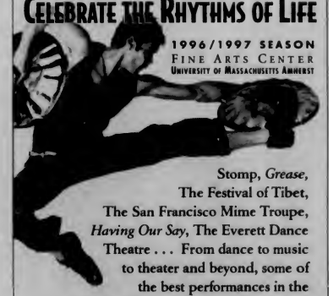


It's everywhere you want to be.

© 1996 Visa U.S.A. Inc

JUST DO IT
OPEN Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 P.M. 418 N. Pleasant Street
Please Contact Eric Spitz (Rush Chairman)
549-0676

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...



Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events

Come join the Student Health Advisory Board

Informational meeting:
Wed. September 18, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304

For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

CELEBRATE THE RHYTHMS OF LIFE
1996/1997 SEASON
FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Stomp, Grease, The Festival of Tibet, The San Francisco Mime Troupe, Having Our Say, The Everett Dance Theatre . . . From dance to music to theater and beyond, some of the best performances in the world are as close as the Fine Arts Center stage. And for only $5 a ticket, you can't afford not to take your seat.

So what are you waiting for? Come see what the noise is all about!

For tickets and information on our full season
ALL THIS FOR 5 BUCKS A SEAT? GET BUSY!
THE FINE ARTS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliot News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Oulot Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Don't believe the hype

Mike Burke

News bulletin — a United States military heat–seeking missile accidently blew up a TWA 747 killing hundreds of innocent passengers on their way to Paris.

Unfortunately, this isn't a scene out of the latest Tom Clancy thriller, it may very well be the latest cover–up by the government for national security reasons. And the government is not alone in the cover up.

After months during which most of America assumed terrorists were to blame for the horrifying accident over Long Island, many experts now believe that "friendly fire" may have been the cause of this catastrophe. But we may never learn the real story because we live in America, the home of the brave and free.

Unfortunately, neither Mr. "Brave" Brokaw nor any of the major networks will get anywhere near this late–breaking news, while they scare America into believing that drugs and crime are destroying its cities. And we can't forget how dangerous international terrorists are, especially those originating in the Middle East. Just look at Oklahoma City and the TWA crash over Long Island... oops, those were Americans, weren't they?

In the wake of the TWA crash, President Clinton quickly developed an anti–terrorist piece of legislation that swept through both the House and Senate. No one batted an eyelash as our representatives in Washington passed a law that severely curtailed essential freedoms deemed inalienable by our founding fathers. But this is 1996, not 1776. Their reason for this unconstitutional legislation? Our national security was endangered by foreign terrorists.

Freedom today is vastly different from 220 years ago. In school we were taught how little freedom existed in the Soviet Union. I was horrified to learn how all forms of mass media were controlled by the Kremlin. Where was their freedom?

But today, I ask where is our freedom? Where is this freedom of the press that our country was founded on? The connection between the major television networks and the government can not be ignored. In order to protect national security, they "protect" us from information that might harm us.

No, I am not claiming that aliens are living in New Mexico (though I am not sure exactly what lives in Thompson Hall), but I will guarantee you that if aliens ever landed, we wouldn't learn about them until Hollywood made a two–and–a–half hour movie on the subject. But such incidents of censorship happen every day.

Last month, while watching the local news, a reporter broke in with a report that a U.S. spy plane had crashed in northern California. More updates were to follow. I never heard a word about the crash again. It was as though it never happened — just like the government wants.

While we parade around with our red, white and blue, we must ask ourselves: How different are we from the Soviets who once marched with their sickles and hammers?

The media's deceptive view of America popped up again during the Republican and Democratic conventions. By carefully picking camera shots and time slots, the major networks transformed the conventions into a means of serving their personal interests.

During the Republican Convention, the cameramen consistently found every minority delegate in the hall. How many times can we see the same face and read the caption that should have read, "John Doe, the Gay Republican." There were actually fewer minority delegates in 1996 than in 1992, but one would never know by watching television — just another reason to kill your tube.

And then there was the Democratic Convention where the networks carefully delayed their coverage to avoid the Democratic Party's one–two punch of Jesse Jackson and Mario Cuomo, the party's most talented and fiery orators. While America was engrossed in some inane sitcom like Friends, Jackson was lighting up Chicago with a numbing speech about the future of America.

So what can we do about this? Stop watching network television and seek out alternative sources of news. Look on the Internet, underground newsletters, talk to friends, basically anything. Just don't believe the hype.

Mike Burke is a Collegian Columnist.

The Unknown Soldier

Andrew Trodden

Imagine this: you're in Vietnam in the middle of the war. You're lying in the most disgusting nastiness and filth you can imagine. There are bugs crawling all over you, bugs you've never even seen back in the States. You're trying to get some sleep but no matter how hard you try, you just won't close your eyes because the soldier on watch might doze off as well. You really want to brush some of those insects off of you, but can't because you know the slightest bit of noise may tip off the enemy in the bushes, who's waiting to blow your head off.

Imagine that.

I say that because none of us could know what that must feel like. We cannot know that hell. We do not want to know that hell. We'll just sit and watch it in the movies and pretend like we really feel the pain that those soldiers must have felt. We pretend like we understand what they went through, yet when you get right down to it, most of us aren't even brave enough to fight our way out of a paper bag.

Now let me tell you about a man I've never met — we'll call him Mr. S. He was there, he was in 'Nam. He had the bugs crawl all over him while he kept one eye open, wary of the enemy. He had bullets whiz by, just inches from his head only to land in the back of a fellow soldier. Maybe he was a friend, maybe not, but they wore the same uniform and that made them friends enough.

Mr. S. was even wounded in 'Nam. No, he didn't take a bullet, he fell and broke his arm dodging those bullets. We may know the pain of a broken bone, but how many of us have broken that bone while being shot at by people you can't even see because the foliage is so thick?

We have the nerve to complain if our car doesn't start or our television doesn't work. Then we can be so bold as to take it to someone who can fix it. Out there, if it broke you fixed it. If you couldn't fix it, you lived — or died — without it.

Mr. S. lived without it in 'Nam, and many of his friends died without it in 'Nam. Many of those friends may have died right there in Mr. S.'s arms because there were just too many wounds to stop the bleeding, and all he had to stop it with was a beat–up towel that had been used for everything. Maybe Mr. S. sat there with these men knowing that they were going to die, yet he kept telling them, in hopes of making the pain go away, that somehow, somewhere they were gonna be okay.

But by the time the choppers finally made it into the field to pick up the wounded, it was already too late for some. And for the others, well, Mr. S. knew they wouldn't make it home either, at least not the same way they left.

Every damn day more and more blood, more gunfire, more bombs, more friends whose moms never got to say goodbye and whose newborn child never got to say hi. Every day worse than the next, sleeping maybe two hours if you're lucky, walking for four more, only to get caught by incoming mortar shells. Maybe you get hit, maybe you don't, but there's always that thought that maybe today's your day. But then when the shelling is over and you're still standing, you somehow find it in yourself to be happy that you're still alive. As you look out over the mass of wounded soldiers, dead soldiers, soldiers you only know by their dog tags, you feel guilty but glad it's not you.

Mr. S. may very well know that feeling. Not a single one of us could ever comprehend what that hell must be like. We don't have to comprehend it because we don't have to go through it. We don't have to go through it because of people like Mr. S. and all the friends he lost out there in 'Nam. These are the real heroes of this country, the men and women who provide this freedom for us, our generation and generations to come, so that we do not have to go through the living hell and torture of war.

Mr. S. made it home from the war. He's a good family man now. But the thoughts and memories could never be too far from his mind. And when the choppers come in on Billy Joel's "Goodnight Saigon," you can't help but wonder what goes through the mind of a true hero like Mr. S. But all you can do is wonder because he'll never let it show. He's just listening to Billy sing "... we all go down together." He's thinking, "maybe Billy's right, but I'm not taking anyone down with me. I've been there and I don't want to go back."

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five–College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double–spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mark McGrath, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

MARLETTE
©1996 HERALD TRIBUNE

Whose security comes first?

Michelle Hillman

According to RAINN Rape Facts, a woman is raped every five minutes in the United States.

From personal experience, I know how frightening it can be to be by yourself at night and feel as though you might be in danger. My freshman year of college, I worked off–campus and had to take a bus at 11 p.m. every night. The bus stop was about half a mile from my work. One night, I missed the bus and began walking to the nearest phone to call for a ride. While I was walking, I noticed a man behind me on the sidewalk. I began to feel nervous, so I crossed the street and so did he. Finally, I broke into a full sprint and came to an intersection. At this intersection I came upon a UMass police car. Frantic, I asked the officer to roll down his window and asked the him to give me a ride home. His reply?

He refused to give me a ride because I was off–campus, and instructed me to call the escort service. This officer drove off and left me not only in a potentially dangerous situation, but also in shock. If something did happen to me that night, how would he explain, as a UMass police officer in a marked car, that he was the last person to have seen me? Although I should not have been walking alone, that is not the point.

Coming from the library, a parking lot or a friend's room are all potentially dangerous situations. What the University of Massachusetts does not like to tell new students or their parents is that although the University does not foster an unsafe environment for females, they also do not do anything in the way of preventive measures. I can remember how impressed my parents were with the help phones so graciously pointed out to us on one of our "campus tours." These phones, which are strategically placed around campus, will not do a damn thing if you happen to be, let's say, on frat row.

Maybe if these phones were around the areas in which women were actually being assaulted they might be helpful.

According to the MS. Project on Campus Sexual Assault, 2,971 college men reported that they had committed 187 rapes, 157 attempted rapes and 854 incidents of unwanted sexual contact.

What is even more appalling than these figures is the denial that these attackers grip onto so tightly. "We're being punished for one person's actions... I didn't do it. My brothers didn't do it. The Greek Community didn't do it," said Fabio Pari–di–Monriva, vice president of Zeta–Psi. Absolutely amazing. No one did it. No one is responsible. How is this kind of attitude possible in 1996?

Eighty–four percent of the men that committed rape said that what they did was not rape, according to the MS. Project.

Everyone is so afraid of the blame falling on their shoulders that people are just shifting it around instead of addressing the issue head on.

Men rape. Men rape women. Women get raped as early as the age of 12. One in two rape victims are under the age of 18.

The problem lies not in what women should be doing to protect their safety, but what colleges, universities, companies, corporations, businesses and society in general should do to acknowledge the problems of assault, harassment and rape.

In the case of the alleged rape that occurred last April at Sigma Phi Epsilon, the entire suit revolved around "adequate security" and "alcoholic beverages." Not to say that these things did not add to the danger of the situation, but in the words of the Director of the Greek Affairs, Michael Wiseman, "I have known of cases at other campuses with similar outcomes. I was also somewhat surprised because the decision was not based on an actual incident, but an environment that was created."

Thank you. At least one person agrees that the problem goes beyond the environment, alcoholic beverages or, say, the age old excuse about how the woman was dressed, but actually does have something to do with the assailant.

Ninety percent of the women on college campuses who have been raped are reported as having said "No" repeatedly.

Michelle Hillman is a Collegian staff member.

Learning to live with Ramen pride

Justin Beland

Much like your parents and damn near everyone else in your life, I have a piece of advice for those of you living in your first apartment. However, I believe my advice to be more practical than the standard "what phone company to use" and "why you should buy everything including your first child at Wal–Mart because the prices defy all modern rules of existence, both physical and metaphysical." (I am a firm believer that Wal–Mart just steals everything from cargo freighters in the Bermuda Triangle and sells it off at 100 percent profit. But I digress.) My morsel of wisdom is but this: don't go grocery shopping when you are hungry.

I'm sure I am too late to reach most of you, those poor souls with cabinets chock full of sour dough pretzels (possibly the only bulletproof snack food) and Spam. I will say nothing of Spam other than this: have you ever seen anyone buy it? Eat it? Of course you haven't, which leads me to believe that the same cans of Spam have been sitting on your local grocer's shelves since the Nixon administration.

I made the terrible mistake of doing my annual "first trip" to Stop & Shop after moving two couches, weighing (at a conservative estimate) six thousand pounds each, up 57 flights of stairs. Okay, it was two flights of stairs, but physical prowess–wise, I make Norm from Cheers look like a pubescent pit bull. I also moved a futon and its accompanying frame up the same flights of stairs, which someone had made steeper after the couches.

To this day, I can't fathom why I bought a futon and a frame. The thing cost twice as much as a king–sized bed would have. I guess I felt that at some point in the future, it would come in handy if I ever had a friend sleep over the house. Now I know that sleeping on a rusty steel grate is pure bliss compared to my futon (the only bullet–proof sleeping apparatus), and that if I wanted to keep the aforementioned friend, I would have been better off letting him bunk down in one of my bureau drawers.

So after these spectacular feats of pure testosterone, I was ready to buy food. Big mistake. Anyone else get roped into buying two cases of Ramen noodles? Yes they're dirt cheap, but it's time to face the cold, hard truth: they taste much like the words "botulism" and "cholera" sound — just plain scary.

The first time I made Ramen noodles, I didn't quite know what I was doing. I dumped the water out and was left with just noodles. You laugh at my ignorance, but it wasn't bad, and I haven't been able to eat them any other way since. You can't help but notice that no matter what the little tinfoil package says, be it "shrimp" or "chicken" or "chicken mushroom" or "beef" or "guano," all the flavors taste the same; that is, almost, but not quite like, that which they are supposed to taste like.

I think I'm the only sober person who has ever bought tripe. For those of you playing along at home, tripe is the stomach lining of a cow. It looks a bit like a cut–up plastic bag, and, for that matter, tastes like one too. It's probably the only hunk of cow more disgusting on a plate than on the tongue. (Bought me one of those too.)

To offset the hunk o' cholesterol above, I bought a healthy breakfast cereal. One of those "fiber–rich" cereals. "Fiber– rich" meaning the rough fiber equivalent of raw twine. It's good, but rather than proudly proclaiming "fiber–rich," the box should say: "WARNING: Nuclear laxative in a box. You should probably just dump this in your toilet and eliminate the middle–man."

So that's my advice to young apartment dwellers. I'd write more, but I've got Ramen on the stove, and I gotta run to the bathroom.

Justin Beland is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Columnist a hypo–critical slanderer

To the editor:

Mark McGrath's editorial (9/9/96) entitled "No nonsense" blatantly spews forth some of the very foolishness that his column's title purports to avoid. As he has done on several occasions during his career as a Collegian writer, McGrath has attempted to ridicule the Cannabis Reform Coalition with baseless and laughable claims.

Readers were once again then assured of McGrath's DARE–fueled ignorance when reading his tirade against "that stuff (the CRC says) about marijuana not hurting anyone and not leading to more serious drugs." By issuing such sweeping generalizations concerning the CRC's major tenets, McGrath slyly avoids having to debate recent findings in biochemical research, current sociological theory, or any other of the base elements of the anti–prohibitionist stance.

McGrath has not succeeded in cloaking his ignorant and uninformed views from those who are the least bit cognizant of the complexities of the failed War–on–Some–Drugs.

McGrath's especially hypocritical nature is revealed when we compare his anti–marijuana stance with his views on alcohol consumption, as written in his editorial "The ABC's to college a guide to campus life" (Summer Orientation 1996): "underage drinking – never seen it, never will."

Is Mr. McGrath thus of the opinion that consumption of ethyl alcohol — a deadly neurotoxin associated with physical addiction, cirrhosis of the liver, heart disease, fetal alcohol syndrome, alcohol poisoning — by children is somehow more morally acceptable than what the CRC advocates, which is the controlled re–legalization of recreational cannabis — which all scientific literature has heralded as non–toxic and non–physically addictive?

The CRC earnestly encourages UMass students to reconsider Mark McGrath's hypocritical, uneducated and dangerous statements in light of their obvious intent to groundlessly slander our organization.

John Lanzerotta
Treasurer
Cannabis Reform Coalition

Arts & Living

Van Damme doubles in new dud

Risk proves to be a maximum bore with clichéd high action plot

COURTESY ALAN MARK

Jean–Claude Van Damme and Natasha Henstridge show off plenty of skin but little talent in Maximum Risk.

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

MAXIMUM RISK
Directed by Ringo Lam
with Jean–Claude Van Damme, Natasha Henstridge, Jean–Hughes Anglade and Stephanie Audran
Playing at Hampshire Six Theater

The Muscles from Brussels returns to excite viewers with his latest action film, Maximum Risk. However, certainly no excitement nor suspense abounds in this movie. Instead, Jean–Claude Van Damme barely holds this film afloat with its badly clichéd car chases and its even worse choreographed fight scenes.

As in a previous film, Double Impact, Van Damme takes on two roles — playing twin brothers. They are separated at birth because their mother Chantal, (Stephanie Audran) cannot afford to keep them both. One twin stays in France, the other is raised in the United States by Russians.

Van Damme plays Alain Moreau, a retired French soldier, who currently earns a living as a policeman. He inadvertently stumbles upon the body of his unknown twin, Mikhail (also Van Damme), who had been killed by thugs in the South of France.

Perplexed by the whole situation, Alain takes his brother's passport and heads to New York City to solve the mystery of Mikhail's murder. With the help of a Quentin Tarentino– ish cab driver, he finds himself at the Bohemian club, located in the city's Russian community, Little Odessa. He is — surprise — mistaken for Mikhail and chased by Russian mobsters.

Enter Alex Minetti — the beautiful girlfriend of Mikhail (played by Species' Natasha Henstridge), who is also under the assumption Alain is Mikhail. After quickly escorting Alain to the back of the club at which she is the hostess, she kisses him passionately, and gives him the key to a hotel room, saying she'll be there later.

And to confuse matters even more, the Russian Mafia is both Alain's friend and nemesis. He cannot decide who to trust, and it appears that everyone is out to kill him. Alain cannot even be sure if Alex is on his side.

Instead of mesmerizing the audience, and keeping them glued to their seats, the complex plot results in a confusing, shallow storyline that is only held together by Van Damme's star name and sex appeal.

Though touted as an action–packed intriguing story full of suspense, Maximum Risk plays more like a bad John Le Carré novel. Any element of surprise is non–existent; any hint of conspiracy is so obvious and contrived that it's known from the start of the movie. Sadly, for action movie fans, there is an overwhelming sense of deja–vu; from the restaurant fight scene, to the badly choreographed car chase scenes, everything's been done before.

While it's obvious that Van Damme is the meat of the movie, it's hard to distinguish Henstridge's role — other than the gratuitous sex and nudity. Hardly a scene goes by without her disrobing or kissing Van Damme. When she finds out that her boyfriend is dead, it makes virtually no impact on her. She glides into Alain's arms in the blink of an eye.

There's no doubt that Van Damme knows he is a sex symbol, and takes every opportunity to show off his buff body. This time he fights the Mafia in a sauna dressed in only a bath towel,

Turn to RISK, page 6

Live N'degeocello jams rev up R&B

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

ME'SHELL N'DEGEOCELLO
Pearl Street
Sept. 14

NORTHAMPTON — Me'Shell N'degeocello's show Saturday night at Pearl Street was all about groove. The music selections before she came on (songs from James Brown, Fugees and other funk/hip–hop artists) already had the crowd dancing. No opening band performed, and none was needed to warm this crowd up.

N'degeocello attracts a diverse crowd, which truly illustrates her universal messages and music. The sharply dressed audience got a lot more music to dance to once N'degeocello and her ensemble of five musicians and two backup singers hit the stage.

From her first few songs, including "The Way" (off her new superb album, Peace Beyond Passion), and her single from the 1993 album, Plantation Lullabies, "If That Was Your Boyfriend, He Wasn't Last Night," the audience could clearly sense there was a lot of power on stage.

N'degeocello puts forth presence and showmanship reminiscent of The Artist Formerly Known As Prince, possibly even with hints of His Bad Self, James Brown.

She continued the set with songs from her new album including "Deuteronomy: Niggerman" and "Ecclesiastes: Free My Heart." That song's powerful lyrics were carefully enunciated by N'degeocello: "For my time on earth, I pay dearly for the past. Confusion embraces my heart for to know self, is to forgive self, my sojourn of truth." The band blissfully showed their dedication to Rhythm & Blues.

N'degeocello's own bass abilities were only displayed a few times during the show, but when she did pick up the bass, there was no questioning that her command of the instrument equalled her emotional songwriting and relaxed and honest singing abilities.

Some of the figures she played on the bass steered the band into a new song. Most of the night, songs were strung together by groove to prevent the energetic crowd from stopping their dancing (a concrete example of her James Brown showmanship influence).

By the end of the show, the band had reached musical peaks over and over again, both in mellow, crooning tones and upbeat funk.

For all those who missed this event of an unmatched caliber, it would be wise, and very fun, to catch N'degeocello when she comes around again. Then you will see the ways in which N'degeocello takes R&B and turns it all into a religious experience, where she is preaching about her search for a higher power who truly loves all.

Mullins Center erupts as 311 take charge

By Rob Stevens
Collegian Staff

311
Mullins Center
Sept. 13

311 sure knows how to draw the kids — rowdy kids. Their headlining show at the Mullins Center was filled with scenes of youthful rebellion straight out of an MTV video featuring near riots and plenty of moshing, and of course, angry aggressive music. The event, which also featured the Deftones and the Urge, was in high gear well before 311 made an appearance.

Even before the Deftones took the stage, fans sitting in the lower arena seats had organized a rally to rush the floor once the lights went down. Hundreds of young fans jumped over two front rows of seats and over a gate to reach the open floor — mosh–pit mania.

The lax and understaffed security could do little to prevent this onslaught of floor–rushers, aside from stopping a few stragglers before they made it to the pit. No one was hurt and, surprisingly enough, this whole scene recurred when the 311 came on the stage.

Enough about the crowd... the Deftones played a wonderful role as a supporting act. In their 10–song set, the band combined elements of heavy metal, rap and punk. Lead singer Chino Moreno was the highlight of this act. Through most of the set, he was down on his knees screaming in a defiant rage, jumping into the mass of crowd surfers, or climbing on top of speakers — always inviting the UMass crowd to join him in his aggression.

The Deftones played a solid set of completely hard–edged, almost Rage Against the Machine–like metal that warmed the crowd up well.

Bright lights, psychedelic images and thousands of screaming fans greeted 311's appearance onto the stage. It was evident from the start, as both lead singers came out shirtless, that the band was ready to rock hard.

Live, 311 intricately mixes rock 'n' roll with reggae, ska, funk and rap with a main intent set on audience

Turn to 311, page 6

UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
TO UNDERGRAD SPORT MANAGEMENT MAJORS

THE ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE IS SEEKING RESPONSIBLE WORKERS FOR HOME FOOTBALL GAMES FOR THE 1996 SEASON.

POSITIONS INCLUDE, BUT ARE NOT LIMITED TO:
PARKING ATTENDANTS
USHERS
TICKET SELLERS
TICKET TAKERS
TAILGATE SECURITY

THERE WILL BE A MEETING FOR ALL THOSE INTERESTED ON THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19 AT 5:30PM AT WARREN MCGUIRK ALUMNI STADIUM, AT THE TOP OF SECTION 6. TH

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY		WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on–going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m.	Increasing Self–Esteem, Building Self–confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self–esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self–confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self–esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi–sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m. Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self–esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid–October. All groups require a pre–group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545–2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M–F, 8–5.

Trainspotting

AMERICAN & FOREIGN MOVIE POSTERS
ROCK POSTERS
PHOTOS & POSTCARDS
SCRIPTS

SEPT 16 – 19
Student Union Ballroom

PIKE

DO YOU MISS HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS?
DO YOU MISS REAL PARTIES?
ARE YOU TIRED OF BEING JUST ANOTHER NUMBER ON CAMPUS?
ARE YOU TIRED OF DOING THE SAME THING EVERY WEEKEND?
DO YOU MISS EATING GOOD FOOD?

JUST DO IT.

Open Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 to 10:00 P.M.

PLEASE CONTACT ERIC SMITH 549–0676

THE DECISION IS YOURS

Spear to take care of 'Rasta Business'

By Tim Gleason
Collegian Correspondent

The uplifting condition of 'reggaemylitis' has been spreading over the town for some time now and will be brought to a feverish pitch tomorrow night with the coming of reggae legend, musical wise man Burning Spear. Don't miss this train, fans — catch reggae music at its very best.

The hardest working man in roots-rock reggae is making a triumphant return to the Valley with a year of work and success under his belt. Burning Spear (a.k.a. Winston Rodney) has been touring the entire summer, town to town, with shows nearly every night. The 51-year-old original dread is bringing forth his message and music more powerfully than ever after 25 years.

Spear will be supporting his latest album, Rasta Business, which claims a spot as one of his best. From "Creation" to "Subject in School" to the title track, the album is a reggae classic. Burning Spear, a cultural ambassador, continues his unbending devotions to rasta consciousness and the spirit and teachings of Marcus Garvey.

His work has not gone without notice and due respect. In 1995, Spear topped the 14th annual International Reggae Music Awards with nine nominations, four of which he claimed, including the Bob Marley Award for Entertainer of the Year, Best Music Video, the Marcus Garvey Humanitarian Award, as well as induction into the Reggae Hall of Fame.

The elder statesman of reggae music continues his work with no sign of stopping. Getting his start as the renowned Studio One in Jamaica in 1969, Burning Spear has been travelling the globe ever since. Sending out his voice, the voice of peace, he has kept the voice of Garvey alive.

He has done it with over a dozen albums and countless mesmerizing live performances. His shows excite. They are get-up, rock-up dances and memorable experiences played with a passion that Spear brings out every night.

Proven by the success of his live albums and his tours, Spear is still a reggae force. Do not miss the creation rebel as he continues his journey, telling his stories and philosophies to young and old alike for all to benefit.

"Reggaemylitis, is it dangerous?" No, but very contagious, and don't even try to fight it tomorrow night.

COURTESY CHRIS CARROLL

Burning Spear brings Rasta roots and reggae legacy to Pearl Street on Tuesday night.

Local groups fire up Butterfield

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Indie pop fans were in for a sweet treat on Saturday night at Butterfield as the Mitchells, Bunnygrunt, The Crabs and Tullycraft rocked the basement.

Over 125 people were in attendance for the pop show. Seemingly equal representations of students came out to see each of the three headlining bands.

After an early departure by the Mitchells due to a dormitory fire, the St. Louis band, Bunnygrunt played an 11-song set full of loud pop songs which, at times, hinted of rock 'n' roll.

Bunnygrunt's drummer began the set by saying, "I'm sick of all this standing around, let's rock!" She was addressing some minor sound difficulties, which faded away as they belted out some tunes. Disappointingly, the entire crowd sat down during most of the completely danceable and fun set.

The highlight of the Bunnygrunt's set was drummer's rendition of "Johnny Angel," which was just as sweet as the M&M Chocolate Candies represented on the guitarist's yellow tee shirt.

During their first East Coast show, the Crabs played a surprisingly diverse set of 11 songs, ranging from soft, sweet pop songs to "Quicksand," a definite rock 'n roll jam during which bassist Sean Tollefson of Tullycraft played.

The Crabs threw Reese's Peanut Butter Cups Miniatures and Smarties to the audience, as well as "Crabs" tattoos for the few vegan audience members.

Tullycraft, from Seattle, ended the show and brought the crowd to their feet. They played the poppiest set of the night, and the dancers took advantage. By request, the quartet played "Pop Songs Your New Boyfriend's Too Stupid To Know About" to the crowd's delight.

■ 311

continued from page 5

participation. The floor was filled with thousands of fans bobbing their heads, raising their arms, moshing and crowd surfing. The overly excited crowd cheered in excitement throughout nearly every song.

Singers Nicholas Hexum and SA Martinez traded off rhymes, verse for verse, matching each other in intensity and feel. Clever lyrics led into funky choruses rooted in reggae. Funky guitar rhythms, slap popping bass lines and an earthy beat worked perfectly with the two singers' dual action in creating a unique chemistry of rhythm. Although the guitars play loud and distorted rock, 311 often jumped into slow, mellow grooves which, at times, were psychedelic before bumping back into grinding dance music.

"Homebrew," from their second album, Grassroots, captured their spirited reggae side. Guitar riffs a la Blues Traveler flowed throughout this song which mixes ska rock and Beastie Boys-ish rap. The next tune, "Down," brought an enormous applause and an increase in moshing.

Soon after they played their hit single, the band warned the audience, "If y'all are here for the MTV stuff and all that, y'all best leave now." The band went on to play a long, energy-packed set which included three encores and several tunes from their debut album, Music, for the old school 311 fans.

■ Risk

continued from page 5

leaving the audience to wonder how, through kicks and punches, it doesn't fall off.

But even with all these problems, nothing could be as bad as the final fight scene in the movie. The characters end up in a slaughterhouse, surrounded by the hanging carcasses of hundreds of pigs. An unlucky swine is chainsawed in half, marking the focal point of unnecessary gore.

In a genre of films that revolves around only a few stars, Jean-Claude Van Damme can afford to be choosy about which roles he takes. He usurped Steven Seagal's throne many movies ago. Maximum Risk is not the film that will strengthen Van Damme's reign on action movie stardom, but rather the one that will destroy it. C–

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?
Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.
Come down today!

GUATEMALA
Student Tour
Visit - Mayan villages, refugee communities, ancient ruins, beaches, tropical jungles...
Meet - Guatemalan students, human rights workers, Mayan activists, women's organizations...
January 3 - 17
$750
(Plus airfare to Guatemala)
For information contact Steve Stewart: 413 772 3738

STUDENTS WITH LEARNING DISABILITIES
This Spring semester, researchers at the UMASS School of Education will be conducting a research project/independent study course which focuses on the life experiences of students with learning disabilities. The title of the project is:
Learning Disabilities and Adolescence: an Autobiographical Perspective.
Students who participate in the project will write a personal essay about their own adolescence and how it has been affected by having a learning disability.
Participants will receive 3 undergraduate independent study credits and individualized instruction in writing.
If you are interested in participating, please call 665-6729 for more information. Students who elect to participate will be asked to begin in mid September, so please call soon!

Sundayriver
Killington
SUGARBUSH
Mount Snow
Haystack
ATTITASH BEAR PEAK
sugarloaf/usa.
WINTER MISSION tour '96
date
Monday, Sept 16
time
11:00-5:00
place
The Beach presented by American Skiing Company
MOUNTAIN DEW
Sponsored by
UMASS SKI CLUB
AIRWALK
FILA
SONY
Jeep
PAUL MITCHELL
PROFESSIONAL SALON PRODUCTS

■ football

continued from page 10

those things every week."

Holy Cross began the game going three downs and out on their opening two possessions, and UMass made good on its second series of the game when the Minutemen got the lights on the scoreboard working first.

Catterton fired a 36–yard touchdown strive to tight end Erik Henry, who found the endzone untouched with 9:28 left in the first quarter, for an early 7–0 UMass lead.

The Minutemen would add to the lead with 1:11 left on the clock in the first quarter, as Catterton once again found Henry for 36 yards, to advance to the Holy Cross four–yard line. One play later, Catterton would run it in from two yards out for the second score of the day.

Henry was reliable throughout the day and was Catterton's prime target, catching five balls for 98 yards and a TD.

"We've been running a lot of play action trying to get the defense moving around and open up some holes, and it worked pretty well today," Henry said. "People always try to emphasize the run against us, so we should be able to throw whenever we want."

Throw the ball they did, as Catterton spread the wealth around, finding five different receivers, hitting three with touchdown passes.

"Teams can't stick eight people on the line of scrimmage and think they're going to win now," Henry said. "They've got to look at how we're passing, and cover that, so it's going to open things up for us."

Running back Frank Alessio and fullback Ron Brockington ran for over 100 yards each on the day, with Alessio gaining 103 yards on 21 carries and Brockington 108 yards on 17 carries.

The Minutemen are now 24–0 in games where two running backs have rushed for over 100 yards.

Allesio ran well, finding the holes and taking the pitch out, while Brockington was a force crashing through the line and dragging tacklers for yards. Catterton also scrambled for 42 yards and one touchdown on 10 carries.

After giving up a field goal midway through the second quarter, UMass drove 64 yards on four plays in 1:19 to score once again. The scoring drive was capped with a 16– yard TD pass to tight end Bryan Healy.

"The guys did a great job," Catterton said. "The tight ends and the offensive line did a great job. The receivers were just open, and when they get open and I got time to throw the ball, its like pitch and catch."

Holy Cross would come back with a drive of its own as they went 72 yards on 12 plays, ending with a TD to Brian Hopkins from Brian Stapp.

Stapp was 28–46 with 199 yards and 1 TD on the day for the Crusaders, tossing the ball to nine different receivers.

The Holy Cross ground game was spread out between four backs who ran for 110 yards.

At halftime, the Minutemen held the advantage 21–10, and they went on to score once more in the third quarter. Catterton found freshman wide out Torey Hamilton for 49 yards and the last UMass score.

The UMass defense played well in the afternoon. It held the Crusaders to short yardage on the ground, and was strong in pass coverage as well. Senior co–captain Kory Blackwell, a cornerback, led the charge for the defense.

Sophomore linebecker Khari Samuel continued to show opponents what pain feels like, as he led the linebackers.

"I was happy we stayed together like we needed to and that was a plus for us," Samuel said. "Everyone's position has improvement needed but I think we came together better than the first game."

Justin Riemer was strong as well, recording the only sack of the day on the Crusaders quarterback.

Andy Maclay punted well for the Minutemen, averaging 45 yards a punt. Place kicker Erik Oke was four–for–four on extra points.

Hodges was happy after the win, but said he wants to cut down on mistakes.

"We won the football game and that's great, I'm happy for our kids, but we have a lot of things to clean up," Hodges said. "They know that we are capable of playing a lot better than we played."

The Minutemen are on the road next weekend, finishing off a three–game road trip. They play the Richmond Spiders this Saturday at 1:00 p.m.

■ Catterton

continued from page 10

with our offensive line, you've got to have your linebackers' play run," Hodges said. "If we can continue to work the mix back there, and cut out the penalties, we're gonna be fine."

The key to this new passing attack is the play of Catterton. Catterton looked sharper on Saturday than he did against Villanova, and he looked more confident in the pocket.

Still, there were mistakes, like his fumble on the first drive that killed a UMass push into Holy Cross territory, and some throws that were off target. But for this experiment in a more wide open passing game to work, UMass can't abandon its quarterback if things don't go well right away.

"You get in a rhythm," Catterton said. "When I did miss a couple passes, we kept right at it, we kept throwing the ball, and good things ended up happening."

Lost in all this talk about the offense was the play of the defense, which stuffed the Crusaders all day. Holy Cross was never able to establish any sense of an offensive rhythm, save for one touchdown drive in the second quarter. Leading the way was sophomore linebacker Khari Samuel, with nine tackles, and senior linebacker Justin Reimer with six tackles, including a sack of Holy Cross quarterback Brion Stapp with 4:48 left in the game. The sack caused a fumble which was recovered by the Minutemen, ending any hope of a late comeback by the Crusaders.

Having the offense get on the board early seemed to have a positive effect on the defense, allowing it to establish a rhythm without having its back to the wall like last week.

"If the offense, or defense gives a spark, we can all come together and start doing things right," Samuel said.

The secondary showed improvement from last week, allowing only 199 yards passing to Holy Cross, which threw 46 times. Senior cornerback Kory Blackwell was everywhere, and Tony Gugliazza, who replaced an injured Brian Mooney, responded with seven tackles.

Despite the great play of the defense, it is the offense that people want to hear about, and the question as to whether the Minutemen can have a balanced and effective attack of running and passing remains.

It's still hard to tell. Saying that Holy Cross was not the toughest opponent the Minutemen will face all season is an understatement. All day it seemed as though the flow of the game was dictated by the Minutemen, and the offensive line had no trouble pushing the smaller defensive line of the Crusaders all over the field, giving Catterton time to establish his passing attack.

UMass could have blown the Crusaders out of the water early, but stupid mistakes, such as 13 penalties and three fumbles, kept UMass from making it ugly for the Crusaders.

Hodges was not pleased at the Minutemen's repeat performance in the penalty department.

"We have to take a good hard look at [the penalties]," Hodges said. "Maybe we can some officials to come to practice or something, but we have to get those things cleaned up because we're not going to able to overcome these things every week."

Hodges is right. The Minutemen beat the Crusaders, but they didn't look fabulous doing it.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

JMU found the Minutewoman net about 10 minutes later, when Julie Weiss pushed the ball past Rose after a scramble in front of the cage.

Dianne Cegielski gave the Dukes their first lead nine minutes into the second half.

UMass thought it had tied the game on a Rothenberger shot, but the goal was disallowed because there were two balls on the field.

It didn't take long for UMass to overcome to stop in play, as Katherine McClellan tied the game 20 seconds after the game was restarted.

Neither team was able to convert in the first overtime, with UMass sending a shot just wide of the JMU net 11 minutes into the extra period.

Rose was impressive in goal for UMass, stopping 25 shots, including a penalty shot in the first half. Only 16 seconds before the Minutewomen's first goal, Rose stopped a Dukes' penalty shot. James Madison goalie Tara Perilla made 10 saves.

UMass coach Pam Hixon was pleased with her team's effort in the close game.

"The game was a war," Hixon

■ soccer

continued from page 10

toying with multiple Bonnie defenders as if the ball were a teddy bear dangled before a newborn.

St. Bonaventure mustered no offensive pressure in the first half, with only three legitimate offensive possessions in the 45–minute period. The Bonnies posted just two shots, both well wide of the Minutewomen net, and St. Bonaventure's first half time of possession on the entire UMass half of the field literally could have been measured with an egg timer.

The Minutewomen started the match on a rampage, taking six shots in the first five minutes — 10 in the opening nine minutes of the match — and tallying the opening score.

Myers scored what amounted to her third game winning goal in four matches, at the 3:53 mark, converting on a feed from Julie Magid from six yards out. The goal moved Myers into second place on the school's all–time chart.

Freshman Emma Kurowski, a day after tallying her first collegiate assist, scored her first UMass goal by heading in a Tina Lightning corner kick at 35:58.

"We haven't been scoring very many goals at all lately, and we're finally coming through and finishing goals in the final third [of the field]," UMass co–captain Erin Lynch said.

The Minutewoman dominance continued into the second half, when freshman goalkeeper Angie Napoli, making her first start and appearance, made her only save of the entire match on Jo Storms in the 62nd minute.

Moments after being inserted for Myers in the match's 74th minute, Tarah Tokarchik sent a precise pass across the top of the penalty area to Magid, who lofted a beautiful shot over besieged Bonnie keeper Margaret Reif.

Similarly, at 80:59, less than a minute after entering her second collegiate match, hard–working freshman Kate Webb, of nearby Westfield, collected the loose rebound of her own shot and tallied an unassisted goal, the first of her career.

Webb looked strong in her debut this weekend, exhibiting the potential to become a player similar to Connecticut sparkplug Ina Carabino, a small but quick, mobile and tenacious reserve with a knack for busting through and scoring against fatigued defensive lines. Webb took five shots in her 10 minutes of playing time yesterday, four of which were earmarked for the back of the net.

"Webb–ster got one and almost four," Rudy said. "She reminds me of a damn barracuda after a mate fish. She just hopped on [loose balls] so quick. She can accelerate the pace of the game. She has a knack."

In Saturday's match against the Gauchos, UMass held a strong territorial advantage, but had few good chances at the UC Santa Barbara goal.

Lightning struck for UMass' first goal 21:54 into the match, as she perfectly chipped the rebound of a Kurowski shot over UCSB goalkeeper Ilsa Bertolini from 18 yards out.

After being set up by Lynch and Tokarchik, Amy Powell scored the second half's only goal at the 48:25 mark with a precision 25–yard blast that snuck into the goal just under the cross bar.

■ weekend

continued from page 10

but we had some key players that just had poor games, without mentioning names," Rudy said. "But they know, and some kids did not play up to their levels.

"So, I reminded the seniors they have only fourteen games left in their regular season careers, and to make them count."

Rudy was more than concerned with another example of miscommunication in the back line, which brought back memories of their season opener versus Fairfield. Near the end of the match, the mix–up between junior keeper Danielle Dion and her defense was too similar to the only goal scored against UMass this season, which was a late own goal.

"Yeah, I guess it is kind of a nice feeling to know that the only goal scored against you is by your own team," junior defender Erica Iverson said. "We were wearing down, we tend to lose our concentration a little and that is when we need to buckle down and focus.

"It won't happen again, the coach will make sure of that."

Whatever passing continuity the Minutewomen had from the outset of the first and second halves was lost in the final twenty minutes. The team looked to digress, and according to senior Tina Lightning, they have to work on that final part of the game, mentally and physically.

"The first half was pretty good, but sometimes there were a few breakdowns," Lightning said. "Yeah, [the field] does make a difference, because we try and get on Garber Field well before the game to try and get a feel for it. On the whole we passed well, but we can pass better."

On Sunday versus St. Bonaventure, that statement was more than justified, as UMass came out fast with a goal just 3:53 into the match. Both senior midfielder Amy Powell and freshman forward Emma Kurowski had early opportunities, but it was senior tri–captain Rebecca Myers' header off fellow tri–captain Julie Magid's beautiful free kick which made that goal the eventual game winner.

The Minutewomen offense dominated the entire game this time, piling up 46 shots in the match, breaking an 18–year– old record for shots in a match against a Division I opponent, while limiting St. Bonnies to four shots. Later in the second half, when the wave of substitutions began, players like freshmen midfielder Tarah Tokarchik and forward Kate Webb made immediate impacts. Tokarchik assisted on Magid's goal at the 73:38 mark, while Webb scored her first collegiate goal, capitalizing on a loose ball in front of Bonnies keeper Margaret Reif to make the final score of 4–0. Senior defender, and All–American, Erin Lynch saw that the coach's little talk after the UCSB game was needed, and helped the team to relatively get back on track.

"I still think there is room for improvement," Lynch said. "It helped out a lot, and we needed to be woken up."

■ volleyball

continued from page 10

afraid to make aggressive mistakes. She was extremely powerful at the net. And I was happy to see Nolan reach the 1,000 kill mark. She played strong 'D' for us, as well."

Kenny was especially happy with Meyers.

"But I think Jill Meyers played better than anyone," she said. "She played good 'D' and served the ball well. And she held the blockers which opened up the outside hitters, creating a one–on–one situation."

On Saturday, UMass beat Delaware, 15–11, 15–2, 15–5 and downed Seton Hall 15–1, 15–3, 15–4. Nash earned 24 kills while hitting an impressive .419 on the day. In the final, she managed a match–high 12 kills and a .474 hitting percentage.

In the championship against Seton Hall, UMass scored 12 unanswered points to start the match, and the Pirates never recovered.

"It's a tribute to the players," Kenny said. "We made few unforced errors against Seton Hall, and we played hard throughout. Seton Hall was not as bad as we made them look."

En route to earning MVP honors, Meyers totalled 34 kills and 39 digs for the tourney, including a career–high 17 kills and 23 digs. Nolan, Nash and sophomore setter Pearce were all named to the All–Tournament team.

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

what's ing
As low as $36.22* per month
Everything.
■ Complete multimedia computer customized for students
■ Campus Z-Station® features:
• Powerful Intel® Pentium® processor
• Large capacity hard drive
• Plenty of memory to run today's hottest applications
• Plug & Play into your campus network with a high-speed modem
■ Desktop Systems include Microsoft® Natural® Keyboard and Microsoft Mouse
■ Loaded with Microsoft software for study and fun
• Microsoft Office for Windows 95 with Word, Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Microsoft Access, Scheduler, Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, Microsoft Internet Assistants
• Microsoft Windows 95 with Microsoft Internet Explorer 2.0
• Microsoft Plus!
• Games for Windows 95
• Norton AntiVirus and more
■ Hewlett Packard Color DeskJet available
■ Ask about Microsoft Programmer's Dream Pack

Processor	Pentium 100 MHz	Pentium 133 MHz	Pentium 166 MHz
Hard drive	1.2GB	1.9GB	2.1GB
Monitor	14" (13.2" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)	15" (13.7" viewable)
Price	$1799	$2199	$2499
with LAN card	$1899*	$2299	$2599

Experience Campus Z-Station.
The University Store
413-545-2619
http://www.zds.com
education@zds.com
BROADSIDE/University of Massachusetts

Jim & Gabe
Guys & Gals Clipper Cuts
Layer Cuts Razor Cuts
Flat Tops Kid Cuts
Fades
Appointment Not Necessary
The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Amherst Barbers
Tom & Terri
Hours: Mon – Wed, 8 – 5:15pm
Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-2:45pm
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA (Next to Newbury Comics)
Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid Officials Needed For Flag Football, Softball, Soccer, & Ice Hockey
Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 18, 19, 20
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 19, 23, 24
Ice Hockey - Sept. 25
Call for times & locations
Still Time To Enter Flag Football, Soccer, & Softball
More Info In 215 Boyden, 5-2693/5-0022
on the web: http://www.umass.edu.80/umim/

UMass
INTRAMURAL SPORTS
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Flag Football (M/W/C) ... 9/18
Soccer (M/W) ... 9/18
Co-ed Softball ... 9/18
Ice Hockey (M/W) ... 9/18
Track & Cross Country ... 9/24
On the webhttp://www.umass.edu:80/umim
Don't Miss The ACTION
For entry forms & info
269
LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENS... BOYDEN 215

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Play Women's Rugby! Fun and challenging. Daily 4-6pm Call Mel @ 256-5470

AUTO FOR SALE

90 Geo Prism Excellent condition. $3000/BO. 584-8302 Ask for Mum

1986 Subaru GL Hatchback 114k miles Good condition 4WD Drive $1600 Best O Call 586-3497

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme Good running condition Best offer Call 545-3007 or 634-5732

MAZDA '91 323 HATCHBACK, 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done. $2800 OBO. Call 549-7286

1978 FORD LTD $550.00 247-9456

1983 Olds, Delta 83 for sale. New tires, rotors, wheels Panasonic Stereo System, $750 Call 253-7258

VW Golf '88 Good condition 82,000 mi $3200 Call Christa Mon-Fri 8-4 545-5362

EMPLOYMENT

INTERNS WANTED

(http://www.takema.com). Need creative, innovative individuals Graphic Gurus, Inspired Writers, Human Net Browsers. For quick cash - weekly scholarships.

Need some extra cash, but don't have time for a steady job? Sign up to work Family Day, Saturday, September 28. Applications can be picked up at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall. For more info contact Jenn Bennett at 545-2317

Business Opportunity Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth-Friendly company looking for distributors. Wild Organic Food. Free Tape 1-800-927-2527 ext. 7368

Wanted: Skiers and Snowboarders Want to ski or snowboard for free and gain sales experience? Write and tell me why. Send letter and resume to: Kevin Moran, Stratton Mt., RR1 Box 145, Stratton Mt, VT 05155

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $20,000+/month World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext C50015

National Parks Hiring Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50015

Tropical Resorts Hiring Students needed! Entry-level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment Earn up to $25 $45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Drivers Wanted For The Optimist. One day a week, good pay! Call 585-7070 Ext 27

Attention Skiers and Boarders Entry level positions into the ski industry with skiing benefits Make up to $1000/month. Part-time enthusiastic individuals please call Ski Card International 1-800-333-2SKI

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9142

FOR SALE

Dave Matthews Tickets for sale 10/6 Call 549-4739

Fridge w/freezer 4ft tall, mint Call Kelly 549-0920 $90 or BO

TREK MULTITRAK 720, 15 in frame, $250 OR B.O. Call 253-1602

PINBALL MACHINE Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 (860) 548-9728

Stereo Systems and components, used/reconditioned. Large selection, honest advice, warranty, great prices We buy audio, video, DJ, musical equipment. Stereo and Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call Amherst, 256-0941

Bunnies!!! All colors, mini-lops 367-0105

Rossignol Skiboots Mens size 12 (29.5) new B.O. Call (413)637-2282

SALE Dorm Fridge $125, Word Processor $100 Call 546-1576

FOUND

Pair of prescription eyeglasses Outside GRC on 9/10 Call UMASS Police to claim

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3354

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Retire rich in ten years

LOST

Sunglasses Prescripion, Oakley w/ case Call 549-3950

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed For dark pop/rock band. Call Phil 549-5836

MISCELLANEOUS

VISA/MASTERCARD GUARANTEED Bad credit No credit No problem Call 1-800-354-1590 (24 hours)

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

WORTH THE RIDE

2BR Apt in Sunderland HW floors, washidry, porch, garage

315= BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4394

Northampton- Roomate needed in great downtown two bedroom apt. Own bedroom/bathroom, shared living room and kitchen. Seeking responsible male or female. Call 586-9284

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH! Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call Now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

TRANSPORTATION

Do you commute? I need a ride from Pittsfield Willing to share gas expenses Call 413-442-7186

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Use all the tools at your disposal to accomplish an important goal. After all, you can't dig a garden with a toothpick. Rather than flying off the handle immediately, try to find out if a misunderstanding is at the heart of a conflict. If you can clear that up, the rest should be easy.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Take a side trip this week. The break in the routine will give your creative juices a boost. Rely on your better judgment to know when enough is enough in a social situation. Don't follow others down the road to excess.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

Tickle your sweetheart's fancy with something whimsical, like a moonlight picnic or a afternoon rowboat ride. Demonstrate your commitment instead of just talking about it, and you'll win the respect of someone influential.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

A small token of affection could go a long way toward building a relationship. Don't worry so much about perfection this week. Instead, focus on just getting the job done well. Allow extra time for travel.

LEO
July 23-August 23

Although you might feel like you have become trapped in a sea of rules and regulations, do your best to untangle them. With a little detachment, you may be able to see an underlying pattern. Then, just put this insight to work, and you'll be able to move mountains.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

Focus on clearing up an old debt before undertaking something new. You'll free your mind as well as your conscience. Your presence of mind will serve you well in an emergency this week. Take credit when credit is due— you've earned it.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

To navigate your way through some tense moments, you'd be wise to keep quiet. The less you say, the less likely you'll be to misstep. On the plus side, your home life is wonderful. Enjoy the company of a loved one to help you through this rough patch.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

Although patience isn't your strong suit, this is a good time to cultivate your skills. Rely on your sense of humor to help smooth out a difficult situation. A friend calls you with an idea that sounds like great fun. Take them up on it if you can.

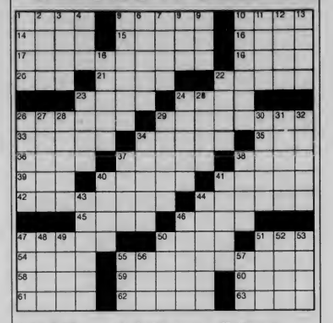
SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

To get a clearer idea of how to get where you want to be, take a personal inventory of your ambitions and goals. Then make your plans, but be sure not to sell yourself short. Now is a good time to make a commitment, especially a lifelong one.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

If you're feeling strapped for cash, see if you can turn a hobby into a career move. Doing what you love could make all the difference in the world. Don't cling too tightly to plans you've made. Flexibility will be the key this week.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18



Bask in the glory of a recent personal achievement. Now is not the time to be modest. Then, go ahead and share your wonderful mood with members of the family. You could provide just the lift someone needs to snap out of a bad mood.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

Focus on helping someone who needs it. Even if you can't solve all their problems, your aid will be a real morale booster at a key time. Don't let administrative details slip—it's important that you keep up with everything.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD 3

ACROSS

1. Confirm, in a way
5. The ___ ball of wax
10. Without feeling
14. Buckeye State
15. Hash-house patron
16. Beige
17. Trade mission
19. "_____ the stuff to drink" (Housman)
20. Native of: suffix
21. Baboons
22. Fred Sanford's buddy
23. Bible book after Joel
24. Cowgirl Evans
25. Not fecund
29. Letting down
33. Doctors dialogue
34. Split
35. Driver's aid
36. Cohort
37. Frequencies
38. Grass coverings at dawn
39. Norma played by Sally
40. Winter complaints
41. Josephine's abrasive
42. Like a sibling
44. Bk.-giggle
45. Country hotels
46. Extreme
47. Wasp ___
50. Conductor's start
51. IL city
54. Spreading trees
55. One of Henry VIII's brides
58. Biblical birthright sailor
59. Nantes' river
60. Part of REO
61. Completed
62. Burry
63. The lower-priced spread

DOWN

1. Galloped
2. ___ Gotta Have It (Spike Lee film)
3. Despicable
4. For Annie author
5. Combat instrument
6. Detests
7. Actor Skinner
8. Pope who crowned Charlemagne
9. Sea raptor
10. More convenient
11. Bruins inits.
12. Wilbur's stable friend
13. Like a bee
18. Partner of fun
22. Arizona's Canyon Dam
23. Bohemian
24. Peace march participants
25. Fills with reverence
26. Tolerates
27. Statesman Stevenson
28. Peeves
29. Jitterbug dance
30. News briefs
31. Staircase post
32. Beau ___
34. Bagels, e.g.
37. Agonizingly unsure
38. Two tablets, perhaps
40. "_____ but not one ____ for tribute" (Harper)
41. Unusual art object
43. Sneeze ease
44. Lumberjack's "fore"
46. Plow name
47. Wild plant
48. Furthermore
49. David Bowie's statuesque wife
50. Tantrum
51. Single organism
52. Stevenson's changeable Mr.
53. ___ many words
55. Frazier foe
56. ___ compos mentis
57. English washroom

MERGE

When we all work together, great things can happen.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Judicial Hearing Board

A great experience for students who

❖are interested in campus leadership❖
❖wish to improve communication and listening skills❖
❖are enrolled full time❖
❖have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.❖
❖are not on judicial sanction❖

APPLY NOW TO BE A HEARING BOARD MEMBER

Training held in the Campus Center from 7:00 to 9:00p.m. on:
September 24 & September 25
Room 168C Room 165-69

Applications available at:
Residential Cluster Offices
The Dean of Students Office
Student Government Association
APPLICATION DEADLINE:
5:00 p.m. September 23, 1996

Any questions? Please contact Paul Vasconcellos or Jennifer Cooper, Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore, Phone: 545-2684

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY

Shrimp Tempura	~~$4.25~~	$3.13
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes	~~$4.95~~	$3.48
Nachos Especial	~~$4.75~~	$3.63

New Dinner Menu . . . Come See

Watch the World Go By From Our Greenhouse!

Judie's DOWNTOWN AMHERST 51 N. Pleasant Street

http://virtual-valley.com/judies

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

- OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
- FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
- INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
- PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

September Sale Celebration

20% Savings on Food for Your Hair
Sept. 16th thru 21st

Save on...

Monday- with Paul Mitchell
Tuesday - with Aveda
Wednesday - with Biolage & American Crew
Thursday - with KMS
Friday - with Nexxus
Saturday - with American Crew & Hair Brushes

Regency Hairstylist
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9526

Experience Seville, a crossroads of cultures, a crucible of history

Study in Spain

The Center for Cross-Cultural Study Seville, Spain

For information or a video, contact: Director, CC-CS, Department CN 446 Main Street, Amherst, MA 01002-2314 Tel: (413) 256-0011 (800) ESPAÑA-1 FAX: (413) 256-1968 http://www.cccs.com

Upper Division Spanish Studies Program (Fall, Spring, and Academic Year)
Explore language, literature, history, art, sociology, business, and politics, taught in Spanish, and TEFL.

Intensive Intermediate Program in Spanish Language and Culture
Progress to the advanced level. Fall or Spring Semester program integrates language, literature, civilization, and current events.

January Term
Challenge yourself! Intensive language courses and Spanish Poetry or Theater.

Summer Programs
Focus on Spain. Two three-and-one-half-week sessions offer Spanish language courses at all levels, plus literature, theater, history, and Jewish, Muslim, and Spanish Civilization.

Excellence since 1969 in College-Level Spanish Studies, in Cooperation with U.S. Colleges and Universities

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

University² By Frank Cho

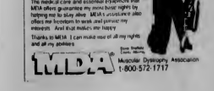
Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Close to Home By John McPherson

"The owner of the amusement park called and said he'll give us free passes for next year if we don't say a word about this to the press."

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Hear Say By Emelie Yang



Quote of the Day

"Now you realize that evil will always triumph, because good is dumb!

–Dark Helmet, Spaceballs"

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
Instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR 545-1672

Life . . . Liberty . . . Happiness

Every American is entitled to the same basic rights and freedoms. And MDA makes those rights into realities for people with neuromuscular disease.

The medical care and assistance programs that MDA offers guarantee the most basic rights by helping real people. MDA provides jobs, research, and hope for tomorrow. And that makes me happy.

Thanks to MDA I can make use of all my rights and all my dollars.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association 1-800-572-1717

Today's Staff

Chris Conner
Night Editor

Suzanne Barber
Copy Editor

Thang Vo
Photo Technician

Tony Morse
Production Supervisor

Sandra Krauss, Chris Lavin
Lorraine Urbanski
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Roast Pork
Turkey Chili	Breaded Chicken
Scalloped Spaghetti w/ Tomato Sauce	Lentil Chili
	Quarter Pound Burger

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Beef Fajita
Chicken Pucks	Breaded Chicken
American Chop Suey

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Charbroiled Chicken	Beef Fajita
Fettuccini w/Sauce	Tofu Fajita
Golden Burgers	Pastabilities
	Chicken Parmesan

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Charbroiled Chicken	Beef Fajita
American Chop Suey	Fried Shrimp Dinner
Golden Burger	Tofu Fajita
	Pastabilities

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, September 16, 1996

Inside this issue:

• The men's soccer team defeated Maine, 1–0 this weekend. For a brief summary see the bottom of this page, but for complete details check out tomorrow's Collegian.

• The men's and women's cross country teams each took second in their respective races this weekend. The men ran in Boston, while the Minutewomen were edged by Brown in the Thetford Invitational. See tomorrow's paper for the stories.

• The men's water polo team swept through the EWPA Tournament this weekend, beating Lehman College, the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, and St. Francis. See tomorrow's Collegian for the review.

UMass wins first, beats Holy Cross 28–10

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — After an embarrassing 50–14 loss to Villanova in its first game of the season, the Massachusetts football team was looking to do to the Holy Cross Crusaders what was done to it a week ago, when the two teams squared off Saturday at Fitton Field in Worcester.

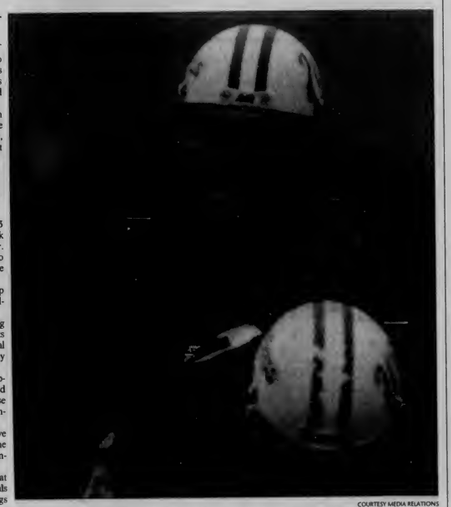
Many had tallied this game as a victory for the Minutemen before the opening kick, considering that in the last three meetings, UMass had a combined 120–7 margin of victory, and scored the last 120 points, including last year's 51–0 rout in Amherst.

MASSACHUSETTS 28
HOLY CROSS 10

The Minutemen, wanting to keep those statistics, did not disappoint, as they took care of the Crusaders 28–10, to even their record off at 1–1.

The Minutemen used a well–balanced attack recording 263 yards on the ground and 224 yards in the air, as quarterback Anthony Catterton threw for the most yards in his career. Catterton went 9–for–18 with three touchdown passes, to become the first quarterback to throw three TD passes in one game since Dave McGovern did it in 1990.

"I got a nice little rhythm going and good things ended up happening," Catterton said. "I think it shows we're well balanced, and it's hard for the defense to key on one thing."



Even though the Minutemen did not deliver the thrashing most people expected, they were impressive in many aspects of the game. They were free of interceptions, tallied 487 total yards, with an average of 7.16 yards per play, and held Holy Cross to 309 yards.

However, penalties and fumbles were once again a problem for UMass, allowing the game to be closer than it should have been. UMass coach Mike Hodges was unhappy because his team racked up 116 penalty yards on 13 calls, and it fumbled three times.

"I'm happy with our effort. I'm not happy with the way we played," Hodges said. "We need to clean up some of the things will still didn't get cleaned up. The penalties and fumbles continue to hurt us.

"We need to take a hard look at those things, a hard look at the things we're doing. Maybe we need to bring some officials to practice or something, but we got to get those things cleaned up, because we're not going to be able to overcome

Turn to FOOTBALL, Page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Minuteman quarterback Anthony Catterton proved there is such a thing as a UMass air attack, as the football team beat Holy Cross 28–10 Saturday in Worcester.

Women's soccer gauges Gauchos, bombs Bonnies

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

After his team posted its third consecutive shutout on Saturday, a 2–0 win over California–Santa Barbara, Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy was not satisfied with the team's performance, one which he felt lacked a certain luster.

MASSACHUSETTS 2
CAL-S. BARBARA 0

In response, No. 8 UMass, still perfect at 5–0, demolished St. Bonaventure (3–2) yesterday 4–0, outshooting the Bonnies by a startling 46–4 margin and holding an 11–0 corner kick advantage.

MASSACHUSETTS 4
ST. BONAVENTURE 0

The 46 shots set a new school record against Division I opposition, breaking the 18–year–old mark of 43, and becomes more impressive considering that the official scorer stated that he was conservative in regards to awarding shots.

"They knew they played poorly [against UCSB] and they came out to play today," Rudy said. "People that had stinkers yesterday came out and did all right."

From start to finish, both the UMass starters and reserves controlled the flow of the match, skilled players like Erica Iverson and Rebecca Myers often

Turn to SOCCER, Page 7

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Senior Amy Powell scored in UMass' 2–0 win over UC– Santa Barbara, Saturday. The Minutewomen went on to defeat St. Bonaventure 4–0 on Sunday.

Catterton proves UM air attack actually exists

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — Ladies and gentlemen, we have a passing game.

Junior quarterback Anthony Catterton set career highs in both yardage and touchdowns yesterday as Massachusetts thumped Holy Cross 28–10.

His three touchdowns were the most any Minuteman quarterback has thrown since 1990, when former UMass standout Dave McGovern threw three TD's against New Hampshire.

Catterton's 224 yards break is a new personal high, with the last mark set only last week in the Minutemen's loss to Villanova. Senior tight end Erik Henry set career highs with five receptions and 98 yards.

"I think people will finally realize that we can throw the football," UMass coach Mike Hodges said. "It gives you a huge boost when you get a penalty, and it's second and fifteen, and, well, that's okay because we can still make this thing.

"In years past, if we were second and fifteen we were pretty much dead in the water. I don't think we're in that situation any more. We've got some guys that can catch the football and make plays for us. It makes a big difference, and I think it was the difference today."

Hodges has tried to emphasize the passing game more this season, attempting to balance an offense that was first in the nation in rushing offense last season, but never passed for more than 110 yards in a game all year.

"Their linebackers were backing off, and now you can run the football a little bit. With [Ron] Brockington and [Frank] Alessio back there, and

Turn to CATTERTON, Page 7

Field hockey splits a pair in Invitational

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Top quality talent was what the Massachusetts field hockey team faced this weekend when they travelled to Iowa City, Iowa for the Hawkeye Invitational Tournament.

MASSACHUSETTS 2
JAMES MADISON 1

On Saturday, the Minutewomen faced No. 4 James Madison, while St. Louis squared off against No. 3 Iowa. Winners faced winners and losers faced losers on Sunday, with UMass and Iowa meeting in the championship game.

The Minutewomen's undefeated streak came to an end Sunday afternoon at the hands of the Hawkeyes. Iowa beat UMass, 2–1, after the Minutewomen put down JMU 3–2 on Saturday. UMass's record stands at 4–1 after the weekend.

UMass got on the board first, when senior midfielder Kyle Rothenberger sent the ball home off a penalty corner, giving the Minutewomen a 1–0 lead. Amy Ott and Saskia Fuchs were credited with the assist on Rothenberger's goal.

The Minutewomen did not relinquish the lead in the first half, as goalie Hilary Rose and the UMass defense combined to stop 16 Hawkeye shots.

Iowa tied the game at one with Kerry Lessard's goal on a scramble in front of the UMass net.

IOWA 2
MASSACHUSETTS 1

The Hawkeyes put away the eventual game winner with under 10 minutes left in regulation. Emily Smith's shot was redirected by Annette Payne, to beat Rose for the tally.

Rose stopped 25 shots, while Lisa Celucci made one save for Iowa.

In Saturday's action, the Minutewomen stopped James Madison 3–2 in double overtime Saturday.

Fuchs scored the game winning goal off a penalty corner situation, after taking a feed from sophomore Kate Putnam. The goal was the third game winner of Fuchs' career.

Sophomore Erica Johnston put the Minutewomen on the board first, taking advantage of an out–of–place JMU goalie. Rothenberger assisted on Johnston's goal.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, Page 7

Differences apparent in UMass' weekend wins

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

It was the best of times, it was the worst of times.

For the Massachusetts women's soccer team (5–0, 1–0 A– 10) this weekend, it was more than a tale of two different opponents, but it was a tale of two different games. The casual observer would look at the respective 2–0 and 4–0 defeats of the University of California–Santa Barbara and St. Bonaventure with more than an air of UMass superiority, but against UCSB, coach Jim Rudy was not satisfied at all with his team's effort.

"We played well enough to win,

Turn to WEEKEND, Page 7

Minutemen win, stay undefeated

The Massachusetts men's soccer team extended its undefeated streak to 3–0 this weekend with a 1–0 blanking of Maine (2–2).

Junior forward Mike Butler hammered in an unassisted goal 31:18 into Saturday's match, leading the team to its third consecutive shutout victory.

While the Minutemen managed to keep their shutout streak alive, they were outshot by the Black Bears 15–9, which was reminiscent of last week's 1–0 win over Boston University in which UMass was outshot, yet managed to walk away victorious.

Freshman keeper Tim Pearson put forth another solid showing in the win, posting three saves for the Minutemen, while Maine's Aaron Weymouth notched five on the day.

— Chris Stamm

Meyers, Minutewomen seek and destroy at UM Classic

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team won four times en route to capturing the UMass/Reebok Classic this weekend at Curry Hicks Cage.

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

This past weekend brought even more good news for Massachusetts volleyball fans.

Going into the UMass/Reebok Classic, held this weekend at Curry Hicks Cage, the Minutewomen were 6–1, had two players (Lesley Nolan and Michelle Paciorek) named UMass Athlete of the Week, saw Dionne Nash hit the 1,000 dig mark and watched its freshmen compete at times like well–seasoned veterans.

The momentum continued on Friday and Saturday. UMass went 4–0 against Central Connecticut, Villanova, Delaware and Seton Hall to win the championship. Freshman Jill Meyers was named tournament MVP and Lesley Nolan earned her 1,000th career kill, becoming only the second junior in school history to do so.

"We played very well," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said. "The Seton Hall match was the best match I ever had a team play."

Friday's opponents were Central Connecticut (1–6) and Villanova (3–4). The Minutewomen disposed of the former quite easily, 15–13, 15–4, 15–11, while the contest with the latter marked the first time this year a match went to a fourth game for UMass, let alone a fifth. The final score was 15–3, 15–17, 15–12, 13–15, 15–10.

Outside hitter Nolan had 33 kills and 30 digs, while junior middle blocker Paciorek added 25 kills and 16 digs to lead UMass to an undefeated Friday. Nolan posted 11 kills with no errors versus CCU, before recording 22 kills and a game– high 26 digs against Villanova.

Meyers had a career–high 17 kills and 23 digs in the nightcap, while committing only four errors. And in the opener, freshman Sarah Watters made her first collegiate start, recording seven kills, seven digs and six service aces, just one off the school single–match record of seven.

Senior outside hitter Nash had a career–high 23 kills in the nightcap, while sophomore Katie Pearce registered a game– high 70 assists, just eight off the school record of 78 set by Pearce herself.

"Dionne and Lesley have played well for us," Kenny said. "And we knew they were going to be go–to players.

"For the first time in her four years here, Dionne was not

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, Page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 10 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, September 17, 1996

Feeling nauseous in Minnesota

Newest Keanu Reeves vehicle doesn't live up to expected hype. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Marrero, Mass maul competition

Sophomore Gabriel Marrero scored four goals in leading the water polo squad to three victories in an EWPA league tournament (see Sports, page 8).

WORLD

Catholic Bishop in UK resigns after affair

LONDON (AP) — A Roman Catholic bishop who disappeared last week with a woman parishioner returned Monday and announced he is resigning.

The Right Rev. Roderick Wright, 55, Bishop of the western Scottish diocese of Argyll and the Isles, begged forgiveness from fellow clerics, his family and the family of parishioner Kathleen Macphee, a divorcee in her early 40's.

"I now wish time and privacy to reflect on my future," Wright's resignation statement said.

Wright had been counseling Mrs. Macphee recently over the breakup of her marriage, news reports said.

Wright, who lived alone in a house beside St. Columba's Cathedral in Oban, was reported missing a week ago. Around the same time, Mrs. Macphee, who has three children, ages 15, 18 and 24, disappeared from her home in the town of Fort William.

In the resignation statement to Pope John Paul II, Wright said he was "physically and spiritually unable to sustain the responsibilities of a diocesan bishop and asked to be released of my office as Bishop of Argyll & the Isles."

NATION

Gov't shoots down friendly fire theory

By Pat Milton
Associated Press

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. — Speculation that TWA Flight 800 may have been downed by friendly missile fire is outrageous, the FBI's chief investigator said Monday.

Chief FBI investigator James Kallstrom denounced the rumors, appearing in Internet chat groups and other venues, that the Boeing 747 was brought down by an errant missile launched by a U.S. warship or aircraft.

"It's just not true," Kallstrom said. "It's an outrageous allegation."

Two months after the crash, investigators can still not say what brought down the plane, however. NBC News reported Monday that investigators are looking more closely at the possibility of a catastrophic mechanical failure such as an explosion triggered by fumes in the plane's center fuel tank.

But investigators also keep looking at the possibility that a terrorist using a missile or a bomb brought down the Paris-bound jetliner, killing all 230 aboard.

"There is not a bevy of information there that we're holding back. There really isn't," Kallstrom said. "You just have to take my word for it at this point but that's the truth."

Investigators had gone to the highest levels of the Defense Department to virtually rule out friendly fire as a possibility, Kallstrom said.

"It's not being covered up at any level," he said. "I don't want the victim's families or the public to think that we would do something like that."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thur.
HIGH: 65	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 65
LOW: 55	LOW: 55	LOW: 60

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 6
Comics.....page 7
Crossword .....page 6
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 8

JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN

Don't try this at home!

Libor Karas, from the Czech Republic, representing the Volvo Cannondale team shows his riding skill yesterday outside the Student Union.

Olver turns down debate

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

Congressman John D. Olver (D–Amherst) has declined to appear for a debate in October with state Senator Jane Swift (R–North Adams) sponsored by the Student Government Association (SGA) at the University of Massachusetts.

"We [SGA] want him to come," said Brian Tirrell, speaker of the Undergraduate Student Senate. "The students need him to come so they can be more familiar with the issues."

According to Patrick Riccards, press secretary for the Olver re–election campaign, the decision not to attend the debate at UMass was made because other areas in western Massachusetts had expressed more interest in hosting a debate.

"He [Olver] has five debates scheduled," said Tirrell. "Hopefully he can find time to come and talk to us [the students], a key constituency for anyone who wants to win that seat [the first congressional district for the U.S. House of Representatives]."

Riccards said the Olver campaign received seven requests from Berkshire county, one of five debate locations, to attend their debate.

"From a campaign standpoint it's a smart move, but it is a bad move in having issues being brought to campus," said Frank Mozzel, voter registration coordinator for the SGA–led registration campaign.

The Olver campaign has made several unsuccessful attempts to organize events with the SGA, said Riccards.

"Olver has always supported students and we are appreciative for his support," said Jason Vecchio, student coordinator for the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), a participant in the SGA voter registration campaign.

"However, we feel that the University community deserves the opportunity to hear John Olver and Jane Swift discuss each student issue," Vecchio said.

Swift has agreed to attend the debate. In a press release she said Olver should recognize important communities across the district and that they do not deserve "his arrogant dismissal."

"We think that it is extremely unfortunate that the Congressman [Olver] has decided not to debate in every region of the district," said Lori Gazzillo, press secretary for the Swift campaign. "We feel that every resident of the district should have the opportunity to hear both of the candidates on the issues."

In response, Riccards said, "Congressman Olver has represented Hampshire County for the last 28 years."

Jane Swift is insulting the intelligence of the students at UMass by insinuating that this debate is the end all be all of showing support for [students at] UMass," he said.

According to Riccards, Congressman Olver will participate in a debate on Springfield's Public Broadcasting System channel 57 on Sept. 29 from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m.

This past Saturday, the Swift campaign scheduled a press conference at the Amherst Town Common, but later cancelled citing the possibility of inclement weather, said Gazzillo..

Candidates meet for a fifth time

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

WORCESTER — With the general election less than two months away, incumbent Sen. John Kerry (D–Mass.) and challenger Gov. William F. Weld debated for a fifth time Monday by sounding some old themes but adding some new vigor.

The debate was only moments old when an impassioned Kerry said the Republican governor was "mugging the truth" when he spoke of Kerry's attitudes on selling drugs to children.

Weld said he "couldn't possibly make [Kerry's record] worse than it is."

Weld said Kerry was someone who looked at drug problems more from the point of view of the addict and criminal than the victims of drug–related crimes.

"I don't need any lessons from you on violence or what it does to our streets," said Kerry.

Even in sounding old refrains about each other, they seemed to have increased the sharpness of their attacks.

Weld said if Kerry's name was "John Six Pack instead of John Forbes Kerry" he would have thought twice about his vote to raise the gas tax.

Kerry had been promising to step up his campaign in the closing weeks of his re–election campaign and got his chance in the debate that came a day before the state primary in which both candidates were running unopposed.

It was staged at Mechanics Hall, a site where Charles Dickens once read "A Christmas Carol" and Mark Twain spoke.

Hughes Medical funds semester-long research

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute has given $2.2 million in grant money to the University of Massachusettes since 1992, and is funding numerous research projects this year.

Hillary Woodcock, who is the program assistant for assessment and public relations for the Hughes grant foundation, spoke about the program.

"They're particularly interested in funding bio–medical research," Woodcock said.

As for the number of students profiting from the program, there are "about 75 in any given year," she said.

Students with a wide range of majors in the life sciences have benefitted from the grants, including those in chemistry, psychology, biology, food and natural resources management and forestry and wildlife.

The University has applied for two grants in the past, both of which they received. The first grant of $1.2 million was given in 1992 and the second of $1 million, in 1994. These two grant projects are now running concurrently.

Dr. Rod K. Murphy, a professor of biology, has been the main investigator for both of these grants.

Biology Professor Bruce Byers is the biology department's undergraduate academic coordinator. In a recent press release, he praised the program, saying that through the research they perform, students would gain a more thorough understanding of the sciences they study.

The institute was formed at the request of Howard Hughes, a millionaire with an interest in promoting science to a younger generation.

According to information provided by the Institution, "students who have research experience have a definite edge when it comes to applying for medical school or graduate school."

Hughes, who amassed his fortune through the movie and airline industry, created the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in 1953. The organization is located in Chevy Chase, Md.

Hughes died in 1984.

The Institute accepts applications of financial endowment from colleges and universities. Since it's creation, the organization has given $335 million to 220 colleges and universities since 1988.

Here, at the University, the awarded money has allowed for students at all levels, from freshman to seniors, to do research projects for a semester.

Within the larger grant framework lies the Research Experience for Undergraduates Program. This allows students to conduct research full time during the summer months, providing them with $250 per week for 10 weeks, as well as a housing allowance of $500.

The Junior Fellows Program supports undergraduate students in research they conduct during their senior year. The program chooses 12 undergraduates and awards them $1000. Students with a GPA of 3.0 or above may apply for these grants. Applicants are drawn from junior level students in the college of natural science, mathematics and the life science departments.

Students have used the money for a wide variety of research projects including, but not limited to: research on breast cancer, how amphibians breathe and mangrove root systems.

Robinson improves campus for all; supports academic goals of UMass

Editor's note: this article is the second in a four part series profiling key administrators and faculty at the University of Massachusetts

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas B. Robinson collaborates with the Chancellor and the Student Government Association (SGA).

After collaboration he is responsible for the Employee Assistance Program, Student Affairs Special Services, Public Safety, Environmental Health and Safety and Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems.

Robinson then offers direction to Campus Activities, Student Affairs and Enrollment Services in order to enact programs for the University of Massachusetts.

"I'm interested in creating a campus environment which enables all students to be successful," said Robinson.

Education

Hagerstown, Md. was the birthplace of Robinson.

In 1962, Robinson began his college career at Juniata College in Huntington, Pa. from which he graduated with a major in Sociology and a minor in Psychology.

He furthered his education at Pennsylvania State University at University Park, Pa. Robinson achieved his graduate major in Higher Education Administration and Counselor Education with a minor in Psychology.

By 1977 Robinson had attained his M.Ed. and Ed.D., also from Pennsylvania State University.

Before arriving at UMass in 1992, Robinson worked in several administrative positions for six other institutions of Higher Education, including his alma maters, New England College, University of New Haven at West Haven Conn., Montana State University and California State Polytechnic University.

At four of the universities, Robinson was the Dean of Students, preparing himself for the position of Vice Chancellor for Student Affiars at UMass.

Duties

"There are over 30 departments for which I am partly responsible," said Robinson, "But my major duty is to support the academic mission of UMass."

The Vice Chancellor added, "In essence, UMass is a small city. Student Affairs needs to provide services in order that the campus functions well, both academically and socially."

One piece of the Vice Chancellor's job is to represent the students' point of view in administrative matters.

"Being a student advocate," said Robinson, "I consistently have to raise the question, 'What does this mean for students?'"

"Vice Chancellor Robinson is pretty receptive to student needs," said Speaker of the SGA Brian Tirrell, who meets regularly with Robinson each week.

"Sometimes he [Robinson] has to make tough decisions and side with the administration which makes us unhappy in the SGA, but often when there is a conflict between administration and students, he sides with us," added Tirrell.

Tirrell said that Robinson has been a strong student advocate in the matter of the cancellation of a proposed housing fee. The fee would have cost students hundreds of dollars, but with the collaboration of Robinson and the SGA, the fee was cut to 50 dollars.

Robinson has also supported the SGA's proposition for a polling place to be moved into Amherst.

"I enjoy working with student leaders," said Robinson, "We have developed a relationship based on mutual respect which has allowed us to work on issues and either agree or agree to disagree."

The Semester Ahead

"One major concern for the next semester involves the overall campus culture," said Robinson, "I understand that it is not always the most welcoming; We need to make improvements and focus our energies to improve the campus culture on behalf of all students."

The Office of Student Affairs is presently involved in thinking of ways to best build community at UMass,

Turn to ROBINSON, page 3

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Tom Robinson, Vice Chancellor of student Affairs, is continuing to work with student leaders for a better UMass.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including full name & of phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Sept. 17

Info–Social—The UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will hold its weekly info–social in the Campus Center, room 805 from 7–9 p.m. There will be a brief discussion to decide the semester's activities, announcements about this month's LBGA dance, and plenty of time to be social. For more information, please call our office at 545-0154.

Meeting—The Circle K Community Service Group will have a meeting in room 409 of the Student Union. If interested in volunteering time at a soup kitchen, tutoring, working in a shelter, or being a Big Brother or Big Sister, come find out how to become a part of a close knit group dedicated to helping others.

Meeting—All interested candidates for the Stockbridge school basketball and golf teams should attend a meeting at the Mullins Center V.I.P. room at 4 p.m. If unable to attend, contact Jack Leaman in room 307 at the Mullins Center or call 545–1301.

Meeting—The Wildlife Society presents "Bats of Belize" with Jeff Corwin and free pizza at 5:30 p.m. in Holdsworth 203.

Wednesday, Sept. 18

Meeting—UMass Film Society, 6 p.m., Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. New members are welcome.

Meeting—UMass Poetry Society will have it's weekly meeting in Campus Center room 163 at 7 p.m. Come to read, talk, or listen. Free coffee, and if possible, bring your own mug. For more information, call Tim at 546-0562.

Meeting—The UMass Italian Club is holding an organizational meeting on the 3rd floor Herter Hall. All are welcome. Knowledge of Italian not required. Questions? Call Bill at 585–7806 or e–mail at wacava@student.umass.edu.

Meeting—Alpha Phi Omega, a co-ed community service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting at 7 p.m. on the 5th floor of Kennedy, in Southwest. Snacks provided, and all are welcome. For more information, call 545–2068.

Meeting—The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 162. If interested in bringing a lecturer to campus, come to this meeting and find out what DVP is all about. Refreshments will be served. Everyone is invited and encouraged to attend. For more information, call 545–0046.

Thursday, Sept. 19*GEO Social*—For all Graduate Student Employees, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., Campus Center room 1009. There will be free hors d'oeuvres, a full cash bar, and family and friends are welcome. For more information, contact Emilie at 545– 0705 or 545–5317.

Notices

Staff Needed—The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Opening—The Sunderland Congregational Church, located at the corner of Rte's 47 and 116, has opened the Serendipity Shoppe in the church basement. It carries quality used clothes and accessories for all ages at thrift shop prices. All clothes are now on clearance and a sweater sale will run through October. Hours are Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a.m.–noon. The shop is located on the UMass (Sunderland) bus route.

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. For more information, call 546–2771 or 546–1318.

Employment — The Student Government Association is looking to fill the position of Inventory Control Officer (SGA Auditor). Requirements for the position include: heading the Student Activities Inventory Task Force; maintaining the inventory database; organizing auditory records for the $4 million SATF; and spot–checking agencies and RSOs for inventory. The position is open to both work study and non–work study students, and students may pick their own hours. The position must be filled immediately. If interested, call Jeff Coker at 545–0341.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen– dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538–9717.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Thursdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Campus Center, and from 2 to 3:30 p.m. at St. Bridget's Church Parish Hall, 2nd floor. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call Kim at 548–9902, Jennifer at 548– 9040 or Maryanne at 549–5957.

Task force finds blame in Saudi attack

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A failure by the Pentagon and key field commanders to focus on terrorism contributed to the death toll of the bombing in Saudi Arabia that killed 19 U.S. airmen in June, according to a task force report released Monday.

In response, Defense Secretary William Perry ordered a review of whether any Air Force personnel should be court–martialed. President Clinton praised the report as "unvarnished, blunt, straightforward."

"We intend to do everything we can" to protect troops in the field, Clinton said. "We're going to aggressively implement the... report."

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, (R-Ga.), campaigning in his home state, accused the Clinton administration of being "consistently weak in its approach to protect Americans from terrorism." "I think we need to do a great deal more to protect our young men and women," he said.

A focus of Perry's review is expected to be Air Force Brig. Gen. Teryl J. "Terry" Schwalier, commander of the 4404th Wing and the officer responsible for the security of the roughly 2,000 servicemen living at Khobar Towers in Dhahran, site of the bombing. "Khobar Towers was identified to Gen. Schwalier as one of the three highest priority soft targets in the region," the report notes.

But Schwalier seems not to have made terrorism a top priority, the report said, contending that he "never raised to his superiors force protection matters that were beyond his capability to correct. Nor did he raise the issue of expanding the perimeter or security outside of the fence with his Saudi counterparts." An end-of-tour memo written by Schwalier the day before the June 25 bombing does not even mention the terrorist threat as a focus of his tenure.

Perry was not specifically criticized by the task force, which was commissioned by the Pentagon and headed by retired Army Special Forces Gen. Wayne Downing. However, the Downing report cites as its first finding the Pentagon's failure to issue orders on protecting forces housed in buildings.

"I am concerned that insufficient attention is being given to antiterrorism measures and force protection," Downing wrote in a memo to Perry accompanying the task force report.

With thousands of Army troops packing bags for possible deployment to Kuwait, Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the military is taking steps to coordinate its response to terrorism. Still, the four-star general admitted to being caught off guard.

"All of us have been surprised by the size and sophistication and the destructiveness of this attack," Shalikashvili said.

Ford Motors signs landmark contract

By Brian S. Akre
Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers tentatively agreed Monday on a new national contract for Ford's 105,025 union workers that includes a landmark jobs-preservation provision, a source said.

Terms of the agreement were not announced, but a source close to the union, who spoke on condition on anonymity, said it was a three-year deal and that Ford has promised to maintain at least 95 percent of current jobs at its U.S. plants during the term. The contract also includes a 3 percent raise in the first year, followed by a bonus in each of the following two years, the source said. The UAW had sought a return to annual raises, which cost more in the long term.

Another source close to the talks said the UAW gave Ford the lower wage rate it sought for new hires at its parts plants, which will be phased in over three years with several conditions. The deal came after three months of negotiations and a final 53-hour weekend of talks. It was announced 42 hours after the current three-year pact expired at midnight Saturday.

"Sometimes it takes a little longer," UAW President Stephen Yokich told a news conference after shaking hands with Ford Chairman and CEO Alex Trotman, who praised the negotiations and the UAW bargaining team.

"I think it's been a very good, pragmatic-driven process," Trotman said. "While every minute hasn't been total fun, I have been very impressed by the pragmatism and professionalism and businesslike behavior of the people on the other side of the table."

The member ratification vote should be held by Sept. 29, said Ernie Lofton, a vice president in charge of the UAW's Ford department.

The union's executive committee is scheduled to meet Tuesday to approve the deal and the union's Ford council, which would involve several hundred people, will meet Wednesday to review it.

The UAW next will negotiate with either Chrysler Corp. or General Motors Corp. The union has been holding lower-level talks with the two automakers since it designated Ford the lead company earlier this month.

Talks to replace the current three-year contracts began in June under the direction of Yokich, who assumed the union's top post in 1995.

The union's top priority was stemming "outsourcing," or farming out parts jobs to outside, nonunion suppliers. The union sought reduced overtime and protection of the UAW's fully paid health-care benefits.

Outsourcing was at the center of a 17-day strike at two GM parts plants in Dayton, Ohio, last spring which virtually shut down the No. 1 automaker's domestic production.

Any significant restrictions on outsourcing in the Ford contract are likely to be fought by GM, which manufactures more of its own parts than Ford or Chrysler.som

RSO's:
Come & Get It!

- Want to be the CENTER of ATTRACTION
- Want the Whole Campus to Know About You
- Want to Increase Your Membership Base
- Want to do all these at an UNBEATABLE PRICE

JOIN OUR "EARLY ROASTER" PROGRAM ESPECIALLY TAILORED FOR RSO SPECIAL ISSUE THAT IS COMING OUT ON SEPTEMBER 30.

Send in your ad before sept. 19 & get:
1. Additional 7% discount for the ad.
2. 25% off for spot color.

For More Information, Contact Your Advertising Representative
Poh Yng @ 545-3500

HURRY!

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $179 $341
PARIS $224 $427
ROME $288 $549
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $235 $446
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

SEEKING
Students in Recovery
from alcohol or drug abuse
ARE YOU IN AA, NA, RR?
Are you willing to escort someone who is going to their first meeting?
If so, please call Lydia Rackenberg, LICSW
Mental Health 545-2337
All calls are confidential

UMass
Division of Continuing Education
Academics and More !!!
• Over 100 undergrad courses — in the evening!
• More than 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including Bartending, Fund Raising Certificate Program, Past Life Regression, Jitterbug, ESL, EMT Training, Private Pilot Ground School, and MAGIC!
Call for a free course catalog –
(413) 545-0107 or contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

Robinson

continued from page 1

which is also a goal of the SGA.

"It is good that we are on common ground with the SGA; we will be able to work together to ensure that students have a wonderful experience while at UMass," said Robinson.

During this semester Vice Chancellor Robinson will be addressing issues on campus safety. Students will receive newsletters and be offered programs in order to raise student consciousness about safety concerns.

Robinson stated, "Campus safety is a goal that we all have to strive for."

Robinson and the Office for Student Affairs hope to further address the needs of the ALANA (Asian, Latino, African and Native American) students.

"I feel very strongly about this issue," said Robinson, I hope that we can finally begin to address the needs of ALANA students during this semester."

Under the direction of Robinson, Enrollment Services is practicing a new management initiative.

"We need to look at how we do our work in order to maximize resources," said the Vice Chancellor.

Retention of students is another aspect which Enrollment Services is looking to better.

Robinson stated, "Student Affairs has to give new students the very best start possible. We need to give them support in order for them to achieve their hopes."

Robinson will also be looking at new ways to forge partnerships with colleagues to further break down walls at UMass.

"We should work together and collaborate on issues," said Robinson, "Mutual support will enhance the value of our work and ultimately make us more successful."

Opinions

"One of the best aspects of UMass is an outstanding faculty and a very strong academic program," said Robinson, "The student body is involved and interested in helping to shape the future of the University."

Robinson said that a lack of appropriate support from the Commonwealth for facilities on the campus was detrimental to UMass. He added that a level of institutional inertia slowed progress and change within the campus.

He added, "One of the worst aspects of UMass is that the culture is not always welcoming or supportive to members or guests of our campus community."

Experience, collaboration and confidence in students were the major strengths the Robinson uses to function as the Vice Chancellor.

Yet at times Robinson said that he is overly optimistic about the ability to bring about change.

Also, "The many demands of the position that are not compatible with a normal private life," was Robinson's least favorite part of being Vice Chancellor.

However, Robinson said that he does enjoy being in a position with the ability to help influence the direction of the University.

"This is a wonderful University with many opportunities to participate in campus activities, clubs and organizations, co- curricular programs, internships, volunteer and community service programs, governance, music, theater, athletics, etc. Get involved. Be active members of our campus community," said Robinson.

THANG YOU COLLEGIAN

Hangtime!

Russ Magnanti, of Plattsburgh, NY, was doing a snowboard exhibition on a trampoline yesterday near the pond.

UMass graduate publishes magazine; UniverCity keeps N.Y. students hip

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

When Patrick Hadley graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1990 with a degree in Hotel Restaurant, Travel and Administration, he had no idea that three years later he would be publishing his own monthly entertainment magazine in New York City.

After graduation, Hadley was hired to do marketing for a microbiology company in New York.

After spending time in the city, his interests were sparked in the arts and entertainment industries. He dabbled at first with commercial production, before realizing that he wanted to pursue acting.

"I decided I wanted to try to become an actor. My family freaked out and I ran out of money," Hadley said.

Without much luck in a extremely competitive environment, Hadley quickly looked for a alternative source to vent his creative yearnings.

"I saw an idea for a newspaper and from there my entrepreneurial spirit and skills took over, " said Hadley.

Today, his publication, UniverCity, is the largest free entertainment publication to reach New York's college market and the only one targeted solely for the city's college students.

UniverCity is written by 50 volunteer writers — mostly college students looking for experience.

"In addition to the experience, they get free stuff like tickets and CD's, but no money," said Hadley.

UniverCity covers a wide variety of topics in each Issue. Articles from the September edition range from fashion, movies, music and book reviews. They also rate restaurants and scoping outlets aimed at students.

Hadley attributes UniverCity's success to the advertising philosophy behind the publication.

"Advertisers who want to reach this market can place one ad rather than 25 individual ads in all the college papers," said Hadley.

After looking through the paper, it is easy to notice the appeal it has to the advertisers, that it is very accessible to students.

Recently there have been discussions about UniverCity going on–line.

"These discussions are still in very early stages. This is going to be a major project. We are hoping to get one title sponsor," said Hadley

Despite Hadley's success with UniverCity, he has bigger plans of producing and directing his first independent film. He recently founded the Future Producers and Directors (FPD) Network with this idea in mind.

"As directors and producers, we don't compete with one another, so I thought if we grouped together we could pool all of our resources and help each other," he said.

This 14 member group meets once a month and acts as both a resource and a support group.

"We are constantly networking with each other and offering feedback on each other's current projects," said Hadley.

"People in their 40's and 50's are running the entertainment industry today. We are the next generation to run the industry," said Hadley. "FPD Network is a group of ambitious, talented people that will eventually be the most influential in the industry."

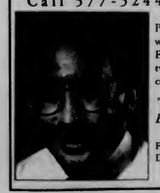
Hadley also recently wrote a pilot television program.

Entitled, "Talking Pictures," his show, about the movie industry, takes place in two places, in the studio and on the street. Hadley said the show was intended to attract "MTV crowd" viewers.

"Eventually, I will be making movies. UniverCity gives me the credibility in the entertainment industry as well as the chance to meet important people," said Hadley.

He has interviewed stars such as James Earl Jones, Robert Duvall, Spike Lee and Robin Wright through his publication.

"You make your own opportunities. New York City is a great place to start. It's a little tough and scary at first but once you get going and meet and make contact it a fun and unforgettable experience," Hadley said.



COURTESY PATRICK HADLEY

Former UMass student makes it big in media world.

TOP 10 Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services

1. We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2. Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3. Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4. A great place to get contact lenses.
5. On-site contact lens specialist.
6. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7. Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8. Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9. We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10. Convenient hours and location.

For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244 UHS

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over twenty years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, Eye Care Program

I got mine at Zanna!

Black zip jacket

Gen X jeans

Steve Madden oxfords

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

September Sale Celebration
20% Savings on Food for Your Hair
Sept. 16th thru 21st
Save on...
Tuesday - with Aveda
Wednesday - with Biolage & American Crew
Thursday - with KMS
Friday - with Nexxus
Saturday - with American Crew & Hair Brushes
Regency Hairstylist
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9526

Want to write about poetry, film, theater, music, books, travel, food or anything else?
Then write for the Arts & Living Desk.
Come down today!

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m. Increasing Self-Esteem, Building Self-confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self-esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self-confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m. Letting Go and Moving On— This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group. Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m. Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mark McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since 1984. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Something's rotten at the DC

Last week, while I was sitting in Franklin Dining Common, eating cold cereal without milk for the umpteenth dinner in a row, I started thinking. What is wrong with this system? Why am I paying good money to eat this miserable food in this miserable environment? A whole box of the stuff that was in my bowl goes for about four bucks at the supermarket, and here I was, eating it for more than that per bowl. The more I thought, the more fault I found with the system. Needless to say, I am now off of the meal plan and I've never been happier in my college career.

Mark McGrath

Most of the time, DC criticism doesn't work because the complaints are misdirected, and rarely hit upon the problems within the system. What I'm going to do is present to you, in my estimation, the problems with the Dining Services on campus in a clear and concise argument which will undoubtedly change the way you look at the system. Instead of debating the nature of the chicken puck, I will hit at the heart of the matter. The folks over at Dining Services will have to acknowledge that there are problems with the system, and if they don't, I will suggest a course of action that will force them to take action.

The first and most obvious of the problems with the food-rationing system as we know it is the quality of the food. It doesn't take a food critic to get you in on the secret that what is served in the DC's isn't exactly gourmet, and sometimes it can more accurately be described as repulsive.

The reasons for the poor quality of the food? There are many, the first of which is the fact that there is no competition when it comes to eating on this campus. If you are a freshman or sophomore, you are are forced to pay a certain, rather hefty amount of money to eat, and you can eat at the DC... or you can eat at the other DC, unless you go to Pasabilities or Basics, which are DC's in disguise. Yes, those are your options.

Because the system guarantees a certain customer base, which amounts to about half of the campus, Dining Services knows it's going to get its buck. If they are able to scare away business with their horrid food, that's money in their pocket. They can't lose. Also, because they have their customer base predetermined by the monopolistic system, they seldom, if ever have to worry about keeping that base happy. The next time you are standing in the DC line, compare your situation to that of Soviet peasants waiting for hours to get their rations, not having a say in the form or quality of their food and being forced to take it.

And then there are the meal plans. You have three choices, 19, 14 and 10 meals per week. If you are on the 10 meal-plan, you cannot eat on weekends, regardless of how many times you ate during the week. So if you only go to the DC three times during a particular week, you have to pay for seven meals you didn't eat and can't even eat them on weekends. In order to scare students away from the least expensive plan, they take away weekend dining rights. Something's rotten in the state of Massachusetts, and I think it's coming from the DC.

By far, the worst part of the system is that nobody says or does anything about it. Because of the ridiculousness of the whole setup, students feel helpless, and I can't blame them. Even so, they must be reminded that they are consumers, and can demand certain standards, no matter what the system would like them to believe. Instead of eating the fake mashed potatoes, they ought to be demanding real ones... after all, they pay for them.

When someone gets your money, you have every right to demand satisfaction. You are consumers, not a bunch of starving children who would give anything for their next morsel. To be seen and treated as adults and to be respected as adults requires that you act like adults in demanding that you be dealt with fairly, especially when your money is at stake.

The first thing we need to offset this ridiculousness is competition. Yes, even if that requires bringing national corporations into the Campus Center, competition must be initiated. There are food courts at every large university I've ever visited (except for UMass, that is). At most of them, students can use their meal plans to buy a Big Mac or a Steak Burrito Supreme for lunch.

Placing a food court in the Campus Center has been discussed, but the University unions won't allow any progress. They must realize that their services are subpar, and because their food is so bad, they would be put out of business (and their jobs) in no time. To get rid of the rule that forces students on the meal plan would have similar results. This established, one might wonder if the situation will ever change.

It can and it will, but for that to happen, student voices must start to be heard. Back in the 60's, students at this University and all across the country weren't afraid to protest institutions they saw as unfair. They were able to bring about change by violent and non-violent means. Today, students are too apathetic and complacent to know what they're missing out on.

The current structure of dining services and the meal plans is a travesty of which everyone is aware, but nobody is willing to attack. Instead of filling out DC comment cards, skipping meals and joking about chicken pucks, you should be chanting, "one... two... three... four — DC food is really poor." Instead of overdosing on dry Cheerios, you should be organizing protests that would make your parents proud. Only when these steps are taken can the food machine be halted.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

The Gulf War, part II

Once again, the United States takes center stage as the guardian of democracy, a shining light in an otherwise dark and chaotic world. Break out the flags and yellow ribbons; it's the Gulf War, part II.

Five years ago, around this time, in the trough of a recession, that George Bush called upon Americans to support our troops as they restored democracy to Kuwait and disciplined that tyrant, Saddam Hussein. It did not seem to matter to the mainstream press that Kuwait was actually a monarchy prior to the invasion, employing guest non-citizens to work for the royal family's petro-empire under near slave-like conditions. Nor was it important to note that Hussein's tyranny had been of little importance through the 1980s when we were shipping him the arms with which to fight Khomeini in Iran (another favorite dictator who came to power with US approval when the CIA helped overthrow the Shah).

Sam McAfee

Of course the spin doctors of foreign policy knew that the public would never support a military operation when painted in this light. Instead, followed faithfully by the press, they erased recent history from the American consciousness and invented an enemy which could replace the USSR, at least for the moment. After all, Lockheed had poured billions into the development of the stealth bomber, as had Raytheon into the patriot missile. These private weapons contractors could not hope to secure lucrative contracts with the Defense Department without an adequate display of their products.

Now it is an election year and Clinton is playing the same tune. After Iraqi forces vainly attempted to down U.S. planes patrolling the no-fly zone, the president asserted that he would respond with disproportionate force. One wonders if there is anything left to bomb from the aftermath of the last war. A congressional study on that aftermath revealed that two years after Desert Storm, much of the infrastructure remained unrepaired and many civilians were still without adequate food or medicine. Even conservative estimates of the final death toll of Iraqi civilians soar at around 100,000. That total, added to deaths suffered in hospitals left with out power or supplies after the storm, can reach 200,000. After all that, we left Hussein in power so we could have another round of target practice in a few years.

Other losers in this game will be the American tax payers as we pick up the tab of a military operation to the tune of several billion dollars, further inflating our gratuitous deficit. There will be less money available for the already disappearing social services, including funds for public institutions like the University of Massachusetts. We are neither justified nor financially secure enough to engage in this abysmal waste of resources.

But rest assured, the Clinton administration will let slip the dogs of war, recounting the excuse that the United States cannot stand by while a country terrorizes its neighbors or exterminates its own people. Of course, U.S. policy dictates that it regularly engages in these practices in order to secure the interests of big business. Let us not forget how we have treated our neighbor Puerto Rico, which we "liberated" from Spain with brute force, only to use it as our own colony, exploiting both its resources and underpaid work force for U.S. corporations. Our policy toward Haiti, Grenada and the Dominican Republic has been quite similar. Nor should slip from our minds the near extermination of our own native population in the interests of greed and expansion.

As the United States prepares to take the next steps in securing markets for the already powerful under the guise of liberation and at the expense of the weak, shall we stand idly by and watch? We live in a system that perpetuates its own inequalities through the ballot box when the only parties are big business parties. Voting is a crucial part of democracy but will have no effect under these conditions. As November approaches, the vote should be the least of our worries. What we need to do is organize. But we would rather sit back, stuff our face with junk and change the channel. Hey, if we just ignore our problems, they'll go away, right?

Sam McAfee is a UMass student.

Why am I here?

Why am I here? I've been asking myself that question a lot recently. I am a sophomore English major. I pour $10,000 per year into this school and am not even sure if I need to be here. In the past, it has been made quite clear to me that without an education, I'll get nowhere in this world.

So what?

Where am I supposed to be going anyway? Is a big house in a nice town with a good educational system and not a bad commute to the city what I'm working to obtain? Or is it an insanely high income that I can pour into my penthouse on Fifth Avenue and all my DKNY power suits that I am paying for right now. Neither of these offers sounds too compelling.

Maybe I just want the simple life. This summer, I drove down to New Mexico with two friends. We got a cheap apartment where we slept on the floor and ate off of plastic plates. I was a waitress at Denny's. It was the best summer of my life. I made enough money to pay for the apartment and to drive around a lot of the southwest.

Ann Rubinstein

My job was not my life. I had all the time I needed to hang out with my friends and have fun. I'm not saying I want to sleep on the floor for the rest of my life, but this is a much more appealing lifestyle to me then entering corporate America.

On the way to New Mexico, we stopped in New York. We took the train into the city at the morning rush hour. Everyone on the commuter rail was wearing a business suit and a frown. They were all absorbed in their papers and didn't even stop to say hi to the suit who sat down next to them.

When the shuttle stopped at the city, I was surprised that I didn't get knocked onto the third rail by a briefcase and die from electrocution, everyone was elbowing their way along at full power-walk pace. Where were they bustling to? To the office, to see all of the same people they see every day, to do the same thing they are going to do till they are 65. It was crazy. They couldn't even take the time out from their day to turn to the person next to them and say, "Hey did you catch the Yankees game last night," or even, "I have that suit in my closet at home."

The train was pretty crowded (I was glad I used Dial), yet everyone seemed so isolated. I wanted to reach out to the guy across from me and find out what on Earth he did that would make him want to get up this early, put on a suit in 80 degree weather, and probably not get home for 12 more hours, (I didn't talk to him though, because he had already given me a snide look when I tried to save on train fare by telling the conductor that we got on at White Plains, which we had not quite reached yet.)

I never want to be like that, traveling for an hour each day with people I don't know (my best friend in elementary school I met on a school bus) to a job that is probably not enjoyable.

Twix has this new commercial where this kid who just got his license is driving along and is told to slow down because he has 60 years of hard boring work ahead. I flipped out the first time I saw this. I'm 19. Retirement age is about 65. There is nothing on this Earth that I would enjoy doing for 46 years. So I guess I'm back to the question of why I am going to college.

My idea of what I want to do with my life changes daily, but I usually come back to the idea that I want to be a writer. It is said that what people write best about are the things they experience. So, would I be serving myself better If I were bumming around Europe, or living with some ethnic people or even if I were in the Army?

Not that I am saying that college isn't an experience. Obviously it is, and a great one at that, but it is also a very expensive one. I originally came to college with no real thought of doing otherwise. What are you going to do after high school? Why, I'm going to college of course! It is not that I consider dropping out as an option, I think college is a pretty essential part of my life, useful or not.

What do I hope to accomplish at college? Last year, I was on the novice crew team, which was undoubtedly the best thing I could have done for myself. I had fun and I met the greatest people ever.

This year, I have much harder courses and unfortunately I do not have the time, so I seem to have decided that academics are my number one priority at college, which makes sense. What comes second, though? Building up my resume so I can get into a good grad school? Nope... no plans of going there. Drinking and smoking as much as possible? Nice sideline, but not a goal. Meeting guys? Not as goal either. I guess maybe just doing as much as I can to meet people and expand my mind.

The other day I took the bus back from E Lot. The bus driver was a UMass grad who said she now drove the bus and enjoyed it, and was considering going into trucking. I was shocked, but with more thought I realized how great that was. She'd had a good time at college, and then instead of going and getting a job that was expected of her, she turned around and did something that she really enjoyed.

Maybe I'll do that, I could be a parking lot attendant.

Ann Rubinstein is a UMass student.

Things that make me go "huh?"

No one can argue that we've all, at one time or another, had great thoughts in our great minds. Some thoughts are so great that we can't help but say "huh"? Sometimes, things are so baffling that I sometimes find my neck jerking forward, my eyes simultaneously bulging out and I would just say "huh?" This could be a good thing... it means that I'm alive because I'm thinking. The topic of this article might not be an issue for everyone, but I'm here to make it one.

C.F. Gorospe

What is an issue anyway? I think I have an idea about what it is. Issues concern people — people like us. Good enough reason? Maybe. Personally, I think we've tired-out the word "issue." I refer to the word "issue" simply as a thing that makes me go "huh?" I've been told by one of the Collegian editors that they love reading about these things called issues. I guess it's safe to say that I'm strictly going by the rules and I'm playing my role. Unless you're one of those big-time players out there, then you need not be concerned. However, being the great college students that we all are, most of us don't fit this narrow category. I sense that most of us will be tuning in. You're probably wondering what I mean by "big-time players." I'm glad you're wondering.

Let me begin by writing about our old time favorite, Marcus Camby. We all remember him, don't we? Maybe you don't know him. If you don't know who he is, I suggest you reconsider why you're going to college. For those who have forgotten who Marcus Camby is, let me remind you.

He's a UMass alumnus. But wait! Can we refer to him as a UMass alumnus when he didn't graduate? I don't think so. I guess he's more like a college drop-out from UMass. To simplify things... he used to go here. He played excellent ball — basketball. He helped bring the Minutemen to the Final Four last season. Thank you Mr. Camby. If you go to the Hampshire Mall, you're bound to see his young fans who pride themselves on their #21 jerseys.

However you categorize him, it doesn't matter now — wrong! He no longer goes to this school and he's making $2 million in his first season as a rookie for the Toronto Raptors. Imagine how much loot he'll be reaping in a few years from now. There's no doubt that he hopes to make as much money as the new Los Angeles Lakers $28 million man, Shaquille O'Neal, who claimed that he didn't leave the Orlando Magic for the money. Or maybe Camby aims to make as much as Michel Jordan, who attempted to leave the Chicago Bulls if he didn't get the $25 million deal he wanted. Jordan's still whining after making over $70 million from endorsements — grow up!

I'm sure about one thing, Camby can't make millions the way Bill Gates does — but they can both easily make $10,000 a day. It's safer to say that Gates can easily make this much, being the richest man in the world.

If I were to write out the amount of money that these big-time players make, I would be writing a lot of zeros. I'm very fortunate to know the word million(s). This makes a doctor's salary seem like nothing, after toiling through medical school for so many years. But doctors shouldn't become doctors for the money anyway. Right? So I guess this doesn't really count.

I have a bright idea, let's all illegally accept gifts from our basketball agents (for those of us who have them). Then, let's all drop out of school and make millions. Let's forget about the school's reputation. Let's forget about how our actions can affect the rest of the UMass community's reputations. Let's forget about our young fans' future. They can do the same thing. Be like Camby. Thank you #21! What did you learn after three years of college, pure entertainment? "huh?"

I guess you can do that. Wrong! I think you should have stayed in school for at least another year — not only to lead our team to the Final Four again, but to learn to think. Too bad you're not here to read this. Thanks to those who support you too. Thank you for thinking. Good luck to those who are about to follow your path. No! I have one request to make to those of you who are attempting to embark on the notorious Camby Road... Please THINK! Think Real Hard!

Here's the biggest part that just makes me go "huh"? Weren't the other big guys down in Washington D.C. making a big deal about welfare reform? Weren't they so concerned that the welfare recipients were receiving an ample amount of money doing nothing? Oh, I didn't know that these welfare recipients are making millions with which they go out and buy their big boats. Better yet, I didn't know that these welfare recipients were so loaded they could go out and play ball all day long.

What about Governor Weld, who is always trying to cut our education money? What are these big-time players thinking? Or are they thinking? Maybe we're all looking too hard — yeah right, if this was only the case!

C. F. Gorospe is a UMass student.

Need Advice?

Send your dilemmas to the Editorial/opinion desk down at the Collegian and see our suggestions printed on the page in the near future.

Arts & Living

Minnesota feels very sick

Keanu Reeves shows lack of breadth once again

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

FEELING MINNESOTA
Directed by Steven Baigelman
with Keanu Reeves, Vincent D'Onofrio and Cameron Diaz
Playing at Mr. Forms Four Theater

How can the great state of Minnesota be so generous one minute and so sour the next? This is the question we are left with after Steven Baigelman's Feeling Minnesota. Following up the Coen Brothers Fargo as the second film this year set in a state whose claim to fame is that it's really, really cold there, Feeling Minnesota takes place in a more temperate season. Leaving behind the coldness of the black family values of Fargo, we are confronted with something boring and gray.

The film opens with Ijacks (Keanu Reeves) going home to attend the wedding of his brother Sam (Vincent D'Onofrio, who was once so amazing as the loony private in Full Metal Jacket) to Freddie (Cameron Diaz). The catch is that Freddie is being forced to marry Sam and wear "SLUT" tattooed upon her upper arm because of some misunderstanding with the local arcade operator (Delroy Lindo). The characters walk the fine line between petty criminals and stereotypical white trash.

This should have been an amusing film, Ijacks and Freddie running from Sam on a road trip ending with Freddie's fantasies of becoming a Vegas showgirl, but the story never wants to leave their hometown. Along the course of this road-trip that isn't, a barrage of forcibly wacky cameos and minor roles are played by Tuesday Weld, Courtney Love and Dan Ackroyd.

What makes the film unbearable at times is the quirkiness that Baigelman wants so desperately to inflict upon us with these cameos and bizarre cartoony violence. Before long we are supposed to realize that Ijacks and Sam have never really grown up, and now they are adults bickering over Freddie. We never seem to care for any of these characters, it just plays like Dumb and Dumber for a True Romance audience. D

COURTESY FINE LINE PICTURES
Keanu Reeves and Cameron Diaz get dragged down in silliness.

Franken attacked in moronic book

By Teresa McCarthy
Collegian Correspondent

J.P. MAURO
Al Franken Is A Buck-Toothed Moron And Other Observations
Payback Publishing

From its parody-laced title you might guess the topic of this soon-to-be-bestseller. It must be a conservative retaliation against Al Franken's semi-recent book, Rush Limbaugh Is A Big Fat Idiot And Other Observations!

The anger in this relatively short and relatively repetitive book (an approximate two hour distraction) is directed at Franken, who you probably know as the character Stuart Smalley from "Saturday Night Live," and his Democratic Party connections. J.P. Mauro tries to rip him apart, seeming much like a rabid dog that has lost its mauling capacity.

Instead of inducing outrageous laughter on every page, which was so obviously his pretentious aim, Mauro weakly manages to stir some intermittent giggling. Despite his sweeping Republican generalizations (he and Limbaugh must be thicker than highly pressured blood) and ridiculous patriotism, he is a critic of contemporary American society and therefore has a voice you might want to hear.

His primary platform is the hypocrisy he sees within the Democratic party — its self-righteous leaders and celebrity adherents. With the help of cartoons, this book created a vivid picture of just how intimate Hillary and Bill Clinton are with influential corporate people such as, my friend and yours, Ted Turner. What a surprise!

This humor must be dissected from the rest of his writing, which is purely cruel and ignorant— tired Barney Frank comments and derisive vegan remarks are just the beginning. Never have such glaring fallacies of logic reflected off the pages of a hardcover. Mauro's reversal of cause and effect relationships are insidious. There are about three references to which drugs — he chooses crack — are blamed as the cause of crime and violence in New York.

As the book progresses, one becomes increasingly suspicious of the author's motives. His relentless scorn for Franken as a comedian just does not make sense. My conclusion is that Mauro found Franken very laughable as Stuart Smalley, a character created by Franken to satirize 12-step programs, etc. In the book, Mauro completely denounces him and then proceeds to denounce 12-step programs himself... and less eloquently!

This is what I consider to be the tragic downfall of the book. There is absolutely no purpose to it. Al Franken was unfortunately in the right place at the right time. It obviously would have been directed at anyone to call Rush Limbaugh big, fat, or idiotic. For Mauro's sake, it is good that the adjectives chosen were so mild. His response has been so long-winded and inflammatory that I'm afraid he would have had a stroke if Rush had been identified as the (your favorite insult here) he is. Then this book wouldn't exist. Would the Presidential election still go on??? C

Cowboy Junkies return for rare club appearance

COURTESY GUZMAN
Cowboy Junkies take their mellow sounds to the intimate Iron Music Hall on Wednesday night.

By Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

Seems like everyone's jumping on the roots rock bandwagon these days. Even SubPop has a country band. All this is old hat for Cowboy Junkies fans, however, who have been basking in the glory of the Junkies hushed country stylings since 1988's Trinity Sessions. It is a glorious stroke of luck, then, that the Junkies will be appearing Sept. 18th at the Iron Horse in Northampton — perhaps the most intimate venue in New England.

Intimacy is the catch phrase when dealing with the Junkies. Few songwriters can get as "inside" as Michael Timmins, and few voices can shine as beautifully as Margo Timmins'. They are a brilliant after hours band— a best friend at two in the morning. The tiny Iron Horse stage, and the wonderful Iron Horse sound, will allow the Junkies to display their mastery of the subtle-a mastery well displayed on their latest album Lay it Down.

Lay it Down is a smokey, stripped down album. It brings Michael Timmins' guitar playing back into focus— stripping away the more carefully layered arrangements of the few previous albums. This stripped down approach promises to translate beautifully live— the rough edges and grit intact. It is well known, however, that no matter how graceful or lyrical the guitar playing, and no matter how soulful and fluid the rhythm section, it is Margo Timmins' voice that will steal the show. Rarely rising above a whisper, but as nuanced and powerful as any lung busting diva, Timmins brings life and passion to the poetic tales of heartache and survival. It is a voice as sweet and lyrical as it is sad and weathered.

Cowboy Junkies fans and roots rock aficionados will be breathless at the Iron Horse on Wednesday— a rare flawless combination of artist and venue. Bring some kleenex and put your heart on your sleeve.

Cowboy Junkies perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall Wednesday night at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. Call the club at 584-6610 for more information.

Amber Waves
FAR EAST
Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries
63 Main St.
253-9200
MID EAST
Arabian delights
salads & sandwiches
31 Boltwood Walk
253-9299
OCMP Delivery Express

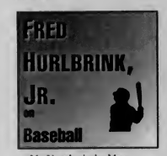
JUST DO IT
OPEN Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 P.M. 418 N. Pleasant Street
Please Contact Eric Spitz (Rush Chairman)
549-0676

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. September 18, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
!! AEROBICS !!

FILM & ROCK POSTER SALE
Trainspotting
PROFESSIONAL
ATIME
DUSK
Emma
ESCAPE
AMERICAN & FOREIGN MOVIE POSTERS
ROCK POSTERS
PHOTOS & POSTCARDS
SCRIPTS
SEPT 16-19
Student Union Ballroom

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
Since 1984 La Cazuela has been winning acclaim and awards for its hand made cooking and outstanding design. We prepare food that is representative of fine dining in the many regions of Mexico and the American Southwest. Our menu changes seasonally to take advantage of the freshest available foods and to reflect the cultural traditions of the food we serve. We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection and the warm hospitality that reflects a western heritage. Please join us.
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
LIVE RIGHT
EAT WELL
COOK WITH CHILES!



RUSH ΦΜΔ
OPEN HOUSE
ΦΜΔ
389 North Pleasant St.
Tuesday Sept. 17, 7p.m.
Wednesday Sept. 18, 7p.m.
Questions call Brad at 548-9582

Red Sox' Vaughn is the Man; Butler has bad luck bunting

Have you ever heard the saying: "If it weren't for bad luck, I wouldn't have any."

Well, the Dodgers' Brett Butler should have that tattooed on his forehead. Mere days after he battled his way back on to the diamond after a bout with throat cancer, Butler had his hand broken while attempting to bunt.

Broke his hand bunting. Probably the only guy in major league history that is known for his bunting ability as much, if not more, than anything else he has done is out for at least three weeks for doing wrong the thing he does best.

The Dodgers may have worse luck. Butlers' presence alone seemed to catapult LA into first place in the national League West, but without their sparkplug and emotional leader lets see what happens.

• Mo Vaughn is the Man.

Not for his .300+ batting average, his 40+ homers or his 125+ ribbies (although numbers like that can't hurt). No, Mo's stature should not be measured by his performances inside the lines, rather he should be lauded for what he does outside Fenway.

Mo has become a hero to inner-city youths all across New England. From his hometown of Norwalk, CT to his adopted city of Boston, kids everywhere wear #42 jerseys and "Hit Dog" t-shirts, but not just because he can hit a baseball 3,000 feet.

People admire and idolize Vaughn because he is a great man. He didn't grow up with the advantages he has now, but unlike a lot of super-rich superstars, he remembers where he came from and how hard he worked to get where he is today.

He realizes how hard it is to grow up these days. He knows how much kids struggle with everyday issues that our parents didn't even know about when they were kids. So, any chance Mo gets, even if he doesn't have the time, he gives back to the community.

Whether it's buying a couple hundred tickets to a baseball game, or taking some kids out on the town or just his measley $100,000 annual donation to the Boy's and Girl's Club of Boston, Mo contributes to more than just the Red Sox playoff hopes.

Mo Vaughn is the Man.

• Brain Busters: 1. Who was the last Red Sox player to hit 40 home runs in a single season? 2. Which major league team holds the record for all-time World Series winning percentage (five or more appearances)?

Answers later in this column.

• Mark McGwire has become the 12th player in major league history to hit 50 home runs in a season.

An impressive accomplishment, but it seems with the evolution of the power hitter that 50 may eventually be a rather average total for home run champs in the future.

I mean Andres Galarraga has had seasons where he's had single-digit home run totals and he leads the NL in taters this season. Like I said last week: Vinny Castilla. Jason Giambi.

The Baltimore Orioles have eight guys who have hit 20 or more this season, not to mention the pick-up of Todd Zeile and Pete Incaviglia.

So, to the point. The home runs are great, they're exciting for baseball fans, and they glorify the games superstars. But, home runs are like three-pointers in the NBA. They pushed the line in, and now there are more three-point shooters in the league than there are empties in the campus pond.

Home run hitters are a dime a dozen nowadays as well. The new stadiums are being built specifically to cater to today's "power hitter."

Anyway, congratulations to one of the original Bash Brothers for officially immortalizing himself in the annals of baseball lore as one of the game's great power hitters, at least for now.

• Brain Buster Answers: 1. Tony Armas, 43 (1984) 2. Pittsburgh Pirates, .714 (5-2).

• Okay, I'll say it: the Red Sox are out of the playoff picture. Fine. Are you happy ya' damn Yankee fans. My summer's over. I have to actually study now.

The Sox put forth a valiant second-half effort, something that cannot be credited to just the power of Mo Vaughn, nor the pitching of Roger Clemens. The Boston resurrection came about thanks to savvy front office moves, clutch performances and, yes, good coaching.

General Manager Dan Duquette brought in Jeff Frye and Darren Bragg, two average players that have done nothing but produce for the Sox. Troy O'Leary has quietly put up tremendous RBI numbers while getting no attention or respect from the fans and media. Reggie Jefferson has shown the league that he really is a terrific left-handed stick.

Even if Aaron Sele has refused to live up to his potential the pitching has been better since the All-Star break. Tom Gordon continues to be average while having incredible stuff. Tim Wakefield has done all a knuckle-baller can do and Heathcliff Slocumb has actually been better than decent in the second half.

The Red Sox are a good baseball team, and they proved that they deserve that label and will be able to build on this season in the near future. Look out.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

MSU football on probation

By Malcolm Johnson
Associated Press

Michigan State's football program will be on probation until the end of the 1999 season.

The NCAA said Monday it concluded the school violated rules on recruiting, benefits, academic eligibility, ethical conduct and institutional control.

The sanctions apparently will not cost the university the right to appear in future bowl games since the NCAA's report did not mention such a penalty. It also does not prohibit the team from playing in televised games.

In addition to four years of probation, which began Dec. 1, 1995, the NCAA reduced by seven the number of initial financial aid awards Michigan State can make to football players during the 1997-98 academic year. And it cut by one the number of coaches who can recruit off campus during December 1996 and January 1997. The sanctions came in addition to penalties the school imposed on itself after investigations by Michigan State and the NCAA turned up the violations.

Michigan State placed its football program on probation for two years, starting Dec. 1, 1995, fired its athletics student advisor and reassigned others connected to the program during the time the violations occurred.

After the university fired Greg Croxton, the former athletics student advisor, Croxton said the school was making him a scapegoat.

But the NCAA now will require that Michigan State continue to develop a comprehensive athletics compliance education program. The university must make annual reports to the NCAA on the program during the four years it is on probation.

"In determining appropriate penalties, the committee considered Michigan State's corrective action," the NCAA report said. "If the athletics student advisor had still been employed in athletics at the institution, the university could have been subject to additional penalties had it failed to take appropriate disciplinary action against him."

The NCAA report warned Croxton that if he tries to get a job in the athletic department of another NCAA school before July 1, 1998, the university could be asked to show why he should be allowed to take the position.

In self-imposed penalties that the NCAA adopted as its own, the university forfeited five wins from the 1994 season; reduced its number of initial scholarships for 1996-97 from 25 to 23; and reduced its total football scholarships during the current year from 85 to 79.

It also has already cut by one the number of football coaches permitted to recruit off campus and cut the number of official visits by potential football players from 56 to 48 for the 1995-96 school year.

The investigations began in October 1994, and centered around alleged academic fraud. They also focused on charges of improper benefits received by Michigan State athletes from people who were not tied directly to the university, but represented its interests. The investigations were prompted by former player Roosevelt Wagner's charges against the football program under former coach George Perles.

Paul Molitor, 21st player to break 3000 hit mark

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Paul Molitor got his 3,000th career hit Monday night, becoming the 21st major leaguer to reach the mark and the first to do it with a triple.

Molitor's historic hit came exactly three years to the day that Dave Winfield got No. 3,000. Like Molitor, Winfield was born in St. Paul, Minn., and was playing for the hometown Minnesota Twins when he made it to the milestone.

Molitor singled in the first inning for No. 2,999 and flied out in the third.

With one out in the fifth, Molitor hit an opposite-field fly ball to the alley off Kansas City rookie Jose Rosado. Center fielder Rod Myers and right fielder Jon Nunnally both tried to run it down but slowed up as they came together, and the ball dropped just behind them.

Molitor, 40, reached the plateau with his major league-leading 211th hit of the season, and the 105th triple of a career that started in 1978 with Milwaukee. He signed last December with the Twins.

Molitor's teammates ran onto the field to congratulate him after the hit, as did Twins manager Tom Kelly, who rarely leaves the dugout to join celebrations.

Two other members of the 3,000-hit club, Robin Yount, who played more than a decade with Molitor in Milwaukee, and former Royals star George Brett watched from an upstairs box at Kauffman Stadium. Also on hand was American League president Gene Budig.

The crowd in Kansas City gave Molitor a standing ovation when he came to plate, and another ovation after the hit.

In his next at-bat in the seventh, Molitor singled for hit No. 3,001. He hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth in the Twins' 6-5 loss. Molitor raised his average to .343 with his 3,000th hit. The Twins designated hitter is on his way to his 11th .300 season, and sixth in seven years.

The seven-time All-Star and MVP of the 1993 World Series with Toronto admitted before the game he was more relaxed than he had been the day befoe while trying to get the historic hit at home. "The thing about yesterday was it was not relaxing," Molitor, who got a standing ovation from the sparse Kauffman Stadium crowd each time he came to the plate, said before the game.

"Now, to be away from trying to do it on one given day in Minnesota, naturally, I think I'll be a little more relaxed tonight," he said.

Molitor, who is also the first man to reach the rare plateau in a season in which he got more than 200 hits, had made up his mind to enjoy the chase.

"It's fun," he said. "The response and the letters and the calls that I've gotten, and the crowd yesterday - how could you not enjoy something like this?

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Play Women s Rugby! Fun and challenging. Daily 4-6pm Call Mel @ 256-5470

CHINESE FOOD KAI Chi delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2 am Friday and Saturday to 3 am

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 Bedroom apartment in Pulfton For info call 549-5941

AUTO FOR SALE

90 Geo Prism Excellent condition $3600/BO 584-8302 Ask for Mark

1986 Subaru GL Hatchback 114k miles Good condition 4W Drive $1600 Best O Call 586-3497

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Good running condition Best offer Call 545-3007 or 834-5722

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK, 75,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done, $7900 OBO, Call 549-7286

1983 Olds, Delta 83 for sale New tires, rotors, wheels Panasonic Stereo System, $750 Call 253-7758

'87 Ford Ranger New engine, great shape Call Amy 253-1826

'79 Dodge Van Automatic, Mag inspection sticker, Runs Great! $800 256-1300

EMPLOYMENT

Need some extra cash, but don't have time for a steady job? Sign up to work Family Day, Saturday, September 28. Applications can be picked up at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall. For more info contact Jenn Bennett at 545-2317

Spring Break!!! Earn Cash!! Highest Commissions!! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring - Earn up to $2,000+/month World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions No exp. necessary For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring- Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring- Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50017

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available All students are eligible Let us help For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Attention Skiers and Boarders. Entry level positions into the ski industry with skiing benefits Make up to $1000/month. Part time enthusiastic individuals please call Ski Card International 1-800-333-2580

EMPLOYMENT

Tutor Wanted For Biochem 420 Background in Organic Chemistry also Call 549-1987

Survey Personnel Needed for PVTA Ridership Survey- In order to improve bus service, the Ridership of all bus routes in the Amherst area will be surveyed during the week of October 20 through October 26. Each bus route will be surveyed several times throughout the week Surveyors will be paid $7 00 to $8 00 an hour to distribute survey forms, answer questions and collect survey forms All shifts are available For more information please call 413-781-8045, Pioneer Valley Planning Commission, 26 Central Street, West Springfield, MA 01089 An EOE/AA Employer

ENTERTAINMENT

Zeppelin! Pearl Jam! Creedence! NYC Band does it all for your next party! Covers jams, Kick-Ass originals! Call my Secret Satore 212 463 6683 http://www.eskma.com/~mss/

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-5742

Available now! 2BDR townhouse on bus line $630/month Squire Village 665-2203

FOR SALE

Dave Matthews Tickets for sale 10/6 Call 549-4728

Fridge w/freezer 4ft tall, mint, Call Kelly 549-0920 $90 or BO

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200 00 OBO 548-9728

Stereo Systems and components, used/reconditioned Large selection, honest advice, warranty, great prices We buy audio, video, DJ, musical equipment. Stereo and Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley Open Sundays only, 9-5 Other days call Amherst, 256-0941

SALE Dorm Fridge $125, Word Processor $100 Call 546-1576

Waterbed Oak, Queen, Drawers $225 549-6412

I have 4 Dave Matthews Tix Oct 4 MSG Need to sell Call Karen 549-5079

Washburn XB400 Bass- Active Pick Ups w/case $250 587-0422

Notebook Computer 8 mb Ram 120 HD Both expandable Microsoft/Office with case $700 256-1300

DAKOTA: _____ Beautiful Husky/Shephard/Retriever mix, 2 years of age, outdoor dog, needs lots of exercise, well-behaved, voice trained, fantastic personality- playful, sweet, good-natured, great in strange environment Loves swimming, frisbee, other dogs, outsanding around small children $150 neg- only to good home-owner Leaving the country. Call Sara @ 256-6788

Futon Double with frame and cover $150 BO Waterbed, Queen, Semi- wavebss with headboard $150 BO 253-5350

FOUND

Pair of prescription eyeglasses Outside BRC on 9/10 Call UMASS Police to claim

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3354

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses Retire rich on ten years

Buying Lessons w/Dyeta Bumpus Call for brochure 732-8817

LOST

Sunglasses: Prescription, Oakley w/ case. Call 549-3950

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed For dark pop/rock band. Call Phil 549-5836

MISCELLANEOUS

VISA/MASTERCARD GUARANTEED Bad credit No credit No problem Call 1-800-254-1590 (24 hours)

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906

ROOM FOR RENT

Northampton- Roomate needed in great downtown two bedroom apt. Own bedroom/bathroom, shared living room and kitchen Seeking responsible male or female Call 586-9284

WORTH THE RIDE

2 BDR Apt on Sunderland. HW floors, washdry, porch, garage
315= BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4394

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97 Sell trips, earn cash and go free STS is hiring Campus Reps/Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida Call 1-800-648-4849 for information on joining America s #1 Student Tour Operator

TRANSPORTATION

Do you commute? I need a ride from Pittsfield Willing to share gas expenses Call 413 442 7180

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

If you're feeling stressed and overwhelmed, treat yourself to a mini-vacation. A weekend getaway or midweek excursion could be just the ticket. An old friend could be feeling neglected--are you caught up on your correspondence?

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Resist the temptation to procrastinate this week, especially where a promise to a sweetheart is concerned. Your trustworthiness could be at stake. An unusual adventure could entail some risk. Make sure you plan ahead before agreeing to participate.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

A rigid person wants to make you adhere to every detail. Before you start to look for ways to get around the rules, try opening the door for honest discussion. There may be an important goal behind the regulations that you're missing.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

Help with a sticky situation comes from a distant source. Focus on raising funds for a pet project. You're unusually persuasive this week, so put yourself to work with a vengeance. This weekend, treat your mate to an unexpected luxury.

LEO
July 23-August 23

Confusion reigns this week, but you're more than equal to the challenge. The cooler head will prevail in a heated conflict, so keep your wits about you. Treat yourself to a group outing for some rest and relaxation. It could add a new dimension to your social life.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

If a close relationship seems tense right now, see if you can improve the communication factor. If you're not both operating on the same wave length, you're doomed from the start. An old friend has a suggestion that could change your life.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

Although you may feel as though chaos is ruling your life, stick it out a little longer. A slight change in plans could help several things fall into place, so don't be afraid to stick your neck out. Ask plenty of questions of someone who knows you intimately.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

You'll go further this week if you can anticipate what's expected of you instead of having it spelled out. Cultivate your intuition. If you're having trouble understanding something of a technical nature, consult an expert.

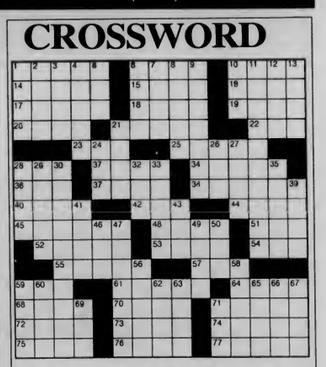
SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

What you say and what you mean could differ wildly this week, so consider your words carefully. A hated household task could become much easier if you take advantage of all the tools at your disposal. Don't be afraid to ask for help.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Invest in something for yourself this week. Whether it's a toy or a handy timesaver, you'll be glad you did it. A hard-working person may need a break from their routine. Offer them something fun to do; you could see an entirely new side to their personality.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18



An argument over money has its roots in some other issues. Get to the bottom of the problem, or it will only recur. A new opportunity is coming your way, so be prepared! A voice from the past calls to offer advice. Take it with a grain of salt.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

Don't allow yourself to be persuaded away from your convictions. Stick to your guns, but don't be surprised if you meet with resistance. If you're determined to prove a point, try building a case that's based on facts and numbers.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Drink deeply
6. Handle
10. Wan
14. Wriggly, for one
15. Midlante king
16. Passage for smoke
17. Style of expression
18. "___ True What They Say About Dixie?" (2 words)
19. Recount
20. Brouhaha
21. Accounts receivable, for one
22. Hit the hammock
23. Male sheep
25. Emulated Betsy Ross
28. Goof up
31. Hong ___
34. Olympic judge
36. Daisy ___ Yokum
37. Johnson of "Laugh-In"
38. Shaking in one's boots
40. ___ facto
42. Laughing sound
44. Like Fox's "Roc"
45. Meager quantity
48. Sought reparations
51. Last letter
52. Word after freeze, often
53. Writer Gardner
54. Shade provider
55. Edition
57. Sweater size (abbr.)
59. Kind of room
61. Carved piece of jewelry
64. Creep
68. Four-cycle gas engine inventor
70. Muddled
71. Actress Dern
72. Aids for actors
73. Social events
74. Ria
75. Jests
76. Mademoiselle's pronoun
77. Turns while

DOWN

1. Resign
2. Take down
3. Corrosive liquid
4. It's kept under the rug
5. Girlish (abbr.)
6. Kross of rap
7. Famed Scottish loch
8. Acting awards
9. Horseshide hitters
10. Rudder locale
11. Trim down
12. Story-telling dance
13. Complaint from Fido
21. "___ ti vieta" ("Fedora" aria)
24. New Zealand vine
26. Fem. soldier
27. List shortener
28. Give forth
29. ___ transit
30. Exclusive
32. Utmost degree
33. Grayface
35. Make very merry
39. Consider
41. Cornelia ___ Skinner
43. Continental continent (abbr.)
46. ___ Girls
47. Teach
49. Roper or Lincoln
50. Letter on a Tigers uniform
56. Art stand
58. Fleet Street's favorite newsmaker
59. "___ Around the Clock"
60. Toiletry case
62. Repast
63. Leisure
65. Amounting to zero
66. Saskatchewan tribe
67. Berets
68. Wartime agcy.
71. ___ gloss

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Always Wanted One of Those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Dilbert By Scott Adams

University By Frank Cho

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Everytime I see teenagers or young people marching in a parade, I cry.

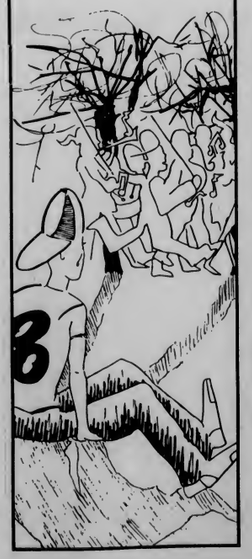
All the other spectators are cheering or smiling or clapping.

It's not so bad for me. In a life filled with uncertainty, I have a small pocket of consistency I can count on.

It could be worse, I could break out into irresistible laughter at funerals.

Generation X By Chris Lehman

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson



8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Close to Home By John McPherson

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE

instead of this stupid ad

TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1762

Quote of the Day

"I have definitional problems with the word 'violence.' I don't know what the word 'violence' means."

–William Colby, CIA director

Yesterday's Crossword Answers

R	S	V	P		W	H	O	L	E		N	U	M	B
O	H	I	O		E	A	T	E	R		E	C	R	U
O	E	L	E	G	A	T	I	O	N		A	L	E	S
E	S	E		A	P	E	S			G	R	A	Q	Y
			A	M	O	S		D	A	L	E
B	A	R	R	E	N		L	O	W	E	R	I	N	G
E	D	I	T	S		R	I	V	E	N		T	E	E
A	L	L	Y		T	O	N	E	S		D	E	W	S
R	A	E		C	O	L	D	S		C	O	M	E	T
S	I	S	T	E	R	L	Y		T	U	S	S	L	E
			I	N	N	S		D	I	R	E
W	A	I	S	T			S	E	M	I		C	H	I
E	L	M	S		A	N	N	E	B	O	L	E	Y	N
E	S	A	U		L	O	I	R	E		D	L	O	S
D	O	N	E		I	N	T	E	R		O	L	E	O

Today's Staff

Mike Burke
Night Editor

Mark McGrath
Copy Editor

James Stanley
Photo Technician

Brian Inocencio
Production Supervisor

Rob Snow
Thang Vo
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Kielbasa Grinder
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Fried Shrimp
Chicken Breast
Eggplant Parmigiana
Grilled Ham & Cheese

Hampden

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Ziti with Tomato Sauce
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Garden Vegan Burger
Pastabilities
Manicotti in Sauce

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Ziti with Tomato Sauce
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Hot & Spicy Wings
Garden Vegan Burger
Pastabilities / Manicotti

Sports

UMass men's soccer remains unbeaten,

Butler again leads offensive attack, while goal keeper Tim Pearson posts another

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The shutouts continue.

With three regular season games under its belt, the Massachusetts men's soccer team (3-0) has posted its third straight shutout victory. The most recent Minuteman romp came last Saturday in Orono, Maine where UMass blanked the Black Bears 1-0.

In the No. 18 Minutemen's shutout against Maine (2-2), junior forward Mike Butler again led the UMass scoring march, firing in an unassisted goal at 31:18.

Massachusetts	1
Maine	0

"Butler's goal was an outstanding shot from about 30 yards out that rocketed into the upper corner," said UMass coach Sam Koch. "I don't think anybody could have gotten it."

While the Springfield native was the only Minuteman to light up the scoreboard, Koch felt his squad played well as a team.

"It was a solid team effort from everybody," Koch said.

However, Koch gives much of the credit in the win to his defense, as UMass was out-shot 15-9 by the Bears yet still managed to return to Amherst with a victory.

The Minutemen's offensive barrage has gotten off to a slow start. However, in this recent victory over Maine, Butler and Co. have done a better job keeping the opposing keeper on his toes. Koch feels that his front line is beginning to get back into the rhythm of shooting more.

On the other side of the ball, it was the Dan Chagnon show as the senior defender led the defense. As usual, his job was to shadow the opponent's top scorer and the end results were the same as they had been in the previous two games — shutout.

Chagnon, who sat out last season to concentrate on academics, is back and has been a major force in the backfield for UMass.

"Danny Chagnon definitely put in an All-American performance; he was super," Koch said. "He won everything in the air, he did a great job in the back.

"Joe Iacobson played a great game in the back as well, they really didn't give UMaine much of a chance."

Rookie keeper Tim Pearson put forth another solid effort between the posts, notching two saves in the match. With the Chagnon/Iacobson tandem anchoring the UMass defense along with defender Tashi Tshering, who has bailed out Pearson with a few saves himself, it is no wonder Pearson has kicked off his college career with such success.

This three game shutout streak is the club's best opening performance since the club won its first five games in the '92 campaign. However, Koch is reluctant to compare this year's squad to one from the past.

"To be honest with you, I don't even remember what the '92 team did," Koch said. "I'm just worried about this year. As far as comparing the two teams, this team is completely different than any team we've had here."

That's true. This year's combination of speed, defense and offensive fire power has earned UMass its first national ranking.

The Minutemen play their season home opener against the University of New Hampshire on Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field.

When asked how it will feel to finally play a home match this season, Koch replied, "I think it will feel like we're away. We haven't seen that field yet this year."

The Minutemen have not beaten the Wildcats in the past two years, but Koch isn't concerned with the past. In fact, he hopes to keep moving forward and concentrate on the task at hand.

"We have to worry about how we are going to play on the day," Koch said. "When we do that, focus on what we have to do as a team, and each player is focused on doing his job within the team, it doesn't matter where we are playing or who we are playing against."

— COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior defender Dan Chagnon helped the Minutemen post their third shutout in three games as UMass blanked Maine 1-0.

UMass polo wins three Engin & defense solid

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team returned safely and happily from Brooklyn, NY this past weekend after plowing through their first Eastern Water Polo Association league tournament this season.

For a change, the Minutemen weren't led by any one scorer, instead coach Russ Yarworth got a well-balanced scoring attack in each of the weekend's victories.

Massachusetts had a different leading scorer in each of the three contests, but in none of the three games did super sophomore Brian Stahl pace the squad in goals.

In UMass's first match, they swam off against lowly Lehman College.

Springing off the momentum built from their convincing 17-4 thrashing of Boston College, the Minutemen jumped out to a quick three-goal advantage in the first quarter.

The Minutemen replicated their first quarter showing with an equally impressive second period going into half time with an 8-2 lead. UMass shifted into cruise control from there and pulled into the driveway with a 10-4 win.

Eight different Minutemen found the back of the net in the first contest led by sophomore Scott Stevens and freshman Rob Markle who scored two apiece. Freshman Ryan Gray also contributed a score in the rout.

Reserve goaltenders Dane Teruya and Richard Huntley split time in the UMass net. The tandem combined for eight saves while giving starter Paul Engin the game off.

UMass's second contest was little different from its first as the Minutemen entirely dominated the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy.

The Minutemen pounced on the Merchant Marines quickly, leading 8-0 after just one quarter rudely dismissing them by a final score of 17-3.

All three goalies, Engin, Teruya and Huntley saw time in the ambush. Engin paced the trio with five saves while, all told, the Minuteman goal keepers turned away 11 of 14 shots.

Chad Filiault, the only Massachusetts native (North Adams) on the UMass roster, topped the Minuteman scoring attack with three goals along with Timmy Troupis, a native of Greece.

Troupis, who weighs 165 pounds soaking wet after a eating a store-full of baklava, can add tremendous depth to the UMass defense as the season wears on having gained a wealth of experience in Greece. Stahl netted his only two goals of the weekend in the win.

UMass lost its fire in its final contest of the weekend having to come back from a four-goal deficit to defeat a revamped St. Francis squad, 9-8.

After being outscored in the third quarter by a 6-1 margin, Massachusetts got its act together, rallied for four scoring strikes in the final frame and squelched any hopes of another major upset.

Gabriel Marrero netted three goals in the contest, paving the way for the Minuteman offense that got no help from Stahl or Staudenbauer who were held scoreless by the St. Francis defense.

J.C. Limardo and freshman Rich Slingluff pitched in two goals each picking up some of the slack left by Stahl. Engin was superb between the pipes, turning away nine St. Francis attempts in preserving the come-from-behind victory.

Up next for the Minutemen is the Brown Invitational where they will be tested by the No. 18 Brown Bears.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Aldo Roman continued his steady play, offensively and defensively, helping the water polo squad to a perfect EWPA weekend.

Maceiko, Carrara lead men's XC to second place finish

By Chris Krein
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts men's cross country season got underway this weekend in a tri-meet against Iona and Northeastern.

In ideal running conditions (60 degrees with a light mist) Saturday at Franklin Park in Boston, the Minutemen raced to a second place finish, easily outdistancing a depleted Northeastern team. Iona, a veteran top 20 team, paced it's way to victory, placing runners in the top three positions.

They were lead by Padraic Buckley, who finished ahead of the pack in 24:36.

The UMass team earned the split by finishing with 37 points, well ahead of Northeastern's 84 points, but behind Iona's commanding 19 point victory.

Coach Ken O'Brien was satisfied with the performance of his squad on the five-mile course.

"I'm very pleased with the outcome, especially considering the strength of the Iona team," O'Brien said. "Athletically speaking, to have three first-time runners finish in our top six is an indication that the teams were not that far apart."

The Minutemen were lead by an outstanding performance from senior Mike Maceiko. Maceiko was edged out of third place by Iona's Mark Churchill, finishing only one second behind him in a time of 25:16.

"Mike ran a little conservatively in the first half of the race," O'Brien said. "However, he came on extremely well up Bear Cage Hill and ran the last mile 10 to 15 seconds faster than anyone else in the field, with possibly the exception of Buckley."

Ryan Carrara was the next UMass finisher, placing sixth (25:29). The junior from Holliston, along with senior teammate Paul Blodorn, who finished ninth, garnered extra praise from their coach.

"Mike, Ryan and Paul should be given extra credit for getting the younger runners mentally prepared for this race," O'Brien said. "It was a nice mix of upperclassman leadership with youthful enthusiasm."

It was the rookies who made an immediate impact in the race. Freshman Peter Gleason and sophomore Brian Hughes ran with the front of the pack for the first half of the race.

They fell off the pace slightly at the end however. Gleason finished seventh overall with a time of 25:36, while Hughes placed eleventh in 25:50.

"We wanted to see how the younger kids would respond when they are counted on," O'Brien said. "They accepted that challenge."

Other finishers for UMass included Sean Murphy, who crossed the line in 26:23, good enough for 19th place, and Brian Chabot, who came in 23rd with a 26:57 performance.

Ryan Fortune brought up the rear for the team with a 26th place finish.

"We had good results due to a good approach," O'Brien stated. "The kids worked hard in the off season, came to practice with the right attitude and that showed today."

O'Brien will be looking for similar results this upcoming weekend as the team plays host to Vermont, Boston University and Maine in the first home meet of the season.

The meet is slated to begin at 12:30 p.m.

Smith transfers exuberance to UM women's soccer

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Robin Smith, a transfer from Creighton University, has mightily contributed to one of the best defensive back fields in the country.

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Yesterday was team photo day for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, so the Minutewomen, like nine-year- olds headed for Sunday School, broke out their gleaming white uniforms and best family photo album smiles.

After a few minutes, the official photographer had completed his work, and Marie Rudy, head coach Jim Rudy's wife stepped in for a few unofficial team photos.

At this point, the team stopped being the Minutewomen and reverted to their slightly off-center selves. Players climbed on each other, and hung from the cross bar of the net behind them like chimpanzees. In the center of Rudy's viewfinder Robin Smith was doing a handstand.

On a team full of laid-back free-spirited types, the sophomore transfer student, just in from Creighton University, was already one of the ring leaders.

That, coupled with her gritty and tenacious on-the-field work at left back where she plays as a mirror image of right back Erica Iverson, makes it seem peculiar that last year she was anywhere but Amherst, let alone a midfielder for a 7-11 team in Omaha, Neb.

A lifelong midfielder, Smith made the adjustment to her new defensive role as swiftly as she adjusted to her new teammates. Her aggressive attacking style, compliments and aids that of Iverson and All-American Erin Lynch who's front-and-center in an offensively-minded defensive diamond.

"It gives you a lot of confidence to know that either the ball isn't going to get through, or the person isn't going to get through," Lynch said. "You know she's going to go in hard and get one or the other."

"I've never had to hang back so much," Smith said of her new position. "I'm used to playing forward and [rushing up the field] is just what I do. I get bored if I have to stay back there. They clear the flank for me so I can make runs up the field and hopefully I'll learn to use that more effectively in the future."

Returning nine starters from last year's NCAA Sweet 16 team, the Minutewomen had limited opportunities for newcomers. One was at left back, a slot vacated by the graduation of Nikki Ahrenholz, a strong defender, but often timid offensively.

"She's admirably filling in a slot that we didn't know how else to fill," Rudy said. "Playing as an opposite footed left side defender is hard to do."

Smith made the switch to defense, and brought her smash- mouth style of creating offensive opportunities with her. It is not uncommon to see Smith take down an opposing forward and charge 30 or more yards up the left flank, dynamically running over the opposition's right side like Larry Czonka.

"I don't go in to hurt anybody, but I'll go in hard and if they fall in the process it happens, it's part of the game," Smith said.

Playing like a seasoned veteran in her new surroundings, Smith has already started to become a favorite amongst the vociferous Richard F. Garber Field crowds, a world away from the aptly named Tranquility Park where Creighton plays its home matches. Her mentality takes one of the nation's toughest defensive units, and makes it even more formidable.

"We feel like our back line is like a rock," Jim Rudy said. "It has experience and she is a very experienced player herself. She doesn't play like a sophomore.

"[Our defense] has skill. It has vision. It has intelligence. And she's just added greatly to that. We knew that we'd be solid with just [Iverson, Lynch and Thompson] returning and [goalkeeper Danielle] Dion, but she's further solidified that."

Some had wondered if Smith, heavily scouted from Naperville (Ill.) North High School, would be making such an impact anywhere after missing much of her senior year after undergoing ACL surgery.

Smith found herself in Omaha, where she was one of only three players to start all 18 matches for the Lady Jays, leading the team with 60 shots on the season, and scoring her one goal in a home match against Southern Methodist.

Smith's family planned to move to the Boston area, and she explored her options to follow suit.

"She wrote me a letter that I was really impressed with," Rudy recalled. "It was mature and direct. When I talked to her I just developed a feeling. I liked her mentality, attitude and personality. Her former coach spoke the world of her."

Her teammates have also noted her value off of the field, where her addition has already made a strong impact, less than a month since arriving in the Pioneer Valley.

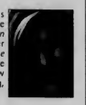
"She's come in as a transfer and picked up the intensity level of our training sessions and the games," Lynch said. "She picks everyone else up. Everyone picks up their intensity because we know she's out there trying as hard as she can every practice."

This quality could rank as Smith's most valuable asset to the team, one that will likely be amplified next year, when she returns to her natural midfield position, where UMass graduates its entire unit this year.

Rudy makes no secret that he'll look to her in the future.

"I see her as a potential leader," he said. "She has the personality for it. She's a great kid, vivacious and talkative."

On the field, it's Smith's play that's been doing the talking lately. Opposing tactical schemes often compressed on the left two thirds of the field, neutralizing Iverson and Lynch's ability to charge from the back lines and set up an offensive strike. Those tactics become moot, when the possibility of an attack from the UMass left is an option.



Smith's versatility and the bruising style of play that she learned from former coach Brett Hall contributes to that. Meanwhile, her open-minded attitude towards a change of scenery on the field to accompany the drastic change of scenery off the field coming from Nebraska will make her a mainstay in the UMass lineup for the next few years.

"I've played halfback all my life; I've never played defense, but I just want to play where [coach Rudy] needs me right now," Smith said. "If that's left back, that's left back. The defense we have is such a good defense and such a good system, and I'm proud to be a part of that."

The Minutewomen rely on their defense and the attacks it both generates and thwarts to win matches. With the addition of Smith, who's hands were firmly planted on the ground for yesterday's team photo, it's more likely the defensive unit and entire team will have its hands in the air in celebration when the NCAA Tournament arrives.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 11 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, September 18, 1996

Befuddled brothers

Edward Burns follows up the Brothers McMullen with Jennifer Aniston's She's the One. Check out the Collegian's review (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Donaghue, UMass have strong weekend

Rebecca Donaghue and the UMass women's cross country team finished second in last weekend's Thetford Invitational in Thetford, Vt. (See Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Izetbegovic victorious in Bosnian election

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Muslim leader Alija Izetbegovic seemed assured yesterday of becoming chairman of the country's new three-member presidency as election officials neared the end of their tally.

Even before final results were in, foreign envoys were pressing Izetbegovic to start working on the institutions meant to steer the country away from war and separatism.

Despite an increasingly nationalist tone from Izetbegovic's party, diplomats are counting on the 72-year-old president's desire to keep Bosnia whole.

The two halves of the country — the Muslim-Croat federation and a Serb republic — will enjoy a high degree of autonomy. The key to holding Bosnia together will be avoiding gridlock, beginning with the presidency.

The peace plan for Bosnia called for a three-way presidency shared by a Muslim, a Serb and a Croat. The one with the highest number of votes is chairman for two years.

With 85 percent of the Muslim and Croat ballots and 79 percent of the Serb vote counted, Izetbegovic had 629,000 votes to 501,000 for Momcilo Krajisnik, a Serb nationalist who campaigned on the platform to break up Bosnia. Kresimir Zubak of the main Croat party had 245,000 votes.

NATION

Kennedy, Frank attack GOP's immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Republicans battled over immigration reform, Democrats led by Sen. Edward Kennedy and Rep. Barney Frank attacked the latest GOP proposal as mean-spirited and discriminatory.

"This bill is an insult to the nation's proud immigrant heritage and history and it doesn't deserve to pass," said Kennedy (D-Mass.) a leader in crafting the Senate's original immigration bill, which passed overwhelmingly in May.

At issue is the immigration reform bill that emerged from a Republican conference. Democrats complained they were excluded from negotiations, and the resulting legislation is punitive and does away with important provisions included in the earlier bills. Kennedy, for instance, criticized Republicans for, among other things, eliminating provisions to provide 350 additional Department of Labor inspectors for immigration enforcement.

Another provision, designed as a compromise, would let children of illegal immigrants stay in school as long as their parents pay tuition.

The earlier House bill had denied public schooling to those children outright, but Democrats said the compromise amounted to the same thing because few illegal immigrant families can afford tuition averaging $5,600 a year.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thursday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 50	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

UMass to host hearing on opinions, problems with genetic research

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian staff

A hearing intended to bring out into the open the opinions and controversies surrounding genetic research will be held on the University of Massachusetts campus.

The Massachusetts Legislature's Special Committee on Genetic Information Policy will hold the meeting in room 101 of the Campus Center on Sept. 24 at 4:30 p.m.

Current genetic research involves efforts to map and understand the DNA sequence of human beings.

Specifically, the Human Genome Project, which is federally funded, focuses on mapping every gene in the human body — potentially using this information to determine which people are carriers of genetic-based diseases, or who might develop these diseases sometime in the future.

The main concern, according to committee organizers, is the risk that insurance companies or employers would offer marginalized status to a applicant based on genetic informaiton.

State Representative Harriette L. Chandler (D-Worcester), who co-chairs the committee with State Representative Jay Kaufman (D-Lexington), spoke about the importance of the public meetings. A believer in the research, she said genetics is going to be "the health care of the future."

"Basically, what we're trying to do is to see if we need some legislation or regulation," Chandler said. "We're really trying to protect the individual."

While other states have adopted legislation to protect civil and privacy rights, Massachusetts currently has no legislation regulating the science or the industry of genetic research.

"There are a number of states that have already introduced legislation," Chandler said.

In a state where many private and public groups are currently engrossed in extensive research on the subject, there is concern, she said, that steps need to be taken now to insure precarious situations in the future.

According to Chandler, there was a recent attempt to pass a bill that would have provided protection for individuals from discrimination based on genetic informaiton, but it failed when it came up for a vote.

In a recent press release, Chandler said, "We need to hear people's concerns about these issues, so that we can balance the great benefits from these discoveries with an individual's right to privacy."

Paul Mathews, legislative aid to Chandler, said the goal behind having the meetings now is to avoid issues regarding privacy and discrimination from surfacing further down the road. He emphasized that genetic research will eventually play a major role in the health care industry.

"There's some very far reaching implications for these developments," Mathews said. "This is something that's going to be a major issue in 10 years.

"Most of the research into genetics, especially with the human genome is government funded," he said.

The Committee has a diverse group of members who are involved in many different areas relating to the issues being discussed. They include professor George Annas, Boston University Health Law Department; Judith Beard, Epidemiology Research Coordinator; professor Marjorie Clay, University of Massachusetts Medical School; Michael J. Malinowski, Kirkpatrick and Lockhart; Dr David Page, Whitehead Institute; Dr. Philip Reilly, Shriver Center for Mental Retardation and Martia West, New England Regional Newborn Screening.

Chandler expressed her hopes that students and interested community members would attend, and possibly participate in the meeting.

"We hope that the University will turn out and come," Chandler said.

The Committee will hold public meetings in other places around Massachusetts, including Worcester, Lexington, and Boston.

Perot not to be allowed in presidential debates

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a decision cheered by Republicans, a nonpartisan commission recommended yesterday that Ross Perot be denied a spot in this fall's presidential debates because he has no realistic shot at winning the White House. An outraged Perot vowed to sue.

Still to be seen is whether excluding Perot would hurt his presidential prospects by denying him a stage or give him new ammunition to argue against the two-party system.

The Commission on Presidential Debates said its purpose in recommending the exclusion of Perot and Reform Party running mate Pat Choate was to provide a forum for candidates "from whom the American people actually will choose the next president.

"Participation is not extended to candidates because they might prove interesting or entertaining," said the panel of five Democrats and five Republicans, which has played host to the fall debates since 1987.

Choate denounced the commission process as a "corrupt little game."

Republican Bob Dole's campaign, pinning its come-from-behind strategy on a boost from the debates, hailed the decision. "They assume there was no realistic chance that anyone but myself or the president would be elected," said Dole, campaigning in Arizona. "I'm prepared. We're ready to go."

The Clinton campaign, which thinks including Perot would help its cause, called the ruling regrettable and pledged to continue to push for Perot's inclusion in ongoing talks with the Dole team.

"I enjoyed having him in there in 1992," Clinton, campaigning in Michigan, said of Perot. "I'm not afraid of any debate."

The commission's non-binding recommendations in recent elections have served as the starting point for negotiations between the presidential campaigns. Negotiators for the Clinton and Dole campaigns met in private yesterday afternoon to discuss the number, timing and format of the proposed debates.

The commission has recommended one vice presidential forum and three presidential debates, with the first to be held Sept. 25 in St. Louis. Sources said the Clinton campaign was pushing for the first showdown to be held a week later, on or around Oct. 2.

Russell Verney, national coordinator of Perot's Reform Party, rejected the commission vote as a "very subjective decision that was made by the Republicans and Democrats to protect the two-party system."

Some White House aides predicted that decision could anger voters and trigger a backlash against Dole for advocating Perot's exclusion. More than 60 percent of Americans in public opinion polls say they favor his inclusion.

"There may be an adverse reaction," said White House deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes.

"Martyrdom is not what we're seeking," Choate shot back at a news conference. "Office is what we're seeking."

Verney said the Reform Party would file suit by Friday in U.S. District Court in Washington against the commission and individual officers of the panel, asking them to use more "objective criteria" in deciding participation in the debates. But election-law experts dismissed any such suit as futile.

"What is the legal right that Mr. Perot claims he has? I'm a little hard-pressed to come up with one," said attorney Jan Baran, who represents mostly Republicans. "There's certainly a political point, but I don't see any legal point."

Verney said the party also would ask the Federal Election Commission to suspend a limit of $50,000 on Perot's contributions to his own campaign so the Texan can tap his personal fortune to finance his candidacy. He spent more than $60 million on his 1992 independent bid, but agreed to abide by spending limits this year when he accepted $29 million in federal campaign funds.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Nobody's perfect...

Stacey Lew, a international business and law junior, looks through the sale yesterday at the Campus Center's Nobody's Perfect clothing sale.

Woman kills one at Penn State

By Dave Ivey
Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — A 19-year-old woman with a Mohawk haircut spread out a tarp in the middle of the Penn State University campus yesterday and opened fire with a rifle, killing one student and wounding another before she was tackled while trying to reload.

Jillian Robbins, a hunter with Army Reserve training who acquaintances said had a history of mental problems and was known as "Crazy Jill," was hospitalized in serious condition with a stab wound suffered in a struggle with the student who came to the rescue and knocked her down.

No immediate charges were filed against Robbins, who is a longtime resident of State College but not a student.

Police gave no motive for the shooting and said Robbins did not know her victims.

Robbins positioned herself in front of the student union and fired off at least five shots from her rifle, a Mauser with a telescopic sight, around 9:30 a.m., police said. Hundreds of frightened students and teachers scattered across the lawn outside the Hetzel Union Building, one of the campus' busiest areas. A book in one student's backpack stopped a bullet.

Aerospace engineering student Brendon Malovrh noticed smoke, ran over and tackled Robbins as she was putting in a second ammunition clip, police said.

As the two struggled, Robbins pulled a knife from her purse and tried to stab Malovrh, stabbing herself in the leg instead, police said. Malovrh quickly took off his belt and fashioned a tourniquet on Robbins.

In front of them lay a dead Melanie Spalla, 19, of Altoona, Pa. Nicholas Mensah, 27, of Philadelphia, had been shot once in the abdomen. He was in stable condition.

"This is a high-traffic area, where lots of people ride their bikes. It's freaky to know this happened here. But I guess this is where you want to do it if you want to kill someone," said Jessica Ohrum, 20, of East Berlin, Pa.

Acquaintances who spoke on the condition of anonymity said Robbins had a history of mental problems, once spending time in a hospital. They said she had been married and divorced in the past year and had tried to commit suicide last month. Friends said she hoped to become an artist.

Fellow employees at a diner-bakery where she had worked a year ago called her "Crazy Jill," an acquaintance said.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Eagle's eye view...

Sajata Stephane, a junior psychology and legal studies major, works on a bowl at the Crafts Center yesterday afternoon.

For Your Information

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Manaming Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Sept. 18

Meeting — Student Union Health Advisory Board (SHAB) is holding it's first meeting at University Health Services, room 304, from 5:30-6:30 p.m. Anyone wanting to learn more is welcome.

Meeting — UMass Film Society, 6 p.m., Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. New members are welcome.

Meeting — UMass Poetry Society will have it's weekly meeting in Campus Center room 163 at 7 p.m. Come to read, talk or listen. Free coffee, and if possible, bring your own mug. For more information, call Tim at 546-0562.

Meeting — The UMass Italian Club is holding an organizational meeting on the 3rd floor of Herter Hall. All are welcome. Knowledge of Italian not required. Questions? Call Bill at 585-7806 or e-mail wacava@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — Alpha Phi Omega, a co-ed community service fraternity, will be holding an informational meeting at 7 p.m. on the 5th floor of Kennedy, in Southwest. Snacks provided, and all are welcome. For more information, call 545-2068.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP) will be having an informational meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 162. if interested in bringing a lecturer to campus, come to this meeting and find out what DVP is all about. Refreshments will be served. Everyone is invited and encouraged to attend. For more information, call 545-0046.

Thursday, Sept. 19

Meeting — UMass chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha (National Political Science Honor Society) will hold their first general chapter meeting of the semester in the 6th floor lounge of Thompson. All political science majors and minors are encouraged to attend.

GEO Social — For all graduate student employees, from 6-9 p.m., Campus Center room 1009. There will be free hors d'oeuvres, a full cash bar, and family and friends are welcome. For more information, contact Emilie at 545-0705 or 545-5317.

Friday, Sept. 20

Workshop — The Alliance Christian Fellowship's weekly workshops, TimeOut, will be held at 7 p.m. in room 176 of the Campus Center. TimeOut this week is a Worship Special, featuring a full band. Mark Lloyd will also speak on reaching people with and through the power of Christ.

Saturday, Sept. 21

Music — The Hooked on Swing Society presents Blue Rendezvous at the Northampton Center for the Arts, located at the intersection of Rts. 9 and 10, opposite the gates of Smith College. The $9 admission includes a free dance lesson with local instructor Jacqueline Maidana at 7:30 and a dance from 8:30-11:30 p.m. The next dance will be held on Saturday, Oct. 19. For more information, call 1-800-206- 4700

Sunday, Sept. 22

Meeting — UMass Ski Club's first general meeting, Campus Center room 163C, 7 p.m. All interested skiers and snowboarders welcome. For more information, contact the UMass Ski club, 430 Student Union, or at 545-3437.

Notices

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545-0848 if interested.

Opening — The Sunderland Congregational Church, located at the corner of Rte's 47 and 116, has opened the Serendipity Shoppe in the church basement. It carries quality used clothes and accessories for all ages at thrift shop prices. All clothes are now on clearance and a sweater sale will run through October. Hours are Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a.m.-noon. The shop is located on the UMass (Sunderland) bus route.

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. For more information, call 546-2771 or 546-1318.

Employment — The Student Government Association is looking to fill the position of Inventory Control Officer (SGA Auditor). Requirements for the position include: heading the Student Activities Inventory Task Force; maintaining the inventory database; organizing auditory records for the $4 million SATF; and spot-checking agencies and RSOs for inventory. The position is open to both work study and non-work study students, and students may pick their own hours. The position must be filled immediately, if interested, call Jeff Coker at 545-0341.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen- dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538-9717.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253-5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256-8482 or Laili at 253-0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253-3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Leaving the Scene

Sept. 13
There was a hit and run accident on Holdsworth Way.

Accident — Property Damage

Sept. 12
A vehicle backed into another vehicle at the Campus Center.

Sept. 13
There was a two vehicle accident on University Drive.
A vehicle was rear ended on University Drive.
A vehicle rolling over on the Haigis Mall was witnessed by 10-15 people.

Alarm — Fire Trouble

Sept. 12
A faulty smoke detector was reported in Crabtree Residence Hall.

Assist Citizen

Sept. 14
A babysitter in North Village Apartments was concerned about a mother's whereabouts.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Sept. 15
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 32.
A vending machine in Emerson Residence Hall was broken into.

Disturbance

Sept. 15
Two individuals were involved in an altercation in parking lot 32. Neither wanted to press charges.
An unruly crowd was dispersed from the Southwest Mall.
There was a physical confrontation at Patterson Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses

Sept. 13
Brian W. Pickering, Jr., 18, of 569 South Main St., Sharon, was arrested on Hicks Way for possession of a class D substance and for under 21 possession of alcohol.

Sept. 14
A party smoking cannabis on the Southwest Mall was escorted off campus. There will be a show cause.

Health/Safety Hazard

Sept. 15
The odor of dead fish from the Campus Pond was reported.

Intoxicated Person

Sept. 13
A party tried to gain entry to the Mullins Center without a ticket.
Two intoxicated people at the Mullins Center, ages 18 and 20, were taken into protective custody.

Larceny

Sept. 12
Two incidents of stolen backpacks were reported from the Textbook Annex.

Sept. 13
A bike was reported stolen from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Sept 14.
A passport was reported stolen from the Campus Center.

Sept. 15
A license left unattended in Hampden Dining Hall was taken.
A mountain bike was stolen, and another recovered, at North Village Apartments.

Liquor Law Violations

Sept. 12
Two men were reportedly selling liquor from an illegally parked car at Brett Residence Hall. Police told the men to move on.

Sept. 15
Beverages were confiscated from underage residents in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Noise Complaint

Sept. 14
A caller from Butterfield Residence Hall was disturbed by a "hot tub" party.

Parking Complaint

Sept. 13
Ten cars were towed from parking lot 63.

Suspicious Vehicle

Sept. 12
A blue van with one occupant was reportedly parked for a long while at the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

Suspicious Person/Activity

Sept. 14
Three people were reported carrying a sign down University Drive.
An intoxicated person was reportedly staggering in the road on North Pleasant Street.

Sept. 15
A water pistol was mistaken for a gun at the Curry Hicks Cage; the owner was advised to get rid of it.

Traffic Stop

Sept. 12
John Romano, 22, of 117 Colonial Village, Amherst, was stopped on University Drive and arrested for speeding and operation of a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Sept. 15
Thomas L. Collupy, 20, of 730 Winter St., North Andover, was stopped on Infirmary Way and arrested for possession of a class D substance and under 21 possession of alcohol.

Vandalism

Sept. 14
A rock was thrown through the window of Melville Residence Hall.

Sept. 15
Holes were made in windows of the Hampshire Dining Hall.

Weapons Violations

Sept. 13
An illegal studded bracelet was confiscated at the Mullins Center.
Anthony M. Zanolli, 19, of 299 Shaker Rd, Westfield, was arrested at the Mullins Center for carrying a dangerous weapon — a studded bracelet.

The Collegian is always looking for writers
COME DOWN !!!

KPMG
The Global Leader[sm]
Send e-mail to kpmg@yoyo.com.
Play the In-Site Game.
Win a 7-day trip to the Caribbean for two.
Your future's in-site...
at the KPMG in-site
Your one-of-a-kind source for everything you need to know.
Watch for our In-Sites at www.kpmgcampus.com

UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
TO UNDERGRAD SPORT MANAGEMENT MAJORS

THE ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE IS SEEKING RESPONSIBLE WORKERS FOR HOME FOOTBALL GAMES FOR THE 1996 SEASON.

POSITIONS INCLUDE, BUT ARE NOT LIMITED TO:
PARKING ATTENDANTS
USHERS
TICKET SELLERS
TICKET TAKERS
TAILGATE SECURITY

THERE WILL BE A MEETING FOR ALL THOSE INTERESTED ON THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19 AT 5:30PM AT WARREN MCGUIRK ALUMNI STADIUM, AT THE TOP OF SECTION 6. TH

REFUSE TO LOSE
by John Calipari
with Dick Weiss
MEET THE AUTHOR
FRIDAY SEPT. 20
11:30 - 3:30
AT THE UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER
John Calipari will be signing copies of his book REFUSE TO LOSE
Friday, September 20 11:30am - 3:30pm
at THE UNIVERSITY STORE Campus Center
Copies on Sale now At THE UNIVERSITY STORE for $23.00
CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619
UNIVERSITY STORE
Hours: Monday - Friday 9am - 5pm Saturday 10am - 5pm

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m. Increasing Self-Esteem, Building Self-confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self-esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self-confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m. Letting Go and Moving On— This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group. Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m. Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN
Chris Ambsy, an alumni from the computer science program, talks about the Science Fiction Society's Lending Library to SFS members yesterday afternoon.

Dad's News must leave Campus Center Concourse

By Beth McCarthy
Collegian Staff

The owner of Dad's News and several University of Massachusetts professors feel the Campus Center/Student Union Commission (CC/SUC) has ignored the wishes of the professors in a recent decision about the newspaper vendor.

"We would appreciate it if you could continue to provide a table in the Campus Center for Rick Bayer of Dad's News Service during the first several weeks of each semester," wrote Eric Einhorn, chair of the political science department. "He provides inexpensive subscriptions to the Globe and Times, and is the only resource on campus for such subscriptions."

Similar letters and e-mails were sent to CC/SUC from a wide range of departments such as journalism, math, psychology, and finance.

Chairs and professors alike took the time to write in an effort to keep Dad's News in the Campus Center concourse because so many of their students are required to subscribe to the newspapers provided by Dad's.

"I think the headline should read 'Campus Center bans Boston Globe and New York Times,'" said Norman Sims, chair of the journalism department who had written to CC/SUC in favor of Bayers' continued presence on the Campus Center concourse.

Esther Salas, Vending Office of CC/SUC, said that Bayer was never forbidden from the concourse, and that the letters from the faculty were strongly considered, which is why he has been the recipient of several exceptions.

"They're supporting his presence here," said Salas referring to the faculty's letters. "And we did take that into consideration when we granted him five days [in the Campus Center], instead of the minimal three."

"We've granted him what he has petitioned for," Salas said, who believes that CC/SUC has treated Bayer more than fairly. "He's been coming on for free of charge for the past three years."

This year, Bayer was told on Sept. 13 that he will have to pay CC/SUC $150 per day unless he can find a student organization to sponsor him, which is very unlikely on such short notice.

To be on the concourse for five days Bayer would have to find $750, and $3000 to stay for his traditional four weeks at the beginning of each semester.

"Two or three thousand dollars is a prohibitive fee," said Sims, who realizes that Bayer would not be able to afford such a fee with the type of business that he runs.

"Every vendor who is certified to sell any sort of item in the Campus Center is required to pay a fee, and if they don't, they will be escorted out," said Salas who believes that CC/SUC has been more than fair to Bayer.

"He feels he does not have to pay," said Sonali Bajaj, Facilities Officer at CC/SUC. "But why should he not have to when every other vendor has to?"

"A well informed student body and faculty enhances the quality of life on campus," said Ben Branch, a professor of finance, who "in the abstract" believes Dad's News should not have to pay to service the University.

"I do not have the same attitude to the jewelry vendors and what I think of as the oriental bazaar in the Campus Center." Branch said.

"The commission has reviewed his status," Salas said. "We have granted to him the exceptions he was looking for. I don't see where his complaint is valid because we have been accommodating him and allowing him to be here."

"We are trying to really keep the program organized and running smoothly to meet the needs of the students," Salas explained. "Vendors are here for the students, and if they don't want to pay and follow the policy, then they are not here for the students."

Bayer, who has been offering UMass students discounted subscriptions for three years, is not arguing the changes that are being made as far as Dad's News is concerned, but he is arguing the timing.

"Change the rules on me. I don't mind. Change the rules on me later in September. Fine. O.K.," said Bayer. "But now, I've got flyers saying that I'm here from 10 [a.m.] to 2 [p.m.] and I've told the journalism department that I'll be here."

"It would be easy for me to get 200 letters," said a very frustrated Bayer. "Do I have to get professors to petition these people?"

According to Salas she has offered Bayer several options for this year by notifying Bayer of a student organization that would sponsor Dad's News, which would reduce the cost to $100 per day for two tables. CC/SUC has suggested that he notify the professors if he cannot afford to be on the concourse.

"He does not want to pay the fee," said Salas. "We have done everything we can for him."

Interested in serving your community?

The Jewish Affairs Editor position at the Collegian is vacant. This Diversity Desk needs your help to continue quality coverage of Jewish life at UMass and beyond.

To get involved, contact Chris Conner, Managing Editor, at 545-0719 or visit the Collegian office at 113 Campus Center Basement.

MUSIC · SOFTWARE · MOVIES · BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MUSIC
RUSH
Test for Echo
ALL NEW! 11.99 EACH
R.E.M.
New Adventures in Hi-Fi
JOHN MELLENCAMP
Mr. Happy Go Lucky
BOOKS
19.99 20% OFF
IDORU
William Gibson
G P Putnam's Sons HC
List 24.95
6.40 20% OFF
BE STILL AND KNOW
Thich Nhat Hanh
Riverhead Books PB
List 8.00
19.99 20% OFF
I'LL ALWAYS HAVE PARIS
Art Buchwald
G P Putnam's Sons HC
List 24.95
18.40 20% OFF
ALL TOO HUMAN
Edward Klein
Pocket Books HC
List 23.00
35% OFF ALL NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLER HARDCOVERS
NEW! 12.22 35% OFF
MAKE THE CONNECTION
Bob Greene and Oprah Winfrey
Hyperion HC List 18.95
FREE WATER BOTTLE with purchase of Make the Connection and A Journal of Daily Renewal. (While supplies last.)
7.16 20% OFF
A JOURNAL OF DAILY RENEWAL
Bob Greene and Oprah Winfrey
Hyperion PB List 8.95
21.99 w/ 3 pk 9.99
ENTER TO WIN A TRIP FOR 2 TO SUPERBOWL XXXI
MOVIES
NFL GREATEST EVER 3-PACK VOLUME 2
NFL GREATEST EVER-QUARTERBACKS
NFL GREATEST EVER-RUNNING BACKS
NFL GREATEST EVER-DREAM TEAM
PolyGram
Sale ends September 26, 1996
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410
Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777
Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5871
STORE HOURS ENFIELD: MON-SAT: 8AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-7PM;
ALL OTHER STORES: MON-SAT: 10AM-10PM, SUN: 10AM-6PM

There will be a meeting for anyone interested in writing for Women's Issues Wednesday, Sept. 18.
It will be held in the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement at 6:30 p.m.
Come down and speak out!

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
Since 1984 La Cazuela has been winning acclaim and awards for its hand made cooking and outstanding design. We prepare food that is representative of fine dining in the many regions of Mexico and the American Southwest. Our menu changes seasonally to take advantage of the freshest available foods and to reflect the cultural traditions of the food we serve. We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection and the warm hospitality that reflects a western heritage. Please join us.
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
LIVE RIGHT
EAT WELL
COOK WITH CHILES!

"I got mine at Zanna"
Body conscious top
Boot leg hip-huggers
Chunky heel oxfords
ZANNA
downtown
Amherst

Voted Best Salon by the UMass College Reader's Poll 1996 HAIR EAST
mon-fri. 9-8
sat. 9-5
sun. 12-5
256-0438
103 N. Pleasant St.
(next to bart's)

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David X. Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mike McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinatheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliott News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Making welfare work

Erik Molitor

Franklin D. Roosevelt made vast changes to the American political and economic scenes with his array of "New Deal" policies which helped the public restore confidence and pull itself out of the Great Depression. But if Roosevelt could see the Welfare State nightmare that his programs have now become, he would be sick to his stomach, as are the majority of hard working Americans today.

People are more than just sick of seeing over 40 cents of each dollar go to the government which now has a hand in every part of our lives. Many people have begun to realize that it was never meant to be like this — we have come dangerously close to a socialist state. Welfare programs are one of the largest problems in this huge government machine.

I am more than an avid supporter of programs that aid single mothers, wounded veterans who stood up for our country and the elderly who are past their prime and have worked hard for all their lives. These are programs that must be protected, but those who abuse the system must be stopped.

First of all, I do not believe in free handouts. If you can stand up and move around, then there is something out there for you to do. This was the idea behind the New Deal; there were plenty of projects throughout the country for people to do, and more than enough unemployed people to do them. The New Deal made the government a huge employer of manual labor for projects like the CCC, which built countless roads, bridges, and infrastructure throughout the country. There was no such thing as a free lunch for those that could be out there building, and people learned skills at these projects.

There is no reason why we can't do this today. Anyone who is able to drag their lazy butt to a welfare office certainly has the ability to sweep up a city street, or paint over the graffiti of a wall, or lend a hand building and repairing housing in poor neighborhoods. Bleeding heart liberals will argue that these jobs are degrading. Someone has to do them! Think of how much more welcoming our cities would be if there was less trash in the parks and streets, less gang markings on every corner. Also, these same liberals have probably never had to do much manual labor in their lives — it builds character! Something that welfare recipients often lack.

I would bet that many of the people reading this column have done some job on campus or over the summer to make ends meet. This job most likely consisted of mopping the floors in the D.C., washing dishes, painting, whatever. It certainly wasn't fun, but you got paid for it.

The simple truth is just this — there is altogether too much trash out there getting a welfare check and spending it on various substances, getting high, getting knocked up every time they aren't already pregnant and raising kids that will grow up to be trash just like them, continuing the vicious cycle. Kids who see their parents sit around at home watching TV or getting drunk rather than holding up their heads and getting something accomplished will become exactly the same thing.

The one value this country has lost is its work ethic. It is the most important thing a person can have, because with a strong work ethic many other wholesome values follow, such as responsibility, respect and discipline. A good work ethic and a little bit of luck can go a long way. It may not make you rich, but if you work hard you will always be able to survive.

Basically what I am saying is that anyone who is on welfare should have to do something in return, from a few hours a week of sweeping a street to 40 hours a week of building housing or repairing bridges. This would revitalize the welfare program that is meant to help people get off the program. People would be instilled with a sense of pride by doing something that benefits their country. The motivated could even take skills learned at their projects to a better job.

In a society filled with competition, those that willfully refuse to compete should be left by the wayside. Those that want to succeed, most certainly will if they put their backs into it and just simply work.

Erik Molitor is a UMass student.

Extracting the sanguine essence

Henry J. Brier

This is for those who would like some color added to the dripping water faucet...

The blood pressure was 120 over 70, according to the registered nurse from the American Red Cross (ARC) who was monitoring the pulse with her middle and forefinger placed on the inside of the left wrist.

The scene was the Cape Cod Lounge one day last week, and the subject was laying down on a cot at this time, preparing to donate a vital fluid.

Meanwhile, further up the same arm toward the shoulder the sphignometer sufficed in lieu of a tourniquet. As it was inflated, it became tighter around the arm.

Slowly protruding from the arm was the basilic vein, as it first emerged on the external side of the wrist. Then, a shade of blue appeared as the vein's path further emerged, twisting toward the internal side of the elbow.

Previously, the vein was well-hidden as it seethed beneath the skin. But when the sphignometer became tighter, the ever-blue vein seemed to be on the brink of bursting from the arm. Then, the nurse's eyes opened wider and her face lit up, as she cleaned the flesh on the elbow above the vein.

She then took a marker and drew a small circle on the flesh above the vein, and she unwrapped the sphignometer. Different apparatus, such as tubing and a collection packet, was then arranged by the nurse while the subject continued to rest horizontally in preparation to be penetrated, all in the name of a humanitarian act.

The average adult human body contains approximately eight to 10 pints of blood, according to the ARC. Nearly one pint of blood is donated, and the whole process takes no more than an hour's time. Twenty-five percent of the donated blood they receive in New England originates from high school or college students.

Within the hand of the donor was an unidentifiable object that the nurse asked to be occasionally squeezed, in order to keep the blood rushing and the vein active.

She then took a cotton swab, which at its tip contained iodine solution, and rubbed it on the same spot where the small circle was drawn with the marker.

"This may feel like a bee-sting," she said with a stern expression, as she held a syringe with a bevelled needle at its tip. "So, what are you studying at UMass?"

"Journalism and Near Eastern histttttt..." was the beginning of the response which was abruptly cut short because of that bee embarking upon its objective.

The differences being that fluid was not injected, but drawn, and the bee was more like a large mosquito.

The skin was previously smooth and soft. But not at this time after the needle pierced the flesh in a procedure known as "venipuncture."

Had the nurse been male, this opportunity to donate blood would have been bypassed. Female nurses are far more gentle, thus more trusted, when doing something such as penetrating a vein.

The sensation of that needle piercing the flesh and then resting within the vein is an unmatched experience. It is not painful, and it is rather easy to become used to, as the sting becomes a dull ache.

Insuring that the needle stays intact until the donation procedure is complete, the nurse places gauze and medical tape over the penetration site.

The sanguine essence then drips into the bag, while the nurse carefully makes sure everything continues to run smoothly. Plus, nothing beats the bizarre conversation maintained between the donor and the nurse.

This AB-negative which, according to the ARC, accounts for 1 percent of the population, contains a trait that derives from the Far East. Because the blood type is rare it almost seems like an obligation to donate.

As the bag becomes full, the nurse arranges the equipment, and ultimately extracts the needle from the arm.

Shortly thereafter the light-headed subject is escorted (not unlike the president) to a table where the donated fluids are replenished with different drinks. Plus, the conversation here with the ARC volunteers is even more fringe.

The donor is advised to avoid heavy exercising for the next few hours, giving the body an opportunity to recuperate, and prepare for the next time to donate blood.

Henry J. Brier is a Collegian columnist.

It's a whole different English

Jorma Kansanen

Language.

It is a broad term, with an even broader sense when you bring in a country's regional dialects, slang, etc. We take it for granted when we live in a area for a long time, and wish for that sense of security when we leave it behind. You know, it is that unique way of communicating inherent to yourself, and the people around you; from basic everyday lingo to giving your best friend crap for something stupid they did the night before. With the campuses here in the Pioneer Valley, and the many students that come here from around the round world, the everyday Joseph(ine) can get a free lesson in different modes of language, even just sitting on our own Student Union steps.

The student who is not sick with, either:

- the flu (when you cannot even hear, think or see)
- his/her classes (when you are tired of hearing, thinking and only want to see a pint)
- or, from too many pints the night before (when you hear everything, cannot think to save your life and seeing is through blood shot eyes), can hear a veritable plethora of verbal vivification around them. From German to Chinese to Botswani, the world's voices are your oyster. But is that a good thing? When in Rome... I mean, Amherst, should a visiting student do as Valley-ites do? That is, speak clear and proper English?

In my opinion, the answer is yes and no. No, even though my vote will be for Clinton in a few months, I do not take after Slick Willy and flip, flop and fly with every issue that confronts me. But I try to see the whole picture, the ying and the yang of our collective destinies, and for the sake of argument, I will try to address both sides of the argument.

The answer is yes... because if you are going to take the trouble to spend a year in a foreign country, for the experience of sampling another culture, you should be able to converse and interact with the people where you are studying. How can you truly make the most of it, when you hold on so tightly to your native tongue, that you only commiserate with people from your native country?

We all get homesick, no matter where we are from. We are less than a month into the school term and already I have begun to notice this, but the point is made. I have seen an awful lot of this in the past, since I was just recently involved with an international exchange program, and sometimes it troubles me to see it occur often enough to notice. Sometimes.

The answer is no... because language is one of the only things you really possess. It is you; how you express yourself, where you are geographically placed in the world, etc. Even with the different slangs and dialects of all the counties and states that is American culture, you should hold on to that. But you have to make the transition from where you came from, to where you are now.

"From German to Chinese to Botswani, the world's voices are your oyster. But is that a good thing? When in Rome... I mean, Amherst, should a visiting student do as Valley-ites do? That is, speak clear and proper English?"

When I was in England, I used to see Brits from the same district hanging out with each other, rather than with the rest of their countrymen. And they cannot deny it. It happened, and was recognized.

But that brings me to another point.

What the hell is clear and proper English, anyway?

Is it the one that is taught in universities like Oxford (no offense), or is it the one you hear on the streets of Amherst everyday? Is it the one used in England, or the one that is used in the U.S.? One thing is for sure, it "ain't da one" over here in America. We have stopped speaking clear and proper English for centuries now. The language for the age group we are all in (the twenties, more towards thirty myself), is a stew of slang Spanish, a dash of jive and liberal use with English.

For review purposes, class, here are a few examples:

- from greetings, like "wassup, homes!" (translation: how are you doing, my friend?)
- to sayings, like "mi casa es tu casa" (my house is your house)
- to compliments, like "you just go with your bad self"(you keep on doing what you are doing), we Americans have created a truly indigenous language. The only time I have heard clear and proper English is in academic circles and on BBC radio. Also, with what I heard during my exchange in Manchester, England, from cockney to Newcastle accents, I do not think clear English is even spoken by the common man there.

So, to finish up, is clear and proper English then a myth?

I think so, for the layperson. But it is still open to interpretation, on both positive and negative points. On the positive side, we all still need to have the base of our native language to work from. That is a side of us that no one should take away, and that side is what makes us what we are.

But on the negative side, we can not succumb to prejudicial thought if a person does not speak with what you personally think is the right form of speech, or the right form of your language. Especially for a first year exchange student, or a first generation immigrant, no one is going to completely pick up a language that has been foreign to them for most of their lives. So, think about what you are trying to do then.

For example, when I was in my first week in England, a woman who was in the orientation course with me made a very curious, and somewhat prejudiced, statement. I said, stumbling with my American to English translation, "Hey, wassup... uh, how are you doing?" She replies, looking right at me, and in a very snooty manner, "I finally met some people who spoke real English today."

Instead of a standardized American reply that I really did want to say, like: "Hey there, Cleopatra, get off your pedestal a while and maybe fraternize with us poor heathens"; I just shook my head, and walked away. The gentleman came out in me, and I only felt pity for her, who at twenty years old, thought she knew everything. This woman, I mean, girl was not even a naturalized British citizen... she was from Stockholm. But with my thoughtful, constrained response, I did begin to think that maybe I do have a little clear and proper English in me, after all. English gentleman, that is.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

Blame it on the raiment

Tara MK Connelly

My boyfriend is a big jerk when it comes to clothing. In fact, there aren't days that go by when he doesn't have some comment on what I wear or buy or what he wears or buys. I can understand why he is confused when I go shopping and spend $200 on a jacket and jeans and he buys nothing because he can't believe how much everything costs. I really can understand his confusion.

Ever walk through your local J. Crew, Banana Republic, Abercrombie & Fitch, Eddie Bauer or GAP and ask yourself, "Exactly what store am I in now?" Well, like Michael Jackson once sang, you are not alone.

It seems that America is making it easier and easier to dress like everyone else and apparently everyone else looks good in pastel striped vests and light tan khakis. So, how do you separate these stores from one another? The first place to start is at the sign above the door. If you looked before you leapt, you get an A-plus for observance. However, if you just happened to be dragged into one of these stores, things could get a bit confusing.

Pop quiz. You walk into a store, the floors are all a light colored hardwood, varnished within an inch of their life. The walls are stark white, the lighting is mostly run on tracts or hidden cleverly behind tables and counters of the same light colored varnished wood. There are no mannequins, only semblances of some swathed in layers of shirts, sweaters and jackets in rustic shaded and faded colors.

The first thing that assails your senses is the brand spanking new fragrance section that totes their unique and sexy line of bath products, candles and smelling salts. All the sales people look like they belong in an Ivy League library. They sniff at you as you walk by and then go back to folding wheat toned wool cardigans. Where are you?

If you answered Banana Republic, you're probably right. If you answered J. Crew, you are probably right, in fact if you mentioned any of the above stores (with the exception of Abercrombie and their blinding plaid carpet) you are probably right. However, what separates the GAP denim vests from the NEXT and Ann Taylor denim vests is price.

Chances are if you pick up a white button down plain front dress shirt and the price label is marked $78 you are in Banana Republic, whereas a white button down shirt with a plain front from the GAP would be $36. In Banana Republic and J. Crew, sale prices are more apt to go from $120 to $92 and you would be thrilled. However, go to Eddie Bauer and you are more likely to find a $36 marked down to $15.

"It seems that America is making it easier and easier to dress like everyone else and apparently everyone else looks good in pastel striped vests and light tan khakis. So, how do you separate these stores from one another?"

Basically, it all narrows down to labels and what you think is important, because most people aren't going to notice the difference between an Ann Taylor and an Express skirt. And the only reason most people would notice is if you happen to be wearing anything from Abercrombie because they have taken to placing little labels on the outside of clothes just to show how special you are.

Well, honey, I like feeling special and I am the first person to admit when It comes to clothes I have no self- control. Most of my clothes come from J. Crew, Abercrombie, Banana Republic or the GAP. Most of my shoes are Nine West or Kenneth Cole. It is a habit that I can't manage to break even at the risk of being labeled a snob. Am I conforming to the ways of society that dictates that every cool person must wear a barn jacket and wide wale cords?

Am I catering to "the man" by purchasing a hunter green shirt? I don't think so; I am simply wearing what I feel comfortable in, and believe it or not, that is probably why a lot of people do, although I have to admit my wallet isn't all that impressed. It is sad that most of America would like us all to look like the models in a Tommy cologne ad and it is unfortunate that many people adhere to this image, but I do not think that because I choose to dress like a J. Crew model that I should be labeled a "snob" or anything else either by my significant other or casual observers.

It kind of makes me pause when I see people dressed exotically in black lace and patent leather hip boots with blue hair sneer and say, "What a conformist, what a lemming." Aren't you the same person who would go on "Ricki Lake" to defend your dress and individuality? And come to think of it, there are a lot of you individuals out there roaming around especially around Halloween. Face it, it is a look just like mine and just like mine you wear it because you like it.

If I can admit the ludicrousness of some of the places I shop at, surely you can grin when you walk through Harvard Square at the large amount of people looking like they are going to an Anne Rice book signing. So lighten up. After all, it's only clothing and if you don't judge me for my Alex P. Keaton look then I won't snicker at your Snoopy lunch box — or at least we can wait until we've passed each other by.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Aniston shines in big screen leap

She's the One a solid effort from Brothers McMullen director

COURTESY TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX

Edward Burns, Maxine Bahns, Cameron Diaz, Jennifer Aniston and Mike McGlone star in Burns' She's the One.

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

SHE'S THE ONE
Directed by Edward Burns
with Edward Burns, Cameron Diaz, Jennifer Aniston
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

Following up the success of his debut film, The Brothers McMullen, Edward Burns delivers a light romantic comedy that is an impressive sophomore effort. His latest, She's the One, doesn't stray too far away from its predecessor in theme: brothers, this time named Fitzpatrick instead of McMullen, befuddled by women.

Joining the McMullen alum of Burns, McGlone and Bahns are the television "personalities" of John Mahoney ("Frasier") and Jennifer Aniston ("Friends"). Also joining the cast is Miss Minnesota herself, Cameron Diaz, playing yet another vixen who gets between brothers Mickey and Francis (Burns and McGlone).

The writing talents of Burns lie in his gift for realistic dialogue combined with enough humor to make it entertaining. As Mickey and Francis' father, Mahoney teases and teaches the boys with well-meaning, but misguided lessons providing amusing results. Both Mahoney and Aniston take their minor roles and steal scenes, if not the entire film.

Aniston's role may be the most pleasing of She's the One. Given the success of the television show "Friends," it's even more refreshing to see Aniston taking a less glamorous, minor role.

As Renee, Aniston plays Francis' sex-deprived wife, a plum role filled with vibrator jokes and montage sequences wondering if her husband is gay.

Whatever problems come from the film come from Burns' casting for his favorite actors. There is nothing wrong with writing the best part for yourself, but casting Maxine Bahns (Burns' girlfriend in The Brothers McMullen and in real life) as Mickey's love interest in She's the One is bordering on the excess. Running the risk of becoming the Mia Farrow of our generation is no shame; running the risk of becoming a talentless Mia Farrow is dangerous.

Bahns can eventually be overlooked because what She's the One boils down to is a movie about the Fitzpatrick men. Don't let the title fool you; this is a companion piece to Burns' first film, except The Brothers Fitzpatrick sounds silly.

Burns proves this point by limiting the female characters in the film to a minimum, even keeping the mother of the Fitzpatick clan off-screen with wonderfully fresh invention. B+

Team Dresch generates first class punk

TEAM DRESCH
Captain My Captain
Chainsaw/CandyAss

Portland, Oregon's favorite dikes are back in the fast lane again. Much like their fabulous debut album, Personal Best, this sophomoric release is a magnificent piece of work displaying the band's immense power and intensity. Plus, you can't forget the ace songwriting.

Trax On Trax Off

The opening track, "Uncle Phranc," starts the ball rolling with a beautiful, powerful tune that matches any of their previous efforts. The song finds Jody Bleyle and Kaia matching off their anger-filled vocals while the band's namesake, Donna Dresch handles the guitars and newcomer Melissa York pounds on the skin.

Both on this record and in concert, the band is a tight and cohesive act playing off each other like a well practiced jazz outfit. Throughout the album the band stays right on course, a beautiful course filled with overt political and sexual ideas.

Ah... the politics of Team Dresch. Although at times over the top, this quartet leaves the listener with a clear political message. "I'm Illegal" begins with the line, "I'm afraid walking down the street holding hands with my girlfriend that some cop is gonna arrest me." Another song is bluntly titled, "Don't Try Suicide."

With Captain My Captain, the band once again proves to be one of a handful of artists who convey a true message to its listeners while generating first class punk rock. But the band knows the message hasn't been heard or accepted enough. "Don't tell us we only care about the dikes and fags. Don't try to find reasons to hate us. Some people get it, lots more people need it." You need this album now. A (Mike Burke)

THE LOUD FAMILY
Interbabe Concern
Alias

In a more perfect world the pop-geek catch phrase "Brian Wilson is a genius" would be followed immediately by "and so is Scott Miller." It's been almost 16 years since Miller took his first tentative steps with Game Theory, the band he spent the '80s with, producing a handful of great albums and one bona fide masterpiece (1987's Lolita Nation). Game Theory split in the late '80s, but Miller bounced back with a new band, The Loud Family, and a second masterpiece, Plants and Birds and Rocks and Things. Five years, and one lukewarm second album later, The Loud Family has released an album of startling clarity and emotion — an album that exemplifies the power and quality of Miller's best work.

Recorded largely in Miller's home studio, Interbabe Concern has an edgy, stripped down feel — an immediacy that belies the complexity of the songs, and makes even the most adventurous ideas accessible and exciting. The best tracks on the album, like the first single, "Don't Respond, She Can Tell," are a seamless blend of complex rhythmic structures, ringing pop hooks and dense lyrical explorations. It's heavy stuff to be sure, but all of Miller's wit and wisdom would be useless without the strong emotional foundation or clarity of observation that gives the album resonance.

Turn to TRAX, page 7

COURTESY DIANA MORROW

Team Dresch's latest is a must–have.

Collegian Graphics

JUST DO IT
OPEN Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 P.M. 418 N. Pleasant Street
Please Contact Eric Spitz (Rush Chairman)
549-0676

RUSH ΦΜΑ
389 North Pleasant St.
Tuesday Sept. 17, 7p.m.
Wednesday Sept. 18, 7p.m.
Questions call Brad at 548-9582

WEDNESDAY GAY NIGHT GALA F COLLEGE NITE 18+
NITRO THURSDAY 18+ TH COLLEGE NIGHT
FRIDAY CLUB HOUSE JAMMIN' DANCE PARTY 18+
SATURDAY 21+ KARMA international house music
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street Northampton, MA 413-582-9898

SEEKING
Students in Recovery
from alcohol or drug abuse
ARE YOU IN AA, NA, RR?
Are you willing to escort someone who is going to their first meeting?
If so, please call Lydia Rackenberg, LICSW
Mental Health 545-2337
All calls are confidential

September Sale Celebration
20% Savings on Food for Your Hair
Sept. 16th thru 21st
Save on...
Wednesday - with Biolage & American Crew
Thursday - with KMS
Friday - with Nexxus
Saturday - with American Crew & Hair Brushes
Regency Hairstylist
189 No. Pleasant St.
253-9526

WMUA New Person Meeting
Interested in Music, News, Sports, Sales, Production?
Thursday September 19 at 7pm
Campus Center Rm 101
Get Involved

Ignorance takes its toll

Many have said that "ignorance is bliss." Personally, I am not in agreement with that age–old statement. Ignorance is nothing more than ignorance; it cannot protect you from the things you fear. I offer this assessment of ignorance: ignorance does nothing more than hurt all those it comes into contact with.

In the '90s, we would think (or at the very least hope) that the cycle of ignorance would have been forever broken. Education, the only way to enlighten the masses, is finally made available to everyone in one form or another. There should be no excuses, and yet, the cycle continues.

Fabio Pari-di-Monriva

As of late, I have been made a public victim of that ignorance. A victim because I belong to an "institution" that persists as a target for the public's stereotypical notions. A scapegoat, if you will, for all of society's problems. If you haven't guessed to which "institution" I belong, I'll tell you.

I'm a fraternity member, a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity to be exact. A fraternity, like many others within the Greek community, which has always complied with Inter–Fraternity Council and University policies, and is now unjustly branded as a "blight" upon the community at large.

Yet, is not every living area of the five that exist on campus an institution unto itself? Do they not possess a government and a governmental hierarchy like the fraternities? Are those officials not elected by their constituents, just like the fraternities? Do those living areas not experience problems amongst their constituents?

One would have to be blind and naive not to be in agreement with all of the above questions. Why, then, is the whole Greek community responsible for one person's actions? Are all Greeks truly "guilty by association?" I say, "Nay," for then that theory would have to be applied to everyone living on campus.

However, it is easier to pontificate and aim caustic attacks against an institution which has successfully been stereotyped by Hollywood and the media through the years, than trying to weed out and aim individual attacks upon those who reside within a living area.

My fraternity brothers and I have been persecuted, as have other fraternity members, from all sides. However, we, the Zeta Psi Fraternity, DO NOT condone the actions taken by males against women, whether those males reside within the Greek community or within the UMass community as a whole. We DO NOT condone the actions of rape, sexual assault, or sexual harassment. As a matter of fact, in the Spring of 1995, Zeta Psi, along with the Alpha Chi Omega Sorority, sponsored a workshop on rape, and on the plight of battered women. The workshop was open to all within the University community, yet the majority in attendance were from the Greek community, male and female alike.

Perhaps if those self–proclaimed "champions of the people" out there spent a little less time pointing fingers at and blaming the innocent, who just happen to reside within a community which fits nicely into their own stereotypical mold, and spent a little more time actively participating in programs which would help break the cycle of violence against women, wouldn't we all be better off?

It is so easy to hide behind elaborate and ornate words, and it is much harder to actually take a physical stand on something you truly believe in. However, we, a fraternity, have actually done something to educate the masses on violence against women. Ironic, isn't it?

I invite all of you to finally take a stand and make a difference. Do something other than criticize. Educate! Educate! Educate! That is our only hope for salvation, our only hope to end our cycle of ignorance. I also invite you all to come down to our house and see what we are all about. I guarantee you we are nothing like the drunken, women– beating fools you all seem to think we are. Perhaps if you could take the time to actually open up your minds and make the trek down North Pleasant Street, you would finally be able to see the truth behind the stereotypical myth.

Fabio Pari–di–Monriva is a UMass student.

Incivility Particularly Odious

Historical anachronisms can only persist in isolated bubbles and protected enclaves. One such "land that time forgot" is the UMass International Programs Office (IPO). The IPO and its leader, Barbara Burn, shamelessly cling to a racist mentality typical of the pre–1964 Civil Rights Act era. Just take a look at the contributions from the IPO bunker to the recently released report by the Task Force on International Graduate Student Needs and Concerns.

Shyamala Ivatury
Hussein Ibish

This Task Force was formed over a year ago following numerous complaints and protests made by international graduate students and the Graduate Student Senate.

While most Task Force members conducted themselves in an honorable and constructive manner, the attitude and submissions of Burn and her staff served only to justify the appalling reputation of the IPO.

This is all the more ironic in that the IPO, which contains the Office of Foreign Students and Scholars (FSO), is the campus agency most directly concerned with servicing international students, and is the first point of contact with UMass for most of them. International students, a large percentage of whom come from third world countries, comprise one fifth of all graduate students at UMass.

In a memo to the committee, Appendix C of the report, Burn boasts of "delivering services to foreign students and scholars for almost 30 years." In spite of all the complaints, she defensively argues that "we do not share the sense that foreign students in general have overwhelming problems." As "confirmation" of this view, she cites "the sparse attendance at the three open meetings."

Only a person completely out of touch with reality could imagine that a little–publicized bureaucratic meeting serves as the barometer of student problems, nullifying the numerous complaints filed with elected student officials.

Furthermore, Burn admits that in all her "almost 30 years," she has never employed any person of color as a full–time IPO staff member. Burn's lame excuse is that "we do not share the sense that there is a great demand for us to augment our staff with persons of color."

Barbara, haven't you heard that multiculturalism is a strategic goal of the University? Don't you know that numerous student–administration agreements have called for increasing the number of staff of color? Haven't reports of these developments ever penetrated the IPO bunker?

Thus having feigned ignorance of the need for multiculturalism, Burn claims "it is impossible to satisfy or even determine the needs of those of color." Burn has little understanding of the problems facing people of color, perhaps because she spends almost all of her time on exchange programs with German universities.

Burn goes on to bizarrely claim that there is bias and hostility between Chinese from China, Hong Kong, and Malaysia. She argues that such "political undertones within ethnic groups" also prevent her from hiring people of color.

Burn's argument suggests that any move towards diversity would require that all ethnic groups in the world be represented in the IPO staff. By such hysterical exaggeration, Burn makes the call for diversity appear absurd and impractical. This kind of exaggerated nonsense is the standard refuge of those determined to oppose diversity.

Indeed, at a meeting last year, a senior FSO staff member brazenly stated that the reason why the IPO had never hired staff of color was because there weren't any "qualified" people of color who could fill the positions.

Burn continues with the astonishing declaration that "If, however, the best qualified person for a given position happened to fit the classic definition 'of color' that person would obviously be offered the position ALTHOUGH we would be aware that this hiring could be controversial," (emphasis in the original). Burn apparently believes that she is living in a Jim Crow world where the hiring of a person of color involves the danger of grave controversy.

Given the attitude of its leader, Barbara Burn, how would one expect the FSO staff to behave? On cue, dozens of bloodcurdling accounts of abuse of students by FSO staff emerge. For example, in the Spring of 1995, an African graduating senior went to the FSO to sort out some paperwork. The FSO "advisor" refused to believe that this African woman had already found a job with a respected software company, accused her of lying and argued with her for over an hour, insisting that she simply could not have found such a job.

When the student returned with written proof, the FSO staffer was not apologetic or embarrassed by her blatant racism. It would appear that Burn's opinion that people of color are not qualified to find jobs and that hiring them generates controversy has spread throughout the IPO staff. Clearly, the rot has permeated the entire fabric of the office.

Incidents such as these are all too common. Given their "alien" status, which is reinforced by an FSO staff that is more suited to the State Department, many international students feel at the mercy of an abusive IPO. This is hardly an acceptable attitude for an office meant to serve students.

The Task Force report contains a number of positive recommendations. But none of these can be successfully implemented under Barbara Burn. What Burn simply refuses to understand is that the world is a very different place than it was 32 years ago. The time has come to clean out the IPO bunker. Send in the decontamination squad.

Shyamala Ivatury and Hussein Ibish are Collegian columnists.

Lay Off

I sat in front of the television, pressing myself into the couch. I squirmed and rearranged the pillows until I found the most comfortable position. My neck bent forward, one arm dangled off the armrest and my legs stretched half–way to the fire place. My mom got up to answer the phone.

Christina Heaphy

"Hi. Hmmm... you called right when the Democratic National Convention was about to start didn't you?"

I looked over at my mom. We grinned. I knew it was her friend Janice, a bastion of conservative, upper–class ideals, an "us" against "them" prize fighter. Janice grew up in a poor mining town in Pennsylvania. Now she has a CD changer in the trunk of her red Cadillac.

"Oh, is that on tonight?" I could hear her say. "Well is Chelsea there?"

I cringed to hear my mom say 'yes' and describe what the First Daughter was wearing.

Nothing about the last four years gets up my dander more than the way the two women in the Clinton family have been raked over the coals. Before Bill was even inaugurated, his junior high school age daughter was slaughtered by the press for having bad hair, a bad chin and a nerdy smile. I took it almost personally. Do you know anyone who would flaunt their seventh or eighth grade yearbook photo? Those years are always plagued with skin–and–bones prepubescent boys, girls with haircuts that make them look like boys, and pre–contact lens nightmares. Feet are twice the size of legs, skin starts to get shiny, and orthodontists start to make a killing.

After Bill became President Bill, it was Hillary's turn. Presented as a power–hungry She–Ra, the first lady, an ace lawyer and flawless orator, became the "next Russia." I could hear it coming: "If we continue to allow the President's wife to rule the country, we'll have lost the ultimate war. First Cuba, then Vietnam, now... a strong woman in the White House. Where are our family values?"

I wouldn't have been watching the DNC at all, if there had been anything remotely exciting going on. But it was one of my last days at home to spend with the fam, and mom had been talking about this event for days. We missed being at the convention by a week. Visiting relatives in Chicago, my mom bemoaned the fact that she had also missed the last one held in Chicago, the hometown of both the First Lady and my Lincoln–ite mother.

She hung up the phone after 10 minutes of "uh–huh's" and "No, I don't know where Chelsea is applying to schools," and "Oh, Janice." She walked back to the couch and sat down. She shook her head. She can't believe she is friends with a real–live Rush Limbaugh fan.

We sat and watched the opening statements, the pre– introductory introduction, the introduction, and then the nomination and the seconding of the first nomination.

My mom turned to me and said, "You know what Janice said?"

"No. What?"

"Someone ought to tell Chelsea that haircut makes her look like a Spaniel."

I turned back to the tube. The election is only two months away. Here we go again.

Christina Heaphy is a UMass student.

Seeing the world through a monitor

The whole world should be a computer. Well, maybe not the whole world, but there is definitely a lot to be learned from the blind way in which the computer works. I am in no way implying that people should be unfeeling, unthinking creatures. In fact, I am suggesting just the opposite.

Recent years have brought about major changes in the use of computers. Practically everyone has an e–mail account and millions of people across the world surf the web each night, meeting up in chat rooms to talk for hours on end with people they have never met face–to–face.

Amy Lounsbury

Talk shows have highlighted couples who met on the Internet and fell in love without ever meeting. Ridiculous, you may think, but I think I understand how it can happen. The computer helps people to see real personality rather than the physical qualities. Although a poor substitution for talking with someone in the flesh, online chats do have their advantages.

The other night I was checking my e–mail when I got a request to talk from another UMass student I didn't know. I decided to respond and we chatted for a little while. Nothing major, just a friendly little chat about everything from school to squirrels to music. But the incident got me thinking about how our society functions.

While sitting in front of a computer terminal, it is so easy to say what you want, to be who you want to be. It is so much easier to get to know the real person you are talking to and for them to see the real you. Why, then, is it so hard for us to be open face–to–face?

I believe that our society gets much too hung up on appearance and stereotypes and cliques. If someone is different in any way we tend to not give them a chance.

This is where many of our problems lie. I truly believe that everyone in this world has something important to say. You may not agree with a particular viewpoint, but no one's ideas should be repressed.

I wish everyone could find a way to act like that computer, filtering out the differences among us. Forget about the age difference, the difference in skin color, the purple hair. Try to look beyond it all and really get to know the person. You'll probably have more in common than you think.

The next time you're sitting next to a stranger in class, try to start a conversation with them. It doesn't matter if they are just like you or anything, but chances are they'll have something wonderful to share with the world. They just need the opportunity to share it.

Amy Lounsbury is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Vietnam column too nice to U.S.

To the editor:

This letter is written reference to Andrew Trodden's Sept. 16th editorial column. While I agree with his observation that everyday life for an American soldier in Vietnam during the "police action" from 1965 until 1972 must have been a constant waking nightmare, I disagree with his view that the United States' involvement in Vietnam provided freedom for anyone. And study of the Domino Theory will disprove its main thesis. Trodden speaks of our "threatened freedom." The existence of Vietnam as a communist state threatens only followers of Joseph McCarthy.

The United States would like us to believe that the Vietnam War was about freedom, but those of us who look beyond the propaganda know that it was nothing but the United States sticking its ugly, imperialistic nose where it didn't belong. Yes, Vietnam veterans are heroes — for surviving the hell that their country imposed on them. Like the innocent Vietnamese farmer and his family who were killed by American soldiers, the American soldiers themselves were the victims of the United States smashing its Iron Fist down with its eyes clamped tightly shut.

Trodden also suggests that the Vietnam War prevented future generations from "the living hell and torture of war." While sentiments such as that one are supposed to make Americans want to wrap themselves in the flag and sing about purple mountains, they make me want to burn the flag while blasting some Rage Against the Machine. Do you see the white doves of peace on the horizon? Sorry, the United States of America just shot them down. I see war in Iraq, Central America, the Philippines and places I don't even know about because my government doesn't trust me with the truth of its actions.

I applaud Mr. Trodden for bringing the woes of the American soldier in Vietnam to light. What they went through was unimaginable to us in our sheltered society; they shall never be forgotten. But don't attempt to disguise the unjust war in Vietnam in the name of freedom. The veterans of the Vietnam War are the innocent victims of America itself. Land of the free. Free to be exactly like us (U.S.).

Andrew Gerard Hadley

Brier condescends

To the editor:

Mr. Brier, how many women in Corporate America wear a tie and suit? None, they can't. Society has standards that say a woman who wears a tie and suit is masculine. She must be able to keep her femininity, have a husband and a wife to make it in the workforce.

What is corporate America? Is it still an "all boys club?" Everyone successful is a white male in their late 30's to 40's. Corporate America does not look past sex. It does not take women seriously. "The Boy's Club" does not think that women can do it. Also, they think that women do not have the business "hard head" mentality to survive in corporate America. They are also intimidated and scared because their power is vanishing with women advancing. "The Boy's Club" is afraid of losing jobs. Also, they are intimidated that this is one more thing that women can do better than men.

The picture you painted, Mr. Brier, is what women of all class and race have been fighting. To write in a condescending tone undermines everything that the women's rights movement have been fighting. Women want respect, an equal playing field and praise for doing our job well.

Mr. Brier, I am a woman who intends to make it in Corporate America. If you see me walking around campus with a nice suit on, I expect you to give me the respect I deserve.

Mitali Shah Central

Part of a nutritious breakfast

Now that the summer fun has passed and I am back at school, my mind is focused on more serious issues. Some might be focusing on their senior year, graduating and getting a job. Others might be pondering more national issues such as the upcoming presidential elections. However, I'm concerned about something a little more important — breakfast cereals.

Remember the days when every hit cartoon or movie had a breakfast cereal made after it. I couldn't wait to go food shopping with my mom just to see what they had. Nintendo, Barbie, ALF, Pee–Wee Herman, The Smurfs and E.T. all had delicious breakfast treats made after them.

Brad Davidson

My favorite was Mr. T. cereal. Mr. T. was sort of a mix between Sugar Corn Pops and Captain Crunch. The cereal was a light brown color and shaped like the letter T. It had a full body taste and a mean crunch.

Unfortunately the breakfast cereal trend has not continued through the '90s. No longer do they make these crafty little snacks that people looked forward to seeing each morning. I think we need to start a new trend of breakfast cereals based on modern day cinema.

Pulp Fiction Cereal — Most people I know loved the movie Pulp Fiction, so why not make it into a cereal. The cereal will be based on Lucky Charms. It will be made up of little gangsters and AK–47's. The gangsters will be the healthy part and the AK–47's will be the marshmallows in a variety of "rainbow colors."

The Crying Game cereal — Who could ever forget the shocking ending to The Crying Game. It basically is screaming out, "hey, will one of you marketing geniuses make me into a breakfast cereal." I have come up with the perfect idea.

The cereal will be made up of pieces of bran shaped like male and female genitalia. When you pour milk on the cereal, the pieces of genitalia change gender. Taste is really not an issue here because most people will be horrified after the milk stage anyway.

Leaving Las Vegas cereal — This cereal would only be for adults. You would have to be over 21 to purchase it. The cereal would be made of barley and bourbon. The combination of the two would be mixed and then dried to be shaped like miniature liquor bottles. You could use milk on this potent cereal, but it is recommended to simply pour Bloody Mary mixture on it. This is especially good for hangovers.

Dead Man Walking cereal — I remember after seeing this movie last year, I really wanted to go home and eat cereal. Maybe it was the movie or maybe I was just hungry and couldn't afford to pay $4.50 for a box of M&M's. Either way I think this cereal could really sell.

Dead Man Walking cereal would be comprised of two pieces: little men and electric chairs. It would resemble the taste of Honey Comb, but extra crunchy. The object with your spoon would be to try and get the little men in the electric chairs and then chow them down!

Not only would this be a tasty cereal, but it could be used for educational purposes. On the side of the box there could be updates on death row prisoners, and people you could write to for information on the death penalty. Also on the back of the box there could be a maze. The object of the maze would be to get Sean Penn from his jail cell to the chair.

Those are just a few of the ideas that I came up with. Hopefully, some marketing people will read this article and take some of my suggestions. I'm getting tired of the same old Cheerios and Corn Flakes every morning. I need a little more to start off my day.

Brad Davidson is a Collegian columnist.

Historical novel ordinary and dull

By Seema Gangotirkar
Collegian Staff

PHILIPPA CARR
Daughters of England
G.P. Putnam's Sons

Philippa Carr, the author of 19 books, including the Cornwall saga, brings Puritan England to life in her posthumous novel, Daughters of England.

Sarah Standish is a girl of humble origin and means. She dreams of a career on the stage. Given the chance of a lifetime, she jumps to take it, despite the objections of her strict Puritan parents. Once in the midst of "corrupt" London society, Sarah falls in love for the first time. The object of her admiration is the very distinguished Jack Abair, Lord Rosslyn. Hopelessly smitten, Sarah agrees to his proposal of marriage.

Unfortunately, after the wedding, Sarah discovers that her loving husband is already married. Humiliated, Sarah flees and then discovers she's pregnant. Over the next few years, she tries to forget about Lord Rosslyn, but he makes brief appearances calculated to bring Sarah distress.

Sarah dies young and Lord Rosslyn comes to claim his daughter, Kate. He brings Kate to live on his estate, along with her half–brother. There, Kate falls in love with a country gentleman, but her father has other plans for her.

There is every attempt to portray Lord Rosslyn as a man of sinister ambition, but in this respect, Carr simply did not succeed. As the tale unfolds, Lord Rosslyn becomes a misguided man who is trying to save his vast fortune at any cost.

Carr's biggest problem is that she neglects her characters. While historically accurate, she focuses on attitudes and manners, rather than the people who are living in the time period. The character of Sarah Standish is slightly interesting because she defies her parents to make her career on the stage. The rest of the cast tends to be boring and one–dimensional.

Against the backdrop of England's turbulent reformation years, Daughters of England is less a tale of dark motives than it is about ordinary people forced to make difficult choices in a mixed–up era. The fact the book is ordinary and less charismatic than Carr's previous novels makes it slightly dull, but for a dose of history, it goes down easy. C+

Madball ushers in new era of hardcore

Listen up, all you hardcore heads. If you're really down with the scene, then this Friday night you'll be at Pearl Street to see Madball, since they are one of hardcore's best bands. More importantly, they play real hardcore — not metal. The members of the band have been involved with hardcore since the early '80s, and they're one of New York's Finest.

Adam Duglacz

Madball started in the late '80s as a side project of Agnostic Front when Roger Miret, Agnostic Front's lead vocalist, and his younger brother Freddy Cricien would jump on stage and sing. Madball released their first 7–inch, "Ball Of Destruction" in 1989.

Then, as Agnostic Front was breaking up, they passed the hardcore torch to Madball in the early '90s. Madball ushered in the new era with their second 7–inch, "Dropping Many Suckers." They also solidified their lineup with Freddy on vocals, Hoya on bass, and ex–Agnostic Front members Matt Henderson on guitar, Will Shepler on drums and the immortal Vinny Stigma on guitar.

Madball continued the tradition of excellent hardcore that Agnostic Front started.

By 1994, Madball was already rivaling Sick Of It All as New York's most popular band, and building a following throughout the country. That year also featured Madball's release of their debut LP Set It Off on Roadrunner Records.

While Set It Off made a lot of noise and Madball's live show continued to be one of the best around, the LP came under some heavy criticism. Some felt that a metal sound was creeping in and that the album was too polished. Others felt that too many songs dealt with revenge and beatdowns.

This year, Madball dropped their second LP Demonstrating My Style. Despite the loss of hardcore god– father Stigma on guitar, Demonstrating My Style is easily Madball's best release to date. The slick and metallish sound of Set It Off was replaced by a rawer sound more indicative of their live show. The lyrics also showed a maturation as the lyrics deal with unity, relying on oneself to succeed, the hardships of life and overcoming them, and the importance of friends and family.

Marauder, Tyrant Trooper and Grimlock are opening up. In case you were wondering, I'll be dancing and so will all my friends, so if you're just going to sit around being emo stay home. You might have more fun.

• New albums by Downset, Tree, and those pop–punk sell outs Face to Face came out this week. Local band Hallraker was spotted in New York schmoozing with Madonna in her vain attempt to sign them to Maverick Records. Look for that and details of the other sordid affairs that surround Hallraker in next week's column.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

TV stars make switch to feature films

by Mark Kennedy
Associated Press

It sure wasn't a day at the beach this summer for red–hot television stars like Jennifer Aniston and George Clooney.

How did they spend their yearly hiatus from TV–land? Keep your eyes on a cineplex near you: While sun worshipers might have spent their days tanning, it was the casts of TV's top–rated "ER" and "Friends" who risked the real overexposure. You couldn't swat a mosquito without swiping one of them rushing off to make a movie or hawking their latest celluloid offering.

"The desire to move from television programs to feature films is eternal," says Art Murphy, a film analyst. "Every few years there are people who become prominent in TV who try their luck in feature films."

A sampling from this season's leapers:

• Doe–eyed Aniston's She's the One may have already hit screens nationwide but by fall another project, 'Till There Was You, will be all the buzz.

• Hunky Clooney abandoned the crisis–rich ER for a summer in the Slovak capital of Bratislava to shoot Steven Spielberg's The Peacemaker, a thriller about the theft of Russian nuclear material. He recently was in the minor box–office hit, From Dusk Till Dawn.

• Kvetching Matthew Perry, who plays the wise–cracking junior executive Chandler on "Friends," hits the big screen early next year with Fools Rush In with slinky Salma Hayek.

Fools rush in? Well, watch your step — the odds on movie success are slim, even for these Must–See–TV luvvies.

"It doesn't always work and it doesn't happen instantly," Murphy warns. "It takes a while to get the traction in the new media."

Just ask actor Tom Selleck, who parlayed his role as a Hawaii–based private eye during the 1980s into a lukewarm film career, only to decamp back to TV.

Wonder where the mustached heartthrob ended up? Yup, on "Friends," as Monica's older love interest.

Lucy Lawless lays down the law on campy show

by Eileen Glanton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's hard to imagine, though fun to speculate about, the job qualifications of a television warrior princess.

Like superheroines before her, she should be strong and brave. If she's pretty, so much the better. She must vow to protect the powerless and battle barbarians. Superhuman powers aren't mandatory, but advisable, and she must be able to save whole civilizations in a single episode.

A real–life name like Lucy Lawless may seal the deal. Lawless, a 28–year–old New Zealand actress, stormed into the world of syndicated action–adventure television in March 1995 as a guest character on "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys." In fall 1995, Xena pulled off a true feminist coup. She got her own series.

One year later, the campy, comic action show, which blends ancient mythology with Hong Kong–style fight scenes and special effects, has legions of fans and solid ratings.

"It just seems to have hit the world at the right time," Lawless said. "The world is ready for a woman hero who is smarter and stronger than she is good–looking."

Muscular, and nearly six feet tall, Lawless is laced each week into a bustier–like costume of leather and metal.

If the outfit seems a little exploitative for a feminist icon, a bit constricting for a superheroine, that's one of "Xena's" little jokes. Some others:

• Time. The show is set somewhere in the "golden age of myth." Dialogue, however, bubbles with the hip double entendres of, say, "Melrose Place."

• Closing credits. Read the fine print; you're likely to find a guarantee that no Amazon warriors were killed while filming the show.

• Sexuality. Men love Xena. But so do women, and viewers and producers alike celebrate the Xena's friendship with Gabrielle, the young, blond sidekick played by Renee O'Connor.

• Continuity. "We have no respect for that!" crows Lawless. "Sometimes it's completely slapstick, then it'll be more intense and dramatic, with some fantastic moral dilemma."

Lawless knew from the beginning that Xena was a formidable character. But the heartfelt letters from fans, the Internet forums, the Ms. cover article that hailed her as a feminist icon, took her by surprise.

"People somehow find her really empowering," she said. "For a long time, I was very afraid of the role model stuff. But only recently, I'm realizing that this is just a true honor."

■ trax

continued from page 6

Lovers of Big Star or The Posies will appreciate The Loud Family's pop sensibilities, but the power pop tradition is more a springboard than a calling card, and Interbabe Concern will work its way into your head as an album of great complexity and expressiveness — a singular vision and truly imaginative exploration of pop. Miller deserves a special place in the pop pantheon — a place in tribute to the creator of records as exciting and moving as Interbabe Concern. A (Bradley Skaught)

THE SKELETONES
Dr. Bones
DNA Records

The "ska" band The Skeletones released their latest record, Dr. Bones, late last month. But labelling it ska is a major fallacy.

To be a ska band you need the skanking beat, the pogo– powered rhythm and the reggae–root sound — a sax and horn section are not the only requirements. Unfortunately the Skeletones didn't quite grasp this concept. The sax and horns are soothing enough for a late night dinner date, but not for a ska show.

DNA Records didn't look too hard to find a band to represent their label. Dr. Bones might have been slightly tolerable if the lyrics were decent. Their second song, "Anatomy of a Perfect Woman" is somewhat offensive to the female race with elementary and degrading lyrics like "She'll love you with her legs; she'll do you with your lips."

For all you straight–edge kids out there, this isn't the band for you. The lyrics for "Technology" include, "...so that hemp will lead the way to rejuvenate this world."

To be honest, this band is more funk and soul than it is ska. Being considered part of the ska community is an insult to bands like the Specials and the Toasters who have made ska as great as it is.

Throughout this 30–minute CD, the band gears closer to the funk and soul side of the spectrum. The Skeletones definitely have potential to liven up their beat, but for now they are grooving a bit to slow. C–
(Sandi Okun)

ROAD CLOSED
DETOUR

Not to us!
We're going straight ahead for treatments and cures for 40 neuromuscular diseases.
MDA
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

THE CROSSROADS
MDA is where help and hope meet for a million Americans with neuromuscular diseases.
MDA
Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717
People help MDA... because MDA helps people.

VOTED #1
FLEX
THANKS UMASS
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
BY YOU!!

Judicial Hearing Board
A great experience for students who
◆are interested in campus leadership◆
◆wish to improve communication and listening skills◆
◆are enrolled full time◆
◆have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.◆
◆are not on judicial sanction◆
APPLY NOW TO BE A HEARING BOARD MEMBER
Training held in the Campus Center from 7:00 to 9:00p.m. on:
September 24 & September 25
Room 168C Room 165-69
Applications available at:
Residential Cluster Offices
The Dean of Students Office
Student Government Association
APPLICATION DEADLINE:
5:00 p.m. September 23, 1996
Any questions? Please contact Paul Vasconcellos or Jennifer Cooper, Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore, Phone: 545-2684

UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
TO FULL-TIME UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS
- STUDENT TICKET BOOKLETS FOR THE 1996 UMASS FOOTBALL SEASON ARE NOW AVAILABLE AT THE ATHLETIC BOX OFFICE LOCATED AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE. TICKET OFFICE HOURS ARE MONDAY-FRIDAY, 8:30AM-4:45PM.
- TICKET BOOKLETS MAY ALSO BE PICKED UP AT THE STUDENT ENTRANCE (EAST SIDE) PRIOR TO ALL HOME FOOTBALL GAMES.
- A VALID UMASS UNDERGRADUATE ID IS NEEDED TO PICK UP FOOTBALL TICKETS. (ONLY ONE BOOKLET PER STUDENT.)
- ACTIVITY CARD APPLICATIONS WILL BE MAILED OUT AROUND OCTOBER 1ST.
HELP SUPPORT UMASS FOOTBALL!!
TH

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $179 $341
PARIS $224 $427
ROME $288 $549
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $235 $446
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. September 18, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

Fanatic 40

continued from page 10

who is a good friend of ours, who caters to the community and does a lot of community service, and everyone who knows him, likes him.

"We like to see good soccer, and like to bring people in and just enjoy it. It's one big party," he said.

"The winning part of the game is also the fans' support," Almeida said. "When the team has the fans' support behind them, they play better. We are trying to bring as many fans to the games to help cheer the team."

For one of The Old Boys veterans, he sees the appeal of the Minutewomen and Garber Field as also a combination of style of play and atmosphere.

"It is definitely the style of game that brings me to Garber," said Chris Monteiro, coach of the Amherst High School girls soccer team. "I like the possession game. It is unlike the men's game, and is more of a running game, with more talent being used.

"But really it is a combination of both, the atmosphere there and the style of play. When the crowd gets into it, you can feel it in your bones, and the rhythm of play follows the crowd."

The Old Boys have already been a recognized tradition at UMass, but over the last few years they began to combine with this new group of fans. This past week they were recognized for their dedicated fan support by the sponsor of the Minutewomen, Reebok, and now have the clothes to go with the attitude. Shirts were designed by the sports manufacturer for Rudy's "Rude Boys" with the Fanatic 40 emblem on the front, and the Reebok International logo on the back. And best of all, they were for free.

"Actually, one of the comments I have heard from Reebok is that they have never seen a women's soccer game with the fans doing what we do up here," Ferreira said. "All you need is a can, or a bottle, with exactly five pennies in it.

"Its pretty simple. All you need to do is have a voice, have a pulse, and shake some cans and have a good time."

"The UMass Maracas say, "all you marketing and administration people out there, lend us your ears, or in this case, eyes." But that is what is the key for the fans, the Maracas Effect, so to say. You can breakdown the moral and psychological significance of five pennies in a bottle or can all you want, but the fact is that it makes the right noise: one too many is muffled, and one less is tinny...

The love of soccer in America has been growing, and with kids, has recently surpassed the Big Four (baseball, hockey, basketball, and football) in club enrollment. The World Cup a few years ago galvanized the sporting industry and now the MLS is making an attempt to become one of the top professional leagues in the world.

For the adults in the audience, the fire for the game has not been completely lit; especially in comparison to soccer hotbeds like England, Italy and Brazil. The "ole, ole, ole" is now Garber territory, and the only thing missing is the big kettle drum indigenous to Brazilian fans.

"Basically what we are trying to do is get some beats, and some sayings, that people have seen in the World Cup," Ferreira said. "I have had two or three guys approach me, and say that we were here last game, and it was great, and that is why I am here again.

"So, I think we are starting to win people over."

Note: If you want to become a member of the Fanatic 40, all you have to do is contact Sid Ferreira at 5-5102. The only requirements are that you attend all the games, cheer and shake your UMass Maracas.

Murphy

continued from page 10

down the right field line to cinch the win for the Hawks; from July 13–24, he had a 12– game hitting streak in which he went 18–for–48 with four doubles, a triple, two home runs, 13 runs, and 10 RBI's.

"That was an unbelievable atmosphere for baseball games," Murphy said. "There were about 5,000 people at home games. Every time a home player hit a home run or a pitcher struck out the side without giving up a walk, the fans would pass around the hat and give the guy what ever was passed in. They just really cared about the players."

However, Murphy's tenure with the Hawks came to an end when they were eliminated from the Northwest League playoffs. He then moved up to the Kernels of Cedar Rapids, Iowa to play in the Midwest League playoffs. After three days, the Kernels won their first game and lost the next two, thus ending the season.

In Cedar Rapids, Murphy learned that the professional mindset was sometimes different than attitudes in the NCAAs.

"The attitude there was completely different than at UMass," Murphy said. "If we had made it to the World Series and couldn't go home for part of the summer because we were out in Omaha playing baseball, we would have loved it. In Iowa, they made the playoffs and were upset. A lot of the guys hadn't been home since March and just wanted to go home. I had only been up since June, but I wanted to win."

Life on the road took some getting used to as well. Like something out of the classic Kevin Costner flick, Bull Durham, Murphy talked about uncomfortable 12–hour bus rides and staying in motels that were so dumpy, he compared them to jails. In addition, he discussed how hard it was to move up to Cedar Rapids, leaving behind his pals on the Hawks behind.

"At first it was tough, and I didn't really want to leave," Murphy said. "But the more I thought about it, I realized that this is what I want to do with my life. The quicker I move up the better, the faster I'll get to the major leagues. It's tough, but that's what I have to do."

Murphy left for an instructional league in Arizona on Monday. Composed of selected members of the Angels' single A clubs, he'll train there until November when he will return home to Amherst and "enter the real world for a while." From there, it's off to spring training with the Angels organization, and from there — ?

"From there, they'll send me to a team," Murphy said. "Hopefully, I can get to the Lake Elsinor team [the Angels' triple A club in southern California]."

on the NFL

continued from page 10

Orleans/Cincinnati game last weekend? It may have gone better if the Saints had tagged in QB Jim Everett.

• Speaking of bombastic quarterbacks, it looks like Dave Brown's been taking lessons from Everett. Also looks like he's almost as bad a boxer as he is a quarterback.

• Can Eddie George finally break the Heisman jinx? If not, Tennessee QB Peyton Manning may want to tank the season just to make sure he doesn't win the award.

• Recent expansion team Carolina can take over sole possession of the lead in the NFC West if they beat San Francisco next week. Have older expansion teams Tampa Bay and Seattle ever held the lead in their divisions in a non–strike year?

• The Steelers seem bound and determined to show they can survive the loss of a major defensive player for the second year in a row. Interceptions returned for TDs in the last two games have helped them overcome their horrendous start. Don't forget they were 3–4 at one point last year.

• New England's defense held Arizona to one first down in the entire first half. If only they played that well all the time.

• For all the Jews in New York planning on fasting for Yom Kippur, the NFL is offering a way to lose their appetite before the holiday begins — watching the Jets play the Giants.

Speaking of the two New York teams, which one gets home–field advantage when they clash in the Meadowlands?

• Looking around the AFC East, it looks like the prognosticators were wrong. Buffalo, who many feel could go to the Super Bowl again, needed overtime to beat New York, should have lost to New England, and were blown out in Pittsburgh. On the other hand, Indianapolis seems to be proving they are the real thing with a 3 and 0 start, including a win over Dallas with seven players out with injuries. They may not be the most talented team in the league, but they have something talented underachieving teams like New England lack. As QB Jim Harbaugh put it, "It's a team that believes in itself." They think they're going to win and they do...

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

Attention Skiers:

The Ski Club is looking for new members. Everyone is welcome. For more information call Arik at 545–3437 or stop by the Ski Club office at 434 Student Union.

MERGE

When we all work together, great things can happen.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association

1-800-572-1717

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Play Women's Rugby! Fun and challenging Daily 4-6pm Call Mel @ 256-5470

CHINESE FOOD KAI CHI delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2 am Friday and Saturday to 3 am

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 Bedroom apartment in Puffton For info call 549-5941

2 Bedroom Square Village Rest of month for free- looking for someone to take over lease immediately- Mike 665-7927

AUTO FOR SALE

96 Geo Prism Excellent condition $9500/BO 584-8302 Ask for Mark

1986 Subaru GL Hatchback 114k miles Good condition 4W Drive $1600 Best O Call 586-3497

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Good running condition Best offer Call 545-3007 or 634-5732

MAZDA - 91 323 HATCHBACK 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done. $7900 OBO. Call 549-7285

1983 Olds, Delta 88 for sale New tires, rotors, wheels Panasonic Stereo System, $750 Call 253-7758

97 Ford Ranger New engine, great shape Call Amy 253-1926

'77 Dodge Van Automatic, May inspection sticker, Runs Great $500 256-1300

1985 Buick Wagon Good condition, new transmission $800 David 549-8273

EMPLOYMENT

Need some extra cash, but don't have time for a steady job? Sign up to work Family Day, Saturday, September 28. Applications can be picked up at the Alumni Relations Office at Memorial Hall. For more info contact Jenn Bennett at 545-2317

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800 426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring: Earn up to $20,000+/month World Travel Seasonal and Full Time positions No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-971-3550 Ext. C50015

National Parks Hiring: Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring: Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext. F50014

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S. Korea No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Attention Skiers and Boarders. Entry level positions into the ski industry with strong benefits. Make up to $1000/month. Part-time enthusiastic individuals please call Ski Card International 1-800-333-7201

EMPLOYMENT

Tutor Wanted For Biochem 420 Background in Organic Chemistry also. Call 549-1987

Babysitter Needed for 4 year old Tues and Thurs 3:30-6:00 Call Michele at 256-8632

ENTERTAINMENT

Zeppelin! Pearl Jam! Creedence! NYC Band does it all for your next party/ Covers galore, Kick Ass originals! Call my Secret Selvve 212-463-6683 http://www.eskimo.com/~msj/

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-9742

Available now! 2BDR townhouse on bus line $630/month Squira Village 665-2203

MISCELLANEOUS

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906

Hi Admiral! I had to pay for my own ad. The lines were too long, so I called in my ad. Yes, I am always looking for new friends and gaming partners. You know what I look like. When do I get to see you, meet you, talk to you? How do I know this isn't just my roommate playing a practical joke on me?
-Mr. Interested

Northampton- Roomate needed in great downtown two bedroom apt. Own bedroom/bathroom, shared living room and kitchen Seeking responsible male or female. Call 586-9284

ROOM FOR RENT

WORTH THE RIDE

2 BDR Apt. in Sunderland HW floors, washer/dry, porch, garage. 315+ BEAUTIFUL SETTING! QUIET! 665-4394

2 Bedrooms Available in 4 Bedroom Apt. Northampton on bus route. Beautiful Apt., great location. Call 586-1612

SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Screamin Sevens 549-0083

Spring Break '97 Sell trips, earn cash and go free. STS is hiring Campus Reps/Group Organizers to promote trips to Cancun, Jamaica, and Florida. Call 1-800-648-4849 for information on joining America's #1 Student Tour Operator

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take a break! Student Travel (800)95-Break!

TRANSPORTATION

Do you commute? I need a ride from Pittsfield. Willing to share gas expenses. Call 413-442-7186

LOST

Sunglasses: Prescription, Oakley w/ case. Call 549-3950

MUSICIANS

Drummer Needed for dark pop/rock band. Call Phil 549-5836

VISA/MASTERCARD GUARANTEED - Bad credit. No credit. No problem. Call 1-800-354-1580 (24 hours)

ST. JUDE

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank You. M.M.

FOUND

Found- Compact Disk in Student Union Lounge- identify 586-8631

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher - Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3354

WWW.SUCESS.ORG Free business education from American Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses. Retire rich in ten years.

Boxing Lessons w/Djana Bumpus. Call for brochure 732-8817

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Renovate, re-use and recycle your old things this week. You've got some treasures—all you need to do is look for them. Clean out your cluttered closets, give your unwanted things to charity, and put the rest of it to good use. You'll be amazed at what you have.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Take on a challenge, especially if it involves taking a class. You're a sponge when it comes to learning new things. Cut your expenses now to enjoy a real indulgence in the near future. Concerned about your health? Try a new and healthy approach to eating.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

Your team approach to solving problems has won you several admirers. Set a goal today that's beyond anything you've tried before. Your energy and enthusiasm will make it happen. A sweetheart may be in need of some extra TLC this week.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

You may be feeling pressured to make a difficult decision. Use your wits to buy time until you can get all the information you need. Long-distance travel is likely to be difficult. Stick closer to home instead, and you'll enjoy your visit more.

LEO
July 23-August 23

If you're feeling overwhelmed, try to delegate some responsibility. If you're surrounded by talent, you'd be foolish not to take advantage of it. A long-distance call holds the key to a new kind of relationship. Go for it!

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

Something that seemed to be gone forever could be making its way back into your life. Don't let unspoken feelings damage a relationship. If you can't find a way to express yourself without being unkind, keep trying!

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

For a dynamite combination in romance or in enterprise, go for someone who's your polar opposite. The chemistry will be worth the effort you have to put in to make things run smoothly. Group activities are especially enjoyable.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

You're exceptionally lucky as the week draws to a close, so take a few extra risks, if you can afford to do so. Stay in close touch with your family—someone could be feeling neglected. A rumor that has been circulating lately could be false, so don't get upset.

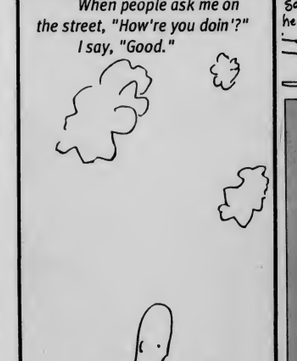
SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

You may be stuck with one of your least favorite chores this week. Do it with good grace and you'll end up ahead. Working with your hands yields some interesting results. A sweetheart's cryptic remark could be hiding their true feelings.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Take the scenic route on a journey this week and you'll be rewarded with an unexpected insight. On the other hand, if you allow yourself to be drawn into a crowded, noisy situation, you'll find yourself unusually stressed. Solitude can be a welcome respite.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18



An elusive romance should be allowed to wane. Something better could be just around the corner! The key to winning someone over is not as obvious as it seems. Look at all the angles before making a life-changing decision.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

The truth is your most valuable asset this week, so don't be shy about putting it to work for you. Take extra care of your health, or stress and fatigue could bring you down. An exciting afternoon reminds you of some special times in the past.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Dancer Kaye
5. Fathom without sonar
10. ___ cells
14. Prejudice
15. Corrosive substance
16. Confederate Robt.
17. Came down to earth
18. Garbo or Borg
19. Actress ___ May Wong
20. Muzzles
22. Actress Winger et al.
24. TLC providers
25. The Four Seasons actor
26. The Sun ___ Rises
28. Three, in Roma
29. Be indiscreet
33. Slugger's stat
34. Ball or tree
35. Quit
37. Most honorable
40. Earp's wear
41. Chita's "Spider Woman" role
42. Away from home
43. "· · · ___ how you play the game"
44. Cab
45. Use a cotton ball
46. Belonging to us
48. Participate in a gabfest
50. Big Bird's network
51. Spring or fall
54. Thorny bushes
57. Mortal enemies
58. Tomato mixture
60. Doctors' charges
62. He created Perry and Della
63. Fowles' The ___ Tower
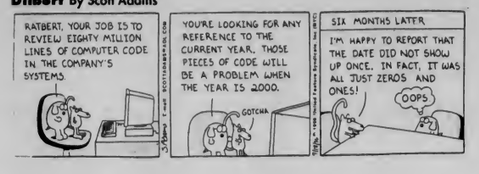
64. Till
65. Flat hill
66. Obligations
67. "___ we forget"

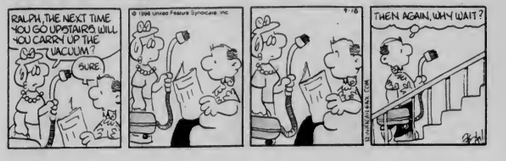
DOWN



1. Lakers' league: abbr.
2. Lubricates
3. Weather prediction
4. Actress Mary of al.
5. Telemarketers, e.g.
6. Enactments
7. Shoshonean
8. Butt in
9. AKC division
10. "· · · Prudence" (Beatles)
11. Forearm bone
12. Perfect ones
13. Positive vote
21. Spanish pronoun
23. Tower of ___
25. Prepare for battle
26. Around
27. DeLillo's JFK story
28. "King ___" (Steve Martin song)
30. The (Spanish)
31. In motion
32. Harvard ___
33. Genetic initials
34. Govt. pencil-pushing agcy.
36. Foldaway furniture
38. MDs
39. ___ and bagels
39. Sevared and Clapton
40. Center of commerce
42. Feed-bag tidbit
45. Budapest's river
46. Oriental sash
47. Pragmatic
49. Expected
50. Victims
51. Miffed
52. Lampreys
53. At a loss
54. Like Dizzy Gillespie's horn
55. Coty or Clair
56. Hardens
57. Opposite of masc.
59. He and Sally played the Slivics
61. Drunkard

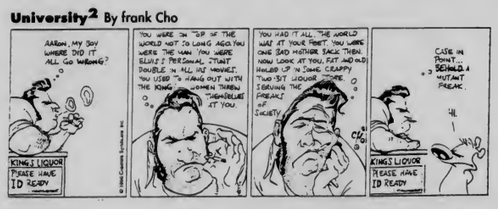
Classifieds Work

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

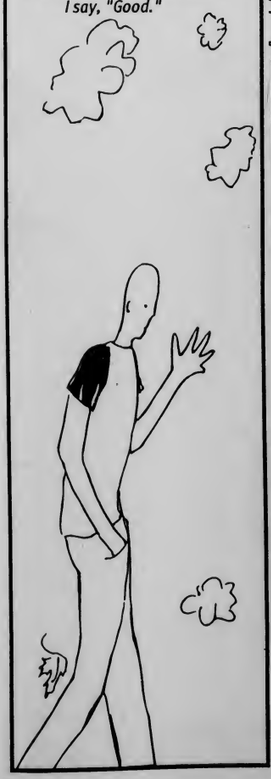
Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winck



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

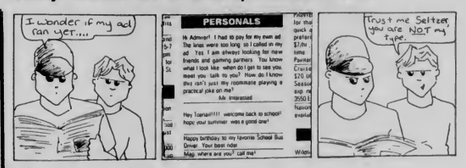
8 Years In Braces By Eric Peterson

University² By frank Cho



Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I have some problems but they're not my problems. They're my parents' problems.



When I was a little kid they exaggerated about how great life would be.

Nowadays, I exaggerate, too.

When people ask me on the street, "How're you doin'?" I say, "Good."

Always wanted one of those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Duh... By Mauria & Micaela

Close to Home By John McPherson

An essential parenting skill: speeding up bedtime by condensing children's books.

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE

instead of this stupid ad

TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Morning

"Only God can judge me now!"

–2 PAC

Quote of the Afternoon

"Rehab is for Quitters"

–Seen on T-Shirt

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Lisa Oliveri
Copy Editor

Elizabeth Brown
Photo Technician

Marc Dionne
Production Supervisor

Kelvin L. Torres
Jack Myers
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Breast	Roast Turkey
Sloppy Joe	Tilapia Santa Fe (fish)
Ravioli Alfredo	Broccoli & Cauliflower
	Mesquite Chicken

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Roast Turkey
Chicken Cutlet	Fried Shrimp Dinner
Philly Cheese Steak

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Philly Cheese Steak	Roast Turkey
Rotini/Tomato Sause	Cauliflower Casserole
Rotini/Tomato Lentil	Pastabilities
	Cheese Lasagna

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Philly Cheese Steak	Roast Turkey
Rotini/Tomato Sauce	Tilapia Santa Fe (fish)
Tomato Lentil	Cauliflower Eggplant
	Cheese Lasagna

Sports

Minutewomen fans among country's finest

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

There were not too many things to smile about for the UNH women's soccer players after their Sunday morning game against UC–Santa Barbara. For some bizarre reason, they were scheduled to play the Gauchos at Richard F. Garber Field before the Massachusetts game against St. Bonaventure.

But as the UNH team walked away from a torturous 1–1 double overtime draw, more so for the UMass fans than the players, all of their faces were lit up in astonishment. You see, as soon as the Minutewomen hit the field for warm–ups, the Garber crowd exploded in a frenzy of chanting and maracas, as the Fanatic 40 and The Old Boys were finally able to have their frenzied say.

'Nobody like them," coach Jim Rudy said. "I would have said at the beginning that it was really exciting, and 'wow, this is great, what a fantastic new feeling.'

"But now after three to four years of it, it makes me feel like home. I feel like this is our house here, and these are our people."

That is what most teams have to face when they enter the grounds of UMass, as the Minutewomen possess some of the most loyal, and loudest, fans in Division I soccer. It is amazing in itself that only a relatively small group of fans can have that effect, but they do, and they want you to join their team.

Two of the mainstays for the now monikered Fanatic 40 are Carlos Almeida and Sid Ferreira, who originally hail from the Cape Verde Islands. The game of soccer is number one in their country, so when they came to this country they carried that love of the game with them.

That love, combined with the irrepressible personality that is coach Jim Rudy, and the continued success of the Minutewomen, has made them not just big fans, but "the fans" to be had on campus.

"We are fans of good soccer," Ferreira said. "Then you have the coach

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

The Fanatic 40 lead the cheers during UMass women's soccer games at Richard F. Garber Field.

Turn to FANATIC 40, page 8

X–C finishes second to Brown in opener

By Robert Trombley
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's cross country team opened its season Sept. 14th by finishing second to Brown University in the Thetford Invitational in Thetford, Vt., on Saturday afternoon.

It was a different story from last year's meet, when UMass came home from Thetford with a victory. In a sport where low score wins, Brown finished three points better than the Minutewomen's score of 40. UMass finished ahead of the University of Connecticut, who scored 52 points.

The big story of Saturday's meet was Rebecca Donaghue, who is quickly becoming a national caliber athlete. Last year the junior from Stow finished second overall, only to better her time this year. Donaghue broke the course record by 25 seconds, coming in with a time of 18:45.

The next Minutewoman to cross the finish line was Katie Greenia, who placed fifth overall with a time of 19:39. Greenia, a Morrisville, Vt., native, has become a mainstay of the team. She has gone from finishing fourth and fifth to consistently being one of the top three runners this year. Junior Christy Martin of Leicester, Sharon Tilloston from Wantaug, N.Y., and Molly Dunlap of Hingham rounded out the top five for UMass.

"It was the first time I had a chance to see them in action," coach Julie LaFreniere said. "I saw some things I liked and some things I didn't."

LaFreniere showed concern with the 5–6–7 spots on the team.

"I'm looking for team members to step up. We have it. We have the talent. We just need to squeeze it out," she said.

One of the bright spots on the team is freshman Sally Hirsch. She placed 6th on the squad in Saturday's meet.

"The remarkable thing about Hirsch is that she has never run cross country before. I think it's pretty impressive when someone can go out there with no idea what they're doing and still keep pace with the team captain," LaFreniere said.

According to LaFreniere, the team has the potential to take the A–10s once again this year, as long as everyone can work together.

"Cross country is definitely a team sport. You can have Donaghue finish first in every race, but, unless the rest of the team contributes, it won't make a difference. We have to close the gap after our first four finishers. If we can do that by the middle of October, we have a shot at the A–10s," LaFreniere said.

LaFreniere is looking for Captain Molly Dunlap to ease up as the season continues, because her competitive fire sometimes hampers her performance.

"Molly has got to learn how to loosen up. She's so tight and so tense that her talent is having trouble coming out," the coach said. "She wants it so bad that her desire may be a detriment to her. She has to let the race come to her."

LaFreniere also hopes that senior Kristin Donaldson can perform up to her potential.

The Minutewomen are now focusing their sights on this Saturday's meet where they host Vermont, Boston University, and UConn at 11:00 a.m.

BU is among the most well rounded cross country teams the Minutewomen will play this year, and the strongest team in Saturday's meet.

Massachusetts returns home after four road games to host Yale

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

For the first time all year the Massachusetts field hockey team will play at Totman Field, when Yale (1–1) visits UMass (4–1) at 3:30 p.m. today.

The Minutewomen, ranked No. 5 in this week's NCAA field hockey poll, are coming off of a weekend–long road trip which saw them play games against the then–ranked No. 3 Iowa and No. 4 James Madison in the Hawkeye Invitational Tournament. After downing JMU 3–2 in double overtime, UMass lost to the Hawkeyes 2–1.

Today's game marks the first on–campus game for UMass, though the team's home–opener against Wake Forest at Westfield State College was listed as a home game. UMass won that game 4–1.

Last year the Elis defeated the Minutewomen 1–0 at the Yale Field Hockey Complex. Massachusetts holds the edge in the all–time series between the two schools, 17–2–1. The series dates back to 1976.

Freshman Saskia Fuchs leads the point total list for the Minutewomen, tallying three goals and four assists on nine shots for 10 points. Fuchs was named this week's Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week, marking the third consecutive time she has garnered that honor.

Senior All–American Kyle Rothenberger has seven points, with a pair of goals and three assists on a team–high 17 shots.

Junior Courtney MacLean and sophomore Erica Johnston have reached the multiple goal mark as well. MacLean has connected for three goals on nine shots, while Johnston has put in two goals and assisted on one.

Sophomore Kate Putnam and juniors Jen Gutzman and Sharon Hughes have each netted a single goal; junior Amy Ott has helped on one.

UMass has scored three times this year off the penalty corner situation, with the tallies coming against New Hampshire, Boston College, and Iowa. Thus far this year, the UMass defense has not allowed a goal off the 22 corners it has faced.

The A–10 Player of the Week, goalie Hilary Rose, has seen all 373 minutes of action in the Minutewomen net. She has compiled a .930 save percentage, stopping 66 shots in her five games, which has given her a near–perfect 0.94 goals against average.

Yale has split its two games this year, beating Richmond 3–2 and dropping its game at William & Mary 1–4.

Lindsay Hobbs leads the Elis in goal production with three goals, while Cordelia Carter has posted the Elis' lone other goal. Betsy Hagmann has notched the team's two assists.

Yale goalie Megan Reed has seen all of the action in the Elis' net, making 11 saves and allowing six goals, for a .647 save percentage.

Yale has had 14 penalty corner opportunities on the year, while its opponents have been awarded 16 corners.

Today's game marks the only stop at Totman for the Minutewomen in the month of September. They return to their home field when they host Northeastern on Oct. 2.

The Minutewomen will be in action in Storrs, Conn., next Sunday when they face No. 19 Penn State at UConn.

New kickers flop, George real deal

Taking a look around the league:

• Are the Packers the real thing? It sure looks like it. San Diego, supposedly one of the better teams, was their most recent victim. Oh boy; another Stupor Bowl coming up.

• Congratulations to Chiefs RB Marcus Allen. His two touchdowns last Sunday moved him to second on the NFL's all–time TD list. Think Al Davis regrets letting him go yet?

Jacob W. Michaels On the NFL

• Looking for trends from the pre–season? How about veteran kickers like Matt Bahr, Kevin Butler and Pete Stoyanovich being replaced with rookies. So far the moves have not paid off. Adam Vinatieri cost the Patriots the game against Buffalo and missed a PAT and a FG against Arizona. The Bears' Carlos Huerta made only four of his seven attempts, and possibly cost the Bears the game against Minnesota. He was cut on Monday. Jimmy Johnson's mistrust of his rookie kicker caused him to go for it on fourth and goal with Dan Marino's pass being picked off and returned 100 yards for a touchdown. Of course, that last one didn't matter since the Phins were playing the Jets, but it happened nonetheless.

• Too many head coaches seem to have been watching Unnecessary Roughness, as Iron Man football appears to have come back into vogue. Delon Sanders makes the most noise about it, but all–everything CB Rod Woodson has been playing the position, if only in practice, and now Kansas City's Dale Carter. The only question is, why do they have to be so obnoxious when they score?

• Jets WR Keyshawn Johnson got his second career TD. Sources in New York say he's still dancing in the endzone.

• Speaking of the Jets, think Neil O'Donnell's sorry he left Pittsburgh yet?

The Jets might be sorry too. O'Donnell's never going to lead them to a Super Bowl. They should have used this season to see if Glenn Foley can play (well, they should have done that last year, but didn't) and if not, drafted a QB for the future.

• There have still only been three black head coaches in NFL history, even though the first two (Dennis Green and Ray Rhodes) have been very successful. In fact, it's looking like Tony Dungy will be the first black head coach who doesn't get to the playoffs in his first year.

• Nine different quarterbacks have led the Cardinals during the last nine years. Someone send a memo to Cards owner Bill Bidwell... Try drafting a young QB instead of hiring old backups.

• Chris Chandler is doing his best to make sure he keeps his job all season and someone picks him up next year when the Tennessee Lame Ducks go with Steve McNair. Let's hope other coaches and scouts are watching, because the fans in Houston certainly aren't. Maybe Bidwell will give him a call.

• Miami is looking pretty good at 3–0. Then again, they were looking pretty good at 3–0 last year too. The season's still young.

• Welcome back, Drew Bledsoe. Stick around for a while.

• TNT was showing some classic footage of former Eagles and Cardinals head coach Buddy Ryan, including that famous swing he took at Kevin Gilbride when they were coaching together in Houston. The NFL just isn't as much fun without Buddy. Hopefully, Jets owner Leon Hess will continue his usual trend and hire him to replace Rich Kotite at the end of the season.

• Anyone catch the fight during the New

Turn to ON THE NFL, page 8

UMass centerfielder Nate Murphy signs with Angels

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The stage was set: bottom of the seventh, men on first and second. Junior outfielder Nate Murphy stepped to the plate against Harvard in the Massachusetts baseball team's debut in the Beanpot Tournament.

With a swift swing of the bat, Murphy took the Crimson hurler high and hard, past the warning track, depositing the ball smack–dab in the middle of the bullpen. Though the three–run homer didn't pull the Minutemen ahead in the final innings (they won the game 13–1), it was the thing that major league dreams are made of.

Little did the Amherst native know, he would be on the road to the bigs by the end of the spring.

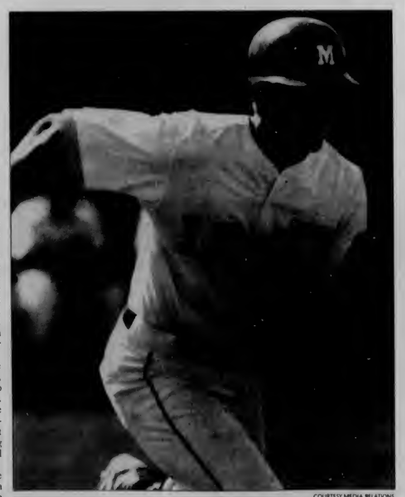
When the excitement of the regular season died down, Murphy's attention shifted away from the team's Atlantic 10 title and successful romp to the round of 16 in the NCAA Tournament and on the major league draft.

"Before the draft, I talked to a lot of different teams," Murphy said. "They said I could go anywhere between the fourth and twentieth rounds."

After refusing an offer by the Philadelphia Phillies in the twelfth round, Murphy signed with the Angels in the sixteenth and his professional career was underway.

Last season, the former UMass centerfielder wrapped up the regular season with an impressive .390 average, in addition to leading the team in home runs (10) and RBI's (66). With such a successful season, it was not an easy decision to give up his final year of playing at UMass.

"Ever since I was a freshman I thought to myself, 'I want to get drafted after my junior season, skip my senior year and get [school] done whenever I can,'" Murphy said. "When I was drafted, it actually came true, but I wasn't really sure if I was ready to leave UMass yet."



In addition, Murphy had his doubts about the drafting process. Without a hefty signing bonus, he wasn't sure if the team would be as committed to keep him around.

However, Murphy was in good company, as Minuteman pitcher Chad Paronto was signed in the eighth round by the Baltimore Orioles.

"We talked to each other to let each other know what was going on, because we really didn't know what the procedure was," Murphy said. "I really didn't know a lot about that stuff and neither did Chad, so I would call him up and say, 'Hey, this is what's going on with us' and we helped each other out."

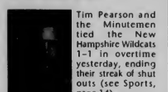
Once the nuts and bolts of the signing process were complete, Murphy was sent to Boise, Idaho, to play for the Single A Boise Hawks. While playing in 67 games for the Hawks, Murphy posted a .286 average while leading the Northwest League with 58 runs scored, making a solid transition from college ball to minor league play.

As for season highlights: on the fourth of July, Murphy hit a two–out, full–count, home run

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Former UMass baseball standout Nate Murphy is making his way up the minor league ladder after being drafted by the California Angels in last June's draft.

Turn to MURPHY, page 8



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 12 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, September 19, 1996

Hemp Lady to the rescue

Caroline Killeen, a 70 year–old former nun, is running for president. Her platform — the legalization of hemp. Check out our cover story (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Series of shut outs end

Tim Pearson and the Minutemen tied the New Hampshire Wildcats 1–1 in overtime yesterday, ending their streak of shut outs (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Former Vichy official to be tried for crimes

PARIS (AP) — A former member of France's pro–Nazi government will be tried for arresting and deporting 1,690 Jews during World War II — but not soon enough for the families of those who died. An appeals court in Bordeaux ruled yesterday that 86–year–old Maurice Papon must face a jury to account for his role in the Vichy regime's collaboration in the extermination of Jews.

Papon's lawyer immediately filed an appeal, delaying the start of a trial by at least six months and further frustrating those who want him on the stand before he dies.

"If there's going to be a trial, it has to be soon," said Juliette Dray, 62, who escaped a Papon sweep in 1942. "Little by little, we're all dying off."

Jean Leguay and Maurice Sabatier, Papon's superiors, died in 1989 before they could be tried as Nazi collaborators. Rene Bousquet, the national police chief during the war, was killed by a publicity–seeker in 1993 on the eve of his war crimes trial. For years, Papon himself seemed untouchable. After the war he went on to become a top politician with enormous clout. Gen. Charles De Gaulle named him National Police chief during the Algerian War, and former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing gave him the prestigious post of budget minister.

NATION

Former vice president Agnew dies of cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon shocked everyone, including Spiro Agnew, when he picked the unknown Maryland governor as his running mate in 1968. He thought he was getting a Rockefeller Republican, a modern city leader, and a bridge to the ethnic vote. Instead, he got a pol who had taken brown envelopes filled with cash in his state office and continued the habit when he moved to Washington.

The rest of his life Agnew insisted he was innocent. Agnew, 77, died Tuesday of previously undiagnosed leukemia in Atlantic General Hospital in Berlin, Md. He always spent the summer at his condominium in Ocean City, Md., and the rest of the time in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

In his lifetime, few politicians spoke out for Agnew. In death, he was eulogized as a courageous man.

"Spiro Agnew earned the support of millions of his countrymen because he was never afraid to speak out and stand up for America," said Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole.

He "had something few people in this city ever show: raw political courage," said Nixon administration speech writer Pat Buchanan. "At a time when the establishment was craven in its pandering to rioters and demonstrators, Vice President Agnew told the truth about both of them."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 12
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
.....page 14

It's raining, it's pouring...

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Christian Riis, a senior Spanish major, biked to class in the pouring rain yesterday.

Muslim wins presidency: vote offers hope to Bosnia

By Judith Ingram
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia–Herzegovina — A glimmer of hope that Bosnia can stay whole emerged yesterday, with presidential election results showing Muslims united around their leader and a surprising number of Serbs abandoning extreme nationalism.

After a campaign that played on divisions wrought by 3 1/2 years of war, Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic won the most votes for the three–person presidency in Saturday's elections — 729,034 votes. His Muslim Party for Democratic Action had insisted that Bosnia remain united and multiethnic — even though it adopted increasingly nationalist tones during the campaign.

Izetbegovic, 72 and with a history of heart trouble, will chair the presidency for a two–year term. He will be the point man for international officials eager to help knit the divided country together again.

His success could determine how long a NATO–led peace force stays in Bosnia. The current force, some 48,000 troops from 35 countries, including 15,000 Americans, arrived last December for a year. A smaller force seems certain to stay on.

"We will not abandon Bosnia," NATO Secretary General Javier Solana vowed yesterday in Brussels, Belgium. He refused to speculate on the post–December mission.

In Washington, U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the present U.S. contingent in Bosnia plans to pull out by year's end, but he did not rule out some kind of American presence beyond then. He also called to congratulate Izetbegovic.

In Sarajevo, hundreds of honking cars jammed the streets yesterday, with green–and–white ruling party flags flapping and passengers flashing victory signs. Bystanders waved and cheered. Izetbegovic, first elected president in 1990, appeared briefly outside his office, smiling and shaking hands with the crowd.

"Today, for the first time after four years, Bosnia–Herzegovina is reunited," exulted Mirza Hajric, a top Izetbegovic aide.

International officials met with Izetbegovic and urged him to cooperate with his Serb and Croat partners in the presidency — Momcilo Krajisnik, who received 690,373 votes, and the Croats' Kresimir Zubak, who won 342,007.

Zubak pledged to honor the Dayton treaty commitments to peace and democracy and spoke optimistically of the future.

"I think that we will bring the Bosnian crisis to an end in the next two years," he said.

Carl Bildt, the chief civilian monitor of Bosnia's peace, met separately with Krajisnik to chart the presidency's first meeting, which must take place next week.

Izetbegovic told reporters the presidency could convene when Krajisnik, an ultranationalist who has advocated Serb secession from Bosnia, is ready to swear on the constitution of Bosnia–Herzegovina — which reaffirms the country's unity.

Izetbegovic also demanded that voter rolls in the Serb parts of Bosnia be checked and "voting be repeated where irregularities are found."

Under the Dayton peace accord the presidency was to comprise a Muslim, a Serb and a Croat, and all three wins were expected. Izetbegovic's party had warned that if Muslims did not vote, or split votes between competing Muslim–led parties, Krajisnik could be Bosnia's next leader.

Krajisnik was a senior deputy to Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader indicted by the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

Izetbegovic's strongest Muslim rival, former Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic, won 121,253 votes — less than one–fifth of Izetbegovic's tally.

The Serbs' main opposition candidate, Mladen Ivanic, garnered 282,985 votes — more than one–third of Krajisnik's vote. A relative moderate courted by U.S. diplomats, Ivanic used the support of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to chip away at the power of Karadzic's ruling clique.

Ivanic's relatively strong showing signaled that, in spite of the "Only unity can save the Serbs" slogans seen across the Serb–ruled half of Bosnia, many Serbs have shifted away from the strident nationalism that brought war, poverty and isolation. Ivanic polled particularly well among embittered Serb refugees. Voters also chose a national parliament, legislatures for the Muslim–Croat federation and the Serb sub–state, and a Bosnian Serb president. Partial results showed ruling ethnic parties ahead with more than two–thirds of the votes counted for the 42–member national parliament.

Biljana Plavsic, who under international pressure replaced Karadzic as Serb political leader, was well ahead in the Serb presidential contest with nearly 80 percent of the vote counted.

Updated information law takes researchers off paper trail, into computer era

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prying secrets from federal bureaucrats has depended for 30 years on a law written in the age of carbon paper. This week, Americans' right to know was nudged toward the electronic age.

The Freedom of Information Act was written at a time when the government owned only 45 computers, not today's tens of thousands. As a result, information sought under the act often came on paper — of less and less use to journalists and other investigators who now use the power of computers to extract meaning.

Congress acted this week to bring FOIA (pronounced foya) up to date.

The new Electronic FOIA (inevitably, "e–foya"), passed without dissent by House and Senate and is awaiting President Clinton's expected signature. It prods federal agencies to share their data electronically when that's what the requester wants.

Why does that matter?

Consider Tom Blanton, who runs the National Security Archive at George Washington University, a nongovernmental library of government documents.

Blanton wanted to publish the White House e–mail written by Oliver North and others in the Reagan–Bush years and accumulated on 5,907 computer tapes and disc drives.

For four years, the Reagan and Bush administrations resisted giving him the e–mail. When the government finally relented last year, these computer–created materials were delivered on paper — 2,500 pages of it — the least usable format for Blanton.

In the computer age, format is king. Tasks that can be done in seconds with a computer can take years when the information is on paper.

Case in point: Five years ago, the Miami Herald wanted to match the names of people with permits to carry concealed weapons against a list of school bus drivers.

No problem, said the state of Florida, but it provided the list on paper — yards and yards of paper. That ruled out a computer match of drivers and permit holders. The project had to be abandoned, recalls Nora Paul, who at the time was the Herald's editor for information services.

Since the Herald was dealing with the state government, the federal law wouldn't cover that situation. But it will remove barriers erected in Washington.

The bill would compel agencies, which receive about 600,000 FOIA requests a year, to release information in the format requested, whenever possible — computer diskette, CD–ROM or the Internet, for example. Its passage culminates a five–year effort by Sen. Patrick Leahy (D–Vt.)

"Many federal agencies regard requests for electronic data as an excuse for delay or denial, saying that to produce records in electronic form is tantamount to creating new records, which the law exempts them from having to do," says Paul McMasters, a First Amendment champion at a nonprofit foundation, Freedom Forum. "Some government workers feel the information belongs to them and citizens are just interlopers."

In recent months, FOIA requests have generated news stories on Federal Aviation Administration actions against Valujet before the May 11 crash in Florida's Everglades; the government's treatment of South Vietnamese commandos recruited by the CIA; the salaries paid independent counsels; the amount of lead in the tap water in Washington, D.C. and the types of tax cases the IRS recommends for criminal prosecution.

But FOIA is not just a reporter's tool. Most requests come from businesses, scholars, citizens with tax troubles, aliens trying to keep from being booted out, prisoners, city and state governments, public interest groups — anybody with a yen for information the government has gathered.

E–FOIA also directs agencies to give priority to requests in which a delay would threaten someone's life or safety. Next in line would come the news media and others in the business of disseminating information to the public.

News agencies now often go to the end of the line, which can mean years could pass before information sought for a news story is provided.

The bill also provides for putting far more government information on the Internet computer network and publishing indexes of information previously released to FOIA requesters.

Workshop series to focus on family issues

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

A series of dinnertime workshops focusing on issues affecting community and student parents is being offered by the Amherst Family Center (AFC) and the University of Massachusetts Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC) in collaboration with local restaurants.

"This program is very unique," said JoAnn Levenson, director of CSHRC. "This is the first program in which the University has worked with AFC to focus on family needs."

AFC Director Liz Levowitz said, "The program will provide parents with the information and resources involving ways of coping with family issues."

Free childcare, transportation and dinner will be made available to the parents.

The three hour workshop schedule includes dinner from 6 to 7 p.m., an hour and a half seminar on a family oriented topic and then dessert and parent networking to end the workshop.

"As a student parent, I think the program will be incredibly helpful," said CSHRC member Susan Durkee.

The topics will include "Choosing a child care provider: options and affordability," "Making apartment life work for families," "Single parenting: addressing your challenges and concerns," and "Parent support: Formal and informal networks."

Two UMass staff members will be assisting in the program. Judy Davis from Counseling and Academic Development will be giving a seminar on "Family stress: who is responsible for what in a household." While Director of Childcare Services Maryann Gallagher will be discussing, "Fun for everyone: play and reading as family activities."

"This is an opportunity for parents to meet other parents and realize that they are not the only one who have questions," said Gallagher. "It is always so valuable for parents to develop dialogue and get information about parenting."

Judie's, located in Amherst center, will be one of the locations of the first dinners.

"Not only will the parents not have to cook for a night, they'll learn how to make their life easier," said Levenson.

There is a limit of 20 parents for each workshop. Each parent will work with a parent mentor who will provide individual attention and information.

The workshops will be held at the AFC on seven consecutive Monday evenings beginning Sept. 30, from 6 to 9 p.m.

For any student parent who attends all of the workshops, up to three independent study credits are available through late add registration.

Parents interested in the program can contact CSHRC, located in the Student Union, and speak with either Levenson or Durkee.

"I'm very excited about the program," said Levenson. "It is going to be a lot of fun."

"Hopefully we will have good turnout and the parents will find the program helpful," said Levowitz. "If there is a need, we will find a way to do this again."

The program was funded by a mini–grant from the Massachusetts Department of Education and the Hampshire County Family Network.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Rain, rain go away...
Students waited for the bus in front of Haigis Mall in the rain yesterday.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

So many to choose from...

Jenn Scheck, a senior English major, looks through the stacks of posters that were being sold in the Student Union yesterday afternoon.

THE LAUNDRY CLUB

The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!

The Club Med of Laundromats

COUPON

$1.00 OFF Any Size Washer

Limit 1 Coupon Per Visit

Expires October 19, 1996

1.50 Washers
3.25 triple loaders
.25¢ every 8 min drying

- Coin Operated Washers and Dryers
- State of the Art Machines
- Snack Bar
- Big Screen T.V.
- Pool Table and Video Games
- Senior Citizen Discount

Dry Cleaning

8am - 11pm • 7 days • Last Wash 9:30pm

6 University Drive - Next to Victory - Amherst (413) 549-2640

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Sept. 19

Volunteers Needed — MASSPIRG is looking for volunteers for the semester. Decorate boxes for a local food drive, 7 p.m., room 432A of the Student Union. For more info, call Amanprit at 545–0199.

Meeting — UMass Bicycle Racing Club invites anyone interested in racing for them to attend this week's meeting at 7:30 p.m. in room 917 in the Campus Center. The club also meets for rides in front of the Newman Center Mon–Fri at 2 p.m., Sat. & Sun. at noon. Anyone not interested in racing is still encouraged to attend group rides.

Meeting — The sisters of Iota Gamma Upsilon are sponsoring an open house from 7–8 p.m. at 406 North Pleasant St. For more information or a ride, call Laura or Sara at 549–6461.

Meeting — UMass chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha (National Political Science Honor Society) will hold their first general chapter meeting of the semester in the 6th floor lounge of Thompson from 6–7:30 p.m. All political science majors and minors are encouraged to attend.

GEO Social — For all Graduate Students and employees, from 6–9 p.m., Campus Center room 1009. There will be free hors d'oeuvres, a full cash bar, and family and friends are welcome. For more information, contact Emilie at 545–0705 or 545–5317.

Friday, Sept. 20

Workshop — The Alliance Christian Fellowship's weekly workshops, TimeOut, will be held at 7 p.m. in room 176 of the Campus Center. TimeOut this week is a Worship Special, featuring a full band. Mark Lloyd will also speak on reaching people with and through the power of Christ.

Saturday, Sept. 21

Music — The Hooked on Swing Society presents Blue Rendezvous at the Northampton Center for the Arts, located at the intersection of Rts. 9 and 10, opposite the gates of Smith College. The $9 admission includes a free dance lesson with local instructor Jacqueline Maidana at 7:30 and a dance from 8:30–11:30 p.m. The next dance will be held on Saturday, Oct. 19. For more information, call 1–800–206–4700.

Sunday, Sept. 22

Meeting — UMass Ski Club's first general meeting, Campus Center room 163C, 7 p.m. All interested skiers and snowboarders welcome. For more information, contact the UMass Ski club, 430 Student Union, or at 545–3437.

Notices

Dancing — Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings from 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed, all ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Five College–REFLECT, the Five College Bereavement Support Program is a student organization devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8 week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in Photo, Layout, Copy, and Marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held on Wednesdays at 7 p.m., 304 Student Union, or call 545–0848 if interested.

Opening — The Sunderland Congregational Church, located at the corner of Rts. 47 and 116, has opened the Serendipity Shoppe in the church basement. It carries quality used clothes and accessories for all ages at thrift shop prices. All clothes are now on clearance and a sweater sale will run through October. Hours are Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a.m.–noon. The shop is located on the UMass (Sunderland) bus route.

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club will begin auditions from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. For more information, call 546–2771 or 546–1318.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence; teen–dating violence; date rape; sexual harassment; domestic violence and children; and many more. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538–9717.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientation are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays starting in September. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing at 1 p.m. at the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month will free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, and free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday from 8:30 p.m. to midnight every Friday. People can dance to a variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584–8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held on Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous will hold weekly meetings on Thursdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Campus Center, and from 2 to 3:30 p.m. at St. Bridget's Church Parish Hall, 2nd floor. The group is for individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more information, call Kim at 548–9902, Jennifer at 548– 9040 or Maryanne at 549–5957.

UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
NOTICE:
TO UNDERGRAD SPORT MANAGEMENT MAJORS

THE ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE IS SEEKING RESPONSIBLE WORKERS FOR HOME FOOTBALL GAMES FOR THE 1996 SEASON.

POSITIONS INCLUDE, BUT ARE NOT LIMITED TO:
PARKING ATTENDANTS
USHERS
TICKET SELLERS
TICKET TAKERS
TAILGATE SECURITY

THERE WILL BE A MEETING FOR ALL THOSE INTERESTED ON THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19 AT 5:30PM AT WARREN MCGUIRK ALUMNI STADIUM, AT THE TOP OF SECTION 6. TH

Summer is over but the sales are still HOT at LIQUORS 44!

LIQUORS 44

Don't Drink and Drive

Miller GENUINE DRAFT — REGULAR & LIGHT CASE 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLE $9.99 + DEP
10 PACK Coors — REGULAR & LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.49 + DEP
16 OZ. Budweiser — CASE OF 24-16 OZ. BOTTLES REGULAR & LIGHT $13.99 + DEP
PETE'S WICKED — OKTOBERFEST (ALL FLAVORS) 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
LABATTS — BEER, ALE, ICE CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $15.49 + DEP
CIDER JACK — 6 PACK BOTTLE $4.99
EVERYDAY LOW PRICE
1/2 KEGS — BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE, LTD, MICH, MICH LT., MICH AMBER ROCK, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
TURNING LEAF — CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, WHITE ZINFANDEL, ZINFANDEL, FUME BLANC 750 L $4.99
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE — CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $10.99
VENDANGE — WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5L $5.49
CONCHA Y' TORO — ALL FLAVORS 1.5L $5.49
ESTANCIA — CHARDONNAY 750 ML $7.99
JACK DANIELS COUNTRY COCKTAILS — ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. $3.49

POLAND SPRINGS VODKA 1.75L $8.49
BURNETT'S GIN 1.75L $11.49
DEWARS WHITE LABEL SCOTCH 1.75 L $27.99
SEAGRAMS V.O. 1.75L SALE 18.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $13.49
OLD GRAND DAD 86° 1.75L $20.99
ABSOLUT CITRON 750 ML $13.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 9/19/96 THRU WEDS. 9/25/96

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Amber Waves

FAR EAST — Asian noodle soups, salads & stir-fries — 63 Main St. 253-9200
MID EAST — Arabian delights salads & sandwiches — 31 Boltwood Walk 253-9299

OCMP Delivery Express

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST

Since 1984 La Cazuela has been winning acclaim and awards for its hand made cooking and outstanding design. We prepare food that is representative of fine dining in the many regions of Mexico and the American Southwest. Our menu changes seasonally to take advantage of the freshest available foods and to reflect the cultural traditions of the food we serve. We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection and the warm hospitality that reflects a western heritage. Please join us.

Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage

LIVE RIGHT EAT WELL COOK WITH CHILES!

Long DC lines due to staff shortage

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

This fall, the Dining Commons at the University of Massachusetts have extended their hours in an attempt to make on–campus food services more accessible.

However, many students have complained recently that longer hours have resulted in longer lines.

"The lines at Worcester [Dinning Common] were never this long," said sophomore plant and soil science major Jason Luncher. "Now, I have to plan when I go so I can avoid the lines."

The administration contends that is a normal circumstance at the beginning of any semester.

"There are always long lines the first 3 or 4 weeks of the semester," said Richard Rossi, Director of Food Services.

According to Rossi, the dinning commons are not yet fully staffed because students have yet to seek employment there. Also, an early retirement incentive offered by the university to Food Services employees resulted in a professional staff short by 20 people.

Rossi, who has worked in food services for 20 years, said the lines are not any longer now then they are at the beginning of any previous semesters.

"We hire a lot of freshmen and it usually takes them two or three weeks to get adjusted," said Rossi.

He added that often paper plates and cups are used due to lack of staff.

Food Services is trying to adjust to the loss of workers and increased hours by having more meals self served, Rossi said.

While he does not have the official numbers yet, Rossi said he believes more students are on the meal plan than the previous year.

John Williams, a junior math major said "it's good that the [dining common] is open all the time but we need more of a choice than just pizza," commenting on Stone Willy's Pizza, which opened in the Worcester Dining Common.

According to Ashoke Ganguli, Director of Auxiliary Services, the decision to keep the dining commons open continuously from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., was in response to a motion passed by the Student Government Association (SGA), calling for extended food services hours.

"Now students can come in at almost anytime during the day," Ganguli said.

SGA Secretary of Administrative Affairs Rob McDonald, who, as a senator, negotiated with Food Services over the hours of operation, said he is pleased with the changes.

"I am happy with the hours," McDonald said. "Once people get used to the hours, the lines will probably get shorter."

Several polls indicate Clinton in lead

By Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Far more voters believe President Clinton would do better than Bob Dole handling issues they find most important — the economy and education — helping Clinton to a 13-point lead in a poll released yesterday.

Another national survey found Clinton leading by 17 percentage points, countering earlier evidence that the presidential race might be tightening.

While crime and drugs vaulted to the forefront of the presidential campaign this week, only one voter in 10 called that the most important election issue in an NBC-Wall Street Journal poll Sept. 12-17, and Clinton and Dole were rated equally able to deal with those problems.

But a national CBS News poll released yesterday found Clinton with an advantage on both counts. Asked who would do better reducing crime, 45 percent of registered voters said Clinton, 34 percent Dole. And Clinton had a closer 42-38 lead as the better drug-fighter.

By 47 percent to 39 percent, Americans said the Clinton administration generally has not done a good job on the drug problem. But the Republican Bush administration scored slightly worse on that question in June 1992.

Only 11 percent say the Clinton administration should take most of the blame for the reported recent increase in drug use by teens; 58 percent mostly blame parents.

Thirty percent of Americans told the CBS survey they have tried marijuana — including roughly equal numbers of Democrats and Republicans.

CBS interviewed 1,182 adults, including 878 registered voters, by telephone Monday and Tuesday. The margin of sampling error was plus or minus 3 percentage points for either group.

In the NBC-Journal poll of 1,623 registered voters (error margin 2.5 points either way), 51 percent said they would vote for Clinton and Al Gore if the election were today, 38 percent for Dole and Jack Kemp, and 5 percent for the Reform Party's Ross Perot and Pat Choate.

Clinton led 44-33 over Dole when voters were asked who would do a better job dealing with the economy and 51-28 on education. Dole edged Clinton 39-34 on the deficit and 41-36 on taxes. But 23 percent of voters cited jobs and the economy as the issue most important to them in their voting for Congress and president this year, and 18 percent said that of education; 15 percent cited the deficit and 9 percent said taxes.

Clinton also was favored 50-33 on the other top issue, health care and Medicare, cited by 14 percent as most important.

Meanwhile, in a rolling average of CNN-USA Today-Gallup polls Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights, Clinton got 52 percent, Dole 35 percent and Perot 5 percent

The gap had been 14 points in Gallup results released Tuesday, compared with as much as 23 points last week. Similarly, an ABC News poll Sept. 11-15 found Clinton up by 8 points compared with 15 points the week before. However, any differences between the surveys were statistically slight, and the Gallup results overall have been steady all month.

The new Gallup poll reached 731 likely voters and had a 4-point error margin.

FDA rules RU–486 safe and effective

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The drug RU-486, an alternative method of abortion to surgery, passed its last major hurdle yesterday on the way to becoming available to women in the United States.

The Food and Drug Administration said that the controversial French pill was safe and effective when used under a doctor's close supervision. But the FDA withheld final approval until it receives more information about how the drug would be manufactured and labeled.

It should be in doctors' offices by mid- to late-1997, said Sandra Waldman, spokeswoman for the Population Council, the nonprofit group that has the U.S. rights to market the drug. The drug, already used by 200,000 European women, has long been the focus of an emotional debate between abortion rights supporters and abortion opponents, who argue that making the drug available in the privacy of doctors' offices will increase the number of U.S. abortions.

The FDA sent a letter requesting further information yesterday to the council, which in March began the process to get approval for the drug, known chemically as mifepristone.

Such letters are a common, usually minor, hurdle in the approval process.

"We are sure we will be able to provide the FDA the outstanding information necessary for approval," the council said in a statement.

Once the FDA gets answers to its questions, it has up to six months to review the information.

Abortion opponents accused the Clinton administration of rushing the approval process for political rather than sound medical reasons.

"We have no idea what the long-term impact on women's health will be by this politically motivated push to get this chemical into American women's bodies," said Kristi Hamrick, spokeswoman for the conservative Family Research Council.

Tougher rhetoric came from Randall Terry, founder of Operation Rescue. "The FDA is participating in the chemical assassination of innocent people," he said in a statement.

The decision was hailed by abortion rights supporters, who predicted it will help end the days when women arriving for abortions have to pass through anti-abortion rallies outside clinics.

"It's a new era of choice for American women," said Margaret Conway, vice president for public policy at Planned Parenthood. "American women have been waiting for years for this approval. They're ready for this."

To induce an abortion, the pregnancy-ending pill is followed two days later by another pill that causes strong uterine contractions to expel the fetus. The process can be painful and cause bleeding. It must be monitored closely, requiring three separate doctor exams for safety.

FDA officials would not give details of the information they still seek, saying that is considered proprietary information. Labeling questions usually involve instructions and warnings for patients and doctors.

The council also would not say what the FDA was seeking.

"Some things are easily accommodated in a couple of weeks or a couple of months," Waldman said. "Others will take longer."

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

What's that I see?

Students trecked through a downpour of rain yesterday to get to their classes.

NEED IT? FIND IT!
Find what your looking for in the Collegian Classifieds

Study Abroad Florence London Syracuse

SYRACUSE STUDY ABROAD

- Generous grants & academic scholarships
- Coursework, internships & more
- Business programs in 3 countries
- Placement in foreign universities

ZIMBABWE • ENGLAND • ITALY
HONG KONG • SPAIN • FRANCE

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY • 119 Euclid Avenue • Syracuse, NY 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472 • DIPA@suadmin.syr.edu • http://sumweb.syr.edu/dipa

CELEBRATE THE RHYTHMS OF LIFE
1996/1997 SEASON
FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Stomp, Grease, The Festival of Tibet, The San Francisco Mime Troupe, Having Our Say, The Everett Dance Theatre . . . From dance to music to theater and beyond, some of the best performances in the world are as close as the Fine Arts Center stage. And for only $5 a ticket, you can't afford not to take your seat.

So what are you waiting for? Come see what the noise is all about!

For tickets and information on our full season

ALL THIS FOR 5 BUCKS A SEAT? GET BUSY!

THE FINE ARTS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Don't Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!

Marshall
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center

- Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
- Users of Sikkens paint products
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.

256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

Over ~500~ Microbrews

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER

Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

MICROBREWS
Oregon Summer Gold $4.99/six
Harpoon I.P.A., Ale, Alt, Pilsner $4.99/six Mill City (Lowell, MA) Ale, I.P.A., Porter, Wheat $4.99/six
Berkshire Brewing, Co. (S.Deerfield, MA) 64 oz. Bottle, Pale Ale, X-tra Pale Ale, Porter $3.99
1/2 keg Evil Eye Honey Brown, Amber, Black & Tan, Raspberry Wheat $55.00
1/2 keg Sam Adams Cherry Wheat $85.00

BEER SPECIALS
Bud Dry case bottles $9.99
Bud 16 oz. Bottles $14.99/case
Keystone Light 30-Pack $10.99
Molson Golden & Ice 12 Pack Cans & Bottles $7.99

LIQUOR SPECIALS
Pussers Rum $7.99/750ml
Gordons Vodka $5.99/750ml
Jim Beam $8.99/750ml
Kahlua $12.99/750ml

SODA SPECIAL
Coke, Diet Coke, Sprite, Fresca, Cherry Coke, Canada Dry $6.99/case+dep

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses

Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

WMUA New Person Meeting

Interested in Music, News, Sports, Sales, Production?

Thursday September 19 at 7pm
Campus Center Rm 101

Get Involved

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Gregory Cusimir Co-Black Affairs Editor Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mike McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Michael Elliot News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor Position Vacant Librarian
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

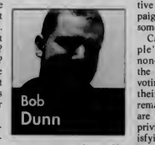
Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

"THE WORLD WILL LITTLE NOTE NOR LONG REMEMBER WHAT IS SAID HERE TODAY..."

Longshots are people too

See Ross run. Run, Ross, run.



Maybe not. You certainly won't be hearing him.

While Ross may run, the only hope you have of listening to the paranoid little nut-job is if you're one of the "fortunate" few to catch his 30 minute info spots or the random soundbites on the nightly news.

Why? you may ask.

The big kids don't want Ross hanging around. They took their bats and their balls and went onto the debate floor without him.

A bipartisan group has decided that they just don't want Perot hanging around during the debates because they've determined that he has no "realistic" chance of winning. End of story. Game over. Might as well not even bother showing up at the polls, huh? Why don't you do us all a favor, boys? Seeing as you were able to consult the Oracle at Delphi and accurately predict exactly who won't win, why not save us the time and trouble and just hand over the crown right now?

Bob Dunn

Aside from rattling Perot's cage, the decision sets a scary precedent for future campaigns.

While we like to think of this country as simply a two party system, there are now at least four registered, running parties, and apparently now, at least two of those are being gagged, tagged, bagged, and tossed out with the morning's garbage. Out of sight, out of mind.

Sure, beyond the Reform Party, Libertarians, Republicans and Democrats, the field of parties gets fractioned, as well as a little extreme. Many political movements have their own campaign running, either as simply a protest vote, or as a bona fide campaign but, frankly, without a chance to win.

But why do these lesser-known parties have such a snowball's chance? Probably because no one gets to hear them in the first place.

The logistics of inviting everyone to a debate are impossible, but why not set some minimum eligibility requirements to allow some of the newer parties into the forum, but not completely clog the stage with the candidate representing the "People for the Ethical Treatment of Writing Implements (PETWI)", party, or other such nonsense?

How about once a party's membership reaches a certain number, allow them in the debate? Or why not take the five largest parties, then have polls determine the winners, (similar to the primaries), and slowly whittle the field down until two remain, maintaining the integrity of the system without bogging it down in wasted time and precious advertising dollars?

Does anyone else get shivers thinking about this? I mean, conceivably, it's a small leap of logic from predetermining a loser to predetermining a winner. Election by exclusion. Have some small, unknown, supposedly objective group creating a custom-made campaign. The new, unknown, or those with something different to say need not apply.

Campaigns aren't made to change people's minds. They're made to lure the non-committed. Probably 80 percent of the electorate already knows who they're voting for. Probably half of those made up their minds on election night 1992. The remainder simply don't know yet, and they are the ones who are losing out. The two privileged candidates obviously aren't satisfying the undecided electorate, so why close off avenues of new information to them? In a country supposedly founded, in part, on the ideals of inclusion, new ideas and debate, it smacks of hypocrisy to slam the door and exclude someone with new ideas from a debate.

So, for the benefit of readers and mysterious bipartisan committees alike, here's a short list of those who were also not given a snowball's chance, and (according to this mysterious body politic, anyway) should have been shut out of whatever forum they were participating in:

The '69 Mets, Jim Abbott (of California Angels fame), David (of Goliath fame), the Boston Red Sox from 1919 to the present, even our own lauded Minutemen have had their share of doubters since their entrance into the limelight.

Some won, some lost, but they all got their shot, they weren't left out simply because the numbers didn't crunch right or the odds seemed too steep.

Keeping someone out of the game because they're presumed to not have a realistic chance is a self-fulfilling prophecy. What's forgotten is sometimes longshots come in.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Exploring the party scene

Dan Bodah

OK folks, last week I said I'd find out about the parties no one's ever heard of who have candidates running this fall, and about the issues and positions that will be on the ballot in Massachusetts.

So to start off, here's the list of positions you will see if you vote in November: U.S. President & Vice President, U.S. Senator (a 6 year position), U.S. Representative, Governor's Council, State Senator, State Representative, and Register of Probate. In most areas outside of Hampshire County (which includes Northampton, Hadley, and Amherst) there will also be County Commissioner and County Treasurer elected.

Frankly, I'm not sure what several of these positions even are; anyone know what the Register of Probate does? But don't think they're not important. The Christian Coalition does methodically run grassroots campaigns for obscure regional and local positions as a way of building a wide power base. Often there's no real competition, especially because the voters are mostly mesmerized by the televised spectacle of supposedly "crucial" positions like governor or president. Local officials can wield a good deal of power though. More on these positions later, though.

Parties running in the U.S. Presidential campaign this year include: Democratic, Green, Libertarian, Natural Law, Reform, Republican, Socialist Workers, and U.S. Taxpayers. More than just chocolate and vanilla here, maybe. What flavor does the Natural Law party get to be? How about fat- and sugar-free cappuccino? Let's take a look:

The Natural Law party's platform (http://www.natural-law.org/) includes a strong focus on what they term "prevention." They make an analogy between social and individual stress and malaise, and propose to "treat" social problems much like a health specialist would treat a patient.

Some of these proposals are refreshing to see. Sensible and long overdue ideas such as a coalition government with representatives from many parties, encouragement of sustainable agriculture, converting pollution-spewing industry jobs into jobs working to cleanup pollution and develop practical renewable energy sources and extensive electoral reforms such as eliminating the electoral college, providing equal public funding for all candidates and eliminating special-interest funding.

Yet as the Natural Law party focuses on basic shifts toward a sustainable economic and educational structure for the U.S., they ignore or deal inadequately with a number of important considerations. There is no mention of what I hear growing numbers of people most concerned about: corporate control of the political process. There is only the faintest hint of a reference to racial and class struggles which are at the heart of this country as much as, if not more than, baseball, mom, and apple pie.

The reality that Natural Law doesn't touch on has to do with the systematic elimination of freedom and enforcement of servitude on all but the elite classes. This is the reality. Our political system itself serves to perpetuate the reality of CONTROL, writ big. What we have been propagandized by compulsory education and years of television newscasts into believing to be representative democracy is nothing of the sort.

We live in an oligarchical state controlled by a small, minority class which appropriates all the wealth it can for itself. No vote in an election will change this. At most we can vote to cause slight changes in the length of our leash. The people in power are not the rulers we elect, but the economic rulers whose interests are indistinguishable from what our government refers to as "American interest." That we, the people who live in the Americas, should actually be unleashed and free is unthinkable. That we should unite across racial and class lines to demand self-rule is a nightmare to be avoided.

As long as there is an election-circus being held, I might as well go and cast my worthless ballot. But I won't pretend it's going to make any difference, which is why I'm writing in what I believe: No Confidence.

Next time: the Libertarian Party, how to cast a write-in ballot, and cooperative alternatives to capitalist oligarchy.

Dan Bodah is a UMass student.

Pawns and kings

This column is not about Tupac Shakur.

Rather, the tragically slain rapper/actor is just a blown cog in this machine, if you will. He is an important factor in the big equation, yet one who nonetheless is a pawn in the game.

However, it does start with performers like Shakur, and always has.

Go back 50 years, and you'd find in many films the young, talented and intelligent Paul Robeson trapped in roles of a Stepin Fetchit nature. These demeaning stereotypical portrayals were a burden for years to come, as actors like Harry Belafonte, Dorothy Dandridge and Sidney Poitier battled against Hollywood to buck the belief of many black actors that such parts were the best available.

C. Taylor Conner

Fast forward to the mid '80s. Rap is recognized as a marketable format by record companies. Most acts are harmless in lyrical content during this period, the notable exception being Public Enemy. However, with the release of NWA's Straight Outta Compton, a new genre perceived by many music execs as threatening emerges — gangsta rap.

Ironically, the concept of gangsta rap is not all that different from the bleak urban outlook of earlier performers like Gil Scott-Heron and Curtis Mayfield. The same rage, frustration and cynicism is communicated, though the new artists are characteristically more explicit and aggressive.

However, two things have changed: management and MTV.

The major black-owned and run player in the business, Motown, would never touch most rap with a 10-foot pole — the same was true of the other big guns. So, like many alternative bands, many rap and hip-hop acts formed small independent labels, most of which were black-run, in the hopes of being picked up by some offshoot of a major label. When rap was finally found to be a moneymaking genre, many were.

When MTV decided in the late '80s to officially acknowledge the existence of black acts other than Michael Jackson, Prince or Aerosmith-aided Run DMC, rap gained exposure which revealed it to a largely untapped market.

So, where does that leave things in the present?

Whereas Warner was hasty to drop Ice-T from its roster four years ago following the "Cop Killer" uproar, many of rap's most controversial artists are now protected by a major label offshoot or a successful independent label (many of which are run by former major label producers/artists). Add to the equation the relatively cheap production costs of rap albums, and all of a sudden a little Bob Dole or William Bennett flak isn't such a costly matter anymore.

These days, the formula for a profitable rap or R&B album is still as fairly simple as it was for the folks at Motown or Stax/Volt: repeat the beats the kids like. And don't forget videos now. Yet, who could have predicted the territorial ludicrousness that has emerged in the last few years?

True, we always knew New York was home to LL Cool J, Texas to the Geto Boys and California to Dr. Dre. But the East/West rivalry and its continuing escalation has become more than just the publicity stunt many believed it to be, best evidenced by the well-documented Suge Knight/Puffy Combs dispute.

Yet, Knight and Combs, though sovereign of any white record company, have become just as reprehensible as those white movie studio heads who cast Paul Robeson in those demeaning roles. It's pretty clear that they're willing to sacrifice talent — and lives — to continue what are ultimately Machiavellian endeavors and tired stereotypes.

And so the life of one of those talents, albeit one who may have had a death wish anyway, comes to an abrupt end.

My two cents worth, Suge and Puffy: take a cue from the mature Dr. Dre — quit the game now, because in chess, even kings don't have too many moves before they fall.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

What to do after school

To the class of 1997 I ask, what do you want to do when you grow up? Or should I say, when you graduate? Yes, it is time to take a break from planning out your weekend of bar hopping across Amherst. I know that it is our last year (if all goes according to plan, right?) and most of us are 21. Therefore we can now drink within the binds of the law. I, as much as all of you, am hoping to live it up this year too. It's almost like freshman year relived.

David K. Chan

There are many different things I want to do with my life. One of the first things I've got to do is lower my cholesterol level. After punishing my health with four years of UMass food, I've got to put some years back into my life. This should take awhile, but so will accomplishing everything I plan to do.

I'm going to first try to write the great human novel. It'll require about five years of roaming the earth and lots of translation dictionaries. Then I figure it'll take about a year to write it and get published. After I get some fame and earn my poetic license, I'll publish all my Collegian columns in a four book volume set. I'll change my name into a symbol so the books will be under the columnist formerly known as David Chan. I wonder how libraries will shelf those books.

With my first fortune accomplished, I will then proceed with my entrepreneurial dreams of starting my own small advertising company with 12 of the most whacked and creative minds of Generation X. I've already had secret meetings with just a few other people who agreed to be in with me, so there are still openings left. While I help produce wild commercials for Fortune 100 companies, I'll also continue with my love of writing as a columnist for The Boston Globe. For this position I'll rechange my name back to d.k. chan. But this time, it'll be lower case letters, like e.e. cummings.

Once my company becomes a multi-billion dollar advertising machine, I'll sell my position and keep a large sum of shares — like Liz Claiborne. From there, I'll go to Hong Kong and become an actor. I'll fulfill my life long dream of meeting Jackie Chan and being in one of his movies. In every Hong Kong movie, I can play the role of the thug that speaks English. That'll be easy. Once I get my acting skills down, I'll take up some serious voice lessons from Michael Crawford and move on to be the phantom in Phantom of the Opera. It won't be too hard for me to learn since I know the Phantom's script anyway. I'll probably only tour the world for about a year.

After my brief stint with glamour and fame, I'll join the regular workforce as a buyer of women's fashion retail. I don't know which department store company I'd work for yet, but it'll be upscale. It'll be just like what I did the summer of '96 but this time, I get to go to cool fashion shows. I can't allow all my knowledge of women's fashion to go to waste, especially after taking all that time off to do movies. I figure by this time I would miss working with women's clothes.

When it's all said and done, I'll go back to school. Except this time I'll have money with me to experience it with style. I'll get my doctorate in either marketing or economics. I may even go to seminary school too. Basically when I retire, and I figure I'll be in my 50s by this time, I just want to teach and do black and white photography. While teaching just a couple of courses at Stanford or UMass, I'd like to be a pastor too. Yep, that's right. During my summer breaks, I'll write expensive books for my courses and I'll take pictures of little kids. Kind of like Kim Anderson cards. But I'll have to change my name to David Pierre because I don't think anyone would buy a David Chan card or poster. Unless I'm still famous.

David K. Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the editor

In defense of Camby

After reading C.F. Gorospe's editorial (9/17), I realized that the Collegian editors obviously don't screen editorials before printing them. I've complained about Collegian editorials in the past, but this one really took the cake. The editorial, in addition to being poorly written, was very insulting to an important member of our campus, Marcus Camby.

Most sports journalists and editorialists have run for the moral high ground, pointing fingers at Marcus. Marcus had to maintain the role of student, athlete, and good Samaritan. His personal life and grades were under the media microscope. For example, if another student at UMass were to become drunk and require medical attention, the incident would probably go unnoticed. If Marcus were to do the same thing, the front page of the Boston Globe would scream: "Camby caught inebriated: Minutemen are all drunks!"

Marcus technically made a "mistake," and unfortunately, he did leave for the NBA. But he doesn't owe the UMass community anything. He gave us a Final Four appearance. He earned thousands of dollars in revenue for the Commonwealth. And he has every right to pursue millions of dollars.

C.F. Gorospe doesn't agree with this point of view, and I can respect that. However, I don't respect the condescending attitude present in the editorial. I'm sure that there are more tasteful ways of representing a point of view.

I'd also like to thank C.F. Gorospe for the beautiful explanation on the current state of welfare. Maybe I should drop out of school and get on welfare so I can "buy big boats" and "play ball all day long." I'd also like to offer C.F. Gorospe a minor suggestion: layoff the rhetorical questions. It's difficult enough to understand your arguments.

Neil Grover
Southwest

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday September 19, 1996

Weekend Edition • Volume CVI Issue 12

HIGH ON HEMP

Hemp Lady on high road to Oval Office

Pot smokers rejoice and get high. Your savior (no, not Jerry Garcia) is here — in the form of 70 year-old former Franciscan nun, Caroline P. Killeen.

The New Hampshire native is running for President of the United States for the fifth time, as a write-in candidate. Her platform calls for legalization of hemp for recreational, medicinal, therapeutic and industrial uses. Meet the Hemp Lady.

While President Clinton and Bob Dole debate endlessly on welfare and taxes, Killeen takes a radical approach to political campaigning. By focusing solely on the legalization of hemp, she hopes to prove to Washington's career politicians that the legalization of hemp is a major issue for young Americans.

"This campaign is a strategy to blip the polls," Killeen said. "We can get the hemp issue on the screen by getting two or three percentage points [in the presidential election] for the hemp issue which is being ignored by Perot, Dole and Clinton. It is sad they ignore hemp since it is so needed in today's world."

On the Road

Killeen's campaign tour took a turn into the Pioneer Valley last week as she drove her 1978 Ford Club Wagon, popularly dubbed the Hemp-mobile onto campus. The "broken down" van, covered with catchy slogans including: "Let Clinton Inhale" and "Honk For Hemp" serves as both Killeen's mobile home and campaign office. Although this may not sound as glamorous as Air Force One, the Hemp-mobile is a step up from her previous campaign vehicle — a $40 bicycle that has crisscrossed America more times than your average Deadhead.

While Clinton and Dole are raking in millions of dollars in campaign contribution, the Hemp Lady is forced to a more grass roots (no pun intended) approach by making appearances at popular youth gatherings.

"I went to the July 4th hemp fest in Washington D.C. and gave a little speech. Then on the 18th of August I attended the hemp fest in Sparks, Me., and raised about $400 at each festival by selling my stickers," Killeen said, while displaying two stickers that read "Hemp Lady '96" and "Honk Hemp" which she sells for $1 and $2 respectively. So far, this has been her only source of campaign money besides her $310 monthly social security check.

Not surprisingly the lack of campaign funds has severely limited her recognition value, though she has appeared in Time, Boston Globe, Details and High Times. Not bad for a "Mickey Mouse campaign," as Killeen described her own efforts.

Killeen's work is definitely cut out ahead of her. "I am hampered in the fact that I am still this one woman campaign. It is a big project to get the word out between now and Nov. 5," she said.

Her 1996 campaign trail began in New Hampshire where her name appeared on the ballot for the Democratic primary alongside Clinton and several other lesser known candidates. After paying a $1,000 fee to appear on the ballot, Killeen campaigned all over the state, garnering 393 votes.

Mike Burke

Why marijuana?

"The young generation, in order to cope with the very fast pace of life, sometimes needs to just lean back and mellow out during the day. This marijuana seems to fit the bill and it is safer than alcohol and it is therapeutic," Killeen said. "I have this motherly instinct and I feel for kids in this generation."

Killeen hopes she can reach the younger generation, a group that none of the presidential candidates has yet to firmly grasp.

She said, "the career politicians are not going to address [the hemp] issue and that is tyrannical and borders on treason."

But the apathy of Generation X upsets Killeen. "We have to give hope and confidence to the college and high school kids," she said. "They have to get involved in the political process... [I tell the kids] 'look we can [legalize hemp] now. You don't have to wait for ten years. You don't have to wait for the next presidential election. It can happen now.'"

Perhaps the most surprising aspect of Killeen's campaign is her past drug use. First of all, she doesn't use the word d- r-u-g to describe hemp. "I see it as an elixir — a tonic," she said.

Even more shocking, the Hemp Lady, who has dedicated years of her life to the cause, doesn't even smoke marijuana. She tried it once at a fraternity house in Gainesville, Fla. during her 1976 run for the presidency.

"I got a headache," she remembers.

"Marijuana has its purpose and its time... so does alcohol," Killeen said. "Everyday I look forward to a couple drinks in the afternoon — it is the same way with marijuana for the young."

Can hemp save the nation?

Killeen's stance on the legalization also closely ties into the nation's economy and environment.

"This is a plant that has been around for thousands of years; that has been a mainstay of our economy. In the 19th century, hemp was grown for the cloth, sails and rope," Killeen said. "During the Second World War, the navy put out signs saying 'Grow Hemp for the war effort' to

Turn to HEMP, page 9

UMass' Lenson backs legalization

Professor David Lenson, who teaches in the comparative literature department at the University of Massachusetts, has been chosen to speak at the seventh annual Freedom Rally, according to a Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition (MassCann) press release.

The Freedom Rally takes place on the Boston Common this Saturday, with an expected turnout of over 50,000 participants peacefully protesting the prohibition of marijuana. Lenson said that he is looking forward to, not only speaking, but joining the crowd to protest.

"I think the biggest problem with marijuana is that it's illegal," said Lenson, who's had several books published and whose most recent effort, On Drugs, uniquely takes on the point of view of the drug user.

"One of the worst by-products of the drug war is this campaign of disinformation," Lenson vented. As young people, "in the '60s, we were completely aware that all of the information that was being put out about drugs was utterly unreliable, and we paid no attention to it."

Beth McCarthy

As a rock and blues musician, who's played with talents such as John Lee Hooker, Buddy Guy and Junior Wells, Lenson remembers always being "surrounded by drugs and drug users."

This intricate man, playing educator/musician, is also raising a 5-year-old daughter. The fact that he has a child does not sway Lenson from his strong advocation of pot legalization.

"Parents like to fantasize that they're going to be able to control their children," said Lenson, reflecting on what he would do if his daughter decided to experiment.

"I'd like to see, when my daughter is a teenager, a world where accurate and reasonable information is available. Where education means learning and not just reciting slogans."

Lenson by no means, however, condones the use of drugs by children. He likes to envision "the best of all possible worlds" where "people wouldn't even consider experimenting with these things until they're fully grown."

At a time where the likelihood of these mass efforts succeeding looks dim, Lenson remains positive. He has witnessed the evolution of the movement from what used to be a band of "cocky anarchists" to one that is serious and motivated.

Lenson has noticed an increasing amount of conservatives, and those who could provide some influence, aligning themselves with the movement. Mel King, for example, will also be speaking at the Freedom Rally. King taught urban studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is an organizer at the Urban Health Center in Dorchester.

Lenson, himself, has earned his doctorate from Princeton College, as well as published several works including books of poetry and essays. He has also managed to devote much time to playing his saxophone with several bands, going as far as being recorded.

The end of prohibition of marijuana is not going to occur by itself, said Lenson, but "a whole range of alliances need to be made, and that range needs to keep

Turn to LENSON, page 8

Searching the web for drugs

The drug culture, like so many other groups, has found a home on the Internet. Innumerable web sites are available on the subjects of the legalization of drugs like marijuana and psychedelic mushrooms. Here are a few of the many sites.

Hyperreal
at http://www.hyperreal.com

Hyperreal is a great starter site for information on what it calls controlled "recreational" substances like ecstasy, mushrooms and pot. However, since the topic at hand is hemp and marijuana, the review will focus solely on these drugs.

The resources here are unbelievable. The page includes articles about how to consume pot and construct devices to smoke it. Cultivation is another useful subject. It also includes information on where to find headshops.

Tons of recipes are available on the site for people who prefer to eat marijuana rather than smoke it. Brownies are not the only recipes available, as the site includes recipes for drinks, cakes and even vegetarian stir fry.

Although the page is primarily concerned with recreational uses of drugs, the hemp section also includes medicinal and industrial uses. Another interesting attraction is the fiction section where there are short stories about pot use.

Hyperreal is not only filled with information on hemp, but it is extremely simple. Most of the information on the page comes from Frequently Asked Questions found on most drug related newsgroups.

B

The Lycaeum
at http://www.lycaeum.org/

People looking for more than information on how to grow and use hemp, might find the Lycaeum useful. Like Hyperreal, the Lycaeum is exclusively about recreational drugs like pot and psychedelic mushrooms; but unlike Hyperreal it includes much more than simple information.

Discussion forums are available where users can gather and examine recreational and medicinal uses of marijuana. The Lycaeum touts the forums as a great way for users layout & Design by MARC DOONE & MIKE BURKE. Photo courtesy Jon Jurras.

Turn to WEB, page 8

~ CALENDAR OF EVENTS ~

THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 19

Amherst College — Jonatha Brooke of the Story will perform at 8 p.m. in the Amherst College Frontroom. Tickets are $2 for Amherst students, $10 all others. For more info, call 586–8686.

Wheeler Gallery — "All Dressed Up and No Where To Go" opens tonight with reception from 5–7 p.m. Hours are Mon–Thu 4–8 p.m. and Sun 2–5 p.m. Wheeler Gallery is located in Wheeler Residential Hall. 545–0680.

FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 20

Mount Holyoke College Art Museum — The museum's current exhibition focuses on three contemporary abstract paintings. Works by Gregory Amenoff, John L. Moore and Katherine Porter will be on display at the museum until Dec. 13. Tomorrow, Amenoff will deliver a lecture titled "From the Grand Vision to the Intimate Moment: One Artist's Notes on American Landscape Painting." The lecture will be followed by an opening reception and jazz concert featuring the Tom McClung Duo. Regular hours are Tues–Fri 11 a.m.– 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday 1–5 p.m. 538–2245.

Pearl Street — Madball. An all ages punk show that also features Marauder, Grimlock, Tyrant Trooper and Action Will Be Taken. Show starts at 7:30 p.m. For more info call 584–7771.

SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 21

Greenough Residence Hall, UMass — Pest 5000, Incredible Force of Junior, Saturnine, Ribbon Candy and Star Ghost Dog will perform at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 for UMass students and $4 for all others. For more information call 665–7243.

COURTESY A. CORBIN

J.J. Cale will perform at Pearl Street this weekend.

Mikara's — Bluesy rockers, John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band. For more info call 796–7113.

Pearl Street — J.J. Cale will perform at 7 p.m. The show is 21+. Tickets are $14 in advance and $16 at the door. For more info call 584–7771.

Porter–Phelps–Huntington Museum — "Catharine Huntington: A Life of Art and Action," a dramatic reading by UMass Professor Emeritus Doris Abramson, will be presented at 8 p.m. in the Corn Barn Saturday, Sept. 21. Advance tickets are available for $15 and sponsor tickets are $25. The Porter–Phelps–Huntington Museum is located at 130 River Drive (Rt. 47) in Hadley. Regular museum hours are Sat–Wed, 1–4:30 p.m. 584–4699.

The Big E — Kathy Mattea will perform at 8 p.m. For more info call 737–2443.

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 22

Fine Arts Center — The Massachusetts Wind Orchestra, conducted by Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., will perform "Ultima Fantasia," a work by Amherst composer Robert Stern. Also included in the program will be Wagner's "Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral" and Grainger's "Irish Tune and Sheperd's Hey." Concert begins 3 p.m. in the Concert Hall at the FAC at the UMass campus. Tickets are $4 for senior citizens, students and children, $8 for the general public. UMass students are admitted free with a valid ID. Tickets available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office. 545–2511.

The Big E — Trisha Yearwood, Nashville's hottest superstar, will perform at 8 p.m. General Admission. For more information call 737–2443.

MONDAY SEPTEMBER 23

Pearl Street — Bob Mould will perform an 18+ show at 8 p.m. All cello rock trio Rasputina opens. Tickets are $12 in advance and $14 at the door.

The Big E — Peter Noone, best known as Herman from Herman's Hermits will perform today and tomorrow at 3 & 8 p.m. For more info call 737–2443.

TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 24

COURTESY DART RECORDS

Check out Saturnine this weekend at Greenough Residence Hall.

COURTESY UNIVERSITY GALLERY

Daisy Youngblood's "Shy Horse," on exhibit at the University Gallery.

Academy of Music — The David Grisman Quartet, known for his work with the Grateful Dead, plays at 8 p.m. For more info call 586–8686.

WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 25

Ironhorse — Rock the Vote showcase featuring Moe, Moonboot Lover, Ominous Seapods and Yolk. Tickets are $12 in advance and $14 at the door. For more info call the club at 584–0610.

Augusta Savage Gallery — Upcoming photography exhibition titled "How Many Witnesses?" by Ellen Eisenman opens Sept. 25. Reception is 5–7 p.m. Gallery hours are Mon–Tue 1–7 p.m., Wed–Fri 1–5 p.m. The Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the New Africa House. 545–5177.

ONGOING EVENTS

Hampden Gallery— Hampden Gallery starts its season with the "Festival of Tibet: mandala sand painting and multi-arts festival." Festival opens week of Oct. 1–5. Public viewing hours are Tue–Fri 5–9 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. Regular gallery hours are Mon–Fri 3–7 p.m., Sun 2–5 p.m. Hampden is located in Hampden Commons in the Southwest Residential Area at the UMass campus. 545–0680.

Hampshire College Art Gallery— Hours Mon–Fri 10:30– 4:30 p.m., Sun 2–5 p.m. 582–5544.

Herter Gallery — "Foundations" exhibit features works by first and second year BFA students. Gallery hours are Mon– Fri 11–4 p.m., Sun 12–4 p.m. Herter Art Gallery is located at 125A Herter Hall on the UMass campus. 545-0976.

Mead Art Museum — Current displays include "Medieval to Modern," "The Art of Ancient Peru," "Built and Unbuilt: Amherst College Architecture" and "Impressions of American Architecture." The Mead Art Museum is located on the Amherst College Campus. Hours are 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m. on weekdays and 1–5 p.m. on weekends. 542–2335.

Smith College Art Gallery — Check out "Roma Antica: 18th Century prints by Piranesi" at the Smith College of Museum of Art. Hours are Tue, Fri & Sat 9:30–4 p.m., Wed & Sun 12–4 p.m. & Thu 12–8 p.m. 585–2760.

Student Union Art Gallery — On display now is "My Life, My Soul, My Sorrow," an exhibition by Yeon Choi. Gallery hours Mon–Thurs, 11 a.m.– 6 p.m. and Fridays 11 a.m.–4 p.m. The Student Union Art Gallery is located in the Student Union on the University of Massachusetts campus. 545-0792.

University Art Gallery — Check out three different styles at the University Art Gallery. Current displays include artwork by Daisy Youngblood, Dawoud Bey and Nina Payne. Gallery hours run Tue–Fri 11–4:30 p.m., Sat–Sun 2–5 p.m. University Art Gallery is located in the Fine Arts Center on the UMass campus. 545–3670.

The Career Center Is Coming To Campus! ... on September 24

1996 Fall Open House "Tools for the Road"

2 - 8 p.m., Student Union Ballroom

◆ MEET Career Center counselors and staff!!!

◆ WIN PRIZES from downtown stores, salons and eateries!!!

◆ REGISTER for on-campus recruiting—Workshops at 2 & 3pm, "DR. Pro" Discs on sale, resume critiques

◆ FILL-A-BAG—free books and info worth over $30.00!!!

◆ HEAR nationally known speakers!

Sponsored by:
The Career Center
Digital Semiconductor
EDS

4 p.m. Bruce Tulgan, 20-something author and president of the Rainmaker strategic consulting firm presents his career management model called "Yourself, Inc."

6 p.m. Dr. Dennis Kimbro, Director of the Center for Entrepreneurship, Clark Atlanta University, author and advocate of being entrepreneurial in the job market, teaches us "How to Fly".

Book sales and signing follow each presentation

A MUST for seniors and graduate students, GREAT for juniors, SUPER for sophomores,

MILDLY ENTERTAINING for first year students!! SEE YOU THERE!!!

(Please note: Career Center offices will be closed this day)

Brooke Plumbs depths of fans Helpful tips to make recycling fun, easy

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

Though not a household name, Jonatha Brooke has been around for many years. She is best known for her work with The Story, a band that released two widely praised albums, Grace in Gravity and The Angel in the House. Yet time took its toll on the band and Brooke embarked on a different creative direction. With her latest release Plumb, she demonstrates a passionate, more sophisticated sound.

The past few years has seen Brooks become very popular in both the adult contemporary music market and the college music scene, a feat not many artists strive to accomplish. Her wide array of styles enable her to carve a niche in these two markets, and her appeal is swiftly growing among those who appreciate her sophisticated style.

Brooke's music has a distinct Sarah MacLachlan–like sound — simplistic, yet beautiful and intense. Her songs are deep and melodic, and her creative lyrics emerge from her literary background.

The daughter of a journalist and a writer, Brooke developed quite a passion for literature, so it's no surprise she has a knack at songwriting. She cites John Berger, Flannery O'Connor and poet Sharon Olds as heavy influences.

Musically, Brooke draws more on folk artists such as Joni Mitchell for inspiration. Yet, she also says that pop artists such as Chaka Khan were important to her musical upbringing. This variation shows through in Brooke's music. She often combines a blend of acoustic sound with Tori–Amos–ish piano harmonies, and creates a simple but spiritual sound.

"Being on my own is wonderful and scary, but I feel like something special has happened here — I've taken all the liberties," Brooke said. "Plumb is about ambiguities and hard choices — plumbing the depths, re-emerging to the vertical. And it's PLUMB with a 'B'"

Jonatha Brooke plays the Amherst College Frontroom tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets are $2 for Amherst College students, $10 all others. For more information call 586– 8686.

COURTESY BLUE THUMB RECORDS

Jonatha Brooke & The Story

Manny and Lo shows new family values

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

MANNY AND LO
Directed by Lisa Krueger with Scarlett Johansson, Aleksa Palladino, Mary Kay Place
Playing at Pleasant St. Theatre

As a social commentary Manny and Lo introduces a new look at family values but more than that — it is an entertaining piece of cinema.

Manny (Scarlett Johansson) and Lo (Aleksa Palladino) are orphaned sisters that decide to escape from their respective foster homes and take to the road on their own in their recently deceased mother's station wagon. The problem is that Manny is only 11 and Lo is only 15 and pregnant.

The two roam the countryside with no real destination, sleeping in homes where families are either vacationing or selling their homes.

Manny, in her innocence is the responsible one, thinking with her heart and always wanting to do the right thing. Lo, already tainted by the cruelties of the real world, tries to get by however she can, rationalizing as an excuse. As an expecting mother she is negligent by smoking and "hard rock" dancing.

After settling down in a family's winter home — because the family would probably not show up anytime before summer — they kidnap Ellen, the matron of the local maternity store, played by Mary Kay Place, to help Lo deliver her baby.

Lo treats her poorly because after all she is their prisoner, but the good–hearted Manny tries to befriend her. Ellen is a great character; haggard, destitute and unable to have children of her own. She comes to need Manny and Lo as much as they need her.

First time director Lisa Krueger is subtle with her ideas. The film moves slowly but often the pace is necessary to show the girls and their unlikely situation. Dreamy music compliments the eery progression of the film. It is not easy to pigeonhole this film — sometimes you find yourself laughing at the troubled youngsters but then you feel sympathetic for Ellen and her miserable life.

Though nothing in the film is ground–breaking or even exceptional, Krueger is able to maintain the viewer's interest. It is the unique story that proves to be the backbone and the essence of the film. B

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Who knows what kinds of recyclable materials go in the red plastic container and which go into the blue plastic container? Stumped? Okay, students who live off campus, do you know when your recyclables are collected?

"I don't know what the hell is going on. I don't know what is recyclable and what is not," said John Kelly, a senior at the University of Massachusetts.

Kelly is not alone in his confusion. When I asked ten students from the University of Massachusetts what kinds of recyclable materials go in the blue container versus the red container; six students said plastic bottles and cans, two students did not know and two students answered newspapers and white paper.

The students who answered paper products are correct. According to the town of Amherst, the blue bin is only for paper and card board products such as paperback books, phone books (remove covers), junk mail (without plastic windows), cereal and shoe boxes, newspapers, magazines, brown paper bags, white/color paper and computer paper. For the people who already recycle religiously, but don't always find an empty blue bin at the end of the recycling day, they must take another look at all of the paper products they throw into the bin.

The recycling crews of Amherst will only accept paper and card board products that are: flattened, dry and without plastic liners, windows and wrappings. They will not accept soiled paper pizza boxes, egg cartons and waxed paper.

If the blue bin is for paper products then the red bin is for bottles and cans. Otherwise known as the mixed containers bin, the red bin is responsible for: glass bottles and jars, aluminum cans, tin/steel cans, aluminum foil, plastic bottles and jars/tubes, plastic microwave trays containers, tent top cartons and drink boxes. However these products must be rinsed clean, all labels and lids must be removed or they will not be collected. Plastic bottles, tent top containers and drink boxes must be flattened and all straws and caps must be removed if they are going to join the paper products on the road to life after recycling.

Amherst's various recycling firms will not accept window glass, dishes or ceramics, metal items, paint or aerosol cans, two–gallon containers, plastic bags, motor oil/chemical, foam containers and flower pots.

Now you are all set; you have the red and blue bins right next to the garbage can in the kitchen and you clearly understand what recyclable materials go in which box.

"I don't know when the pick–up for the recycling is. I just put out the bins with the trash on garbage pick–up day and hope for the best," Kelly said.

This is the song and dance for many Amherst residents now that the Amherst Public Works Department has revamped the recycling program.

Since 1990, the town of Amherst has been in charge of recycling services for all of its residents. As of Sept. 1, services are provided by your waste hauler and not by the Amherst Public Works Department.

Only if you live in a five or more unit apartment complex that has been a part of the Amherst recycling system for over three years or more, will the Amherst Public Works Department continue curbside collection of your recyclables. However if you live in a one to four person family house, then you have to arrange curbside collection of your recyclables with your waste hauler.

If your waste hauler is Amherst Trucking or Amherst Waste Control, then the collection of your recyclables will be included as a part of your year–long contract for an extra fee.

If you live in a "megacomplex" such as Puffton or the Boulders, then you are responsible to dump your recyclable into the two large recycling bins located next to the trash dumpster of your complex. These "megacomplexes" are responsible for contracting private recycling companies to collect the recyclables. Fraternities and sororities follow the same policy.

"Only two sororities have ever been apart of Amherst's curbside recycling program. As a part of Amherst's new recycling regulations a sorority member has volunteered to create recycling programs in each house within the Greek society," said Angie Fowler, the Amherst recycling coordinator. "I am looking forward to a dialogue between the recycling office and the Greek society and establish a recycling plan."

The UMass has their own recycling program conducted by the UMass Intermediate Processing Facility (IPF). This UMass recycling organization conducts the same recycling policies as the Amherst Public Works Department. Every dorm and classroom has a red and blue container and students are encouraged to recycle according to the town's rules. The IPF is in charge of collecting the materials from the recycling bins from all UMass facilities.

Recycling does not stop with the separation of candy wrappers, egg shells and soda cans. There are numerous programs throughout Amherst that promote recycling. Day– long events are designated to paint, furniture and hazardous waste collections. In a follow–up article, each of these events as well as other recycling events will be described in more detail.

"The town of Amherst has made changes for economic reasons, but the goals have not changed. The state of Massachusetts has a list of materials that are banned from disposal at our land fill. We, as a town, are trying to encourage voluntary recycling, even at a cost, to meet state mandates," Fowler said.

For more information about the University of Massachusetts' recycling rules and regulations, call Amy Baranowski at 545–9615. If you are interested in Amherst's recycling program and want to get more involved in community clean up call Amherst's Recycling Coordinator Angie Fowler at 256–4049.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

HUMPHREY BROWN III WANTS YOU! TO WRITE FOR BLACK AFFAIRS

If interested, call Humphrey at 545-1851

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring, "Bud Dry" $9.99 cse. bots

Sutter Home W. Zinfandel $6.99 1.5 liter
Jim Bean $13.99 1.75 Liter
Bud & Bud "Light" cans $15.49 30/PK.
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"!
Catamount- Porter, Wheat, Gold, Amber, P.Ale, & "Octoberfest"!
Pete's- All Flavors including "Octoberfest"!
Elm City- Ale, Blackwell Stout, & Golden!
Rhino Chassers- Amber Ale, Roasted Lager, & "Peach Wheat!"
Shipyard- Summer Ale, Stout, Export & "Moose Brown Ale!"
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
J.J. Wainwright's Bleak & Tan $11.99
Super Special Pete's "Octoberfest" $16.99 case

All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD -Delivery Available-

Aerobic Instructor Training & Certification
548-8807

Call someone who cares. Call the Collegian (we do not accept collect calls)

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos
Visa, Mastercard & Discover accepted

NEW! BEER DISPLAY AREA ... WE NOW STOCK OVER 100% MORE ICE COLD MICROS & IMPORTS!

PETE'S WICKED 24-12 oz. Bott. $17.99 + dep.
RHINO CHASERS 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.
RED HOOK 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + dep.
BASS ALE 24-12 oz. Bott. $21.99 + dep.
MOOSEHEAD 24-12 oz. Bott. $13.99 + dep.
ICEHOUSE•RED DOG 18 PK-CANS $7.99 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. "30 pk" $11.99 + dep.
MILLER "HIGH LIFE" 30 pack cans $11.99 + dep.
KEYSTONE LT. "30 pk" $10.99 + dep.
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bar Bott. $9.99 + dep.
M.G.D. & LT 24-12 oz. Bar Bott $9.99 + dep.
NATURAL LT & ICE 24-12 oz. cans $8.99 + dep.
ABSOLUT VODKA $20.99 1.75L
SEAGRAM'S 7 $12.99 1.75L
CUTTY SARK $24.99 1.75L
TANQUERAY GIN $21.99 1.75L
LET'S GO UMASS FOOTBALL
CLUNY SCOTCH $12.49 1.75L
JAGERMEISTER $13.99 .750 ML
FOUR SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L
JIM BEAM $8.49 .750 ML
PASSPORT SCOTCH $19.49 1.75 L
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQ. $10.99 .750 ML
MONTPELLIER VINYARDS CHARD. & CAB. $8.99 1.5L
ROUND HILL" CHARD. & CAB. $5.99 .750 ML
WOODBRIDGE CHARD & CAB. $10.49 1.5 L
GLENN ELLEN CHARD & CAB. $7.99 1.5L
BEERBALLS $22.99 + dep.
M/D 20-20 $1.99 .750 ML
BOONES FARM $1.99 .750 ML
FRANZIA "BAG IN A BOX" $6.99 5.0 L
T.G.I.F. "COCKTAILS" $3.99 .375ML
WE DELIVER 584-8174

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS
KEG OF THE WEEK! MICHELOB LIGHT $38.99 + DEP.
"KEGS" BUD, BUD ICE, MICHELOB - ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, MICHELOB LT, LOWENBRAU DK., MICHELOB DK., LITE, LITE ICE ... $39.99 +DEP.
NATURAL LT. NATURAL ICE $34.99 + DEP.
MICRO KEGS
SAM ADAMS $89.99 PLUS
OREGON $89.99 MANY
SARANAC $89.99 MORE
J.W. DUNDEE $69.99
ICE
10 LBS. $1.99
50 LBS. $5.99
100 LBS. $9.99
SALE GOOD THRU 10/3/96

"I got mine at Zanna"

Body conscious top

Boot leg hip-huggers

Chunky heel oxfords

ZANNA downtown Amherst

■ Web

continued from page 5

to educate each other.

Features that discern the Lycaeum from Hyperreal include frills like graphics and free screen savers. The biggest difference between the two sites is the Lycaeum's original information that users might have difficulty finding elsewhere.

However, original information and articles come with a price, so the choice articles are off limits to non-paying members. If this was a completely free service, it would receive an A, but it is not free so... B+.

High Times at http://www.hightimes.com/ht/welcome.html

High Times, like most magazines, operates its own web site. Users can browse through the latest issue and back issues of High Time at no cost.

Accompanying the magazine articles is information about drug testing, medicinal and industrial uses of hemp. The content on High Times resembles that of the Lycaeum minus a few frills like the screen savers. Both are aesthetically pleasing, and demand a table compatible browser like the latest versions of Netscape Navigator or Microsoft Internet Explorer.

The two sites differ in a few areas. A noticeable difference is the advertising on High Times. Banner ads pop up on the main page, and the site also offers a classified ads section too. Because High Times uses advertising, the site is free unlike the Lycaeum. A

The above pages are just a few of the many hemp and marijuana web sites available. More pages like these are available on Yahoo at http://www.yahoo.com/text/Health/Pharmacology/Drugs/ and Lycos A2Z http://a2z.lycos.com/Social_and_Community_Affairs/Advocacy_and_Activism/Drugs_and_Drug_Use.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

■ Lenson

continued from page 5

"In any mind, based on a multitude of very dedicated activists, I have no doubt whatsoever that within the next century marijuana will become legalized fully."

CRC will be providing two busses, leaving from the Haigis Mall, which will be able to carry 80 people to the event. Plus, a caravan of assorted cars will have available spaces for anyone interested in participating in this rally where UMass will have such a spotlighted presence. For more information call the CRC.

Once on the Boston Common, well known bands such as Letters to Cleo and Bim Skala Bim will be providing "very loud entertainment." Plus, there promises to be several other inspirational speakers.

"MassCann expects the rally to be peaceful — as always — though we expect large-scale acts of civil disobedience," according to the MassCann/NORML press release. "This year's event will be promoted... despite efforts of the DEA and Governor's Alliance Against Drugs to silence them."

Beth McCarthy is a Collegian staffmember.

Save The People You Call Up To 44%.

For long-distance calls. Savings based on a 3-min. AT&T operator-dialed interstate call.

LONDON $190

PARIS	$215
AMSTERDAM	$275
ZURICH	$275
BARCELONA	$299
CANCUN	$183
ATHENS	$349
COSTA RICA	$225
CHICAGO	$100

FARES ARE EACH WAY FROM BOSTON BASED ON A ROUNDTRIP PURCHASE. TAXES DO NOT INCLUDE FEDERAL TAXES OF $5.70 ROUNDTRIP. $3 AND $45 DEPARTURE TAX DESTINATION OR DEPARTURE CHARGES MAY APPLY. SUBJECT TO AVAILABILITY.

CALL FOR A FREE STUDENT TRAVELS MAGAZINE!

Council Travel
44 Main Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/travel.htm

EURAILPASSES ISSUED ON-THE-SPOT.

Easy Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY WEDNESDAY
ANYTHING Check the Vibe GOES
DJ's Scarty & Bam-Bam
Spinnin' Jungle, Techno, House, Dub, Hip-Hop, etc... From 10-2am
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY Dance Party
Great Giveaways from HYDRAFAT 91
- Like Ultimate Laser Stereo Tag Game
Hosted by Adam Wright of Today's 99.3
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00
RETRO NIGHT
WIN TWO MONTH-PASS TO HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00
gay dance night
THIS WEEK LIVE
Wed., Sept. 18th @ 9:00pm (18+)
ICP Presents • Electric Open Stage
Sign up 9:00pm SHARP! B.Y.O. Instruments
HOSTED BY PAINFUL DEATH
w/The Hatuis/Dr.Hi Bri
Thurs. Sept 19th - 8:30 pm (21)
JOHN VALBY "DR. DIRTY"
Fri. Sept. 20th @ 7:30 pm (ALL AGES)
Concrete Productions presents
MADBALL
Hercules/Krimelch/Tyrant Trooper/Action will be Latest
Sat. Sept. 21st - 7:00 pm
J.J. CALE
Amy Fairchild w/his acoustic
Mon. Sept. 23rd @ 8:00 pm (18+)
BOB MOULD
Rasputina
Wed. Sept 25th - 9:00pm (21)
ICP Presents • Electric Open Stage
Hosted by RESTLESS SOULS
Thurs. Sept. 26th @ 9:00 pm (18+)
ICP Presents
THE COYOTES
With Special Guests
Fri. Sept. 27th - 9:00 pm (21)
THE MACHINE
COMING TO PEARL STREET
Sat. Sept 28: DANCE-A-THON WITH BLUES ATTACK
Sun. Sept. 29 18+: MACEO PARKER
Fri. Oct 4 18+: BERADON
Sat. Oct 5 18+: AQUARIUM RESCUE UNIT
Mon Oct 7 18+: THE SPECIALS
Tues. Oct 8: LOS LOBOS
Tues Oct 15 18+: BLACK UHURU
Fri. Nov 8: ROOMFUL OF BLUES
Sun., Oct. 6 18+ SPECIAL CLUB APPEARANCE
DOMO FOR PYROS
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
413-584-7771

~ Opposing Viewpoints ~

Let's end the drug war

Mike Burke

The war is on and we are getting our butts kicked with 400,000 Americans in jail for marijuana-related crimes while rapists and child molesters are reading this very paper — possibly near you.

So what do we do about this so called drug war — exactly the same path where President Kennedy, if he had the chance, would have gone with the Vietnam War. Minimize your losses and get out. Both wars are endless and mindless battles that can not possibly be won. Let's legalize marijuana and go on with our lives.

Okay, before Rush Limbaugh sits on me and shoots an intravenous needle of conservatism into my butt, let me clarify a few points that may make you Reaganites a bit wheezy in the stomach.

• Alcohol is connected to far more deaths and serious injuries than marijuana. From drunk driving to sexual assault to liver cancer, alcohol is a dangerous drug. Marijuana simply isn't. Sure, you may get cancer, but these days cancer is as common as over-enrolled classes at the university.

I dread to think that everyday in elementary school I took cancer to school. Oops... I mean I took my rusty lunch box filled with a roast beef sandwich wrapped in aluminum foil. My mom was packing me a triple whammy of carcinogens! Maybe she should have packed me a bong.

• What about the popular theory that marijuana is a stepping stone to more 'serious' drugs. I may be wrong, but I bet alcohol and tobacco are far more common stepping stones to other drugs than pot. Find me one person who is shooting junk or snorting crack who has never been drunk. Good luck.

• Then there is the deceptive idea that if marijuana is available on the open market, addiction will increase. Ask any underage student who lives in the Central Residential Area, if it is harder to buy a six pack of beer or score a bag of weed.

I have as much desire to eat cat food, even if it is gourmet, as I do smoking hemp. So Wal-Mart can give me hundred of free samples of the two items — both will end up in the trash.

• And then there is peer pressure, the double P blast that is on the lips of every concerned parent and guidance counselor on the face of the earth. Hey I made it through 21 years of PP and never smoked a cigarette and just one bowl. Trying say no, it may be build character. Or, maybe not. Look at me.

• Don't forget how lazy marijuana users are known to be. Just look at Robert Parish, the former Boston Celtics superstar, who was found in possession of pot. Yes... the same Robert Parish who played in more basketball games than anyone else in the NBA ever! Does that sound lazy to you? I didn't think so.

• If you are worried about the future of America look at those coach potatoes, stuffing their face with Frito-Lay's fat free potato chips made with olestra, who watch reruns of Montel Williams and Jenny Jones for hours on end. These are the Americans we should look out for — not some innocent college student who takes a few puffs of a natural herb.

Let's end the war before it ends us.

Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

Legalize it! Are you high?

Mark McGrath

Is it just me, or are there a lot of pests out there who think it is time to defy all logic and go against any principle we've ever had by making legal a drug that not only has negative effects on the body, but has been shown to be habit-forming and provide a stepping stone to the world of harder drugs?

Has the idea of legalization of marijuana really become an issue or have I breathed too much of the smoke that fills the hallways of my building every night?

There are dozens of arguments which need to be heard if this issue is ever to be resolved. First of all, if marijuana is made legal, how is society to deal with other drugs? Is there a way of defining what a good, legitimate drug might be? How about heroin or crack? When it all comes down to it, a drug is a drug, and to make a drug legal is to hurt further a society that is already reeling.

What role would marijuana actually play on the street if it was legalized? Would it be a means of relaxation, or a tool which would work to make our already lazy society even lazier. Imagine a society in which any old pothead could get a cheap high at any corner store. Who'd leave their apartments? Who'd carry the weight of forward progress? Certainly not America.

True, alcohol and tobacco are also drugs and also have detrimental effects on the body, but the difference between them and marijuana is that they are legal and have been for many years. Had we known the effects when people first started using them, there would have been serious opposition at that time, but the alcohol prohibition movement proved that a government can't take away an addiction which it has fostered for many years.

Look at what the tobacco industry has done to America over the past centuries. They have through outrageous advertising and nicotine level manipulation addicted millions of Americans who have or will soon die of cancer. Legalization crusaders often say that weed sold commercially can be regulated and held to certain standards of cleanliness. Yeah... Right. Like the government is able to keep an eye on unscrupulous industries at the present time. Adding to the load can only make the situation worse.

Seeing the results of cigarette-smoking and the way in which the government is now cracking down on the tobacco industry, it is obviously not the time for legalizing marijuana, which shares many similarities with tobacco.

Even the "medical uses" of the drug can't provide enough reason to justify legalizing it. The world has gotten by without using marijuana to treat sickness in the past, so what makes it necessary now?

The only reason this issue is even being discussed is because we happen to be situated in one of the most liberal towns of one of the most liberal states in the nation. All across the country, legalization is a non-issue. You may hear many loud advocates voicing their opinions on this campus, but they are in reality a minority.

Just because the anti-legalization side of this non-issue feels that the argument isn't even important enough to waste their time on doesn't mean that it isn't out there. They are fully aware that their time can be spent taking part in activities which are much more constructive than battling such a harmless and ridiculous enemy.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

■ hemp

continued from page 5

make hemp rope."

As for the environment, Killeen said, "I have seen the destruction of our ecology after crisscrossing the nation on my bicycle. Nature is our life line. We have put nature on a back-burner. People no longer worry about nature any more as if it's obsolete in this hi-tech society where we have laser beams and the internet. What about nature?

"America is self-destructing and taking the world with it. Unless America begins a reversal to a nature balance. So we can take hemp, the world's most valuable and versatile natural resource and use it for seeds and oil for food, stems for fabric, fuel, paper and medicine."

Legalizing hemp should also provide a boost for the nation's economy, she said.

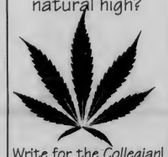
"Since we can make fuel out of [hemp], we can make jobs. It has close to 50,000 industrial uses," said Killeen.

Perhaps even more importantly, hemp can grow on marginal land.

Can hemp save the welfare system too? "Why not?" asks the Hemp Lady, as she proposes that all welfare recipients be granted five acres of land to grow hemp.

While Caroline Killeen's name will be absent from most newscasts on the evening of Nov. 5, her movement may only be in its infancy.

"I always call myself a Mickey Mouse candidate in the sense that in someways it is silly for me to even attempt this. But the main thing is that we have to get the constituency who wants to legalize hemp to register to vote... and consider voting for Caroline Killeen to blip the screen, to get enough percentage points to send a message to Congress and the next president that there is public support for hemp."



Mike Burke is a Collegian columnist.

Interested in serving your community?

The Jewish Affairs Editor position at the Collegian is vacant.
This Diversity Desk needs your help to continue quality coverage of Jewish life at UMass and beyond.

To get involved, contact Chris Conner, Managing Editor, at 545-0719 or visit the Collegian office at 113 Campus Center Basement.

Looking for a natural high?

Write for the Collegian!

ROAD CLOSED

DETOUR

Not to us! We're going straight ahead for treatments and cures for 40 neuromuscular diseases.

MDA Muscular Dystrophy Association
1-800-572-1717

People help MDA... because MDA helps people.

REFUSE TO LOSE
by John Calipari
with Dick Weiss

MEET THE AUTHOR
FRIDAY SEPT. 20
11^{30} - 3^{30}

AT THE UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER

John Calipari will be signing copies of his book
REFUSE TO LOSE
Friday, September 20
11^{30}am - 3^{30}pm
at THE UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center
Copies on Sale now At
THE UNIVERSITY STORE for 23^{00}

CAMPUS CENTER
545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE

Hours: Monday - Friday
9am - 5pm
Saturday 10am - 5pm

EL ACUÑA
Bar & Grill

Now Open SIX Nights a Week
'Till 1 AM!

Saddle seats

$3.75 Mega Margaritas

Behind Antonio's

$2.00 16oz Drafts
Full Menu untill 11 pm,
Appetizers until we close

$2.25 Corona

Come check out the fiesta that's right down your alley!

$2.75 Micro'

41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
413-253-4040
Tues. - Sun. 11:30 a.m. - 1 a.m.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11p.m.
Tel: 549-2692

Good Thru 9/24

Shop Scott's & Save Lotts! Thank you for your patronage

Keystone Light 30 packs $10.49 +dep.
Natural: Light & Ice 24 -12oz. cans $8.79 +dep.
Milwaukee's Best: Light & Reg. 30 packs $9.99 +dep.
Corona 12 pack bottles $8.39 +dep.
Red Dog & Ice House 12 pack bottles $6.99 +dep.

Check Out Our Other In Store Specials!
One Eyed Jack Lemon Malt 6 packs $5.69 +dep.
Gordon's Vodka 1.75L $10.99
Bacardi Silver Rum 750ml $8.49
Kahlua Liqueur 750ml $12.99
Tanqueray Gin 750ml 11.99
Sambuca Romana 750ml 14.49
Sutter Home 1.5 White Zinfandel 6.99

Bud, Bud Ice & Bud Light Kegs $39.99 + dep.

MasterCard VISA MasterCard
Tele-Check for your personal check

Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Dollars Alumni Stadium University Drive SCOTTS Victory Market

Clemens equals record with 20 strike outs

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

DETROIT — Roger Clemens matched the only pitcher who ever has struck out 20 — himself.

The Red Sox right-hander equaled his own major league record last night, fanning 20 batters and pitching a four-hitter to lead Boston over the Detroit Tigers 4-0.

"You can't take anyone for granted," Clemens said of the Tigers, who at .254 have the lowest batting average in the AL. "I just feel very fortunate, very blessed."

Clemens (10-12) set the strikeout record at Fenway Park on April 29, 1986, against the Seattle Mariners.

He had 19 strikeouts entering the ninth inning yesterday, but Alan Trammell popped out, Ruben Sierra singled and Tony Clark flied out. After going to a 2-1 count on Travis Fryman, Clemens came back and got Fryman swinging.

When he took the mound to start the ninth, Clemens said he wasn't sure of his strikeout total.

"I knew I had a lot," he said.

The three-time AL Cy Young Award winner got 15 of his strikeouts on swinging strikes. Relying mostly on fastballs and hard sliders, he struck out the side in the second, fifth and sixth innings. Clemens struck out every batter in the starting lineup at least once, including Fryman four times and Tony Clark three times. He walked none — also matching his total in the '86 game against the Mariners.

"He was truly unhittable," Red Sox catcher Bill Haselman said.

Clemens retired 14 straight batters between a first-inning single by Trammell and a sixth-inning single by Brad Ausmus. He has struck out 10 or more batters seven times this season and 67 times in his career.

His performance moved Clemens ahead of Jerry Koosman to 17th on the career strikeout list with 2,572.

The 34-year-old Clemens, who lost his first four decisions this season, also tied Cy Young's career Red Sox records of 38 shutouts and 192 wins.

Boston, which began the night trailing Baltimore by 5 1/2 games in the AL wild-card race, scored three runs in the fourth off rookie Justin Thompson (1-6).

After consecutive singles by John Valentin and Mike Greenwell, Rudy Pemberton hit a two-run double off his former team. Pemberton took third on a throwing error by right fielder Melvin Nieves and scored on Haselman's RBI single.

The Red Sox made it 4-0 in the eighth on Bill Haselman's RBI single.

Notes: Detroit right-hander Felipe Lira, who lost his seventh straight game Tuesday night, had his season ended during batting practice yesterday. Lira (6-14) broke a bone in his left hand when hit by a line drive. He was examined by Dr. Joseph Failla at Henry Ford Hospital, who put the hand in a cast...The Tigers announced yesterday they have signed a player development contract with the West Michigan Whitecaps of the Class A Midwest League. The Grand Rapids-based Whitecaps replace Fayetteville, N.C., in the Tigers' farm system... Detroit second baseman Mark Lewis, who was beaned Tuesday night, was released from Henry Ford Hospital yesterday. The timetable for his return to action is uncertain.

Tennessee, Florida ready to rumble

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — It's the third game of the season and the conference opener for both teams, and already Florida and Tennessee had better be at their peak.

Saturday's game will give the winner the inside track to the Southeastern Conference Eastern Division title and a trip to the SEC championship game.

Then there are the national considerations. In two of the last four years, the SEC champion has played for the national title. Championships not enough? Then consider the crowd. The NCAA record for a regular-season college game, 106,867, could well fall Saturday when the Gators take on the Volunteers in the newly expanded Neyland Stadium.

Rankings? Tennessee is No. 2, Florida No. 4.

Stars? Quarterbacks Danny Wuerffel of Florida and Peyton Manning of Tennessee are both among the top Heisman Trophy contenders. Exposure? Tennessee has issued more media credentials than for any game in its history. CBS has the national TV broadcast. Rivalry? After a recent visit to his hometown of Sevierville, 35 miles from Knoxville, Florida linebacker James Bates said: "They hate us. I think they hate us more than the people around here hate them."

Neither Florida nor Tennessee is a stranger to big games, but the experience edge goes to the Gators.

Under Steve Spurrier, Florida has played in four straight SEC championship games and last year's national title game against Nebraska. Annual regular-season battles include Tennessee, Auburn, Georgia and Florida State.

"I certainly think this is a championship-type football game, and there probably is something to the fact they've played under those conditions," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said.

For Tennessee's part, Fulmer points to last year's loss to Florida and wins over Alabama and Ohio State in the Citrus Bowl as games with similar trappings.

"I think it might be a bit of a factor, but maybe not a great one," he said.

Spurrier isn't sure the experience gives the Gators any advantage.

"Obviously we didn't compete at our best level in the national game," he said referring to Nebraska's 62-24 pounding of Florida in the Fiesta Bowl.

"Hopefully we can compete a lot harder and play smarter in this game than that one. I don't know if it has any bearing at all." One thing the Tennessee-Florida series has been is high-scoring. Another, somewhat surprisingly, is lopsided.

The winning team has scored at least 31 points in every game since 1990, when the series became an annual event, and the teams have combined to average 58.5 points.

But the average margin of victory has been 23 points. The closest game was Florida's 41-34 victory three years ago, and that is a little deceptive; Tennessee scored late and added a 2-point conversion.

Indiana's playoff system to change

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Another "Hoosiers" story is now impossible in Indiana.

A new state playoff system will take effect in 1997-98, and the Indiana High School Athletic Association made it official Tuesday. Traditionalists, who remembered the classic 1954 championship run of Tiny Milan that inspired the movie "Hoosiers," decried the change.

"One of the things that will be difficult will be to kind of heal the wounds of those who have been on the losing end of this issue," said Bob Gardner, commissioner of the IHSAA board.

Supporters of separate tournaments argued that the one-class format was obsolete, and small schools no longer can compete against the big schools. They pointed to Milan's 1954 championship, long touted by single-tournament advocates as an example of how a small school can prevail, as proof of their own position.

In the more than 40 years since Milan's victory over Muncie Central, only eight small schools have reached the Final Four. None has won.

Fifty-seven percent of the principals of the state's 385 member schools had voted in favor of separate class tournaments based on enrollment. The 220-157 margin was easily enough to affirm a similar vote by the IHSAA board last spring.

The referendum was mandated after opponents obtained enough signatures in each of the five IHSAA districts after the board's 12-5 vote in April. It would have taken 193 votes to overturn the earlier vote.

The affected sports are boys and girls basketball, boys and girls soccer, baseball, softball and volleyball, beginning with the 1997-98 school year.

Individual sports such as swimming, golf, track and field, tennis and cross country are not affected. Football currently is the only sport contested in separate classes.

Former Mr. Basketball Bobby Plump, who led Milan to the 1954 state championship and organized a group that lobbied unsuccessfully to keep the tournament in one class, said the principals' vote didn't surprise him.

"I guess if there was anything that I'm disappointed about was the fact that the issues we thought were important, the finances, the format of the tournament, how is the money going to be split, what's going to happen to the message we're sending to the student athletes," Plump said. "I think those things should have been discussed.

"But having said that, I hope this tournament is very successful. I hope we can legitimately still call it Hoosier Hysteria, and I hope 2 million fans come. If that's the case, I'll readily admit that I was wrong and we've still got the best tournament in the nation," he said.

The multiclass formats will be evaluated after the 1998-99 seasons, and the IHSAA board could vote to go back to the single tournaments.

Patriots' Ted Johnson force in 4-3 defense

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — Don't look for Ted Johnson to race back for big interceptions. Quarterbacks shouldn't worry about him charging forward and smashing them to the ground.

Opponents, though, should be concerned about New England's middle linebacker who, in just his second season, is a major contributor to the Patriots emerging defense.

"Nothing I do is real pretty. I'm not the flashiest guy in the world," Johnson said. "It's just basic football. It's just running and hitting. That's all it is."

The soft-spoken, second-round draft choice from Colorado did that well last season when he started all 12 games he played, including the opener.

This year, he has started all three games in the new 4-3 alignment and is second on the team in tackles with 18. He's not surprised he's picked up the pro game so well.

"The NFL's all new to me," he said. "People have high expectations for you, and you do the best you can with it."

"I've seen a lot of good young defensive players come in this league and have pretty good success right away," Patriots coach Bill Parcells said. "He's a pretty good run defender and he hustles, but he needs to work on his pass defense."

Johnson acknowledges that. In the 3-4 defense, he lined up on the weak side. Vincent Brown, the other inside linebacker, had more complicated reads to tell him what to do.

But Brown was released before the season, leaving Johnson to line up on the strong side.

"There's a lot more going on on my side than I'm used to, so that just comes with experience," he said. "I haven't seen it all and I don't think I will any time soon, but I'm slowly absorbing the passing game."

The Patriots' defense has improved in each of their three games. They allowed 322 yards and 19 first downs in a loss to Miami, 231 yards and 15 first downs in a loss to Buffalo and 170 yards and nine first downs in a 31-0 win over Arizona.

Johnson is a big reason the Patriots have allowed the fourth fewest yards in the league through the first three weeks of the season.

On Sunday, they are home against Jacksonville, a team that entered the NFL the same season as Johnson.

"He's coming along well, and I think Ted's going to be a real good player," Parcells said.

Not bad for someone who, a few years ago, figured he'd spend his post-college years working in his parents' barbecue restaurant outside Houston.

It was during his outstanding senior season at Colorado when he realized he might have an NFL career. And now he's in a leadership role on the defense.

"Ted has done a great job. He's a hard worker, plays inside linebacker well, gets the defense set and that's a lot of pressure," outside linebacker Chris Slade said. "He doesn't talk a lot, but we'll get him out of that."

Johnson describes himself as a "blue-collar" player who reduces the game to its essence.

"It's a pretty simple thing," he said. "It's just reading the keys, reacting and making tackles.

"I have a lot of anxieties going into a game, but when I get out there on that first hit, I'm fine. I just need to go smack somebody, and it's all right."

■ rookie

continued from page 14

his teammates appeared to be losing their concentration, Pearson stayed focused and bailed them out of what could have been a devastating loss.

When speaking about his young goalie, Koch can't help but smile.

"I must say that he has been pretty solid, I have no complaints about his play," Koch said.

Soccer
Basketball
Collegian
SPORTS
Has got it all.
Field Hockey
Rugby
Football
Water Polo
Baseball

STOMP
THE INTERNATIONAL SENSATION
Come See What All the Noise Is About!!!
Friday, November 1: 8 pm
Saturday, November 2: 5 pm & 9 pm
Sunday, November 3: 7 pm
THE Meadows MUSIC THEATRE
Indoor Theatre Seating. On-site parking available.
Tickets on sale now at all STRAWBERRIES Music & Video Stores or to charge call ProTix at (860)422-0000
For Group Sales, call (860) 548-7370 ext. 227
WIN FREE TICKETS TO STOMP!
Fill out the below form with your name, address, age, and phone number.
NAME _____ Age _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____
PHONE _____
Mail Your Entry To: The Meadows Music Theatre, 61 Savitt Way, Hartford, CT 06120
All winners will be notified by phone 1 week prior to the show.

what's in a Z
As low as $36.22* per month
Everything.
Complete multimedia computer customized for students
Campus Z-Station® features:
• Powerful Intel® Pentium® processor
• Large capacity hard drive
• Plenty of memory to run today's hottest applications
• Plug & Play into your campus network with a high-speed modem
Desktop Systems include Microsoft® Natural® Keyboard and Microsoft Mouse
Loaded with Microsoft software for study and fun
• Microsoft Office for Windows 95 with Word, Microsoft Excel, PowerPoint, Microsoft Access, Schedule+, Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, Microsoft Internet Assistants
• Microsoft Windows 95 with Microsoft Internet Explorer 3.0
• Microsoft Plus!
• Games for Windows 95
• Norton AntiVirus and more
Hewlett Packard Color Deskjet available
Ask about Microsoft Programmer's Dream Pack
Processor: Pentium 100 MHz | Pentium 133 MHz | Pentium 166 MHz
Hard drive: 1.2GB | 1.6GB | 2.1GB
Monitor: 14" (13.2" viewable) | 15" (13.7" viewable) | 15" (13.7" viewable)
Price: $1799 | $2199 | $2499
with LAN card: $1899* | $2299 | $2599
Experience Campus Z-Station.
The University Store
413-545-2619
http://www.zds.com
education@zds.com
BROADSIDE/University of Massachusetts

■ Brockington

continued from page 14

promising for this 5-foot-10, 205 pound fullback.

However, he began the year sitting out the first two games with a sore hip. After playing in three games and rushing for only 10 yards on six carries, Brockington would sit out the rest of the year with a hernia.

"That was the worst time of my life, the worst," Brockington said. "I didn't practice, I was miserable. School was done and I'd go back to th. dorm and watch TV. Guys were playing and I was like an outsider. It was the worst."

As if anything else had to stand in the way of this man's promising football career, it was an injury. However, all that is now behind Brockington. The days of playing backup roles, learning the system, and waiting for his chance are over.

After a successful off-season hernia operation, Brockington started this season at full strength and has already made an impact.

As starting fullback he has rushed for 169 yards and one TD in 27 carries in the Minutemen's first two games. He ran for a career high 108 yards on 17 carries last week against Holy Cross.

Getting back to playing was something Brockington was waiting for all summer.

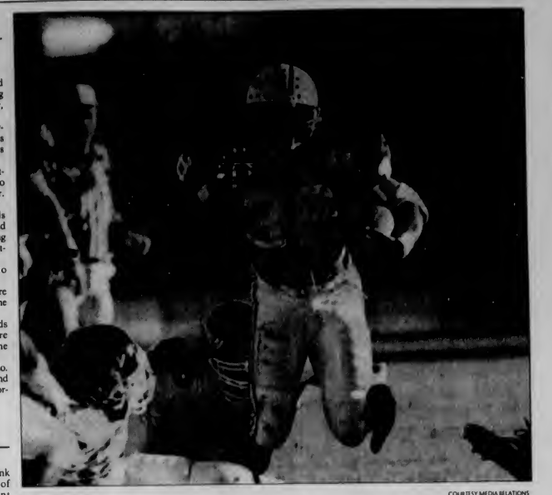
"I've been so excited, I looked forward to training camp," Brockington said. "It feels good. Honestly, I enjoy practicing and getting out there and getting better. Everyday is important to me, and I take every play and every practice like it's my last."

Brockington is a power fullback with speed and agility. A runner with good balance who is rarely stopped for a loss. He is a very versatile player and contributes greatly to the offensive scheme.

"We wouldn't be doing all the things we're doing had we not had Ron," UMass offensive coordinator Doug Berry said. "He's a runner, a blocker, and pass receiver, he's the core."

Brockington has started to take on the role of leadership and is excited in helping this team achieve success throughout the year. He's looked upon as a winner by his teammates and coaches.

"I enjoy coaching Ron for the guy he is and his commitment to winning," Berry said. "He's a winner, he wants to play. He works hard, he's dedicated, and a team player. Put him on the field and let his ability speak for himself."



So far that's what Brockington has been doing. He is counted on heavily as a big part of the UMass offense and fills his job well. Although a quiet leader, Ron is starting to take charge and has tremendous motivation to do whatever it takes.

After UMass, Brockington doesn't know what to expect, but would obviously hope for a shot in the NFL.

"I'm not going to base my life around it, but I'd sure love to make it," Brockington said. "I'd like to keep the tradition and make it to the next level."

However, Brockington is also holding on to the words that former teammate and NFL wide receiver Rob Moore told him about getting to the NFL, "Never chase the dream, let the dream chase you."

In that case the dream has a lot of catching up to do. The time has finally come. No more two steps back and one step forward for Ron Brockington. It's two feet forward, and both of them are in the endzone.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior power fullback Ron Brockington looks to be a force on the ground for the Minutemen this year.

■ Gators

continued from page 14

ly looks like a quarterback these days, which will help them get back to a decent bowl come January.

Like a Sex Machine — Notre Dame and Texas do battle this week down in Austin. What do we know about these two teams? Not much, considering neither one of them's played anyone of substance. We do know that the Longhorns have the hardest working man in the Big 12, James Brown, at quarterback. That's gotta count for something.

Ricky Wiliams is one of the best running backs in the country, and Texas has pounded its first opponents pretty hard. Notre Dame, who struggled in beating Vanderbilt two weeks ago, looks ready to play after destroying Purdue 35-0 last Saturday. This will be the game of the week, not the Vol-Gator showdown, because there's no blowout possibility here.

Booty Schwag of the Week Award — And the winner is... Arizona St. The Sun Devils beat a school known as North Texas 52-7 on Saturday.

I'm sorry, but there's no way North Texas exists. Las Vegas didn't even put a line out on this game. North Texas sounds like that school from "Johnny B. Goode," the one that took Anthony Michael Hall to a strip bar on a recruiting trip, got him hammered, and then set him up with the dean's wife.

I've had enough of these early September games where a real school will schedule Popcorn St. so they don't drop in the polls. Arizona St. will learn what it's like to be on the other side of such affairs this weekend when Nebraska comes calling.

Speaking of Popcorn St. — Southwest Louisiana scored a blow for all the little guys on Saturday night when they beat mighty Texas in the partying down there was pretty good after the game. Note to President Bulger: Don't you think we could generate that kind of excitement here if UMass went Division 1?

By the way, next up for the Aggies? North Texas. (I'm not even making that up.)

Here on the Homefront — UMass needs to put up a good performance against Richmond this weekend if it hopes to be ready for next week's home opener against Northeastern.

The loss to Villanova seems less tragic given the fact that the Wildcats thumped Delaware 30-0 over the weekend. Delaware is a good Yankee Conference team, and its loss to Villanova has raised eyebrows throughout the conference.

The Minutemen have some work to do, but they looked a lot better against Holy Cross. If the Minutemen win this weekend, they'll have gone through the toughest part of their schedule 2-1, with five of their last eight games at home.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian staff member.

■ sports

continued from page 14

The club's first fall game will be against Navy on Sunday, Sept. 22 at 2 p.m. on the lower Boyden field.

Roberto Torres, Gurmeet Singh, Phil Dorman and Chris Ellis return for UMass. Levence Eutsay, Jeff Olszewski, Russell Ramm and Nick Hammer will also be back in action.

Several new players will make their debuts: Tim Mooney, Erik Becker, Tom Schaweker, Greg Resnick, Trevor Spiers, Micah Mellon, Joe Ruggeri, Nate Atkins and Tom Brunette are all new additions to the team.

Information about the team is available by calling club lacrosse coach Judy Dietel at 545-3815.

• There is still time to put entries in for some sports.

Tennis singles and field hockey entries will be accepted until Sept. 24.

Ice hockey invitations are also still being taken. The team fee for hockey is $250 and there is a 12-team limit.

Water polo is new sport on the intramural scene, and no experience is necessary to participate. Anyone interested is invited to the Boyden pool deck on Mondays and Wednesdays 9-10:30 p.m.

There are meetings for singles interested in joining teams. Call the Intramural Office for times and locations.

Information about any of the intramural teams, entry dates, game times, etc. is available at the Intramural Office at 215 Boyden or by calling 545-0022.

• There will be captains' meetings for intramural sports teams in the next few weeks. The meeting for softball captains will be Sept. 23 at 6 p.m. Ice hockey captains will meet Sept. 25 at 6 p.m. The tennis singles' and field hockey captains' meetings are Oct. 2 at 6 p.m. Call 545-0022 for locations.

• Officials are still needed for flag football, soccer, softball, ice hockey, and volleyball. There are clinics to train interested people, and the positions are paid. Call the Intramural Office for info.

• Intramural Championships are being televised on the Housing Services Cable Network now through Sept. 22 at 11 p.m.

• The Ski Club wants new members. There will be an informational meeting for interested student on Sunday night at 6 p.m. in room 163 Campus Center. Dues are $15. Upcoming events: Quebec Dec. 6-8, Killington Jan. 12-17, Quebec Feb. 14-17. The club will also be sponsoring a ski sale with over $2 million in apparel and equipment on Nov. 15-17. Anyone interested in joining the club can stop by 434 Student Union or call club president Arik Colbath at 545-3437.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Casey Kane.

NCAA Div. I Field Hockey Top 20

1. Virginia	11. Michigan State
2. North Carolina	12. Northwestern
3. Iowa	13. Maryland
4. Old Dominion	14. Wake Forest
5. Massachusetts	15. Temple
6. Northeastern	16. William & Mary
7. Duke	17. Princeton
8. Connecticut	18. James Madison
9. Ball State	19. Penn State
10. Boston University	20. Lafayette

Soccer News Women's Top 25

1. Notre Dame	14. Minnesota
2. North Carolina	15. Virginia
3. Connecticut	16. Duke
4. Santa Clara	17. Stanford
5. Portland	18. Wisconsin
6. Maryland	19. James Madison
7. Florida	20. San Diego State
8. Texas A&M	21. Kentucky
9. Massachusetts	22. UNC-Greensboro
10. Nebraska	23. UCLA
11. William & Mary	24. Penn State
12. Harvard	25. N.C. State
13. Clemson

Soccer News Men's Top 25

1. Duke	15. Michigan State
2. Creighton	16. Indiana
3. Cal State-Fullerton	17. Portland
4. Virginia	18. Rutgers
5. St. John's	19. George Mason
6. Fresno State	20. Maryland
7. Santa Clara	21. James Madison
8. UCLA	22. UNC-Charlotte
9. Clemson	23. UNC-Greensboro
10. Washington	24. College of Charleston
11. Florida International	25. Wake Forest
12. Southern Methodist
13. Cornell
14. Massachusetts

■ Calipari

continued from page 14

around," he said. "I want the players to understand I'm not accepting 'Let's just be competitive.'

"But there can be no immediate gratification, no quick fixes. I don't walk on water," he said.

SOME THINGS ABOUT AUSTRALIA ARE A LITTLE CONFUSING.
STUDYING THERE SHOULDN'T BE ONE OF THEM.
Thinking of study abroad "Down Under?" Here's how we can help. We'll simplify the application process, assist you with your visa, help you get enrolled in the right courses at the right university, and ensure that you arrive on campus well-oriented, ready to study successfully and to have a good time. There are limits, though. We can't explain the existence of a duck-billed, webbed-footed mammal that can lay eggs. Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs or call for a free catalog today.
Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.888.BEAVER-9 (1.888.232.8379) cea@beaver.edu • http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

take Kaplan and get into the right school.
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
• Highly trained, expert teachers who know the tests inside and out.
• Personalized, computerized study plans, tailored to your individual needs.
• Proven methods, guaranteed to raise your score.
the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

MICHAEL BILLIARDS
Voted Best! 1996
$5/Hr. Everyday Unlimited Players!
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8- 9 ft. Tables
• Live Entertainment Every Fri. & Sat.
• All Sporting Events
• Every Thursday Night $5 Cash 8-Ball Tournament 7:30 pm
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Saturday Crawdad's 9:30-12:30. 21+

HR Hoffman Recruiters
• Consulting • Biotechnology
• Accounting • Engineering
• Software Development • Investment Banking
• Internet Technology • Sales and Marketing
Attention Masters Candidates & Undergraduate SENIORS
Hoffman Recruiters is a career matching service which will give you exposure to multiple potential employers at no cost or obligation and with only one first-round interview.
★ Widen your job search to include companies which don't recruit at your school
★ Gain exposure to multiple companies with only one first-round interview
★ The half-hour interview will take place on your college campus
★ Your career preferences will be matched with all available positions
★ You decide which companies to pursue further
★ This is a FREE service for students
★ All sign-ups are done over the Internet for your convenience
http://www.HoffmanResources.com/recruit.html
Questions? Call us toll free at 1-888-5-RECRUIT

JUST DO IT
OPEN Rush: Sept. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13
Formal Rush: Sept. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
8:00 P.M. 418 N. Pleasant Street
Please Contact Eric Spitz (Rush Chairman)
549-0676

Collegian Sports
it's not all fun and games

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Play Womee's Rugby! Fun and challenging. Daily 4-6pm. Call Mel @ 256-5470.

CHINESE FOOD KAI CHI delivering Sunday-Thursday to 2 am. Friday and Saturday to 3 am

The Sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to congratulate our newest Ribbonettes Farreh, Heather, Jamie, Michele, and Stefany.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 Bedroom apartment in Pulfton For info call 549-5841

2 Bedroom. Squire Village- Rest of month for free- looking for someone to take over lease immediately- Mike 665-7922

AUTO FOR SALE

90 Geo Prizm Excellent condition $3600/80 584-8382 Ask for Mum

GREAT CAR

1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme. Good running condition. Best offer. Call 545-3007 or 834-5732

MAZDA - '91 323 HATCHBACK. 79,000 mi., very good condition, sunroof, tune-up work just done. $2900 OBO. Call 549-7286

1983 Olds. Delta 88 for sale New tires, rotors, wheels. Panasonic Stereo System, $750 Call 253-7758

'87 Ford Ranger New engine, great shape. Call Amy 253-1926

'79 Dodge Van Automatic. May inspection sticker. Runs Great $900 256-1300

1984 Ford Tempo PS PB AT AC Runs well a must at $750 256-6118

1985 Buick Wagon Good condition, new transmission $900 David 549-8273

1984 Bronco II Well maintained $3750 bo 367-0384

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1986 Mazda reliable, 5 speed AM/FM cassette $900 665-9246

EMPLOYMENT

Spring Break!! Earn Cash! Highest Commissions! Lowest Prices! Travel free on only 13 sales! Free Info! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710

Cruise Ships Hiring- Earn up to $20,000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal and Full Time positions. No exp. necessary. For info. call 1-206-971-3550 Ext C50015

National Parks Hiring- Positions are now available at National Parks, Forest, and Wildlife Preserves. Excellent benefits and bonuses! Call 1-206-971-3620 Ext. N50016

Tropical Resorts Hiring- Students needed! Entry level and career positions available worldwide. Call Resort Employment Services 206-971-3600 Ext. R50012

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS! Over $6 Billion in public and private sector Grants and scholarships are now available. All students are eligible. Let us help. For more info call 1-800-263-6495 Ext F50014

International Employment- Earn up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational english in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian Languages required. For info, call 206-971-3570 Ext. J50015

Attention Skiers and Boarders. Entry level positions into the ski industry with skiing benefits. Make up to $1000/month. Part time enthusiastic individuals please call Ski Card International 1-800-333-2582

Babysitter Needed for 4 year old Tues and Thurs 3:30-6:00 Call Michele at 256-8632

Now Hiring All Shifts Closing shifts available with bonus program Hadley Burger King. Ask for Tim 584-5110

Business Opportunity. Need additional income? Want the energy to earn it? Earth Friendly Company looking for distributors Wild Organic food, free tape 1-800-927-2527 ext. 7388

Survey Personnel Needed for PVTA Ridership survey- In order to improve bus service, The Ridership of all PVTA bus routes in the Amherst Area will be surveyed during the week of October 20 through October 26. Each bus route will be surveyed several times throughout the week. Surveyors will be paid $7.00 to $8.00 an hour to distribute survey forms, answer questions and collect survey forms. All shifts available. For more information please call 413-781-6045, Pioneer Valley Planning Commission, 26 Central Street West Springfield, MA 01089. An EOE/AA Employer.

Now Hiring! Great pay doing odd jobs, flexible hours, call Andrew 584-8070

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Plus Free Delivery 253-3742

Available now! 2BDR townhouse on bus line $630/month Squire Village 665-2203

FOR SALE

Fridge w/Freezer 4ft tall, mint. Call Kelly 549-0920 $90 or BO

PINBALL MACHINE. Reconditioned $1,000.00 (413) 253-5363

Futon, Double, Frame and Custom Cover $200.00 (OBO) 548-9728

Stereo Systems and components, used/reconditioned. Large selection, honest advice, warranty, great prices. We buy audio, video, DJ, musical equipment. Stereo and Video Exchange at Jackson's Fine Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call Amherst, 256-1941

SALE Dorm Fridge $125, Word Processor $100 Call 546-1576

Waterbed Oak, Queen, Drawers $225 549-6412

I have 4 Dave Matthews Tix Oct 4 MSG Need to sell Call Karen 549-5079

Notebook Computer 8 mb Ram 120 HD Both expandable Microsoft/Office with case $700 256-1309 _____ a.

Futon Double with frame and cover $150 BO Waterbed, Queen, Semi-waveless with headboard $150 BO 549-5362

Red-tailed Boa 3yrs old, 4.5 ft long, plus 40 gallon tank, needs good home $150 or B/O Rick 548-1811

Smithcorona electric typewriter w/ mem $50 /Rollerblades- Women's 8 5/9 $45 call Tarae 549-3994

FOR SALE

Dave Matthews tickets 8 in 14th row call Aaron at 546-0562

Basement Sale! Everything must go! 549-1578

Panasonic extra bass stereo; detach speakers Cd+ dual cassette Bnew $200/BO CJ 6-1910

Bar Size Pool Table by United. Perfect condition. Includes everything! Interested? Call Scott and Dom @ 256-1088

FOUND

Found- Compact Disk in Student Union Lounge- identify 586-8831

Found- set of keys on an old beaded hemp necklace call 546-4683

Found key chain with Army guy and one Bronze house key call 549-4088

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Teacher Beginners to advanced students - Call Steven Page 253-3354

WWW SUCESS.ORG Free business education from Amercon Institute Entrepreneurship and Real Estate Investment Courses! Retire rich in ten years.

Boxing Lessons w/Dyna Bumpus Call for brochure 732-8817

LOST

Gray Female Lhasa Apso lost 8/17 Main St. Responds to Nala 549-9847

MUSICIANS

Guitar Classes Start 9/10. Rentals and Lessons Available 10wks / $40.00 FT/JG Pad 545-0579

Blues Jam Toes 8.00pm Emerson 112 Check it out.

MISCELLANEOUS

Questions about your lease/ Security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/ assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PERSONALS

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance 549-1906

Hi Admurei! I had to pay for my own ad. The lines were too long, so I called in my ad. Yes, I am always looking for new friends and gaming partners. You know what I look like. When do I get to see you, meet you, talk to you? How do I know this isn't just my roommate playing a practical joke on me?
Mr. Interested

Happy B Day Dizzy Lizzy! That's right! You're our #1 Bongee Love, Your old and new roommies!

ROOM FOR RENT

One Undergrad needed share 2 bedroom, 2 full baths, ceiling fans ++ free heat/hot water Call here @ 549-8089

2 Bedrooms Available in 4 Bedroom Apt. Northampton on bus route Beautiful Apt., great location. Call 586-1612

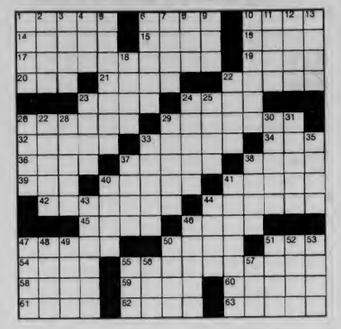
SERVICES

COMPUTER PROBLEMS? Need an upgrade? In-house service, call Scream Savers 549-0083

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH Find out how hundreds of student representatives are already earning free trips and lots of cash with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! Campus Manager positions also available. Call now! Take a break! Student Travel (800)95-Break!

WANTED TO RENT



Seeking 3BDR Apartment/ house needed ASAP call 546-8077

WANTED

Hockey Players Wanted- Mullins Center Hockey League is looking for experienced players. Harold 545-3990 or 546-0400

Wanted 100 People. New Metabolism breakthrough. Lose 5-100 lbs. Guaranteed. Cost $35. 1-800-776-9503

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Harmonize
6. Mince
10. Kauai's neighbor
14. Copland or Spelling
15. They try harder
16. David's news partner in the '60s
17. Official copy
19. Domesticate
20. Lisa or Maggie, to Bart
21. Pork fat
22. Groundwork
23. Scientist Sir Humphry ___
24. "___ Peake"
26. Gain
29. Cultivated plots
32. Fur ___
33. Diminishes
34. Admiring exclamation
36. Frenzied
37. Prevail
38. Ill temper
39. Actor Beatty
40. Minute
41. Conundrum
42. Fills the Minolta again
44. Mother with a Nobel Prize
45. TV trophy
46. Where Rhett came to call
47. Speed
50. Leif's son
51. ___ the breeze (chitchat)
54. Sleep ___ (postpone a decision)
55. Hasten
58. Dull one
59. Derisive laugh
60. Du Pont discovery of 1935
61. Stunning blow
62. Vegas machine
63. Enthrall

DOWN

1. "Memory" show
2. Last name in spydom
3. Gershwin and Levin
4. ___ Oncle d'Amerique
5. Dominate
6. Author Golden
7. Desirous
8. Drink slowly
9. After FDR
10. Anti-knock rating
11. Cries of discovery
12. Half- prefix
13. Shoshonean Indians
18. Batman's headquarters
22. Estimates in envelopes
23. Frisbee, e.g.
24. Flavorful
25. Small songbird
26. College official
27. First name in wabbit-hunting
28. ___Janeiro
29. Profits
30. Clamor
31. Shoe bottoms
33. Scrawny
35. Greek goddess of marriage
37. Enlarge, as a hole
38. North wind
40. Drink ___ only . . ." (Ben Jonson)
41. Agent's commission
43. Piece of mail
44. Peacock's showy feature
46. Bribery for a tot
47. Freddie the Freeloader, e.g.
48. Ever and ___
49. Regal title
50. Audio reflection
51. Salve
52. Over
53. Canvas shelter
55. Sounds of appreciation
56. Pres. between Warren and Herb
57. Pocket filler in a nursery rhyme

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Taking a different perspective will help you solve a problem at home. Take a step back from the situation. It will pay off later. Good advice from a relative could benefit your career. Listen carefully.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Stick to the necessities when shopping. Finances may become tight later in the month. A surprise phone call will leave you wondering. Don't second-guess your gut feeling. Plan a casual evening at home with some friends.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

You will get your way more easily if you treat people with respect. Smile this morning and be friendly. People will appreciate you. Don't let a financial situation get you down this week. It is only temporary. A romantic interlude will lift your spirits soon.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

People might drop by in the evening without notice. Don't get flustered. Just enjoy their company. It's the perfect chance to repay a favor. Take advantage of the situation. Start keeping a journal to stay on top of things.

LEO
July 23-August 23

Things at work go just as you want them to. Your hard work has finally paid off. There may be a few obstacles toward the end of the week. Don't let them get you down. Take it as a chance to show your skills. For a relaxing weekend, invite a few friends over and stay in.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

Be more patient with people who make demands on your time. Go out of your way to help someone who is confused. They need your kind words. An old friend will make an unexpected appearance. It is fun to reminisce, but don't dwell on the past.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

Postpone a big decision until next week. You will be more objective after you have slept on it for a few nights. Buy something new for yourself this weekend. Seek the offbeat or unusual. It will boost your self-confidence. Get to bed early.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

Follow your basic values when confronted with a problem. They've pulled you through every time and they will do it again. Remember words of advice from an elder that you've used before. They will make a difficult time a little easier.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

Love is in the air! Follow your heart, not your mind. The right person could be in your presence already. You just need to let it happen. Don't keep analyzing everything. Some cherry news will arrive and brighten an otherwise dreary day.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Something you've been struggling with will suddenly become very simple. Your persistence will finally pay off. Soon the rest of your plans will also come together. Hold off on a new commitment until you've resolved your current situation.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18

Don't be afraid to ask for a helping hand. You may need it more than you know. Show a little more affection to a loved one. Make a special call later in the week, just to say you care. You'll be glad that you did. Catch up on your personal correspondence.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

Don't overreact to a domestic conflict early in the week. It will resolve itself by the weekend. You don't want to say something to a relative that you don't mean. Make a promise to yourself and keep it. Try to balance your time between work and play.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 545-2572

Full Service Bar • Weekly Drink Specials
Daily Food Specials From 4:00 to 7:00
Hours: 4:00 to 12:30 Monday - Friday
3:00 to 12:30 Saturday

Thursday Nite Line-up:
8:00 Friends
9:00 Seinfeld
10:00 E.R.

NEED IT, FIND IT!
Find what your looking for in the Collegian Classifieds

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
CUSTOMER APPRECIATION SALE
25% OFF
ENTIRE STOCK!*
FRIDAY ONLY!
9:30am-9:30pm
Great Savings On Name Brand Sporting Goods!
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
STORE LOCATIONS
*SOME RESTRICTIONS APPLY. SEE STORE FOR DETAILS. PRIOR PURCHASES EXCLUDED

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m.
	Increasing Self-Esteem, Building Self-confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self-esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self-confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m.		Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.
	Letting Go and Moving On— This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group. Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

Robotman By Jim Meddil

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winck

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

8 Years In Braces By Eric Peterson

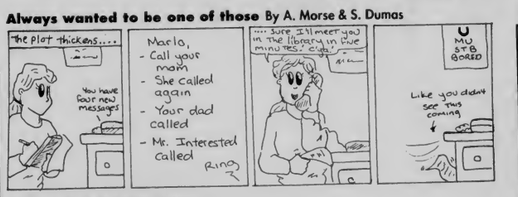
University2 By Frank Cho

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

When I would go to a party I'd get very nervous that no one would want to talk to me..... which would make me even more nervous.

So I would sit by myself terrified that I looked lonely and uninteresting.

But after a while a friend came over and sat with me. Whew, releived! I reminded him that I owed him some money and that I would pay him a dollar right now.



Pretty soon a girl came over to talk to him. Then a girl came over to talk to the first girl. After a while I was surrounded by people.

I started to feel anxious and slipped over to a quiet dark corner where no one would bother me.

I felt a little lonely and miserable, and.... I lost a dollar.

Always wanted to be one of those By A. Morse & S. Dumas

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Bastards By Matt & Gregg

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Oh, one more thing. If Gregory starts to show any signs that he might throw a tantrum, lock yourself inside the cage, put on the helmet and call 911 immediately."

YOUR COMIC COULD BE HERE
instead of this stupid ad
TO RUN A STRIP IN THE COLLEGIAN CONTACT CHRIS CONNER, MANAGING EDITOR • 545-1672

Quote of the Morning

"It can't rain all the time, the sky can't fall forever."

–Jane Siberry

Quote of the Afternoon

"You gotta give respect just to earn respect."

–Shootyz Groove

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Jennifer Jutras
Photo Technician

Josh Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Joylyn Lombard
Jack Myers
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll Jalapeno Shrimp & Rice Veal Parmesan Sandwich	Szechuan Beef & Brocc. Baked Ziti Breaded Chicken Tenders

Hampden

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll Grilled Chicken Sand. Veal Parmesan Sandwich	Szechuan Beef & Broccoli Baked Ziti

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet Sand. Bow Ties, Italian Sausage, & Sauce Lightburger	Szechuan Beef & Brocc. SzechuanTofu & Brocc Pastabilities Chichen Cacciatore

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet Sand. Bowties, Sausage&Sauce Worcester Breakfast Sand. Lightburger	Szec. Tofu/Beef & Brocc. Chichen Cacciatore Chicken De Carlos Pastabilities

ATTENTION CLUB, CO-REC, AND INTRAMURAL TEAMS:

We here at The Collegian sports desk are looking to inform the campus about some of UMass' less-publicized teams.

Send us a brief rundown of what your team has been up to and we'll let people know. The column will run each Thursday, so deadline is 12 p.m. Wednesday. You can drop off info in person or via fax. Call Sports Editors Chris or Casey at 535-0719 with any questions.

Sports

The Massachusetts women's tennis match at Amherst College was called off on account of rain. No make-up date has been scheduled for the match. The Minutewomen are in action this weekend when they travel to Princeton, N.J. for the Eastern Championships.

Minutemen end win streak in 1–1 tie with UNH

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The No. 12 Minutemen (3-0-1) hosted New Hampshire (0- 4-1) yesterday at Richard F. Garber Field, and just couldn't get it going as

Massachusetts	1
New Hampshire	1
OVERTIME

they tied the Wildcats 1-1 in overtime.

Just 6:12 into the game, New Hampshire's Brian Rota served up a long ball into the 18 yard box where sophomore forward Mike Keevan took Minuteman keeper Tim Pearson to the lower left corner giving the Wildcats a quick 1-0 edge.

"UNH came out tough and wanting to win," said UMass forward Mike Butler. "We took them a little soft because they came in 0-4. Overall, our performance was just good, there are a lot of things we need to work on, but it's still early in the season so things are still looking good regardless."

At nearly the nine minute mark, UMass surged back to try to even the score. Senior Dave Siljanovski surgically placed the ball inside the penalty box on a corner kick, but the Minutemen couldn't capitalize. Following up the shot, Siljanovski got a foot on the ball, but sent it long and out of bounds.

In the following minutes, UMass struggled to keep control of the ball, spurring a few breaks down the sides by Siljanovski and sophomore midfielder Jake Brodsky, but struggled to finish.

Massachusetts was down, but they weren't out.

In the 22nd minute, junior midfielder Tobias Bremke broke through the UNH defense, only to be mauled by a Wildcat defenseman in the penalty box, prompting a penalty shot. Siljanovski made good as his shot hit home in the lower left to knot the score at one.

With 18:57 to go in the half, junior forward Mike Butler smoked by two UNH defenders to find Jake Brodsky inside the 18. Brodsky managed a soft one-touch shot that was deflected by Wildcat keeper Ethan Holmes. After failing to cash in on the ensuing corner kick, senior defender Joe Iacobson sent UNH's David Fransisco to the pitch while trying to control the goal kick the other way and was given the games first yellow card. The second yellow came with 6:38 to go when Siljanovski was tangled up with a New Hampshire defender.

From then on it was a stalemate. Throughout the second half, neither squad managed to control the ball consistently. While each team had a series of breakaway runs at the net, neither squad had any luck finishing them off.

In the final minute of the game, both squads had a chance to finish the other off. With 1:15 to go, UMass sent a ball from the right side into the box, where a handful of Minutemen were unable to get off a shot. The Wildcats put up a surge of its own in the final seconds of regulation, as Keevan bolted through the UMass midfield, firing off a shot at the 18 that went over the top.

The tables turned in both of the two fifteen minute overtime sets. While UMass struggled early in the first OT with Siljanovski, Butler, and midfielder Rob Cairo on the bench after playing the entire 90 minutes of regulation., UNH came alive in the second set.

Controlling the ball from the kickoff, the Wildcats managed three consecutive corner kicks at one point, but didn't manage to score, thanks to the solid play of UMass keeper Tim Pearson, whose three game shutout streak was broken in the tie. New Hampshire saw it had a chance to knock off a nationally ranked opponent, and they battled to the end, but couldn't score.

"We didn't work the ball as well as we can, we didn't have the combinations, we had some individual performances by certain players and that is not the way we play. We're not good when we play like that," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "I told the guys after the game, 'you are only as good as the players around you. If you don't work hard off the ball, we drop down a notch.'"

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Mike Butler and the Men's soccer team held off New Hampshire in a 1-1 overtime tie yesterday at Garber Field.

UM's rookie keeper holding his own; Pearson helps UM out of loss column

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

Entering the season with a goalkeeping duo that had just 108 minutes playing experience between them was a scary thought for the Massachusetts men's soccer team. However, after allowing just one goal in four games, including three straight shutouts, no position has been more solid.

Entering spring practices, the goalkeeping job was up for grabs between sophomore Jeff Jablonski, and red-shirt freshman Tim Pearson. Both were impressive during games against Brown and Duke as the two goalies played well throughout the preseason. Despite a spectacular save on a penalty kick against Duke by Jablonski, the job was eventually given to the slightly more consistent Pearson.

"They both have practiced extremely hard. Although Tim is starting, Jeff has kept it up, and I believe that this has worked as a force to push both of them to higher levels," goalkeeping coach Jon Voight said.

Pearson's play has been outstanding. In his collegiate debut he held a tough Boston University team scoreless, including a stop from within 18 yards late in the game.

He followed up this stellar performance with another sparkling game, as he kept Holy Cross from lighting up the scoreboard. Through the first two games, he was the anchoring force in a stingy UMass defense.

As if this was not a good enough start, Pearson recorded his third straight shutout as the Minutemen defeated the Black Bears of the University of Maine by the score of 1-0. In this game he turned away 15 shots, including a barrage right before the half.

Three games, three shutouts, three wins. Impressive numbers for any keeper, not to mention one that is still learning the college game.

"Although it has been hard work, it has also been a lot easier than I expected," Pearson said.

Pearson's string of perfection ended yesterday, when UMass tied the University of New Hampshire 1-1 in overtime. UNH netted the first goal allowed by Massachusetts this season at 6:12 of the first half. The goal derived from a nice touch pass, that required a gamble by the keeper. The positioning of the incoming attacker left Pearson with too many options to defend. Either Pearson could play the pass and go for the ball, or he could stay home and play the shot.

Pearson elected to go with his instincts and played the shot, and although it did not work out, it was not really a mistake.

"I think that Tim took a pretty good shot at it. You can't expect him to come up with it on a shot like that all the time," Head Coach Sam Koch said.

Despite the goal the Minutemen were able to record a tie against UNH, much to the credit of Pearson. He almost singlehandedly preserved the tie, during a three corner kick barrage put forth by UNH during the second overtime. While

Turn to ROOKIE, page 10

Brockington back on track for UMass

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Finally the time has come.

You can't help but think these must have been the words that have been lurking in the back of the mind of UMass' senior fullback Ron Brockington for quite some time now.

In a career that has involved extreme patience, frustration and injury, Ron Brockington would have liked all his seasons to begin as this one has.

Coming out of Hempstead High School in New York as one of the top 50 players in America in 1991, and from a school which has seen a number of players go on to the National Football League, pressure was something that Brockington would be no stranger to throughout his career.

"I felt pressure especially my senior year," Brockington said. "I felt it from other schools, coaches and teachers. It's been a tradition at my high school to have good athletes."

Recruited by some of the top programs in the nation including Syracuse, BC and Indiana, Brockington opted to go to Syracuse and play for the Orangemen.

"There were three other guys from my high school that went there, it was only four hours away, and the situation just seemed right," Brockington said.

Brockington was redshirted his first season, which means he practiced with the team but was not allowed to play in any games. However he had four eligible playing seasons after that year.

"I expected to be redshirted; they had a lot of good running backs there," Brockington said. "I took the opportunity to learn the offense, get bigger and compete for a position."

However, the Orangemen apparently did not know the type of player they had in Brockington throughout his first two years there. They must have overlooked those high school stats that saw him as the school's all-time leading rusher for 3,520 yards in his career, with an average of 6.1 yards per carry.

They must have missed one of the 47 touchdowns he compiled, 25 as a senior, and 1,290 yards rushing, a single season school record.

He was named Gatorade New York state player of the year, a USA Today Honorable Mention All-America selection, an All-State and All-Long Island selection, in addition to winning other awards.

Brockington was only given the opportunity to play in one game his second year at Syracuse and felt frustrated, believing his services would be better appreciated elsewhere.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Ron Brockington

"After my second year, things weren't working out the way they should have been," Brockington said. "I felt like I could contribute somewhere else a lot quicker than they had me playing."

After his second year in 1993, Syracuse's loss of a high school All-Star running back was the University of Massachusetts' gain. Brockington transferred to UMass in 1994 and began his career as a Minuteman, with three eligible seasons left.

Brockington said he was influenced to attend UMass by a former standout cornerback, Breon Parker. Parker, who graduated last year, attended the same high school in New York as Brockington.

"Breon told me the situation was good as far as running backs," Brockington said. "He gave me all the goods and bads and what to expect when I got here."

In his first season at UMass, Brockington joined one of the strongest backfields in the country, led by All-America back Rene Ingoglia. He played in all 11 games but rushed for just 225 yards on 51 carries, and two TDs.

"It was like a learning process," Brockington said. "Rene helped me out learning the offense, and I knew my role. I was discouraged a little bit, but I just knew I had to wait for my time."

For Brockington, 1994 was just a chance to finally get back to playing, something that was absent in Syracuse.

"My goal was I just wanted to play," Brockington said. "Last time I played was in high school and I anticipated playing in a college game. I just wanted to contribute the best I could."

Brockington goes about his business quietly, and in more words than not, says he lets his playing ability do the talking for him.

"I keep kind of like a poker face, so nobody can tell what I'm thinking or get a read on me," Brockington said.

For Brockington, Massachusetts is a place he feels welcome and one which he feels comfortable in.

"It's a family atmosphere and everybody supports everybody," Brockington said. "There are no individuals on this team and no one relies on one person. There are no unselfish players."

Entering the 1995 season, all looked very

Turn to BROCKINGTON, page 11

Vols, Gators to mix it up, BC could be Wolverine bait

Well people, it's been a month since the college football season started and I think that this week we can finally say that we're through screwing around. Twenty-two of the top 25 teams are in action this week, and there's some serious dookie about to go down.

There's a rumor that No. 2 Tennessee and No. 4 Florida are playing a football game this weekend. Correction. Tennessee and Florida are going to war on Saturday.

I'm thoroughly convinced that if Tennessee loses another game to the Gators, they'll invade the state of Florida and end the madness. This is a huge game, not only for the SEC but for the entire country. The winner of this game is going to have a big say in who wins the SEC, and the winner of the SEC is going to have a big say in who wins the national championship.

The pressure is on the Vols. They're at home, and the Knoxville faithful want to see blood after last year's second half collapse, where Tennessee took a 30-21 lead into halftime and left with a 62-37 loss. (Ouch.) For All- American golden boy Peyton Manning, this may be the biggest game as far as the Heisman voters are concerned, and a performance anything close to last year's could trash those hopes pretty quick.

Florida, on the other hand, "don't give a #$&%", if I may quote Smoky from the silver screen's "Friday."

They know it'll be tough to go up to Knoxville and beat the Vols. They proved all they could last year by blowing through the SEC en route to the Fiesta Bowl. I realize they were spanked by Nebraska, but honestly, the Dallas Cowboys would've had trouble with last year's Huskers.

This is supposed to be Tennessee's year. In a state where there's Vols football, Elvis and, well, not much else, they're counting on Manning to lead them to the promised land. Will he? We'll know more Sunday.

After going out to Boulder and beating a Top 5 team in Colorado last Saturday, (Coach Carr, just punt the ball!) Michigan gets this week off to recuperate.

I mean, they have to play Boston College at home, but seriously, that's like a week off.

Props to the Wolverines, who rebounded from a sluggish performance in their season-opener against Illinois and whipped the Buffs in their place. Scott Dreisenbach actual-

Turn to GATORS, page 11

Calipari brings NBA to Mullins Center

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Former Massachusetts men's basketball coach John Calipari will return to the William D. Mullins Center on Oct. 13 at 7 p.m. for an NBA exhibition game.

The New Jersey Nets will face the Washington Bullets in the preseason matchup, which marks the first time NBA talent ventures to the Mullins Center.

The Nets feature Kerry Kittles, Ed O'Bannon and Shawn Bradley. Former Michigan teammates Chris Webber and All-Star Juwan Howard headline the Bullets' roster.

Tickets are now available for the game through the Mullins Center Box Office or for an additional charge through Ticketmaster outlets. They are also available with an additional charge through charge-by-phone by calling (413) 733-2500. Tickets are $23 and $15, with limited premium courtside seating available.

The first 500 students with valid ID at the Mullins Center Box Office only will receive a $5 discount. Groups of 15 or more will receive a $2 per ticket discount by calling (413) 545-3001. For more ticket information call the Mullins Center Box Office at (413) 545-0505.

The game will mark the first return to the Mullins Center for Calipari. He will also be at UMass tomorrow to sign copies of his new book Refuse to Lose, at the University Store in the Campus Center.

The game will also mark former UMass assistant Ed Schilling's return to the campus. Schilling was tagged, along with former Boston Celtics' assistant Don Casey, for the assistant duties in East Rutherford, N.J.

Calipari was pleased with the prospect of returning to his former home court.

"What's better than this: bringing an NBA game to a great facility, great fans, helping the University of Massachusetts, and coming home.

"I am very excited about this game," he said.

After coaching the Minutemen for eight years, Calipari left the University in June to become head coach of the Nets. His resignation from the UMass program came on the heels of the best season of basketball in Minuteman history.

Calipari led his UMass squad to an unprecedented fifth Atlantic 10 title, its first-ever Associated Press Top 25 No. 1 ranking and its first-ever Final Four appearance.

Calipari has coached former Minuteman standouts Tony Barbee, Lou Roe and Marcus Camby. Last June, Barbee was named an assistant coach under new men's basketball coach James "Bruiser" Flint. Also last June, Camby was chosen as the second pick overall by the Toronto Raptors in the NBA Draft.

The 36-year-old Calipari took over the Nets program with the intention of rebuilding the NBA team, just as he rebuilt the Massachusetts hoop program.

In an interview with Fred Kerber, published in the July 10 New York Post, Calipari addressed the fans' concerns of rebuilding the program.

"I absolutely would not have taken this job if I didn't think we were going to turn this thing

COLLEGIAN FILE

Former UMass basketball coach John Calipari will bring his New Jersey Nets to the Mullins Center to play the Washington Bullets on Oct. 13

Turn to CALIPARI, page 11

UM non–varsity news

Editors note: This is the first in a new column series called Sports Briefs that the Collegian will run throughout the year, focusing on club, recreational, and intramural sports. This column was designed to feature the athletes and teams involved in non–varsity sports.

Sports Briefs will run once a week or once every two weeks, depending on the response from the club, rec, and intramural teams.

For more information on the new column or info on how to submit items for Sports Briefs call co-sports editors Casey Kane or Chris Stamm at 545-0719.

SPORTS BRIEFS

With the new school year now in full swing there are several intramural, recreational and club teams which are looking for members.

• The men's club lacrosse team is looking for prospective new members. The team serves interested students who want to play lacrosse, but are not on the varsity level. The program consists of six weeks of Fall Ball, six weeks of indoor box league, and three months of in-season spring lacrose.

The 12-game schedule includes the Princeton and Yale B- Varsity teams, and the SUNY–Farmingdale, Williams, Army, and Harvard junior varsities.

Turn to SPORTS , page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 13 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, September 20, 1996

"She's in love with the boy."

Trisha Yearwood brings her country hits to the Big E this Sunday. Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Minutewomen face rival Hawks

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Massachusetts Lacross team travel to chestnut Hill to take on the Eagles of Boston College. (See Sports page 10)

WORLD

200 troops sent to Kuwait by Clinton

By Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

KUWAIT — Although rhetoric has softened and tension eased, the American military boosted its presence in the Persian Gulf Thursday with more ground troops and 75 warplanes to patrol Iraqi skies.

Soon, more than 30,000 U.S. military personnel and 200 American planes will be in the region, most aboard three dozen ships in the Gulf.

A total of 200 American soldiers landed Thursday at Kuwait International Airport, the vanguard of 3,500 soldiers sent by President Clinton to protect Kuwait.

The soldiers from the Fort Hood, Texas-based 1st Cavalry Division join 1,200 others who have been training for weeks in the Kuwaiti desert on 120 Abrams M1-A1 tanks and 60 Bradley fighting vehicles.

NATION

AIDS info leaked by drunk health worker

By Pat Leisner
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — A copy of a confidential computer disk containing the names of 4,000 AIDS patients was mailed anonymously to a newspaper after a drunken public health worker showed it to friends and dropped it outside a bar.

The Tampa Tribune said it gave a copy of the disk and the letter that came with it to the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, which on Thursday launched an investigation into the breach of confidentiality.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement also began its own probe.

The newspaper said it has no plans to publish or otherwise use the names.

Nobody knows how many copies of the disk have been made, or who has them. If the allegations prove true, it could be the worst violation of AIDS confidentiality in history.

"We have determined there has been a breach of confidentiality. To what level, we don't know yet," said Elaine Fulton-Jones, a spokeswoman for the Pinellas County Health Department.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 65	HIGH: 75 LOW: 70	HIGH: 75 LOW: 65

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 6
Comics.....page 7
Crossword .....page 7
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 1
Sports .....page 8

Olver to hold rally Saturday; re–election to be announced

Congressman will reach out to community with bus trip

By Raghuram Vadarevu
Collegian Staff

Congressman John Olver (D-Amherst) will be holding a kick-off rally for his re-election campaign at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst on Saturday night at 7 p.m.

"He (Olver) will officially announce his candidacy for re-election for the first district," said Patrick Riccards, press secretary for the Olver re-election campaign.

The kick-off rally will cap off a day-long bus trip called the "Workhorse Express."

The trip, scheduled to begin in Berkshire county, will go through Hampden and Worcester counties.

The trip will end in Olver's hometown of Amherst, said Riccards.

The bus trip sites were chosen because each of the cities contain an Olver campaign headquarters, according to Riccards.

A press release revealed that the trip will start at the Old Bessie Clarke Building in Pittsfield at 10 a.m.

Then at 12:30 p.m., the bus will stop at the Olver campaign headquarters in Westfield and at 4 p.m., it will arrive at the Veteran's Center in Leominster before coming to Amherst.

"Amherst and UMass (University of Massachusetts) has been a big part of his legislative concerns and will play a major role in the (November) election," Riccards said.

"I think it is great that he (Olver) is going to speak in Amherst," said Jason Vecchio, the student coordinator for the Student Council for Educational Research and Advocacy.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Congressman John Olver

"I really wish he will come to campus," said Vecchio, one of the coordinators for the UMass Student Government Association's voter registration campaign.

According to Riccards, Congressman Olver will not be able to make the debate with state Senator Jane Swift (R- North Adams), but will make many visits to UMass during the election season.

This past July, the SGA invited Congressman Olver and state Sen. Swift to a debate in October.

The debate was a part of the SGA voter education program for the voter registration campaign.

Sen. Swift accepted an invitation to attend the debate, but Olver declined, citing commitments to five other debates in the first district.

The kick-off was originally planned for the University's Campus Center Auditorium, but the auditorium was no longer available for the event, said Riccards.

Congressman Olver will participate in a debate with state Sen. Swift on Springfield's channel 57, Sept. 29 from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m., said an Olver Campaign official.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

One–Wheeling

"Tom" unicycles his way to class yesterday.

Calipari back on campus to promote Refuse to Lose

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Former men's basketball coach John Calipari returns to the University of Massachusetts campus today to promote and sign copies of his newly released book Refuse to Lose, outside of the University Store from 11:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.

The book, Calipari's first writing venture, was co-written by Dick Weiss. Weiss, who has helped many noted sports professionals pen their thoughts, co-wrote Rick Pitino's Full Court Pressure and Dick Vitale's latest, Holding Court.

Calipari is one of the most recognizable figures in UMass basketball, after rebuilding the program from near-oblivion to national power.

Calipari coached the Minutemen for eight years before leaving the school in June to pursue a head coaching career in the NBA. His new position with the New Jersey Nets marks the first pro coaching attempt by Calipari.

Over his years at UMass, Calipari led the Minutemen to an unprecedented five-straight Atlantic 10 titles, five straight NCAA tournament berths, as well as the school's first Sweet 16, Elite Eight and Final Four appearances.

Calipari compiled a 193-71 record at UMass, which gives him a .731 winning percentage. He left UMass as the second winningest coach in school history and the career leader in winning percentage.

In his final season at the Minuteman helm, Calipari was awarded with the Boost/Naismith National Coach of the Year Award. In addition, he was named the Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year three times.

He has coached a number of Minuteman standouts, including new UMass assistant coach Tony Barbee, former Detroit Piston Lou Roe and current Toronto Raptor Marcus Camby. Under Calipari, Camby was named the winner of virtually every national Player of the Year award.

Calipari left UMass to become head coach and Executive Vice-President of Basketball of the Nets. In accordance with his new title, Calipari will be responsible for all basketball operations.

"We now feel that we have entrusted our basketball operation in the hands of one of the nation's premier coaches and are very optimistic about the future of the New Jersey Nets," Nets' President Michael Rowe said.

Refuse to Lose examines the success of the 1995-96 season.

"We didn't just break barriers. "We tore them down,"

COURTESY HECTOR/SIERRA SPORTSLIGHT

John Calipari will be signing his new book, Refuse to Lose, on campus today.

Chancellor addresses Faculty Senate

By Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

At this week's Faculty Senate meeting, Chancellor David K. Scott spoke about his Five Year Strategic Action Plan for the University.

One of the main components of the plan is the redistribution of resources available to run the University of Massachusetts system.

While UMass–Amherst has traditionally received approximately 50 percent of the total budget for the University system, according to Scott, the UMass–Amherst campus should actually be receiving 54 percent.

But the increase in percentage will not come directly from the money being allocated.

"It's politically almost impossible to redistribute the base," Scott said. Instead the plan requests a $75 million infusion from state distribution.

Scott's Strategic Action plan will be updated every year to encompass the next five years.

The current plan spans the years 1997–2001. Next year the plan will run up to the year 2002.

"It's a plan that each year gets updated," said Scott, "It will never be finished in our time."

Included in the plan is a provision for the renovation of classrooms. By the end of the next five years, $1.25 million will have been spent on refurbishing classrooms.

Scott said that when he went to look at the classrooms, he was shocked by the poor conditions within the rooms.

He addressed the issue of an increased number of out–of– state students enrolled in the University this year, calling the situation "good in many ways."

Scott said more out–of–state students would benefit the University by making it more popular nationally.

He also recognized the extra problems increased enrollment has brought to the faculty, telling them he realized that it is a "great burden on all of you and your departments."

Scott said that he would like to see entering classes that reflect the diversity of the graduating class of that year.

The chancellor also said that his vision for the University involves trying improve UMass with an emphasis on all departments of education.

Academic statistics reflecting this increased emphasis reveal a change in applicants' scores for the past two years. Average SAT scores have gone up from 995 in the fall 1994 to 1020 or higher in the fall of this year.

Those scores are based on the old scoring system.

"Quality is not measured solely by SAT scores, but it is a good indication if it's set high enough," Scott said. "It cannot be used exclusively."

He was optimistic about the future of the University and the quality of education that it does and will provide undergraduate and graduate students.

"UMass is on the move. It's on the move upwards and nothing will stop us now," Chancellor Scott said.

The University is also seeking to get involved with other institutions of higher education in establishing a grant application system that will be totally electronic.

"I'm not interested in designing a Land Grant AAU University in the traditional model," Scott said.

The American Association of Universities is a national organization comprised of 60 public and private universities. The AAU focuses on schools that are engaged in major research efforts.

After Chancellor Scott finished his remarks, Police Chief and Director Of Public Safety John W. Luippold, Jr. addressed faculty senate on issues facing students and public safety at UMass–Amherst.

"The trends that we see are happening elsewhere on other campuses," Luippold said. "Violence continues to occur on this campus. We're also concerned about alcohol and drug abuse."

Luippold said that while there are problems with crimes on campus, the problems are fairly consistent with what is happening on the national level. Officers are working with residence staff and students to stop problems such as theft, which occur in residence halls.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

It's Electric!

Bob Mikalunas helps to install new electrical services outside Goessman Lab yesterday with Karl's Excavating Sitework.

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PIF, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Sept. 20

Meeting — MASSPIRG volunteers will be meeting at 4 p.m. to tour the stream behind Sylvan Residence Area. Come and make a difference and plan a clean-up. For more information, call Melenie at 5-0199.

Lecture — The Five College Baha'i club is sponsoring a talk by Dr. Dwight Allen on "International Education and the 2+2 Model" in room 283, Hills South 8–10 p.m. For more information, call Jim at 549-5378.

Workshop — The Alliance Christian Fellowship's weekly workshops, TimeOut, will be held at 7 p.m. in room 176 of the Campus Center. TimeOut this week is a Worship Special, featuring a full band. Mark Lloyd will also speak on reaching people with and through the power of Christ.

Saturday, Sept. 21

Concert — Pest 5,000, incredible Force of Junior, Saturnine, Ribon Candy and Star Ghost Dog will play at Greenough Residence Hall at 8:30 p.m. Tickets: $3/UMass student, $4/other. For more information, call 665-7243.

Music — The Hooked on Swing Society presents Blue Rendevous at the Northampton Center for the Arts, located at the intersection of Rts. 9 and 10, opposite the gates of Smith College. The $9 admission includes a free dance lesson with local instructor Jacqueline Maidana at 7:30 p.m. and a dance starting 8:30–11:30 p.m. The next dance will be held on Saturday, Oct. 19. For more information, call 1–800–206–4700.

Sunday, Sept. 22

Meeting — UMass Ski Club's first general meeting, 7 p.m. Campus Center room 163C. All interested skiers and snowboarders welcome. For more information, contact the UMass Ski club, 430 Student Union, or at 545-3437.

Notices

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley offers rides to students to attend the 10 a.m. service in Amherst. Drivers arrive at the Knowlton and Prince bus stops at 9:45. Please call Mark to confirm, or for other stops, at 253-0361.

Everywoman's Center — Acculturation Group for Latina Women, facilitated by Mari Vicente, Thurs. 4–6 p.m. Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Groups: Group 1 facilitated by Sara Elinoff, Mondays 7–9 p.m. Group 2 facilitator, day and time TBA. Coming Out Group For Lesbians, facilitated by Lynne Schachne, Mondays 4–5:30 p.m. Lifting Your Spirits, facilitated by Carla Brennan and Diana Dalendina, Weds. 4–5:30 p.m. Eco–Psychology for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Fridays 10–11:30 a.m. Post Abortion Support Group, facilitated by Peggy Warwick, Wednesdays 5:30–6:30 p.m. Self–Esteem & Assertiveness for Women, facilitated by Carla Brennan, Wednesdays 6:30–8 p.m. Single Mothers Support Group, facilitated by Amy Rosebury, Tuesdays 1–2:30 p.m. Women & Divorce, facilitated by Ali Thompson, Tuesdays 6:30–8 p.m. All groups offered by the Everywoman's Center begin in October and offer a safe and confidential space. For other groups, call 545-0883.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition meets every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in room 306 of the Student Union. For more information, call the ARC office at 5-1925.

tion devoted to helping those coping with grief. REFLECT is offering two free 8–week grief support groups this semester. Groups are forming now. Please call 577–5316 for more information.

Staff Needed — The UMass Index yearbook needs staff in all departments. Editorial positions are available in photo, layout, copy and marketing departments. An assistant copy editor and assistant sports editor are also needed. Meetings are held 7 p.m. Wednesdays in 304 Student Union. Call 545–0848 if interested.

Auditions — The UMass Funk Club begins auditions noon– 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22 in the Campus Center Auditorium. Men and women are welcome. For more information, call 546–2771 or 546–1318.

Community — Womanshelter is a battered woman's shelter located in Holyoke serving the Holyoke/Chicopee area and parts of Hampshire County. Womanshelter has an extensive community education program providing speakers and workshops on the following topics: domestic violence, teen–dating violence, date rape, sexual harassment, domestic violence, children, etc. The services are free of charge, but the Womanshelter will gladly accept donations. For information concerning these programs or to arrange a program date for a group, call Edith Jennings 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at 538–9717.

Support group — Synthesis Center Associate Rebecca Reid leads an ongoing support group for single people over 30 from 7:15–8:45 p.m. in downtown Amherst. Single, divorced, widowed and all sexual orientations are welcome. There is a low fee. For information, call 253–5494.

Religious — The Muslim Student Association at the University of Massachusetts invites all Muslims in the Amherst area to weekly Friday prayer 1–2 p.m. in the Campus Center. The room number will be posted on the Notice Board. For more information, call Utama at 256–8482 or Laili at 253–0874.

Discussion Group — "A Course in Miracles" will meet 7– 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks on Mondays. For more information, call 253–3795.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will conduct free public solar observing 1 p.m. in the Amherst Town Common every Saturday in September. Also offered every Saturday this month are free planetarium shows at 4 p.m. in Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and free public observatory observing 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory. Every Sunday this month there will be free public observing at Mt. Pollux, off South East St., in South Amherst.

Dance — The Northeast American School of Dance Studio in Northampton will hold a dance spree every Friday 8:30 p.m. – midnight every Friday. People can dance to variety of music in a smoke and alcohol–free environment. All ages welcome. Sliding scale. For more information, call 584– 8167.

Singing — The Pioneer Valley Capella has immediate openings for people of all voices interested in a small, focused ensemble singing classical music. Rehearsals are held Thursday evenings in Northampton. For more information, call Tom at 536–3072 or Karen at 259–1646.

Dancing — Beginner classes in Cajun dancing and Appalachian clogging are starting on Sunday evenings 6–7 p.m. No experience or partner needed. All ages welcome. Classes are held in Westfield at 132 Elm St. For more information, call Jo Sarnelli at 746–9067.

Campus Police Log

Alarm — Fire Trouble
Sept. 18
Steam set off an alarm in Van Meter Residence Hall.

Assist Agency
Sept. 17
Environmental Health & Safety reported a burning odor from a coffee pot in Hasbrouck Laboratory.
Sept. 18
An elevator stuck with two occupants in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall was reported; a technician was called.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Sept. 18
A snack machine was damaged in Emerson Residence Hall.

Disturbance
Sept. 17
An individual discharged a fire extinguisher in the Southwest Circle, creating a disturbance.

Drug Law Offenses
Sept. 16
The odor of marijuana was reported in Gorman Residence hall.
Sept. 18
The odor of marijuana was reported in Moore Residence Hall.

Larceny
Sept. 16
A microfridge was reported stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.
A bike was stolen from North Village Apartments.
Sept. 18
Posters were reported stolen from the Student Union Building.

Lost/Found Property
Sept. 16
There was a report of lost keys from Dickinson Public Safety Building.
Sept. 17
Keys found in Boyden Gym were brought to the police station.
A wallet found in the Campus Center was brought to the police station.
Sept. 18
A bicycle found in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall was turned in to the police.

Motor Vehicle Theft
Sept 16
There was a possible stolen vehicle reported from the Campus Center Garage.

Noise Complaint
Sept. 17
A Resident Assistant was unable to quell the noise of individuals disregarding quiet hours in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Suspicious Vehicle
Sept. 18
The owner of a vehicle in parking lot 49 with its break light on was notified.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Sept. 16
An individual disrupting a meeting in the Campus Center refused to leave.
Sept. 17
Individuals were reportdly yelling from Mackimmie Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
Sept. 17
John R. Claussen, 22, of 62 Gray St., Amherst, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for driving with a suspended license, operation of a motor vehicle without an inspection sticker and failure to notify Registry of Motor Vehicles of address change.

Weapons Violations
Sept. 18
A blow gun dart was found in a tree outside of McNamara Residence Hall.

Jury selection begins in OJ trial

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Back surgery, pregnancy and a lemon car were among the excuses a judge promptly shot down Thursday as prospective jurors squirmed to avoid sitting in the hot seats of the O.J. Simpson civil trial.

"I have gout," one man told the judge.

"I have gout too," countered Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki, who rejected all but the most extreme hardships as reasons to escape the prospective panel.

Another prospect with arthritic knees Wednesday had a similar response from Fujisaki, who said he too had bad knees and found it a lame excuse.

The judge also refused to release a man facing back surgery, a fellow with a car that wouldn't start and a woman who pleaded a broken tooth and a broken gate at her house as reasons not to serve.

Of Thursday's 43 prospects pleading extreme hardship, only 14 won excuses — including a woman who couldn't understand English and one who is caring for a 95-year-old aunt.

By day's end, the court had processed 315 prospects over two days. Of those, 169 were ordered to stay and 146 went back to the jury commissioner for assignment to other cases.

Nearly 100 of those summoned during the first two days offered no excuses. They and the others cleared for jury duty began filling out a more detailed questionnaire dealing with their exposure to publicity and their opinions about the Simpson case. Individual questioning on those volatile issues was to begin Friday.

The judge also said he had complied with an appellate ruling that voided some of his media restrictions and part of his gag order. He said he would give up trying to keep witnesses from expressing opinions about the trial.

Simpson was acquitted last Oct. 3 in the knife murders of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman. Families of the victims are pursuing a wrongful death action in civil court trying to prove he was responsible for the murders. They are seeking unspecified monetary damages.

The plaintiffs won a minor round in pretrial rulings Thursday before jurors entered the courtroom, gaining access to a videotape shot at Simpson's estate after police searched his estate and failed to turn up a much-discussed knife.

Plaintiff attorney Daniel Petrocelli said the June 28, 1994, videotape may reveal where Simpson kept the knife he purchased from Ross Cutlery shortly before the killings.

Judicial Hearing Board

A great experience for students who

❖are interested in campus leadership❖
❖wish to improve communication and listening skills❖
❖are enrolled full time❖
❖have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.❖
❖are not on judicial sanction❖

APPLY NOW TO BE A HEARING BOARD MEMBER
Training held in the Campus Center from 7:00 to 9:00p.m. on:
September 24 & September 25
Room 168C Room 165-69

Applications available at:
Residential Cluster Offices
The Dean of Students Office
Student Government Association
APPLICATION DEADLINE:
5:00 p.m. September 23, 1996

Any questions? Please contact Paul Vasconcellos or Jennifer Cooper, Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore, Phone: 545-2684

"I got mine at Zanna"

Body conscious top

Boot leg hip-huggers

Chunky heel oxfords

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

EL ACUÑA
Bar & Grill

Now Open SIX Nights a Week
'Till 1 AM!

Saddle seats
Behind Antonio's
$3.75 Mega Margaritas
$2.00 16oz Drafts
Full Menu untill 11 pm, Appetizers until we close
$2.25 Corona
$2.75 Micros
Come check out the fiesta that's right down your alley!

41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
413-259-4040
Tues. – Sun. 11:30 a.m. – 1 a.m.

Mental Health Groups Fall '96

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Stress Management Group— In this group participants will learn the sources of stress and a variety of techniques to manage their stress. Mondays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Women's Group for Graduate Student and Professional Women— This is a group for women struggling with major life issues, such as juggling work or school while managing a family life, difficulties in a graduate program, relationship issues, separation or divorce, single parenting, etc. This is an on-going group with new members accepted whenever there are openings. Tuesdays, 12:45 - 2:15 p.m.	Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families— This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to use group interaction to help understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.	Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual Support Group— Thursdays, 3:45 - 5 p.m.
	Increasing Self-Esteem, Building Self-confidence— This group will use a variety of expressive therapy techniques as well as mutual support and sharing to help participants understand the roots of low self-esteem, gain greater acceptance of themselves, and increase self-confidence. Tues, 3:45 - 5 p.m.		Long term Therapy Group for Older Students and UMass Staff— This group provides an opportunity to work on problems which interfere with personal and academic life such as lack of intimacy, loneliness, low self-esteem and concerns of professional identity. Thursdays, 3:30 - 5 p.m.
	Letting Go and Moving On— This is a psychoeducational support group for people who are in the process of ending or have recently ended an intimate relationship. Group sessions will focus on understanding the process of loss, dealing with anger, learning to take care of oneself, as well as other topics generated by the group. Tuesdays, 6 - 7:30 p.m.

Groups begin in early to mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview.
Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, M-F, 8-5.

BURGER KING® Now Hiring

We're looking for people with pride, who want to be treated fairly by people who care, to staff our restaurants.

-Good Starting Pay
-Flexible Hours
-Full Time/Part Time
-Meal Discounts
-Management Opportunities

Closing Rates up to $6.50*
Apply in Person
Rt. 9 Hadley
Rt. 5 Northampton

*See Manager for details

Calipari states in the book.

The book does touch on Calipari's departure for the NBA as well as the scandal surrounding last year's star center Camby.

While focusing on positive aspects of the UMass basketball program, the book does also hit upon several low marks over Calipari's years. The Boston Globe grade scandal which involved several members of Calipari's team, his feud with Temple coach John Chaney, Camby's collapse before last season's game against St. Bonaventure and allegations of recruiting improprieties are all mentioned in the book.

Calipari also tells of the basis of his trademark slogan, "Refuse to Lose."

"UMass has always been a blue-collar team. That, to me, symbolizes New England. There were no silver spoons here.

"But the players had inherited something better. An attitude.

"I call it 'Refuse to Lose'," the book states.

Refuse to Lose, which is published by Ballantine Books, is now available in hard-cover.

Calipari is in the middle of a book-signing tour that has brought him from Pittsburgh to Boston. He will be at Lauriat's in Boston on Saturday afternoon, before returning to the Amherst area to sign at Media Play at the Hampshire Mall on Saturday night, from 7–9 p.m.

You hear the music. You move your feet.
You find yourself strangely attracted to the Campus Center Basement. And then you know what you've been searching for all this time — the Arts & Living desk at the Daily Collegian.
The Arts & Living desk is looking for writers to cover campus fine arts. If you're interested in music, dance, books, theater and more, come down to the Collegian and ask to see Mike Burke or call 545–1361. After all, it could change your life.

AIDS Memorial trip scheduled

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Students and residents of Hampshire County will have the rare opportunity to travel to Washington, D.C. on Columbus Day weekend to view the largest display of the AIDS Memorial Quilt in the nation.

The Friends of AIDS CARE/Hampshire County volunteer organization will send interested people by bus to Washington, D.C. on Oct. 11 at 11 p.m., and will head back to campus Oct. 12 at 4 p.m. The roundtrip cost is $50 per person.

"This may be the last international display of the quilt," said Michael Fraser, the Friends of AIDS CARE bus trip coordinator, of the 45,000 NAMES Project Quilt panels that will stretch from the Capitol Building to the Washington Monument.

"I think it is the chance of a lifetime," Fraser said. "Even if people can't take the bus trip, they should try to get down there and see the quilt."

Fraser, a sociology lecturer at Smith College and doctoral student at the University of Massachusetts, said he came up with the idea for a bus trip when he taught an "AIDS and Society" course last spring. One hundred and sixty students enrolled in his class and many expressed interest in viewing the quilt.

Fraser said he then networked with people at Smith College and Friends of AIDS CARE and the trip was planned.

Jeff Desjarlais, another volunteer at Friends of AIDS CARE, said the trip was planned primarily as an educational opportunity and secondarily, as a fundraising event.

"We wanted to do some outreach and education as well," Desjarlais said.

Out of the $50 per person, $37 of the cost will pay for the bus. The remaining portion will go to AIDS CARE, a service organization for people in Hampshire County living with AIDS.

"I have seen the quilt in a number of different ways, but this is going to be breathtaking," Dejarlais said.

Desjarlais has been involved with AIDS awareness for several years and volunteered at the 1992 quilt display.

"There have been displays of individual AIDS panels where people are just sobbing," Dejarlais said.

Some of the panels are such beautiful pieces of artwork, Dejarlais said, that one can sometimes forget it is actually a memorial.

The bus trip is only one of many fundraising events the Friends of AIDS CARE volunteers hold annually, Desjarlais explained. They also will hold a chocolate dessert buffet, a fundraising dance and a book club, among other things.

"One of the goals of Friends of AIDS CARE is to fill the gaps of AIDS CARE by fundraising in this fairly affluent community," Dejarlais said. "We also try to raise awareness in others about people living with AIDS."

To reserve a spot on the bus, send a check to the Friends of AIDS CARE/Hampshire County, 51 Woods Rd., Northampton. The deadline is Sept. 27.

"We have a lot of space left, and it's a really cheap ticket to Washington to see the largest display of the NAMES quilt," Fraser concluded.

MS sufferers hopeful about new drug

By Robert Green
Associated Press

GAITHERSBURG, Md. — A drug that causes multiple sclerosis patients to have fewer and milder attacks should get government approval, a federal advisory panel said Thursday.

If ultimately approved by the Food and Drug Administration, the copolymer 1, which was developed in Israel, would become the second type of drug available to treat people with mild to moderate forms of the crippling nerve disease. The other two drugs on the market are similar to each other.

By inhibiting MS attacks, copolymer 1 lessens the chance that patients will suffer progressively worse disabilities that would leave them unable to get around without wheelchairs or other walking aids, researchers said. The advisory panel of outside physicians and scientists would not say that the drug would halt the progress of the disease or reverse its disabling effects.

About 300,000 Americans suffer from multiple sclerosis, which attacks myelin, a fatty substance that insulates nerves. Sufferers experience fatigue, vision problems, tingling or numbing in the arms and legs and other symptoms during early attacks of the disease.

The disabling attacks can last for months. It mostly attacks people in their 20s and 30s, women more than men. U.S. physicians diagnose 8,800 new cases each year.

"I could not walk, I could not hold my daughter, I could not take care of my kids," Donna DiCarlo, 37, of Baltimore, told the panel Thursday, describing a three-month episode shortly after her second child was born in June 1991.

She began daily shots of the new drug in January 1992 as part of a trial through the University of Maryland Medical Center. She has been free of attacks since then.

"I'm walking and I'm fine," said Mrs. DiCarlo, accounting manager at a graphics and printing company. "I'm able to function and take care of my husband, work, the kids, the house, ... the birds."

Copolymer 1, a protein, was developed at the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot, Israel. It is manufactured under the name Copaxone by Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd., based in Peta-Tkqva. The drug resembles a component of myelin and apparently tricks the body's immune system into attacking it instead of the myelin, although scientists don't know exactly how or why the drug works.

The Peripheral and Central Nervous Systems Drugs Advisory Committee based its recommendation largely on two studies in which some patients received the drugs and others received a fake. The FDA is not obliged to follow such panels' recommendations but normally does.

The main study was headed by doctors at the University of Maryland Medical Center and the University of Texas-Houston Health Science Center. Eleven medical centers took part nationwide.

The study of 251 patients found that those who took the drug for two years showed a 29 percent drop in attack rates, and those who took the drug up to 35 months had a 32 percent drop.

COURTNEY SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Cannabis freedom now
Comparative Literature Professor David Lenson will speak Saturday at the 7th annual Freedom Rally to protest the prohibition of marijuana.

Minutemaniacs

UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs, is looking for new recruits for the '96-'97 season!

UMass Athletic FUND MEMBER

New Member Registration
Applications will be accepted at the conclusion of UMass Women's Volleyball vs. Duquesne $25.00 to Join!

New Members Will Be Picked By A Lottery System

Minutemaniac Benefits:
• Advance Ticket Pickup
• Minutemaniac T-Shirt
• Game Receptions
• "The Maniac" Newsletter
• Membership Card

September 28, 1995
7:00 P.M.
Mullins Center
Look for an entry form in the September 26 issue of:
The UMass Daily Collegian

Minutemaniacs

New WORLD Theater's Latino Theatre Project presents:

Brincando el Charco

Frances Negron-Mutaner

When? September 23, 1996
Time? 8:00 pm
Where? Hampden Theatre
Cost? This is a free event !!

Reception and refreshments to follow film

Praised by the Puerto Rico Womens Puerto Rican publication. The San Juan Star, this movie is about the complexities of living for a Puerto Rican woman in the U.S. The filmaker, Frances Negron-Mutaner, also plays the main character, an island born, light skinned, middle class, lesbian photographer who must struggle with her multiple identities: sexual, racial, and ethnic. This acclaimed movie was featured in San Juan's Cinemafest last year at Universidad del Sangrado Corazon in Puerto Rico. It is a definite "MUST SEE!"

POSITIVE/POSITIVO: Gay and Lesbian Latino/ a Identities In the Time of AIDS. This film showing is co-sponsored by the Women of Color Program of The Everywoman's Center.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

NOW-ONLY LOCAL SHOWING-Two extraordinary FILMS
(NOTE: NO FILM SHOWING SEP.24 or SEP.26)

DAILY 7:00 only

"A Star is Born! Gwyneth Paltrow gives a luminous performance." -US MAGAZINE

Emma

PG13 MIRAMAX

DAILY 9:15 only

John Sayles Takes You To the scene of The Crime

LONE STAR

★★★★! MOVIEGUIDE NATIONAL

"A COOL CLASSIC!" Brock Williamson, PLAYBOY

"THIS YEAR'S GREAT AMERICAN MOVIE." -Gerard Peppers, COVER MAGAZINE

R

ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
CUSTOMER APPRECIATION
SALE
25% OFF
ENTIRE STOCK!*
TODAY ONLY!
9:30am-9:30pm
Great Savings On Name Brand Sporting Goods!
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
Hampshire Mall • Hadley

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager G. Tony Morse Production Manager Pete Servais Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Mike Burke Arts & Living Editor
Gregory Casimir Co-Black Affairs Editor
Humphrey brown III Co-Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Mike McGrath Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Anna Feder Jewish Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Multicultural Affairs Editor
Michael Elliot News Editor
Elizabeth Brown Photography Editor
Casey Kane Co-Sports Editor
Chris Stamm Co-Sports Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Sean Horgan Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Lee Weiner Distribution Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Librarian
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Climbing out of the fog

Liana Melinnis

I was wandering around campus the other day in a total daze. It felt as though I was walking through fog. every step taken was a difficult one, every step was an uphill battle against a mountain that seemed to go on forever. As my day progressed, the fog only got thicker to the point where I couldn't see ahead of myself, only what lay behind.

I didn't recognize anybody through the smog, because it was so thick and I was unsure of myself with each step. I heard a woman's laugh and it sounded like my mother's. It was incredibly comforting and it kept me going on my journey.

As I walked, it seemed as though the gray cloud was hovering only above me and it seemed strange. But the sound of joyous laughter told me to keep walking — to walk forever if I had to — because I would walk into wonderful things.

This isn't the first time this cloud has followed me at UMass, just the first time in a while. The cloud always seems to appear when I am doubting myself or feeling insecure and unsure of my future. The hills, the journey, the strangers; all of these are important factors while travelling down the road of life. I hope, yet somehow know, that I am not the only one walking this long trek.

At times, UMass can feel like one enormous uphill battle with life; we climb it on our own, for the most part, to the very top and it takes an abundance of emotional strength to get there. We don't just come, earn a degree, make lifelong friends and then go — sometimes I wish it were that easy.

I am a firm believer that college is the most crucial time in discovering oneself. The learning doesn't stop, not for a single moment. I gained more knowledge in one year at UMass than I'd ever accumulated in my life — most of it I learned the hard way. And just over the summer, I finally learned to let go of the past and live for the future and I'll be honest, it wasn't that easy.

And in living for the future, I've learned and I'm learning still, that it is time to make some major decisions about life, and this, my friends, explains the fog — also called uncertainty. Sure I know what I want to do — but not exactly — and I guess this is why I've been lost in a daze as of late. So yeah, I'm still dreaming of the day I host "20/20," still planning on doing lunch with Babs (Barbara Walters, that is), and still hoping my career will resemble Michael Keaton's in The Paper.

But maybe, just maybe, little things are changing. Maybe I want to live on Long Island forever, instead of travelling the globe and never having a place to call home. Maybe I want a husband and children before I hit age 38. I've learned the meaning of both true love and family and know how special they both are. Haven't I always preached about the many avenues in college that alk w us to change? Well, here they are, come and get them.

I'd just hate to see peers or friends or even total strangers graduate with any regrets. If you're an artist in your heart, but Dad wants you to be a CPA because "you'll never make any money doin' that crap," don't listen to him. If you want to major in modern dance, do it, and know that you are strong enough and brave enough to deal with the consequences. If anybody stands in the way of your dreams, they are selfish and they don't love you. It is your life to live and it only happens once and wouldn't it be a shame to die saying, "What if?"

